So don't feel offended if you send in a description and plans which are (or are not) published and then a few months afterward I don't remember one darned thing about it. It just simply can't be done, and I've given up trying. There are too many of 'em, and only one in a hundred ever reaches the stage of actual use outside the projecting room of the man who made it. If your signal device has been described in the department you should give date of issue. I am giving you all this lecture for the benefit of many other inventors who expect me to remember, some of whom get hugely offended because I don't. If they could occupy my position for a spell they would learn a number of things, one of which would be that the projectionist who has not been, at one time or another, fired with the invention bug is rather a rare bird. But, fortunately for me perhaps, about ninety-nine times in a hundred I can dispose of them by saying: "I regret to advise that your invention was tried out and abandoned steen years ago."

Lack of Sharpness in Films

Alfred Fowler, Alliance, Ohio, arises to remark:

"Allow me to again butt in again, after lengthy silence. As an excuse I enclose fifty cents for lens charts. On page 1510, June 7 issue, is an article regarding opera glasses for inspecting focus. James L. MacGinnis says his boss complains about lack of sharpness in picture. MacGinnis lays it to fault in the photography, and you say it is most likely due to his inability of focus sharply with the unaided eye, his distance of projection being long.

"I agree with Brother MacGinnis. According to my own experience he is right. To cite a concrete instance, June 6 and 7 I projected the Fox feature, 'Coming of the Law.' There was no coloring (tinting) in this picture at all, and the picture showed perfect in every detail—clear-cut and sharp. No blur at all. Today I am running the Fox Company's 'The Siren's Song,' and it is something worse than poor. In some places nearly all the film is dull and out of focus, or at least that is what I would call it. I attribute this to too much coloring. This film is colored, and the coloring deadens the film. It is ninety feet from my lenses to the screen; picture, fourteen feet. Use two Power's 6-B's.

Likes Westinghouse.

"Amperage, 40 D. C., through a Westinghouse motor generator set. Allow me to remark just at this stage of the proceedings that it, the motor generator set, is worth its weight in gold. It has been running since November 17, 1915, with oil and brushes as absolutely the only thing not still doing duty the same as when it came. Commutator in A-1 condition. My motto is: 'As long as everything is running all right let it alone.' When trouble comes, and not till then, get busy. The set runs continuous from 1:30 to 10:30, six days a week. No stop for supper. Glad you are back on the job. Now stay there. You might not get off so lucky next time. When I receive the lens chart I don't intend to just look at it, say 'Oh, hell!' and lay it aside. I shall use it to try and improve results by its application. As soon as I can get a good photo of my projection room I will send it on."

Glad to Have Photographs.

Glad to have good photographs of projection rooms. I believe that they are interesting to our readers. One feller likes to see what the other feller has.

Good Up to a Certain Point.

As to letting the motor generator set run until trouble appears, why that is a good policy up to a certain point. Many men cause endless trouble by continually tinkering with a thing which is really in excellent condition. The mischief they cause is due to the fact that they don't possess expert knowledge of the thing they seek to better, hence they do more harm than good. It is not well, however, to wait until actual trouble appears. Watch your machine closely, studying its characteristics. Apply to the manufacturer or to this department for information on any point that you don't quite understand. Either will be glad to give the desired information, though naturally the manufacturer can give it best. Thus you will be able to avoid both useless tinkering and the other extreme of waiting until there is actual trouble. For instance, every man in charge of a motor generator set should make careful, periodical tests to determine whether the bearings have worn sufficiently to materially alter the distance of armature windings from lower pole pieces, because if there is too much wear it is possible with some machines that the armature will finally rub the pole pieces, with possible serious damage. That is just one of several things the man in charge of a motor generator should watch.

As to Coloring.

As to the coloring affecting sharpness of definition, it is possible that very poor color might do it, though I have no knowledge of any such thing having occurred. You will remember having projected many films where the coloring was very dense (night scene), still the definition was as sharp as a razor. From what you say I would guess the trouble with the films last named to be just plaint OIL, with possibly some dirt added. Of course, that is a guess, and may be wrong. As a rule, I think oil makes a sort of mottled effect on the screen, but it affects the definition wherever it is on the film. But be that as it may, the fact remains that the average human eye cannot possibly determine sharpness of definition as closely as it should be determined, if more than seventy-five feet from the screen, and the sharper the definition of the picture the easier it is on the eye. Come again, Friend Fowler. Whoever is right or wrong, discussions bring forth knowledge.

Tips for the House Manager

Conducted by E. T. KEYSER

WHY BILLY NEVER BECAME A PRODUCER

And How His Contemplated Big Feature Film, "Girls Who Don't Count," Never Saw the Screen

"SOME DAY," said Billy the exhibitor, "I'm going to produce a picture of my own. The title will be 'Girls Who Don't Count,' and it will be a winner because for a cast I will utilize the entire assortment of female beauty that has successively but most unsuccessfully chased each other in holding down the job of ticket merchandiser in my booth.

"It will be some beauty show all right, for I picked 'em to harmonize with the decorations even if I had to redecorate occasionally to keep in harmony with some particularly pleasing candidate.

There Were Blondes, Also Brunettes.

"There were blondes, pronounced and silent, also brunettes of various degrees, and about everything between. They varied from the plump Venus type to those fairy-like creatures who could disappear by the simple stunt of turning edgewise to the observer. But they all possessed one point in common, when they had finished with a feature crowd there was always a delegation of seventeen irate individuals who claimed to have been short-changed although I could always prove that there was an unexplained discrepancy—on the wrong side—between the number of tickets sold and money in the cash drawer.

"If the fellows who had been given too much change had been equally insistent about rectification things might have evened up—but that was too much to expect of average human nature, and the only course left me is to keep right on in a search for a girl who can correctly count change while distributing it."

The chances are that Billy would still be chasing chicken-feed dispensers but for the fact that a newly hired and highly recommended divinity failed to show up on schedule and he was forced to wedge himself into the ticket booth and pass out change and pasteboards.

It Was Some Strenuous Evening.

It was some strenuous evening. More people too big to fight with claimed to have received the wrong change—always too little—than any three of the lamented beauty brigade had managed to score collectively, and after the house was closed Billy discovered that the amount of tickets registered as sold bore about the same relation to the actual cash in hand as a transportation balance sheet, issued for prospective investors, does to the one prepared to prove the iniquity of the five-cent fare.

Without stretching himself Billy had so far outclassed his most inaccurate assistant as to make her best score of errors look like a wasted effort to lose a bad penny in a contribution plate.

With his heart in his boots and his head in his hands he was wondering how he could ever have fancied that changemaking was a simple process and a fairly safe one when a mild-mannered stranger blew into the office.

"You gave me seven cents too much change a while ago," he said, and produced the seven.

"Thanks," said Billy, "you're honest—and damned lonesome. You are the only one who has refunded up to date. Why did you do it?"

"To get acquainted," admitted the refunder. "The Lord knows you seem to need me."

"For what?" inquired the mystified Billy.

"To convince you of the fact that making accurate change while passing out the proper tickets and keeping the crowd moving and good natured at the same time is not the easiest thing in the world and that just because one may be a lightning calculator does not mean that one's fingers will not get tangled up with slippery dimes and sometimes grab a nickel when one aimed for a cent. The trouble with changemaking is that the nimblest brain and the slowest fingers often go together and that the wonder with the digits often believes that seven from twenty-five leaves nineteen."

Where the Stranger Got Off.

"Admitted, now that you have called my attention to it," said Billy, "but where do you get off at that?"

The stranger vanished for an instant and returned with a package, which he proceeded to open and disclosed something that looked like a typewriter that had shed a few keys.

It was nine and one-half inches wide, one foot long and thirteen inches high and had eight troughs sticking out of the top. These troughs the stranger proceeded to load with pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and halves.

"Now," he said, "pretend that I'm selling you a ten-cent admission and one cent's worth of war tax, and pay for it with a quarter.

Billy coughed up the quarter, the stranger pressed a couple of keys and a dime and four pennies rolled down a chute and into a little cup from which Billie scooped them up. They tried it again with another combination and then Billy got into the game and proceeded to make change himself and, to his surprise, made no breaks.

The machine had a capacity for $125 worth of change, three troughs for pennies, two for dimes, and one each for quarters, nickels and halves, and Billy could grind out specie more rapidly than the most grasping patron could have picked it up. Besides being an error eliminator, the device was a regular lobby clearer as it would keep the line moving right along without the usual delay to round up counter-laid change which had heretofore been inevitable.

"Say," gasped Billy, "do you sell these life savers?"

"Sure," grinned the stranger.

"How much?"

The stranger told him.

The Shortage Would Pay.

"Gee!" said Billy, "the shortage that I've been running up against with handmade change would pay for that in no time."

The same divinity has been passing out angelic smiles and correct change from Bill's ticket booth for the past month. I asked Billy the other day how she managed it.

"I got her a mascot," said Billy. "Like to see it?"

It was the device that the stranger had lugged into the office on the night that Billy had almost queered the house, and on the name plate was the following inscription:

"The Lightning Change Maker
The Lightning Coin Changer Co.
Chicago, U. S. A."

To the House Manager.

THIS department is yours. In it from time to time will appear descriptions of accessories and equipment—outside the projection field—which will interest you and save you time and money.

When you put over a stunt in house arrangement or furnishing that would help the other fellow tell us about it and we'll publish it.

When you are pleased with any particular line of theatre supplies tell us so that we may pass the tip along.

When you are puzzled as to where to procure any equipment for your house write this department and we will dig it up for you—if it is made.

Knocking 'Em Cold.

Our Pittsburgh correspondent, who evidently has a soft spot in his heart for the oppressed ice trust, sends in the following:

"A certain exhibitor in this territory has a novel way of making his patrons keep cool on the hot nights. He puts a hundred-pound cake of ice on the stage with an electric fan in back of it and a spotlight playing upon it. This has a decidedly chilling effect upon the audience, who seem to imagine that they are cold. It's a great stunt, and if you're from Missouri try it and see."

It might work at that, but we would suggest that exhibitors who put the non-copyrighted stunt into operation be careful in choosing the spot for the spotlight to light on. If allowed to interfere with screen effects the audience might grow even warmer in the vicinity of the neckband.

Detroit Simplex Booster Touring East.

Bert Weddidge, who is the head of the Michigan Motion Picture Supply Company, of Detroit, Simplex distributors for the state of Michigan, has been making an auto tour between the "Automobile City" and the East, together with his family. His itinerary included a trip to the Simplex factory.

His company maintains a complete theatre equipment establishment, including a Simplex service station and repair department. Mr. Weddidge reports that two years ago in Detroit there were but two Simplex machines, but today there are forty-eight.

LAURIE STARTS CHILDREN'S SATURDAYS

The Manager of Ottawa's Strand Takes Advantage of Law Admitting Unescorted Minors on That Day

IN SPITE of a local street car strike, Manager Archie Laurie, of the Strand Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, opened a series of Saturday morning performances for children on July, with the presentation of "The Babes in the Woods," a Fox release. Laurie used special advertising space in the two local dailies, distributed 5,000 invitation cards throughout the residential districts, used 300 window cards in store windows, and had two small children in costume parade the main streets on ponies for two days previous to the date of the special show. Rain fell on the morning of the performance, but the attendance was quite heavy. Laurie charged a general admission of 10c., which included the war tax of one cent. In holding this series of children's entertainments, Laurie is taking advantage of the new Ontario law, which permits the admission of children without adult guardians at Saturday or holiday matinees.

Kaufman Is General Manager.

Important changes are being made in the personnel of the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation of Toronto, following the acquisition by this company of the Canadian rights to releases controlled by the Robertson-Cole interests and the taking over of the Exhibitors Mutual exchanges at Toronto, Montreal and St. John.

Announcement is made that Harry Kaufman, formerly manager of the Regal exchange at Calgary, Alberta, has been appointed general manager of the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation for all Canada and his headquarters will be at Toronto.

Charlie Stephenson, of Toronto, formerly general manager of the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation, has moved to Winnipeg to become general manager for western Canada. Considerable development along organization lines will be necessary in western Canada as the Mutual company had closed its western Canadian exchanges some time ago. These were in operation at Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

Mr. Stephenson established Superfeatures, Limited, which was later acquired by the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation.

Will Not Take Operators Back.

Following a brief strike of the moving picture projection machine operators at Winnipeg, Manitoba, the local exhibitors secured the services of a number of returned soldiers to replace the former operators. When the old operators returned to the theatres to resume operations, many of them were told that they were no longer required. Four of the principal theatres, the Province, Lyceum, Dominion and National, did not take back a single man. At the Bijou, Strand and Colonial theatres, one former operator was taken back into the employ of the theatre, while the strikers returned to work at the Starland, Rex, Monarch, Majestic and Gaiety theatres.

Will Abolish Tax Tickets.

A new system of collecting the theatre "charity tax," formerly known as the war tax, is planned for Montreal, Quebec. The plan of having separate tickets for the municipal tax is to be abolished and the tax price is to be stamped or printed on regular admission tickets. The latter will be sold to the theatres by the city, according to an announcement by E. R. Decary, the local assessor. The new plan will be put into effect September 1.

Local exhibitors will be glad to see the extra tax ticket abolished, as the use of two tickets has always been a matter of inconvenience and delay.

Two Managers Resign.

George Case, who has been manager of the Bijou Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, for a number of years, has resigned to engage in business in Fort William, Ontario. Another change in Winnipeg theatre circles has been the resignation of Al. Schuberg from the management of the Gaiety Theatre. Schuberg has returned to Vancouver. The Gaiety was one of the three Winnipeg theatres formerly owned by J. A. Schuberg, brother of Al Schuberg, and which have passed to Jule and J. J. Allen.

Will Rush Winnipeg Theatre.

The first building permit taken out in Winnipeg, Manitoba, after the termination of the general strike, which lasted for more than six weeks, was that for the new Allen Theatre, on Donald street. The permit was issued to Herbert Gage, of Regina, who will supervise the construction of the new house. Immediately after securing the permit, fifty men were put to work and the building operations will be rushed. It is hoped to have the structure completed before winter sets in.

Theatres Lose Through Strike.

A trolley strike which started in Ottawa on July 1 has affected the attendance at a number of Ottawa, Ontario, theatres. It was estimated by The Ottawa Journal that the dozen local theatres were losing $1,000 per day, on the whole, because of the transportation tie-up.

St. Denis Closes for Summer.

The St. Denis Theatre, one of the largest moving picture theatres of Montreal, has been closed for the season. This house, which is controlled by Regal film interests, will re-open September 1 with a new policy.

There were two outings of those identified with the film business in Pittsburgh, Sunday, June 29. During the time the Strand is closed, the interior will be remodeled.

Cincinnati News Letter

Business Was Fair.

BUSINESS in the local moving picture houses during the past week has been fair, but a little below the average of the previous weeks, mainly owing to the extremely hot weather prevailing, but partly to the strong counter attractions, such as races, baseball, and parks, which permit the patrons to stay out of doors and get the benefit of any chance breeze that is going. However, the attractions at most of the houses were such as to demand a fair amount of patronage, and business at the evening performances was very good.

Permit Was Denied.

The application of John J. and Frank Huss for permission to erect a moving picture house on property at 306-308 West Fifth street, having a frontage of only twenty-two feet, was denied by the building commissioner, as there is a provision in existing laws against such buildings on less than thirty feet frontage. Council then passed an ordinance granting permission for the proposed theatre, but Mayor Galvin has vetoed the ordinance, because, he said, it made a special exception of existing laws in favor of one particular interest, and he was opposed to changing the provision that fixes a minimum width of thirty feet for moving picture houses.

DALLAS KIDDIES SEE FREE PICTURES

E. H. Hulsey and the Mothers' Council Combine Their Efforts to Entertain the Little Ones

THAT the little tots in the cotton mills district and in the poorer parts of Dallas shall have their treat at the movies, not for just one performance, but for a whole season—is the determination of E. H. Hulsey, who is co-operating with the Dallas Mothers Council in this respect.

Commencing the last Friday in June, a special free matinee for children was given each Friday morning at the Old Mill Theatre. The Mothers Council see that the play house is packed with youngsters who, except for the innovation, would never see a moving picture show.

The Mothers Council, on Thursdays, arranges that at every play park and social center in Dallas that a "story hour" is held for the children. In this story hour details of the moving picture treat which the kiddies are to enjoy on the next afternoon is outlined.

The first free children's matinee was "The Old Maid's Baby," featuring Baby Marie Osborne.

Hulsey Houses Entertain Sailors.

Dallas is the demobilization point for hundreds of United States sailors who come from the Great Lakes, South Atlantic ports, or the Pacific Coast. Herschel Stuart realizing that the boys who have just quit dropping depth bombs on Hun subs ought to be taken care of, during the first week in July threw open all the Hulsey theatres to the sailors, free of charge. Other theatres followed, and now the blue jackets are enjoying their visit to Dallas generally.

Hull and Son Go to Texas.

Goldwyn Manager Makes Valley Trip.

G. C. Parsons, manager of the San Francisco branch of Goldwyn, returned recently from a trip through the San Joaquin Valley, which included a visit of one day to the Yosemite Valley. He found business to be exceptionally brisk with exhibitors for this season of the year, the only complaints being in regard to daylight saving. The erection of several new houses in this territory is contemplated, including one at Merced by C. H. Douglas, and one at Selma by C. F. Unger. Plans for both of these have been prepared. Mr. Parsons will shortly cover the Sacramento Valley to meet exhibitors and investigate conditions.

Seaside Business Opens.

Beginning what promises to be the biggest season in four years the Seaside business opened in full swing on July 1. B. J. He recently remodeled it so that it now has a large seating capacity, a fine appearance and an independent lighting system.

Al Krause, at one time publicity man for Universal, is arranging to open a theatre at Seaview, Washington, across the river from Seaside, Oregon. E. R. Saunders, Bell Theatre, Ilwaco, Washington, was a recent visitor on Film Row arranging his summer bookings and reports everything set for a big summer's business.

No Slump, Says Baum.

The motion picture business, from an exhibitor's standpoint, will not suffer in the Pacific Northwest because of reconstruction uncertainties after the war, says Sol Baum, of the Universal exchange, after a trip through the territory. He calls attention to the fact that Oregon is primarily an agricultural state, and that instead of there being a surplus of labor, there is a shortage of help on the farms, and that there are no idle returned soldiers. The young men have come home from the Army to take their women folk to the picture theatres again, and good business is the result.

Glanfield Finds Business Good.

H. M. Glanfield, salesman for Pathe, just back from eastern Oregon, reports exhibitors booking heavily for the late summer season, and that while the farmers in the wheat section are now busy with their harvest, they find time to drive twenty or thirty miles in their motor cars bought with war wheat sales, and the picture shows in the towns are not suffering in the least.

Through the courtesy of the W. W. The exhibition was held at midnight, but despite the lateness of the hour the theatre was well filled.

Flax Ties Up Exchange.

Business at the local Liberty Film exchange practically came to a standstill just before the whole U. S. went dry. But not for the same reason. No. You see——

Quite different, you see.

Yep; Friend Flax is wearing the smile that won't come off, handing out smokes and dr——; handing out cigars, that is, and receiving the congratulations of his many friends.

FAMOUS PLAYERS TO BUILD IN BUFFALO

Will Have Its Own Exchange Edifice and Plans to Occupy It Some Time Around October First

THE Buffalo Famous Players-Lasky exchange will be the first in western New York to have its own new branch building. The announcement was made by Richard C. Fox, manager, this week that plans are complete for the new modern brick building to be built at the corner of Chippewa and Franklin streets. The lot alone cost $20,000, and the structure will total $60,000. Work started on the new exchange, Monday, July 7, and it is expected that the force of forty-two employes will be able to occupy it about the first of October. The exchange will include a miniature theatre for screening features, an exhibitors' reception room, a fully equipped rest room for employes, fire proof vaults and an elaborately stocked exploitation department. The exchange takes in a territory extending beyond Syracuse and Utica.

Brady Visits Buffalo.

William A. Brady has been in Buffalo conferring with Marion deForest, dramatic critic of the Buffalo, regarding the film production of "Little Women," which Miss deForest claimed infringed on her copyright dramatization of Louisa M. Olcott's novel. The result of the conference is the amicable adjustment of their difference and an enlargement of Mr. Brady's contract with Miss deForest, whereby he will use her dramatization of the play in the United States, Canada, Australia, England and elsewhere. Mr. Brady has just returned from London, where he arranged for a production of "Little Women," during the coming season. Recently Miss deForest, brought suit in the local U. S. district court against Mr. Brady, Sam and Lee Shubert, Jesse Bonstelle Stuart, Victoria, Elmwood and Sheas' Hippodrome, claiming that the above named defendants infringed on her rights in the picture.

So good has been the work of organizations like the Buffalo National Exchange Association Motion Picture Exchange Managers' association which is affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce that according to one of the leading local managers there will be soon formed a national organization backed by the producers themselves who will get together and agree upon rules which all exchanges will abide by and settle for all time disputes which now continually arise.

Five trade rules have been adopted by the local organization. For the purpose of handling complaints, a Grievance committee has been appointed before which exhibitors take complaints. The trade rules adopted are:

(1) TRANSPORTATION CHARGES: All transportation charges to and from the Exchanges must be paid by the Exhibitor. All Film shipments from the Exhibitor to the Exchange must be prepaid.

(2) PAYMENTS: Remittance covering film and advertising charges must positively be in the Office of the Exchange prior to the time the film is to be shipped, otherwise film will not be shipped.

(3) CONTRACTS: Exhibitors and Exchanges must carry out all terms as specified in contracts made with Exchanges. No verbal agreements will be recognized. Exhibitors are cautioned to read carefully all terms of all contracts signed as they will be expected to live up to the letter of their contract.

(4) CHANGES IN BOOKINGS: No change in booking of any service will be granted, unless the request is made in writing fourteen days prior to original play date. If such request for change of date is granted, a later definite play date must then be arranged and picture must be paid for at time of such change and the protection clause may be forfeited in this case. The Exchange will not undertake to make changes in play dates, unless such change can be made without prejudice to other accounts.

(5) HOLDING FILM: No film shall be held by the Exhibitor beyond playing date as per contract. Any and all damages accruing to an Exchange or brother Exhibitor through disregard of this rule, shall be borne by the Exhibitor responsible.

The members of the Buffalo organizations include:

Goldwyn distributing corporation, Famous Players-Lasky, Fox, Universal, Select, Pathe, Metro, Gardiner Film Syndicate, First National, Hodkinson, American Film, Vitagraph, Doo-Lee Film Company, Film Clearing House, Modern Feature Photoplays and Pathe Exchange of Albany.

Hanny, Jr. The company will operate motion picture theatres and other forms of amusement. The first project will be a large house in Triangle street, South Buffalo, to cost $85,000 and to seat 1,200. Members of the corporation are interested in the Maxine Theatre, Seneca street, one of the most successful of neighborhood houses.

Earl L. Crabb, of the Strand Theatre, drove his big camera car to East Aurora, the town discovered by the late Elbert Hubbard, and there shot several hundred feet of the annual convention of Roycrofters and Philistines. National celebrities attended the meeting, and on the day that Crabb visited the convention of literati, the Buffalo Ad Club and Buffalo League of Advertising Women were also in attendance. The films were shown on the Strand screen the week of July 20.

Arrow Film Will Handle "Young America" Series

THE Arrow Film Corporation has acquired the distributing rights to the new series of novelty two-reelers known as the Young America series. These pictures do not depend upon any one theme, but each has a different angle. They were produced by the Bloxbe Film Corporation under the direction of Phillip Van Loan.

There will be twelve, each dealing with a single episode of the great war and a heroic deed performed by some hero who has been decorated for bravery. The stories are announced as being true.

The Bloxbe Film Corporation, in conjunction with the Arrow Film Corporation, has arranged for an extensive exploitation campaign, and the heroes playing the leading parts have had numerous columns of newspaper publicity.

The first three pictures are completed, and work on the remainder is being hurried so that the entire series will be ready for release on September 1. Many endorsements from prominent men have already been secured. The pictures, aside from their dramatic qualities, will have value from an educational standpoint.

"Not in years," says Dr. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, "has there been made a series of pictures that will create such interest. I believe they lend themselves to successful showmanship better than any pictures I have witnessed in some time. They should prove highly profitable to the exhibitor who bills them as features."

The leading player in the first picture in this series is Charles Scala, the first American prisoner to escape from a German prison. The second story is that of two Bronx clothing partners. One performed a dangerous and highly meritorious service for his country, being wounded, and was rescued by his partner, who took him to a hospital in the face of a dangerous fire 'not knowing that it was his partner. The third picture features the McIntyre Sisters, the Salvation Army girls who saved an ammunition train from destruction and who rendered valuable service to the Yanks in the trenches.

Nearly All Rights Sold on Guinan and Swain Pictures

WITH such rapidity has the series of two-reel Texas Guinan Western productions and one-reel Mack Swain comedies been disposed of, says the Frohman Amusement Corporation, that only one territory on the comedies and two on the Guinan Westerns remain open.

The latest contracts reported on both series are with the First National, of Minneapolis, for Minnesota and North and South Dakota; Strand Features, Detroit, for Michigan; Eltabran Film Corporation, for North Carolina, and Bee Hive Exchange, Chicago, for Illinois and Indiana. These contracts are announced as having been made without screening the productions, based upon reports received from exchanges already handling the pictures.

The Bee Hive Exchange will use six prints, four for the Chicago exchange and two for Indianapolis; Eltabran will use two, which is said to be unusual.

Gene Marcus, of the Twentieth Century Film Company, has booked these productions for the Stanley Circuit in eastern Pennsylvania, while I. E. Chadwick, of the Merit Film Corporation, has booked the Fox, Moss and Loew circuits in New York. Harry Leonhardt has booked "Daddy Ambrose" for a second week, which is said to establish a record for single-reelers.

The titles of the fifth and sixth Guinans are "Little Miss Deputy" and "The Dangerous Little Devil." The fourth and fifth Swain comedies are "Foxy Ambrose" and "Diplomatic Ambrose."

Bertram Bracken Directing "Confession" for National

BERTRAM BRACKEN, who is directing "Confession" for the National Film Corporation, returned to his studio in Hollywood after a two weeks' stay at Lake Tahoe.

After the usual studio preliminaries work was immediately resumed. Mr. Bracken announces that in this production it is not the intention to hurry matters, for both he and Henry B. Walthall, the star, consider "Confession" to be one of the biggest and most important productions that either have been identified with, and, so not to sacrifice quality to haste, the element of time has been forgotten and all efforts are being concentrated on quality.

Directing Henry Walthall in "Confession," a Pioneer feature.

Mr. Bracken, who directed "The Boomerang" for the National, also has to his credit productions such as "The Eternal Sappho," "Conscience," "Comrade John" and "Sporting Blood." Since his coming to the National Film Corporation of America he has been one of the most active directors on the Coast.

Arrow Announces "Rawhide Productions."

Arrow Film Corporation announces the consummation of a deal with John L. Russell to produce a series of twelve two-reel dramas to be known as "Rawhide Productions." The stories will be written by L. Case Russell and directed by Joseph L. Barry, with Joe Suttle as cameraman. The cast includes John Lowell, Charles Robins and George Crossman. This series, which will be released on state rights basis, will be ready about September 1.

H. & H. Offers "Love Wins" Starring Violet Mersereau

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the H. & H. Productions, Inc., that "Love Wins," a five-reel picture, with Violet Mersereau as the star, is rapidly nearing completion at their studio under the direction of Herbert E. Hancock.

This production is described as a drama of love, intrigue and a bride's battle for her hero husband. It is taken from a story by Edna and Herbert Hancock, the theme being suggested by R. J. Huntington. Miss Mersereau is cast as an office worker whose sweetheart goes to war and returns disabled. He offers to free her from her troth, but she insists that they be married. New complications arise, which are brought about by the misunderstandings of the young husband who, just back from the fields of war, has not adjusted himself to conditions out of the army. This situation confronting returning soldiers is said to have been brought out with great power.

Miss Mersereau's role is said to display her talents to unusual advantage.

The suporting cast is a strong one. Julia Hamilton, who takes the part of a daring and unscrupulous girl, is looked upon by Director Hancock as a "find." She appeared in a prominent role in "The Century Girl" and on the Century Roof, and was also with Ziegfeld's Follies. As a result of the ability she showed in an initial tryout, Mr. Hancock rewrote the scenario to incorporate a part to which she is especially adapted. Others in the cast are May McAvoy, Pierre J. LeMay, John Harrison Edwards, Cora Williams and Bernard Randall.

Miss Mersereau has a part that calls for emotional acting and interpreting the character of a modern girl of the independent type. In one scene she sails into the man who has insulted her, and gives him a beating which, it is said, will prove one of the season's big thrills.

Pioneer Announces Release of Jennings' Film in August

THE Pioneer Film Corporation, handling "The Lady of the Dugout" for New York and New Jersey, announces it will be released in this territory on August 4, and that many bookings have already been received at the New York and Buffalo exchanges without solicitation.

It is hoped to have Al Jennings, the author, producer and star, in New York on the day of the first showing, and to have him address the audiences at the first-run houses.

"The Lady of the Dugout" is based upon a thrilling episode in the career of Al and Frank Jennings, when they were bandits operating in the Southwest a few years ago. Both were caught and were sentenced to a long prison term. Through the good offices of former President Roosevelt they were pardoned, and began their life over again.

"Topics" Film in Foreign Lands.

All English speaking countries of the world will soon have the opportunity to enjoy the timely and witty paragraphs selected for screen presentation in "Topics of the Day" by The Literary Digest. The success of this screen subject in the British Isles has attracted the attention of Australian, South African and other buyers from British domains.

Sells "Virtuous Men" for Four More States

THE record being made by S-L Pictures in disposing of "Virtuous Men" has been given further impetus through the closing of four more states—Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming and Utah—by Bert Lubin, traveling representative for the S-L, to the Supreme Photoplays Corporation, of Denver.

This organization is an important factor in state rights distribution in the Far West, and it is their intention to accord "Virtuous Men" a special sales campaign of several weeks prior to release. In order to carry out this exploitation campaign, Supreme Photoplays have placed the largest order for supplies and advertising material yet recorded for the S-L attraction starring E. K. Lincoln.

Bert Lubin, of S-L Pictures, reports conditions throughout the Far West as excellent, with many new theatres in course of erection and business for the exhibitor holding up despite unusual weather conditions for this section of the country. According to Lubin, the demand for productions of road show calibre and long runs is greater than ever before in the history of the industry.

Jack Richardson Re-Engaged

WILLIAM L. SHERRILL, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, wired his New York office that he has renewed the contract with Jack Richardson, the popular Western heavy, to appear in support of Texas Guinan in the two-reel Western productions being made at Los Angeles. Mr. Sherrill also announced he has acquired a story written by Julian Johnson, editor of Photoplay Magazine, and which embraces one of the most sensational themes ever adapted to a Western production.

In addition to making a new series of two-reel comedies, it is also reported that the Frohman Amusement Corporation will shortly commence the production of a fifteen episode Western serial.

Moreno Completing Vitagraph Serial.

Antonio Moreno and scores of his fellow Vitagraph players are now back in the mountains of upper California, putting the final touches on his fifteen-episode serial, "Perils of Thunder Mountain." Although the sixth episode is the most advanced chapter shown by any of the exhibitors, the work has been carried forward with the regularity of clockwork, and the serial is practically completed.

Through a happy inspiration of the authors, Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady, nearly all of the early scenes in the serial were set in the snow-capped mountains of northern California. Then will follow scenes in San Francisco and other localities far removed from the mountains and nearer modern civilization. Quite fittingly, the closing scenes return to the original locale.

Montagu Love in Role of Prize Fighter.

Montagu Love has commenced work on a new five-reel feature for World Pictures. It has the working title of "The Mark of the Beast." In this photoplay Mr. Love takes the part of a prize fighter. He has engaged Frank Haganey, formerly heavyweight champion of Australia and South America, to train him and act as technical director for the fight scenes. Frank Reicher is directing the picture.

Plenty of Thrills and Action in "Mystery of 13"

THE latent entry in the serial field is the multi-reel feature in fifteen episodes produced by Burston Films, Inc., and bearing the title "The Mystery of 13." It is announced as a serial with reason, logic and action, as well as mystery, as indicated by the title.

Louis Burston, president of the company, states that the above will be proven when this newcomer is shown for review, which will be within the next few days, and in the meantime he promises it will be even bigger and better than his former offering, "The Silent Mystery."

The story opens on a South American ranch, where Jim Kelley, a brother to the famous characterization of Francis Ford, Phil Kelley, is living. Hidden treasure has been buried on his property, and Madiz is representative of a mysterious band whose inner circle is known as the "13." Jim is tricked into marrying a girl he has never seen. He accuses the girl of treachery, and makes his escape. On shipboard, he finds his wife and Madiz. The vessel sinks, and with it a map showing the location of the treasure. Rescued, Jim finds Phil, and they hasten to beat rival divers to it. They learn the secrets of the "13" crew and adopt their hooded garments. At a meeting three bear the numeral "6" and the mystery increases.

Scenes Filmed Off Catalina Island.

The diving and burning scenes were filmed off Catalina Island, where Francis Ford has a summer home. Both Francis Ford and Rosemary Theby, who plays opposite him, don diving suits. There is a thrilling fight for the air pipe which leads to one of Ford's henchmen below. Other under water scenes were taken in Francis Ford's studios at Hollywood in what is said to be the largest tank ever built for motion pictures.

There are thirteen principals in the cast, which includes in addition to the leads Marc Fenton, Doris Dare, Phil Ford, Elsie Van Name, Nigel DeBrullier and Pete Gerald, several of whom also appeared in "The Silent Mystery." Francis Ford is the director and star, and collaborated with Elsie Van Name in the preparation of the script.

Producer Louis Burston, who has been in Hollywood with the company since April, is supervising the production, and John Clymer is supplying the continuity, titles, etc. This serial is announced for release in August.

Steiner's Lone Star Films Will Be Handled by Arrow

WILLIAM STEINER has finished the first of his new series of two-reel Westerns to be known as the Lone Star dramas. These will be released through the Arrow Film Corporation, and will star Harry Myers, who also was the star of "The Masked Rider," made by Mr. Steiner and released by Arrow. These two-reel pictures are being made in San Antonio, and the release date for the first will be August 1. This picture will be ready for screening at the Arrow offices next week.

Charles Graham, who appeared in the Craig Kennedy serial, will be seen with Harry Myers in this series. There will be twelve all told. Arrow announces that it has already sold one-third of the United States territory before the first picture was finished, and applications are being received from nearly every territory, proving the big demand for two-reel Westerns.

To supply the big demand for short reel subjects the Arrow has recently contracted for a number of different series. Several new series of comedies have been added, also has a series of two-reel kid pictures.

To Present "The Boomerang" for Run at Brighton Beach

PIONEER FILM CORPORATION announces that "The Boomerang" will be shown as the second of their special attractions at the Brighton Beach Music Hall. This picture, which is being sold to state rights buyers, has been selected as a successor to "The Unpardonable Sin," which opened up at the Music Hall a week ago.

Advertising announcing that it has been slated for a run has already been posted. After "The Boomerang" has had a showing other of the Pioneer Specials such as "The Sins of the Children," "The Long Arm of Mannister" will follow.

Henry Walthall Thinks of "The Man He Has Behind Him."
Of course, the photograph is one of the girl he left behind him in "The Boomerang, a Pioneer production.

James K. Hackett Star of "The Greater Sinner"

JAMES K. HACKETT, star of a score of Broadway stage successes, makes a welcome return to the screen in the modern photoplay feature drama, "The Greater Sinner." Mr. Hackett's latest screen vehicle deals, it is said, in intensely vivid fashion with a gripping story based on heredity, and portraying a beautiful young Southern girl's thrilling and eventually successful battle against traits and physical tendencies inherited from her forebears.

"The Greater Sinner" was screened shortly before Mr. Hackett suffered a painful accident at his country home on an island in the St. Lawrence, near Clayton, N. Y. Just after the final scenes in the picture were taken, Mr. Hackett went to his island home and there fell and broke his leg just above the ankle.

In this picture, Mr. Hackett is said to have done the best screen work of his career. In the character role of an aggressive, unscrupulous promoter and Wall street speculator, he wins the love of a Southern beauty, and takes her from the simple environment of her country home into the gay life of New York.

As the hero's wife, Ormi Hawley in the leading female role and Irving Cummings as the "other man" are prominent in the support. The development of the story, almost to the very end, conveys this question to the mind of the audience—was it the woman or the man upon whom the burden of guilt must rest?

In addiiton to Miss Hawley and Mr. Cummings the support of Mr. Hackett includes John Shine and Eric Mayne. The picture is a five-reel production, which will be released in the near future on a state rights basis.

"The Greater Sinner" is presented by Lloyd Willis, 1600 Broadway. David P. Howells, 729 Seventh avenue, is handling the foreign rights on "The Greater Sinner." He is now in Europe with several prints of the picture for foreign buyers.

Brockliss Gets Foreign Rights to Guinan Films

SIDNEY GARRETT, acting for J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., closed a contract with the Frohman Amusement Corporation acquiring the thirteen Texas Guinan two-reel productions for the foreign market, and a few hours later disposed of the entire series for South America and part of Europe. Mr. Garrett stated that while it is a common belief that Western productions are not received with any great favor in Europe, particularly in Great Britian, and it is true they are not ordinarily of the same drawing power as dramatic productions, this is occasioned by the fact that Westerns were usually of the same type with a similarity of theme, and little variation in the plot or the leading character; but that in the Texas Guinan productions he immediately recognized a digression from the regular Western productions, with a female in place of the usual male hero.

"Naturally," said Mr. Garrett, "anything new is welcome, and I expect that the release of the Texas Guinan Westerns in foreign countries will prove as popular as any other productions handled by us."

Mr. Garrett's concern has also acquired for the foreign market the special feature production, "Once to Every Man," and the twenty-six Mack Swain single-reel comedies, also released by the Frohman Amusement Corporation.

ARTHUR S. HYMAN, who controls rights to "Virtuous Men" for Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, released this attraction last week in his territory. Following a special engagement of a week at the Majestic Theatre, Detroit, he wired S-L Pictures his appreciation of the box office value of their production. Despite the continued hot weather and strong opposition from other leading theatres, "Virtuous Men" is said to have played to record-breaking business.

Following the presentation, Mr. Hyman received a letter from George E. Guise, manager of the Majestic, reading in part as follows:

"No picture recently released has greater advertising possibilities than has 'Virtuous Men.' An interesting title which arouses the curiosity of the picture fan is half the battle, and certainly no more attractive title could be conceived. It has that magnetic something which attracts people and arouses their curiosity to such an extent that they cannot resist coming to the theatre to learn what it's all about.

"From the standpoint of the exhibitor, 'Virtuous Men' has many things which go to make it a good picture, has plenty of action, good photography, details carefully handled, the cast is good and, as a whole, the story is interesting and entertaining. The big scenes show unusually fine directing.

"'Virtuous Men' should prove a money-getter for any exhibitor if properly exploited."

Pioneer Will Enlarge Its Field Sales Force

THE success which the sales force of the Pioneer Film Corporation have enjoyed during the last few weeks has been so gratifying to the Pioneer executives that they have determined to increase the number of representatives in the field so that the entire country can be reached.

The list of pictures now being disposed of by the Pioneer are "The Boomerang," with Henry B. Walthall; "Sins of the Children," with Alma Hanlon and Stuart Holmes; "The Girl from Nowhere," with Glee Madison and Wilfred Lucas; "Virtuous Sinners," with Wanda Hawley, and "Suspicion," with Grace Davidson.

If the present ratio of sales continue it is expected that the long list of pictures which the Pioneer recently placed upon the state rights market will be completely sold. This will leave the field open to the exclusive promotion of the many forthcoming Pioneer attractions.

Among the productions slated for exploitation during the early fall are Henry B. Walthall in "Confession," "The Long Arm of Mannister," "Parted Curtains" and "The Hidden Code."

Runs Extra Performances to Accommodate Fight Fans

ACCOUNT of the anticipated difficulty facing the crowds who visited Toledo to see the Willard-Dempsey fistic encounter in the matter of securing sleeping accommodations the management of the Alhambra Theatre in that city arranged a novel stunt.

Advertisements were posted that on July 2, 3 and 4 the theatre would remain open all night, and that the attraction, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," as well as the Sennett bathing beauties, would appear in person at additional performances at 12:45 and 2:00 a. m. The ads further stated that patrons might remain in the theatres overnight at the same price.

H. C. Witner Wrote Story of "Everybody's Business"

THE story of the W. H. Productions' special feature, "Everybody's Business," is by H. C. Witner, who is a contributor to a number of prominent magazines and author of two novels, "From Baseball to Boches" and "A Smile a Minute."

Arrangements are being made to syndicate this story in several prominent newspapers throughout the country, and because of the subject matter being of such unusual interest, together with Mr. Witner's prominence, several are arranging to give it unusual exploitation.

W. H. Productions Company state that in preparing the exploitation campaign a number of elements have been taken into consideration to secure maximum results for the exhibitor at minimum cost, such as the co-operation of the returning soldiers, the endorsement of leading factors in the recently formed American Legion, as well as employers of labor and laboring men, account of its one hundred per cent. Americanism.

It is further announced that when this six-reel picture is shown the exhibitor will have at his service a simple, complete and practical campaign, so that he will not be obliged to spend any more than his normal appropriation for exploitation and will be able to secure unusually extensive co-operation.

Producers' and Distributors' News

Week Including July 4 Brings Bigger Business to W. W. Hodkinson's "Sahara"

J. PARKER READ, JR.'S, production, "Sahara," starring Louise Glaum in a C. Gardner Sullivan drama supervised by Allan Dwan, had another big week over the Fourth of July, contracts being signed during the past seven days by Marcus Loew's Stillman Theatre for first run in Cleveland, by the Parkway Theatre, Baltimore, through the managing director, Bernard Depkin; with the Jefferson Theatre, Galveston, the Liberty, Houston, at Jake Wells' Atlanta Strand Theatre, and many other important houses in the larger cities. Bookings for the smaller communities of the country are not yet accepted on "Sahara" except for later play dates.

A significant evidence of the picture's drawing power is found in the booking of this by exhibitors who already have tested its power at one or more points.

For example, following the engagement of "Sahara" at the New York Strand, the management of that organization, through its treasurer, Walter Hays, booked "Sahara" for full week engagements at the Strand, Buffalo, and the Strand, Syracuse, as well as for subsequent neighborhood runs at the four Strand company outlying houses in Buffalo.

Week's Run at Atlanta Strand.

Jake Wells' Atlanta Strand full week booking follows the playing of "Sahara" at the Wells Theatre, Norfolk, Va., and the Colonial Theatre, Richmond, for a full week.

A first run contract on the film has also been closed in Montgomery, Alabama. Texas bookings include the Orpheum, Waco, the Alhambra, Eastland and the Crescent at Temple.

Further proof of this colorful production's popularity was found during the week in the decision of the Stanley Company, of Philadelphia, to increase its number of playing days above the hundred days recently contracted for. Through the Hodkinson Philadelphia offices announcement was made that "Sahara" would play an additional fifty days in the Stanley houses these days being added after "Sahara" had begun playing the Stanley circuit.

"Midnight Man," Corbett Serial, Is Well Staged

THE highlights of the current week's activities at Universal city were the completion of the James J. Corbett serial, "The Midnight Man," and the launching of the new six-reel feature production, "Common Property," which will star Robert Anderson.

"The Midnight Man" was produced by James W. Horne from a story upon which he collaborated with Frank Howard Clark. Under the supervision of Joe Brandt the serial was given a de luxe staging throughout the entire eighteen reels.

"Common Property" is a story written by Elliott W. Clawson, author of "The Man in the Moonlight," in which Monroe Salisbury is the star. The action of the play deals with the nationalization of women in Russia, and the all-star cast is being directed by Paul Powell.

Visiting journalists who have been at Universal recently have marveled at the accuracy with which George Seigmann, director, has created a set showing the editorial rooms of a metropolitan daily which will be used in connection with the production of the newspaper story, "The Woman Under Cover."

"The Right to Happiness," the latest Dorothy Phillips vehicle, has received the final cutting at the hands of Allen Holubar, and is ready for shipment to New York.

Marie Walcamp is now resting after the completion of the first four of the Tempest Cody Western two-reelers. The productions are of such merit that Universal officials are considering the extension of the series into eight separate pictures. A new two-reel Western company, including Laure Trainor, Josephine Hill and Jack Perrin, are producing "Fighting Blood" under the direction of Reeves Eason. "The Desert Trail" is the title of the Western picture on which Pete Morrison will soon start work.

The Universal battery of expert cutters and comedy title writers have been turned loose on the new William S. Campbell animal comedy, which stars Joe Martin and his jungle associates.

"Non-Skid Love" is the newest Lyons-Moran comedy in the process of production. These two fun-makers have been doing some excellent work at Universal City recently, having completed only last week "Lost, Strayed or Stolen," with Mildred Moore and Charlotte Merriam in the leading feminine roles.

Nazimova Made Film Adaptation of "The Brat"

WHILE in New York last season in search of suitable material for her screen appearances, Nazimova came upon "The Brat," Maude Fulton's stage success which Oliver Morosco produced for long runs in New York and on the road, and which will be released soon by Screen Classics.

"With a copy of the manuscript," said Maxwell Karger, director general, "Nazimova left New York for her country home. With her leading man, Charles Bryant, she read and reread it, and each time with added enthusiasm.

"Being of an impulsive nature she decided then and there to adapt it, and the manner in which she has acquitted herself from a technical viewpoint is a permanent proof of a skill in this direction that fully equals her marvelous histrionic and emotional ability."

Exultant over her success with this play, Nazimova has decided to interest herself further in selecting and adapting plays and novels for her own use following her production of "The Native Born," a novel by Miss I. A. R. Wylie, on which she is starting work at her Hollywood studios.

The production of "The Brat," so far as the filming of the story is concerned, has been complete now for some time. The only essentials that still stand between its release, which, as announced, is scheduled for September 1, are the art titles and inserts upon which Maxwell Karger is now busying himself personally.

Charles Bryant, playing opposite Nazimova, heads a supporting cast which includes Frank Currier, Amy Veness, Darrell Foss, Henry Kolker, Bonnie Hill, Millie Davenport and Ethelbert Knott.

The artistic settings and back grounds of the play, which was directed by Herbert Blache, with Eugene Gaudio at the camera, were all designed by M. P. Staulcup, of Nazimova's art staff, and the entire production, which promises to be a worthy reproduction of the initial stage success, was personally supervised by Maxwell Karger.

Another Western Comedy Drama for Desmond

THE success attending William Desmond's dip into Western comedy dramas under the management of Jesse D. Hampton, has led the latter to star him in another attraction along the lines of "The Prodigal Liar" and "Bare-Fisted Gallagher," each of which is a Robertson-Cole feature distributed by Exhibitors Mutual. "A Sage Brush Hamlet" is the title of the Desmond picture, which will follow "Bare-Fisted Gallagher."

George Elwood Jenks, well known author and scenario writer, wrote "A Sage Brush Hamlet." Joseph J. Franz directed it under the supervision of J. D. Hampton.

A number of popular Hampton players will be seen in support of Desmond.

Marguerite De La Mott will make her debut as leading woman in this production, and Hampton has every confidence that she will soon take the front rank.

"Fair and Warmer," Screen Classic Film, Seen by Millions When on Speaking Stage

A PREDICTION that "Fair and Warmer," Avery Hopwood's successful farce, should be as great if not a greater success on the screen than it was in the theatre, where it was viewed by millions, is made in a letter from Selwyn & Company, stage producers of the comedy, to Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation and Screen Classics, Inc.

Selwyn & Company originally put on the play, and reaped a harvest of dollars. The farce was universally acclaimed the funniest play ever written, and set a new record in continuous runs for other stage comedies to shoot at.

It is one of thirty-six celebrated stage plays and novels recently purchased by Screen Classics, Inc., for its series of "fewer, bigger and better" pictures to be made starting with the early fall and distributed exclusively by Metro. May Allison has been selected as the star, and work on the elaborate production is about to start at the Hollywood studios of Screen Classics, Inc., under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger.

An extract from Selwyn & Company's letter to Mr. Rowland follows:

"Following the completion of the New York run, 'Fair and Warmer' was presented by us in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, establishing records in these three cities for the length of its engagements. It was then sent on tour of the United States, and in innumerable theatres the house records for big business is held to this day by 'Fair and Warmer.'

"It would be only the wildest kind of a guess to attempt to tell just how many persons saw the play—certainly they numbered millions."

Jose Starts Work on First Production.

Edward Jose, the Belgian director, who recently formed his own company, to be known as the Edward Jose Productions, recently began work on the first of his own pictures, "Mothers of Men." "Mothers of Men" is a screen adaptation by Charles Whittaker, from the popular novel of the same name, by Henry William Warner and De Witte Kaplan.

Mr. Jose has engaged Lumsden Hare as leading man to play the role of Captain Von Plauffen. The name of the leading woman will be announced next week. Marguerite Courtot has an important role as "Paulette." Cesare Gravina will have the character part of "Old Schultz." Pierre Collosse, Julia Hurley and William Gaxton have also been engaged for prominent roles.

Mr. Jose's first production is being made at the Norma Talmadge Studio on East Forty-eighth street, New York. Edward Brophy will act as assistant director, and also as casting director. Willard M. Reineck has been chosen as technical director. Earnest Hallor is the cameraman.

"Common Clay" Acclaimed by Hazleton Exhibitor

"COMMON CLAY," A. H. Woods' screen production of the Harvard prize play by Cleaves Kinkead, is being pushed beyond all previous records by the supplementary campaign inaugurated by Pathe Exchanges, Inc. The intention to have it shown in all of the film houses of the United States seems to be within realization. In some instances return dates have been played, and the reception in large cities have been more than equaled by its appreciation in smaller centres. How Hazleton, Pa., regards it is typical of the majority of cities of like size. Manager M. V. Coll, of the Campbell theatres, writes:

"Without any solicitation on your part whatsoever, I wish to congratulate you on the Pathe superproduction, 'Common Clay,' starring Fannie Ward and an all-star cast, which we closed a highly successful run with this evening."

C. A. Taylor, Pathe branch manager at Buffalo, makes this report to the home office: "It is with pleasure that we notify you that the Palace Theatre, Olean, N. Y., a town of 16,624 inhabitants, used 'Common Clay' three days, and has signed a contract for repeat booking of two days, making a five days' showing in this town."

"Thunder Mountain" Snow Scenes Attract Summer Fan

TELEGRAMS and letters continue to pour into Vitagraph offices regarding "Perils of Thunder Mountain," Vitagraph's snow-laden serial. Not only are the exhibitors agreed that the new Antonio Moreno chapter play is one of the most interesting and thrilling ever offered, attracting unusual patronage to theatres which had never before presented this particular form of entertainment, but the consensus is that its presentation during the heated term is particularly opportune.

J. G. Eyerly, of the Lyric Theatre, Newton, Iowa, writing to congratulate Vitagraph on "Perils of Thunder Mountain," lays particular stress on the picture's timeliness and voices the sentiments of hundreds of other exhibitors. He says:

"With four episodes finished and the crowds carefully tabulated at each episode we have no fears of what our business will be with the worst of hot weather still to come. 'Perils of Thunder Mountain' is the first serial we have run in this house in over two years and we have people coming through the rain to see it who have never attended a serial before in their lives. The story is well told, well acted, and so full of snow that, in my estimation, it is the exhibitors' one best bet for hot weather, particularly in the smaller towns where cooling facilities are not to be had in the average store show. Any exhibitor who can't put this picture over and hold the first night crowd has no business in running a show."

A few telegrams, taken at haphazard from various sections of the country, shows the interest in the latest Vitagraph serial. Wadlow Brothers, of the Virginia Theatre, Detroit, said: "We consider your serial, 'Perils of Thunder Mountain,' absolutely the best hot weather money getter ever produced. Opened doors on one of the hottest nights Detroit has had in years and turned hundreds away. The winter settings are wonderful and really seem to cool the house by many degrees."

"The Volcano" Is Melodrama Without Sensational Props

THERE are some plays that exert extraordinary fascination over the human senses without revealing to the unskilled analyst how their results are attained. August Thomas in his Four-Star drama, "The Volcano," the W. W. Hodkinson release starring Leah Baird, has succeeded in conveying the impression that a hideous menace to human society exists in the hydra-headed monster, Radicalism, and there is no doubt that he carries conviction to the minds of all Americans with regard to the dangers of permitting sinister forces acting under definite orders from Lenine and Trotsky, et al., to swarm into cities of the United States and from every human refuse dump on the European continent.

Mr. Thomas forces his story home without too much reliance on knives, pistols, bludgeons or any of the usual melodramatic claptrap, but he makes one shudder when he displays the calm ease with which these foreign bomb tossers saunter about carrying enough explosive material in their coat pockets to blow up a city street—yet choosing crowded subway trains, street cars, elevated trains and commuter routes as their favorite media of transportation.

"The Volcano" is a story of American life under the menace of the red flags. It reveals how a horde of rabid propagandists from the darkened byways of Moscow and Petrograd weave their spells in the humble homes of New York's poorer folk, while sons of the men and women they seek to corrupt are pouring back from the fighting fields of France on every incoming transport.

Sidelights and Reflections

ONE of these days we may hear the words, "As honest as a closeup." The moving picture star was invented only a few years ago and already the names of those who have stepped down from their once high estate or passed into oblivion form a lengthy list. Among the women of the screen this condition takes on something of the tragic. Youthful heroines are the only ones the public has shown any interest in up to the present. The time may come when we shall have great screen dramas with parts on the Lady Macbeth order and actresses of sufficient years and experience to play such parts. Right now youth is in demand and the names, with but a few exceptions, that are flashed in electric lights above the doors of the moving picture theatres belong to actresses still on the right side of thirty.

The array of names in the cast of a picture recently released was a significant indication that art may be long, but a star's career is often quite the reverse: two ex-stars, in comparatively small parts, appear in the picture. The camera has a trick of hiding a woman's age for her for a time and then in the most unexpected and ungallant fashion giving away the exact truth. Five years from now will show many new faces on the screen.

The screen version of "Secret Service" did excellent business during its engagement at the Rivoli Theatre on Broadway. William Gillette's fine play of the civil war with enough real drama in it to supply half a dozen moving pictures of the ordinary type with situations is a forceful argument in favor of adapting stage plays to the screen—whenever the play warrants the operation. A story so strong in motives, character drawing and skilled workmanship as "Secret Service" is bound to give the spectator the thrill for which he is looking when he enters the theatre.

Only recently a scenario editor, during an address on the making of moving pictures, informed his hearers that the story of action was giving way to the story of character. If he had stated that the best moving pictures consist of character shown in action, he would have come nearer the truth.

And this thing called action is the vital spark of drama and is not to be confounded with the thing called movement. In one of the biggest scenes in "Secret Service" the leading character is alone on the stage and the action of the story is never more intense than when he stands motionless.

Nothing is so important to a photoplay or so little understood by the average writer as drama.

"The Firing Line"

Paramount-Artcraft Special Feature Presenting Irene Castle in the Leading Role of a Robert W. Chambers Story.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IRENE CASTLE seems well-suited to the interpretation of the leading character in "The Firing Line," and her charms of movement are well depicted in this Paramount Artcraft Special. She adds more than one personal attraction to the careful illustration of the Chambers novel, but the role she is obliged to assume is hardly one to enlist either sympathy or admiration. It is that of a flighty young female, at one moment concerned about the feelings of the wealthy people who adopted her, lest they know of her legitimate marriage, at another indifferent to their feelings when she decides to give herself to a lover. Lauded to the skies in subtitles, she displays the characteristics of a very thoughtless, if not a thoroughly selfish woman, accepting favors on every hand and giving little in return, until summoned to nurse the loyal man whose happiness she has nearly destroyed, to whom she is released by the suicide of her husband.

This suicide forms one of the few really dramatic incidents of the story, very delicately and effectively handled. In fact, the role of the husband in name only, as impersonated by David Powell, constitutes the nearest approach to genuine human character. R. V. Steele is convincing in the difficult role of a man who overcomes his own infatuation and that of the girl in time to save her from herself. The rest of the cast is admirable, and the direction carefully preserves the Chambers atmosphere, but it is not drama, and it loses to just that extent. The leading values of "The Firing Line" are those of publicity, the fame of Irene Castle, and that of Chambers among those who like his stories. The screen product comes close to being an exact reproduction of his novel in pictures, and it was so accepted by a Rivoli attendance at the presentation.

The Story.

Sheila Cardross gets to "The Firing Line" of emotional control through first having yielded to an impulse in marrying Louis Malcourt, when she found she was only the adopted child of a wealthy couple. She immediately regrets the impulse and refuses to live with her husband, preserving the secret of her marriage so as not to wound the feelings of those who befriended and adopted her. Thus secretly a "wife in name only," refusing even divorce, she is plunged into a veritable romance with Garry Hamil. She comes upon him rowing in a fog while she is swimming about aimlessly, with no sense of direction.

They meet socially, and the romance takes on the warmth of true love. Sheila is willing now to give up all she holds dear for his sake, but he will not permit such a sacrifice. He leaves her to struggle with himself, and is only weakened by the struggle. When he receives an announcement that she is now openly the wife of Malcourt, he falls ill from the effects of exposure, and his life is despaired of, when she is called to save it.

Sheila's devotion brings her husband to a realization that his wife's love for Garry Hamil is bound to prevail over the bond of marriage. He reminds her that she should be one thing or the other, a wife or a divorced woman, but fate comes to rescue. Malcourt's mind has become unbalanced through belief he is in communication with spiritual beings, particularly his father. On the latter's advice he shoots himself, and Sheila is at last enabled to release the natural love she has felt for the choice of her heart.

Robertson-Cole to Release Pictures With Snow Scenes for Summer Consumption

THE psychology of "snow stuff" in motion pictures during the summer months has been taken advantage of by Robertson-Cole in arranging its schedule of releases for distribution by Exhibitors Mutual during the hot months.

Following the issuance of "The Mints of Hell," starring William Desmond, a production marked by beautiful snow scenes, Robertson-Cole has listed "Man's Desire," a special attraction for early release. "Man's Desire" was purchased two weeks ago by Robertson-Cole, and is a pulsating human interest story of life in a lumber camp of the Northwest. Lewis Stone has the featured role and is surrounded by an all-star cast which includes Jane Novak.

Like "Mints of Hell," the Stone feature was filmed in the Sierra Mountains near Truckee, Cal., where it is possible to obtain the best "snow stuff" for film purposes.

Aside from the well known players in the cast, "Man's Desire" offers exhibitors many exploitation possibilities. The lumber camp scenes and the general atmosphere surrounding the photodrama have an appeal that is irrisistible.

Exhibitors Mutual has received many inquiries regarding the picture, although first announcement of the production was made less than two weeks ago. Exhibitors are keen to obtain picture of the nature of the Robertson-Cole attractions as evidenced by these inquiries.

Special Flashbacks and Tints in "The Westerners"

IN Stewart Edward White's, "The Westerners," the W. W. Hodkinson release, Benjamin B. Hampton introduces a new flash back.

Early in the story, the old scientist, Professor Welch (Graham Pettie), loses his mind owing to a great shock. The action works up to a scene in which Robert McKim as Michael Lafond attempts to choke the weak old man. As the professor looks into the face of his adversary there flashes through his suddenly-cleared mind an occasion when that same wicked face leered in his and those same long fingers clutched his throat.

Instead of conveying the idea of the return of memory by flashing many unnecessary feet of film showing the entire action, the scenes, in close-up, flash in quick succession, fading one into the other double-exposed against a background of the professor's head.

Another interesting mechanical feature is the tinting. The daylight scenes are so delicately tinted that no effect of color is given. This is accomplished with Mr. Hampton's new sunlight tint, which adds wonderful highlights to the picture, and livens it with a vividness that makes every figure stand out with a marvelous stereoscopic effect.

Completion of Two Metro Comedies Is Announced

EMMY WEHLEN and Hale Hamilton have completed their respective latest productions at the new Metro studios in Hollywood. Miss Wehlen's new vehicle is an original comedy from the pen of Luther A. Reed, entitled "A Favor to a Friend," while Hamilton rounded out his work before the camera in "In His Brother's Place," a comedy drama which the star wrote himself and in which he assumes a dual role.

Miss Wehlen was directed by John Ince. Arthur Martinelli did the photographing. Jack Mulhall is again her leading man and the cast includes Joseph Kilgour, Hugh Faye, Effie Conely and Harry Todd.

Hale Hamilton's comedy written by himself has a unique twist in that a successful business man exchanges places with his twin brother, a minister, to demonstrate that the same methods that make a business prosperous will make a church prosperous.

The two leading feminine roles are filled by Marguerite Snow, who comes back to the screen after an absence of some time, and by Mary McIvor. Others in the cast are Emmett C. King, Ruby La Fayette, Jessie De Jarnette, Howard Crampton and Ward King.

Harry L. Franklin directed the picture and introduced a number of extremely well-handled double exposure scenes. Rudolph Bergquist shared the labors of this part of the work at the camera. A. S. Le Vino supplied the continuity for Hamilton's story.

Attractive Program Issued by Kansas City Theatre

AS an up-to-date, informative and paying theatre program, the thirty-four page magazine issued by the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., serves as an excellent example. It is called the Newman Theatre Magazine and is issued every week. The first issue made its appearance only three weeks ago.

The third number of the first volume contains a fund of information for the photoplay patrons and twenty-two full pages of advertising from the leading merchants of that city. A fine stock of glazed paper is employed and this reproduces the pictures in good fashion. In this number portraits of Elsie Ferguson, Robert Warwick and Lillian Gish, stars in Paramount-Artcraft pictures, comprise the gallery.

The magazine is made up after the fashion of the usual theatre program with the exception that it is more handsome. The back pages include gossip regarding the leading players of the screen, many of the "shorts" from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation supplied in the various press books, issued by the company and in its house organ, Progress-Advance, being utilized here.

In other words the Newman Theatre Magazine is not a mere program, but a miniature photoplay weekly, carrying along with its full page portraits of the stars, news of coming productions, sidelights and human interest stories on the personalities and lives of the picture favorites. The Newman Theatre's mailing list totals some 5,000 names. The program is edited and managed by Milton H. Feld.

Films of Animal Capture Will Have Pre-Release

THREE special pictures produced at Universal City, and unlike any other pictures in existence, are to be given pre-release showings at the Rialto Theatre on Broadway, New York, within the next two months. The pictures are of the educational type, but they are also entertaining. They are the animal pictures known as the Major Allen productions.

Major Allen directed the productions, as well as taking the leading role in them. They show how wild animals in their native haunts are captured without the use of a gun. No doubt many have wondered how many of the animals in the zoos throughout the country have been caught without harming them. This series shows in detail just how this is accomplished, and each of the pictures are true illustrations. Many exciting chases are pictured.

The titles of the three pictures and the weeks in which they will be shown at the Rialto are "The Leopard Hunt," week of July 6; "Bear Hunt," week July 20, and "The Lion Hunt," during the week of August 3.

"On With the Dance" is Mae Murray's Next.

George Fitzmaurice, who has directed all of Elsie Ferguson's recent Artcraft pictures, will have charge of the Paramount-Artcraft production, "On with the Dance," which will mark the return of Mae Murray to the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a star. The production will be started some time in August at one of the corporation's Eastern studios.

"On with the Dance" is a play by Michael Morton which was originally produced at the Republic Theatre, New York, and enjoyed a successful run during the season of 1917-18.

The story deals with the marital difficulties of Edward Lawrence and his gay young wife, Nina, who thinks of little except dancing and the accompanying thrills of fast society life.

"Dust of Desire"

Five-Reel World-Picture Presents Rubye de Remer in Fervid Love Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel World Picture, entitled "Dust of Desire," is a production of uncertain continuity and in general presentation does not come up to first rank. It tells a love story of exaggerated emotional appeal and abounds in melodramatic society scenes. It will not be convincing to people who know something of real society, but at the same time there is a great mass of uncritical observers who will enjoy this type of story. It has a real story value, despite its numerous faults of presentation, and it should go well with many audiences.

Rubye de Remer is cast as the heroine, Beth Vinton, a girl with a past, but who aspires to the love of a real man, named Dick Thornton. She tells Dick her story of how she was tricked by a man who was already married, and Dick forgives her early mistakes and marries her. But the other man, Ridgley Torrence, appears on the scene and many complications follow. Stuart Holmes plays the part of Torrence, portraying him as a cad of the worst description, who has yet one redeeming spark of manhood.

The South American scenes have a good melodramatic grip. The events which follow are interesting, but come in the nature of a series of anti-climaxes. The story wanders about too much to hold suspense, but it is at any rate free from obvious situations.

The Story.

Beth Vinton, in "Dust of Desire," conducts an inn near New York, to which crowds of a sporty character repair. She herself has participated freely in this sort of life, but when she falls in love with Dick Thornton, she determines to tell him the truth. Beth confesses that she has been quite wild and that at one time she was unwittingly drawn into intimate relations with a man named Ridgley Torrence, not knowing him to be married.

Dick Thornton hears her story and forgives her. He is an explorer for a rubber company, and after they have been married, they start at once for South America. Beth has given Dick to understand that Torrence, whom she did not mention by name, was dead, and she is one day greatly shocked when Torrence appears at their bungalow in South America. Torrence tells Beth he has been unable to forget her, and that she must come with him. Beth, unable to tell her husband the truth, as she fears one of the two men will be killed, decides to make away with Torrence herself. She arranges a trap door in the floor of the bungalow, which empties into an underground stream, and permits Torrence to fall through this. Torrence plunges to his seeming death, but Dick follows and saves his life.

Torrence then develops an unlooked for spark of manhood, and leaves the place. Later complications occur in New York City, when Torrence is accidentally shot and killed by a girl he married after being divorced from his first wife. Beth and Dick are drawn into the tragic affair, but emerge happy in the confidence of each other's love.

"Man's Desire"

Robertson-Cole Five-Reel Laid in Western Lumber Woods Features Lewis S. Stone.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

REGARDLESS of the fact that Lewis S. Stone is the featured member of the cast in the Robertson-Cole production, "Man's Desire," which will be released through the Exhibitors-Mutual, and regardless also of the fact that he acquits himself well, the production gains its distinction as an entertaining, red-blooded picture of life in the Western lumber woods, by dint of able direction and a thoroughly capable cast. From the flower-like personality of Jane Novak, to the unshaven realism supplied by Bill Dyer as "Slim" Dorgan, and Jack Curtiss as "Bull" Larkin, there is conviction in almost every scene of the picture.

The story on which the production is founded is in a sense unusual. It has been produced in a manner to lure the interest of the spectator from scene to scene. Its dramatic moments have been carefully guarded, and one is not jarred by the inconsistencies that frequently creep into productions purported to be of the acme of quality. A pleasing contrast in scenic effects is obtained when the action leaps from the summer season in the forest, to the dead of winter.

The production is one that is bound to please the average audience. Its characterization rings true, and its theme is of that thrilling quality which mingles brutality with romance.

The Story.

The setting of "Man's Desire" is a Western lumber camp, in which is seen the actual work of cutting down the trees and hauling them to the saw-mill.

To the splendid forest of big trees comes Tom Denton, a man from the East, entering into partnership with the owner of a lumber section. In his rounds he discovers "Slim" Dorgan, a lazy good-for-nothing, handing out liquor to the men, and discharges him. "Bull" Larkin, also not of much account, and brutal in nature, who has forcibly married the pretty daughter of a dying friend, takes a hand in helping Slim to get revenge. Mystic Atmosphere of "Red Lantern" Offers Chance to Exploit Picture in Novel Way

EXHIBITORS throughout the country showing the spectacle-drama, "The Red Lantern," with Nazimova as the star are finding that the Nazimova production is one which lends itself naturally to novel and effective advertising and publicity devices. The production, besides the prestige of its star, is unusual in theme and setting and no exploitation can be too daring, it has been found. This was found to be true by the bigger exhibitors who secured the picture for its first run.

At the New Grand Central Theatre, in St. Louis, the lobby display was strikingly beautiful, presenting an Oriental grove festooned with red lanterns and wistaria.

W. V. Lamoreaux, manager of the Chateau Theatre, in Chicago, put over a smashing display on "The Red Lantern." Several weeks before the first showing. Mr. Lamoreaux began to make use of the lobby for advance exploitation. It was transformed into a Chinese street. Quaint houses with thatched and green tiled roofs gave a distinctly Oriental atmosphere.

In the center of the street stood the house of a Mandarin, and in the background a reproduction of a Chinese temple. Patrons were called into the theatre proper with the sound of Chinese gongs; the theatre having been transformed inside to represent the interior of the temple. A huge figure of Buddha, in jade, was a feature of the stage decorations.

Sam Harding, manager of the Liberty Theatre, in Kansas City, also cashed in on "The Red Lantern." A feature of his lobby and house display was in dressing the ten girl ushers, besides the doormen, ticket sellers and others in silken Chinese garments.

John Kunsky, owner of a large theatre in City Hall Square, Detroit, purchased several small signal balloons and sent them up from the roof of his theatre, which faces the square. At intervals on the tieropes, Mr. Kunsky fastened great red Chinese lanterns, lighted by electricity from cables hooked to his house wires.

June a Simplex Record Month.

When April and May figures were computed and the remarkable number of Simplex orders were made known it was discovered that both months were record-breaking. Now on top of these figures comes the compilation of June Simplex orders, with the result that figures which a year ago would have been considered impossible are apparent, making the month of June a record.

Additional workmen have been put to work at the Simplex plant, the shipping crew re-enforced and two more lofts engaged on Thirty-Fourth street in order to keep up with this incessant stream of orders. Night work, which has been effective since March, will be in force for the rest of the summer before all back orders are finally disposed of.

"SMILING BILL" PARSONS, the star, whose pictures are released through Goldwyn, expressed himself of the opinion that the eternal triangle motive in comedy maintained its hold on motion picture patrons because of the fidelity of theme to life.

"But in using the theme for Capitol Comedies, I try to exaggerate the possibilities of the triangular misunderstanding, so that the preposterousness of the situations present the laughable side of this serious subject. In other words, the people who are directly interested in a domestic tangle of this sort fail to see themselves as other do, and this other side is just what I strive to present in lively pictures that really make fun of a very serious subject."

More than a year afterward, Bull appears on the scene, when he drags himself through the snow to Denton's cabin, suffering from a bullet wound. Denton, who has never seen Larkin before, and further deceived by Mary's fearful keeping of the secret, gives him every attention, and for his pains, is shot in the back as he is going over the hills for food. "The Wilderness Trail"

Five-Reel Fox Production Mingles Cool Snow Scenes with Summer Heat.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

WINTER lingers in the lap of midsummer in this five-reel Fox subject, entitled "The Wilderness Trail." Tom Mix forsakes the region of sagebrush and cowboys and moves into the Canadian Northwest, where he finds plenty of melodramatic incident to keep him busy. The action of this number is fairly suspenseful, and the plot sufficient to keep the interest going. It is a production that averages well and has perhaps a special appeal, owing to its wintry atmosphere.

The story is typical of the region. The hero is the son of Robert MacTavish, who has just been appointed head commissioner of the Hudson Bay Company. Young MacTavish finds that his father's appointment has won him the enmity of Angus Fitzpatrick, factor of the chief trading post. This is particularly embarrassing as he loves Fitzpatrick's daughter. The factor suspects MacTavish of having stolen some valuable furs, and it is not until the hero has rescued his daughter from the real thieves, a band of free traders, that the young couple find happiness together.

The scenes are taken in a real snow country, and much of the action occurs in blinding blizzards. The story leads up to an interesting climax, wherein the hero and his friends fight in the open with the fur thieves.

The Story.

Donald MacTavish, the hero of "The Wilderness Trail," is the son of Robert MacTavish, who has just been appointed head commissioner of the Hudson Bay Company. Angus Fitzpatrick, the factor, has a bitter hatred against the elder MacTavish, because of the appointment, and is disposed to take this out on the son. He openly accuses Donald of having stolen a large consignment of furs, which have really fallen into the hands of some dishonest traders, led by a half-breed, named Sergius.

Donald and Sergius both love Jeanne Fitzpatrick, the factor's daughter, and the latter contrives with his Indian mother to kidnap the girl. Jeanne is taken across the snow fields to a cabin inhabited by the free traders. Donald learns of this and follows on horseback. He is captured by the traders and placed in handcuffs, but manages to escape by taking desperate chances. He rides away on his horse, still handcuffed, but the animal is shot from a distance by Sergius, and the hero is forced to abandon it. He finds Jeanne and takes her back to her father, who has been injured in a brush with the traders.

Fitzpatrick has been threatening to hang Donald for stealing the furs, but when the facts come out, they become friends. Donald then leads a party of men against Sergius and the traders, who are captured or dispersed. Donald kills Sergius in a terrific knife duel in the snow.

"The Better Wife"

Clara Kimball Young Has Strong Support in Select Picture of Fair Quality.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

TAKEN from a novel of English life written by Lenora Coffe, and entitled "The Love Quest," this five-part Select picture has been produced under the title of "The Better Wife," with Clara Kimball Young in the leading role. The cast calls for a well-balanced group of actors, which has been supplied in the persons of Nigel Barrie, Lillian Walker, Kathlyn Williams, Irving Cummings, Barbara Tennant, Edward M. Kimball, and little Ben Alexander.

The story is typical of the English society novel, the heroine in this case being an American girl visiting in England, who marries a man of title, after his wife has been killed in an automobile accident, and lives apart from him until he discovers his first wife was false. There is very little action in the story, and the Sir Richard Beverly has been given so few brains by the author that his failure to see through the character of his first wife and to appreciate the worth of his second, robs him of the sympathy of the spectator. The plot has hardly any suspense, and the repetition of the scenes at the bedside of the sick child is another weak point. On the production side, it is excellent. It is well acted, and William P. S. Earle has directed it skilfully. Clara Kimball Young makes all that is possible of Charmain Page, the American girl.

Considerable Monkey Business Apparent in New Larry Semon Vitagraph Comedy

"HIS HOME, SWEET HOME," the Larry Semon Vitagraph comedy, has again demonstrated that the actor-director is wonderful in his particular line of endeavor, and his comedies among the cleverest shown. A two weeks' booking at the Broadway Theatre, New York, previous to the formal release, together with the more than favorable reviews of the critics, spread the fame of "His Home, Sweet Home," throughout the country, and bookings are coming into Vitagraph in flattering numbers, among the first to arrive coming from Pantages Theatre in far-away Salt Lake City, and the Broadway Strand, Detroit. The growing popularity of the Semon comedies is shown in the new bookings each new release brings forth, many of the recent orders coming from theatres which have not heretofore offered Mr. Semon and his inimitable fun to their patrons.

While the mother-in-law problem, dressed up in new clothes, plays an important part in this picture, it is not the leading theme of the comedy. Rather it is the clever work of a simian that gives the comedian the base to work on and get in some of his famous acrobatic stunts. The plot of a comedy should not be disclosed in advance—it would allow the spectator to anticipate the situations and bring on an anti-climax. Suffice it to say that Larry Semon is at odds with his mother-in-law and has been relegated in her home to the position of assistant to the kitchen maid.

As in Larry's previous comedies, "His Home, Sweet Home," has a well-defined plot, in which the situations are worked out in logical manner. Neither comedy nor story is subordinated to the other, and the result is clean, wholesome fun of the Semon kind.

Dorothy Gish in "Nugget Nell."

"Nugget Nell" is the title of the next Paramount picture in which Dorothy Gish is presented by the New Art Film Company and which is scheduled for release July 13. The production was directed by Elmer Clifton and is from an original story by John E. Cornish, being described as "a burlesque travesty on the wild and movie West."

Nugget Nell, the character which Miss Gish essays, is the proprietress of an eating-house in the mining country.

The travesty is said to abound in ludicrous situations. Miss Gish is surrounded in her fun-making by a cast which includes David Butler, Raymond Cannon, Regina Sarlo, James Farley, Bob Fleming, Wilbur Higby and Emily Chichester.

Reid Has Clever Starring Role in "Love Burglar"

WALLACE REID'S new Paramount picture, "The Love Burglar," will be released July 13, and in it Mr. Reid is said to have one of the best roles of his career.

The picture is a screen version of the recent play by Jack Lait, "One of Us," which had its premiere at the Morosco Theatre in Los Angeles, later to find favor with Broadway audiences.

The story concerns the adventures of a young society idler named David Strong, who went to a tough slum saloon in search of his erring brother, and, after taking his money and valuables away from him, sends him home.

James Cruze directed, and the camera work was by Frank Urson. Walter Woods wrote the scenario, and Cullen Tate was assistant to Mr. Cruze. Supporting the star are Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Noah Beery, Wilton Taylor, Edward Burns, Alice Taafe, Henry Woodward and other notable players.

Mrs. Sidney Drew made the screen adaptation. John Cumberland has the leading role. Mr. Henley expects to complete production in two weeks.

"The Cup of Fury" Song Will Help Popularize Film

ONE of the most intensive and far-reaching exploitation campaigns ever devised for a motion picture is now under way for the nationwide promotion of Rupert Hughes' "The Cup of Fury," the first production made by the Eminent Authors' Pictures, Inc., and released through Goldwyn.

By special arrangement with McCarthy and Fisher, Inc., music publishers, Goldwyn's Service Department will exploit a popular balled, entitled "The Cup of Fury," and will circulate copies and orchestrations gratis among all exhibitors who book the picture. The theme deals with a woman's "fury of love," and the music embodies the "light" ballroom melody well calculated to win popular public favor. The song will be featured wherever there is life and music and will also be recorded by the Columbia phonograph.

Local dealers representing the music company have agreed to devote entire window displays to the song. Special mail campaigns, the engagement of professional singers, and the newspaper exploitation of the ballad will form an important part of the national co-operative campaign.

Slides in attractive colors and beautifully designed heralds and window cards will be supplied free to exhibitors. Goldwyn's Service Department will forward the material several weeks in advance of playing dates in order to insure an advance campaign that will arouse interest to high pitch. The cover of the song, "The Cup of Fury," will bear a cut of Rupert Hughes and a layout of a leading scene in the picture. It will be designed in the most elaborate colors.

"A White Man's Chance" Is Familiar Kerrigan Theme

J. WARREN KERRIGAN'S admirers have a treat in store for them in "A White Man's Chance," which W. W. Hodkinson has announced for release this month, according to Robert Brunton, the producer.

The picture, made from Johnson McCulley's novel of the same name, published by Frank A. Munsey Company, has all of the thrills, suspense and love interest that the early Kerrigan pictures had—with the added virtue of the most modern methods of production.

It is the first of a series of ten productions by Mr. Kerrigan and his own company to be produced by Robert Brunton. The action takes place in that land where all things are possible—Mexico. Mr. Kerrigan takes the role of a young American who disguises himself as a Spanish noble for purposes of legal investigation into a matter of romance.

His leading woman is Lillian Walker. It is something unusual to see Jack Warren Kerrigan making love to a blonde, but the contrast between his dark Spanish disguise and her blue-eyed, golden-haired blondness is delightful.

Lincoln Enjoys Fist Battles.

E. K. Lincoln thinks any role that does not contain at least one good fight has something important lacking. In Zane Grey's "Desert Gold," recently completed by Benjamin B. Hampton and Eltinge F. Warner for W. W. Hodkinson distribution, he indulges in several smash-up fist battles that were his particular delight and this fact, along with the rough riding he is given an opportunity to do, makes the role of Dick Gale, the hero of Zane Grey's popular novel of the modern West, his favorite.

"Our Better Selves"

Pathe Extra Selected Star Photoplay Features Fannie Ward in War Tragedy.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS beautifully made five-reel Pathe subject, entitled "Our Better Selves," has its scenes laid in Europe during the war. It is peculiarly a war story, of a rather different type than usual. It follows the course of two social butterflies, a man and a woman, who are eventually roused to the great crisis confronting the world and give their lives in their noble effort to help humanity. It reflects the real heroism shown almost universally during the war, and will be appreciated and understood by all who see it.

The opening scenes are at a fashionable resort in southern Europe, where Loyette Merval, a member of the French noblesse, and Willard Standish, an American society idler, meet and fall in love. These roles are portrayed by Fannie Ward and Lewis J. Cody, both of whom make the most of their opportunities. Charles Hill Mailes appears as Henry Laurens, a German spy. The later developments occur in a French town occupied by the enemy.

This subject excels in the matter of beautiful sets and lighting effects. The society scenes in the beginning convey attractively the smart atmosphere required. Some excellent special effects have also been achieved in the devastated French town and the convent. While the principals both die, the tragic end is softened by symbolical scenes that follow.

The Story.

Loyette Merval, a member of the French noblesse, and the heroine of "Our Better Selves," meets an American society idler, Willard Standish, at a resort in southern Europe. They fall in love, in an atmosphere of luxury and romance, but when they have been married a year, Loyette is disappointed because her husband does not do something worth while in the world. She chides him, and Willard temporarily becomes a chauffeur, much to her disgust.

Her Whole "Aim" in Life.

The war breaks out and Loyette is slow to realize what it means. She continues her butterfly career, undisturbed, and even protests when Willard wants to enlist. But Willard does enlist, and is soon at the front.

Willard is wounded during an enemy advance, and secrets himself in a convent, just deserted by the fleeing nuns. Loyette, who has finally awakened, drives to the convent in an automobile, thinking she may save Willard. The automobile is impressed into service, and she and Willard find themselves alone in the place. Loyette assumes the attire of a nun and hides Willard away. The Germans come and occupy the convent. Loyette is in danger of execution, but considered harmless and allowed to live. She and Willard later check a German coup, and blow up the men who planned it, both giving their lives in this act. Loyette and Willard are pictured as lovers crossing the River Styx together.

Then back this up by advertising in your newspaper, work the excellence of the production, telling your readers that this is a play that for color and atmosphere is above the average. "Ace of the Saddle"

Six-Reel Universal Production Features Harry Carey in Novel Adventure Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A FRESH bag of tricks is exposed to view in this six-reel Universal subject, entitled "Ace of the Saddle." It pictures a new series of adventures in the life of Cheyenne Harry, the role in which Harry Carey has attained popularity. The number starts off slowly, with the usual ranch humor, and except for the striking scenic effects, it impresses the spectator as a conventional type of yarn. But this idea is dispelled in the light of further happenings of a distinctly unusual character. The moving of the cabin from one county to another, by the use of six horses, is one astonishing incident, and there are many others.

Vivian Martin Essays Title Role in Paramount Screen Version of "Louisiana"

THE title role in the Paramount version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel, "Louisiana," which is released July 20, is essayed by Vivian Martin. So perfectly does the part fit Miss Martin's talents, it is said, that if the story had been written within the last two years, an assumption that the little star herself had inspired the type in the mind of the author would find a general belief.

Miss Martin's type is and has always been that of the sweet, little unsophisticated girl whose every action and expression denotes childish innocence and purity, and is the direct counterpart of the little child of the mountains who has been raised in seclusion and whose companions had been the birds and the flowers and the stately trees which grew upon the mountain tops.

Robert Ellis, one of the screen's most capable leading men, enacts the role of the young playwright who meets Louisiana at Oakvale Springs and falls in love with her. It is said that he has performed his role with a delicacy and expertness that adds much beauty and realism to the romance of the story.

Noah Beery was selected to play the part of Lem Rogers, the crude mountaineer, father of the girl. Mr. Beery is one of the screen's best character men and has appeared in numerous Paramount and Artcraft pictures.

Arthur Allardt, experienced in both leading and character roles, and, although young in years, a veteran of the "legitimate" and vaudeville stages, as well as of screen work, was cast to play the heavy role—Cass Floyd, the jealous young mountaineer who loved the girl and even attempted twice to kill his rival, the playwright.

The part of Olivia Ferol, the sister of the young playwright, is ably interpreted by Lillian West, a leading woman of considerable experience and reputation, both on stage and screen.

The comedy element is furnished by Lillian Leighton, one of the best known of character women, who portrays the role of Aunt Cassandry, the old negro mammy nurse who goes down to the Springs with Louisiana. Her adventures with the facetious colored porters at the resort are said to be amusing.

The picture was directed by Robert Vignola and photographed by Frank E. Garbutt. Alice Eyton adapted the story, and Philip Carlbert assisted Mr. Vignola. tional scenes.

Titling and Assembling of "The Blue Bonnet" Started

AFTER two months and a half of work, Billie Rhodes and her director, Louis William Chaudet, attained the photographic completion of her National Film Corporation production, "The Blue Bonnet," which marks her first appearance nationally through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

The making of this production involved bringing Miss Rhodes and a company of fifty players with her director and a complete technical staff from Los Angeles to New York for the making of certain Salvation Army scenes and their return to the Coast to complete the picture in Los Angeles.

The month of July and most of August will be devoted to the task of assembling and editing the film, which will be released during the latter part of August.

Prominent in the supporting cast are Ben Wilson, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Allen Hale and Irene Rich.

The story, which is the work of E. Magnus Ingleton, is laid entirely in the United States and it shows a phase of the Salvation Army which reveals the reason why that organization won such a place in the affections of the world during the recent war. "The Blue Bonnet" has no war phases at all, being announced as a "story of over here."

Five-Reel Prices for Two-Reel Stories.

In order to secure the very best stories for production as two-reel comedies, Amedee J. Van Beuren, of 220 West Forty-second street, New York, announces that he will pay five-reel prices for superior stories accepted for either of his stars, Mrs. Sidney Drew or Ernest Truex.

Writers should bear in mind that the Drew and Truex comedies are of the polite type and questionable situations and slapstick action are tabooed.

"The Girl from Outside" Shows Spectacular Storm

WHAT are perhaps the most remarkable night scenes in motion pictures have been taken by Director Reginald Barker in Rex Beach's production of "The Girl from Outside," at the Goldwyn Studios. During the making of the production 400 extras were at work to people the town of Nome, Alaska, as it was populated in 1900. Every detail is historically correct. The main thoroughfare of Nome has been reproduced accurately, embodying such places of historical interest as Denton's saloon, the North Star Hotel and the Nome warehouses.

As the action takes place during the so-called Alaskan "rainy season," the mud scenes of the production are of paramount interest. The camera has caught the vast flood and the fierce beating of the waters against the buildings; the flashing lightning and the terrible wind storm—a reproduction of the catastrophic storm that in 1902 wrecked a part of Nome.

Rex Beach incorporates a fight into the action with the same skill with which he developed climactic struggles in "The Brand," "The Crimson Gardenia" and "The Auction Block."

Clara Horton appears as June, a child who is surrounded by the ruffians of the North. She was particularly selected by Mr. Beach; and her physical frailty is in perfect keeping with her part of the little reformer in the play. Miss Horton appears throughout the picture. No double was used for her scenes in the mud and rain —only another evidence of Director Barker's fidelity to detail.

Warner's Latest Proves To Be Good Hot Weather Film

H. B. WARNER is running the hot weather a great race with his Robertson-Cole Superior Picture, "The Man Who Turned White," which is being distributed by Exhibitors Mutual.

Walter F. Griffith, the result-producing manager of Poli's Bijou Theatre, New Haven, recently played the picture and was so gratified with results that he forwarded the following dispatch to the New York exchange of Exhibitors Mutual:

"Warner wonderful in 'The Man Who Turned White.' Business great three hot days. Congratulations."

Following this wire there were received at Exhibitors Mutual the home office a wire from Akron, Ohio, telling of the success of the Robertson-Cole feature at the Waldorf Theatre, a first run house, while the thermometer was flirting with 90 degrees in the shade.

The picture gets its first run in Boston in the Park Theatre. It goes from the Park to the Franklin Park Theatre, Dorchester, thence to the Strand Theatre, Lowell. All these theatres are under the same management.

On the strength of these bookings, the Warner picture was carded by the Strand Theatre in Providence.

Exhibitors Like "Beauty Proof."

An interesting story, a popular star, a capable director, a notable cast and fitting scenery, all of which were combined by Vitagraph in "Beauty Proof," the recently released Harry T. Morey feature, has brought about the result expected by the producers. With one accord exhibitors have agreed that the new Morey picture is one of the best yet made by that actor. Mr. Morey's splendid physique fitted peculiarly into the part of Corporal Steele, of the Northwest Mounted Police, and the outdoor scenes in the snowy wastes of the Dominion of Canada lent additional enchantment. Betty Blythe also looks exceedingly well in the picturesque garments of the snow country, and was of great assistance in making the picture an undoubted success.

of the Rio Grande river, with a background of high, jagged mountains, which in places resemble the sides of the Grand Canyon. Cattle rustling is the motive of the plot action, and the sheriffs of two counties appear in the cast of characters. The rustlers appear as night riders, attired in white caps, and some furious riding takes place.

Considerable imagination has been turned loose in this subject and the situations on the whole are very entertaining. One of the best incidents is the final one, in which Cheyenne Harry dopes the rustlers with their own poisoned water, and puts them temporarily out of business.

The Story.

Cheyenne Harry, of "Ace of the Saddle," finds a large amount of cattle stealing going on at his ranch. Yucca county, where the ranch is located, keeps a clear court record, and events soon make it evident that the rustlers are working hand in glove with the sheriff and other county officers.

Harry makes an appeal to the sheriff of Pinkerton county, adjoining, but the latter is powerless to interfere. Harry falls in love with Madeline Faulkner, daughter of the Pinkerton county sheriff, and at her request, gives up wearing a gun. Under the code of that region, it is bad form to shoot at an unarmed man, but Harry has many enemies in Yucca county, and by a trick, he is drawn into a shooting affair, but comes out unharmed.

The cattle rustlers poison the waterhole on Harry's ranch, and he moves his cabin, one night, across the line, into Pinkerton county, placing himself under the jurisdiction of Sheriff Faulkner. The rustlers retaliate by abducting Madeline, but Harry pursues and rescues the girl single-handed. There are many exchanges of shots between the rustlers and the sheriff's posse, but the leaders of the outlaws are captured. They are brought to trial, but saved in a sensational raid of their rustler friends. Harry then lures the entire band to his cabin and tricks them into consuming some of the water they had poisoned, which knocks them out temporarily and renders them easy of capture.

"The Fear Woman"

A Timely Goldwyn Production Presenting Pauline Frederick in the Title Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE FEAR in this case is that of a nervous young woman, admirably portrayed by Pauline Frederick, who is engaged to marry a devoted suitor, but who is reluctant to perpetuate the habit of alcoholic indulgence for which her father's family has been notorious during several generations, which she is convinced will afflict his descendants, though she has no appetite of that kind. "The Fear Woman" may be called timely. It admits of powerful treatment. The story starts out with that in view. Miss Frederick capably depicts a young woman horrified by the death of her father from an accident brought about by drunkeness, and she is effective when she dismisses the guests just before her wedding ceremony, because she has seen a pitiful drunken woman from her window. Thereafter the actress has limited opportunity. The mood of the story changes about, interest flagging when the heroine rescues a young wife from a compromising situation, and falling rapidly off when some comedy characters, a vulgar rich woman and her fat son, are introduced, along with a tennis tournament, neither having anything of direct importance to do with solving the heroine's problem, not only a complete change of mood, dangerous enough in itself, but sidetracking the theme itself.

First Henley Production Soon Ready for Release

"THE GAY OLD DOG," the first of a series of four special features to be produced under the personal direction of Hobart Henley, Hobart Henley Productions, Inc., will leave the Hobart Henley Studio, Fifty-fourth street, New York, early next week for cutting and titling, after which it will be given a private review showing.

Frank G. Hall, president of the Independent Sales, through whom Mr. Henley's special production will be released, anticipates a keen interest among exhibitors when the scenarized version of Edna Ferber's "The Gay Old Dog," is first flashed upon the screen. The Ferber story, adapted for the screen by Mrs. Sidney Drew, is said to be an intensely human picture of ingratitude, love and constancy.

There is nothing extraordinarly original about the plot or motif; it is an old story told in a different way, and so well acted before the camera that the most common and prosaic "life scenes" are given a poignancy, vividness and reality which, when coupled with lavish scenic efforts and good photography, make a photodrama of compelling force and interest. The drama will be picturized in six reels.

John Cumberland, at present starring in "Up in Mable's Room," a current Broadway success, has the part of the gay old dog.

Alice Joyce Working on New Picture.

The extremely hot weather of the past two weeks has held no terrors for Alice Joyce, even if she has been busy on her new Vitagraph feature. Fortunately for the star, her new play, "The Winchester Woman," calls for many outside locations, and Wesley Ruggles, who has returned from overseas and is directing the picture, found an ideally rural town in New Jersey, not more than an hour's ride by motor car from New York City. There Miss Joyce and her company has been at work, keeping comparatively cool under the spreading shade trees.

"The Winchester Woman" was written by Charles Stokes Wayne and picturized by Edwin Arthur Krows. It affords Miss Joyce an opportunity to get away from the "daughter of luxury" type with which she has so closely been identified and to portray an entirely different character. In addition to Miss Joyce, who will be seen as Anne Wharton, the cast includes Percy Marmont, Robert Middlemass, Jean Armour, Helen Dixon and Joe Burke.

Earle Williams' Company Returns from Lake Tahoe

JANE NOVAK, who has the leading feminine role in support of Earle Williams in "The Wolf," the picture version of Eugene Walter's drama, has greatly pleased James Young, who is directing the picture, by her clever work. Mr. Williams' company has just returned from Lake Tahoe, where nearly all the outside scenes were made, and has returned to Vitagraph's Western studio. Miss Novak visualizes a beautiful mountain girl .

Jane Miller Is Star of "The Unbroken Promise"

WITH an unbroken record of successes behind her, and possessing youth, beauty and talent, the career of Jane Miller, featured player in Triangle's "The Unbroken Promise," scheduled for July 27 release, seems destined to be led by the star of good fortune to the highest realms of stardom.

"The Unbroken Promise," Miss Miller's latest vehicle, offers the star, who is an ideal type of the outdoor girl, unusual opportunities for the display of her ability and charming personality. The story, which is adapted from Henry Herbert Knibb's novel, "Sundown Slim," is laid in Texas, amid the scenes chosen by the author for his book. A bitter feud exists between Loring, sheep raiser, and John Corliss, cattle owner. Corliss loves Nell, Loring's only daughter, but he keeps silent that his brother may strive to win the girl both love. This tale of the West is said to have been treated in an entirely new manner by Director Frank Powell, resulting in a picture drama of sustained force and appeal. The photography, which is by Percy Higginson and Arthur Boeger, is thoroughly in keeping with the excellence of the production, showing many unusual shots of Western scenes.

Miss Miller's last appearance on the Triangle program was her leading feminine role supporting J. Barney Sherry in "High Stakes."

"The Golden Song" Shows Result of Merit Policy

GOLDWYN'S recently announced policy of booking every picture individually and on merit alone has already resulted in the production of pictures of a magnitude impossible under the old star series system. The Goldwyn organization has now set a new standard for itself, the immediate result of which is the production of Geraldine Farrar's screen play, "The Golden Song." Lou Tellegen, the star's husband, plays the leading male role opposite her.

The story is laid in Petrograd and the surrounding country, with the seething political and social unrest of the day forming a dark and ominous atmospheric background for the development of an exquisite love story. Geraldine Farrar portrays the development of a young American girl, the protege of a Russian prince, through whose generosity and kindness her voice is cultivated and she is trained for a career in the opera.

To Release "Career of Katherine Bush" July 20

PROBABLY no other photodramatic production in many months, it is claimed, aroused more curiosity than the Paramount-Artcraft Special, "The Career of Katherine Bush," which is announced for release July 20. This is a picturization of the popular novel of the same name by Elinor Glyn.

Catherine Calvert has the stellar role.

In the story Mrs. Glyn paints the portrait of a young woman who carves out her own career successfully, but before she reaches her goal—marriage to a celebrated nobleman—she suffers many a bitter pang, occasioned by her recollection of imprudences of her early life.

The production was directed by R. William Neill. The scenario was the work of Kathryn Stuart. John Goldsworthy, a young English actor, is Miss Calvert's leading man. The supporting cast includes Craufurd Kent, Mathilda Brundage, Helen Montrose, Ann Dearing, Augusta Anderson, Norah Reed, Claire Whitney, Albert Hackett, Earl Lockwood, Walter Smith, Robert Minot, Edith Pierce, Allen Simpson and Fred Burton.

First "Screen Letter Box" To Be Released Next Week

THE first Screen Letter Box, a novelty short subject, conceived by Morris Kashin, produced by Jack Cohn and released by Frank G. Hall through his program of Independent Sales and Film Clearing House releases, will be given to the public, for the first time, next week. The initial release of these subjects is scheduled for July, 15.

The Screen Letter Box is shown in approximately 500 feet and consists of a series of questions and answers on the screen. The secrets of the studio—the art of makeup, how the heroine cries, the tricks of photography and all the inner workings of the art of producing pictures—are all explained in the subjects comprising the Screen Letter Box.

Since his plan of answering all questions submitted by motion picture fans was announced, Mr. Kashin has received thousands of questions from fans throughout the country and these, he says, will be answered in due time through the medium of his novelty productions.

Bookings on The Screen Letter Box can be had at the Film Clearing House exchanges on and after July 15.

The prize goes to Marion Davies, who adorns this page and Cosmopolitan productions for Paramount-Artcraft.

"Peace of Roaring River" Is Pauline Frederick's Latest

JEALOUSY, working madly to its own destruction and the happiness of others concerned, is grippingly revealed in "The Peace of Roaring River," a new Goldwyn picture, soon to be released, with Pauline Frederick as the star. The story develops dramatically from a tenement to the open Western plains, and each step in the progression of the tale is an interesting, inevitable one.

Miss Frederick plays the part of a girl weakened by illness and poverty. Out of work and desperate, she permits her friendly, romantic landlady, played effectively by Lydia Yeamans Titus, to answer an advertisement for her in "The Matrimonial News." What neither the motherly boarding-house keeper nor her unfortunate guest suspect is that the advertisement is a hoax placed in the paper by a viciously jealous woman in the Western town where a young man, played by Thomas Holding, had proven invulnerable to her charms.

Begin Work on "Over the Garden Wall."

Now that she has completed "Cupid Forecloses," Bessie Love has begun work on "Over the Garden Wall," her next Vitagraph feature, which was written by Millicent Evison and is being directed by David Smith. "Cupid Forecloses" was made at Vitagraph's Western studio and will have an early release, the completed film having already reached here.

Directed by James Young.

The Story.

Ashe Colvin, in Vitagraph's feature, "The Hornet's Nest," is a man cold to the world and ambition because of the fact that society, several years before, had unjustly made him an outcast. He befriends "The Hornet," a burglar sought by the police, and wins his friendship.

Muriel Fletcher, nineteen, has a severe guardian in William Whitefield, who guards, besides, the papers which will make Muriel an heiress, and make reparation to her cousin, Fletcher Hempstead, who is none other than "The Hornet," driven to crime by the harsh treatment of Whitefield.

Hungry for a bit of romance, Muriel intends to drop a purse in the street inclosing a request that the finder call upon her at her home, but seeing Ashe Colvin gallantly escort an old lady across a busy street, she is moved to thrust the purse into his hand. Followed up the request in the purse, Colvin meets Muriel in the Whitefield home and is inspired to new ambition.

Mrs. Whitefield, a society vampire, gets into complications with her husband over some sapphires she had loaned to Ollie Barnton, the latest moth in the flame. "The Hornet" steals the jewels, and more complications arise. Colvin, to throw the police off "The Hornet's" track, paints on his face a scar peculiar to the burglar, while "The Hornet" paints his own scar out.

In the end Whitefield is cornered, killed for good measure, and Colvin wins Muriel and her fortune.

Earle Williams Proves Busy Bee When Fates Works Against His Heroine in "The Hornet's Nest."

Advertising Angles: This picture will draw the regular Earle Williams following where the Vitagraph program is regularly shown. This element should be appealed to by liberal use of the star's lithos and playing up his name in all newspaper advertising and lobby signs. "Crook plays" seem to be popular just now, and bringing out this element in the story should add materially to the box office results. There seems to be little opportunity for special "stunts" that would get anything for this attraction. Special attention of lobby frames and lithographing will prove the more desirable in most places.

"God's Outlaw"

ONE indication of the general advancement of the moving picture is found in an occasional tendency to deal humorously with some of the ancient and threadbare plots that have been heretofore taken more or less seriously. This five-reel Metro production, entitled "God's Outlaw," sounds, from the title, as though it might be a profound study of life, but the spectator is not long deceived, for one of the opening sub-titles says plainly: "This is a Drammer."

The number is in fact a burlesque on the old style melodrama. Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne play the leads. Mr. Bushman plays the part of a young sheriff, rival of the village blacksmith for the hand of the heroine. The latter's mother prefers a youth named Percy Smallwood, who has financial prospects. Percy is presumed to have betrayed a poor working girl, and much of the story is given over to a general pursuit of this miscreant. The sheriff locates him, but refuses to give him up to the law, because the heroine pleads for Percy. It then develops that Percy is not guilty, and the youth, in gratitude to the sheriff, gives the heroine to him.

The subject is amusing throughout,

"Rose o' the River" with Lila Lee in Stellar Role is Paramount for July 13

KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN, author of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," considered by many to be the best picture in which Mary Pickford was ever seen, wrote "Rose o' the River," the Paramount version of which, with Lila Lee in the stellar role, will be released July 13.

The adaptation was entrusted to Will M. Ritchey, who is said to have succeeded in preserving the atmosphere and character drawings of the original story to a marked degree.

Miss Lee is again cast in a role which gives her splendid opportunities. She plays the part of a little country lass who, after becoming engaged to a young lumberman on the night of her seventeenth birthday, is deluded by a young man from Boston, with slick city ways and manners, into believing that his hopeless love for her is killing him.

Miss Lee's leading man is Darrell Foss. Mr. Foss is said to do some of the best work of his career in this production, which is that of Steve Waterman, the young lumberman and favored suitor of the little village belle. George Fischer plays the part of the polite young gentleman from Boston who comes near breaking up the romance with his desperate love-making. Robert Brower, Josephine Crowell, Sylvia Ashton and Jack Bramall have prominent character roles.

Robert Thornby, assisted by Joseph Boyle, directed, and William Marshall was cameraman.

"The Spark Divine" Plays Up Element of Mother Love

THAT mother love as the theme for a motion picture or spoken drama has by no means outlived its usefulness is exemplified in "The Spark Divine," the Vitagraph release with Alice Joyce as star. Many pictures have been made around the theme, which is as old as the world itself, but it remained for Vitagraph to find a new angle so unexpected and yet so interesting and dramatic that all thoughts of similarity with any other picture are immediately banished.

Mother love in this case is not wasted on a worthless son or daughter—the more familiar theme—but is given wholeheartedly to the innocent babe. The story is psychologically developed with no straining for effect. It affords Miss Joyce, in the role of a girl without a heart, a characterization that is unique and interesting. Tom Terriss, who directed Miss Joyce, might easily have allowed the picture to verge on the melodramatic, but so cleverly has he worked out the situations that it is an animated document breathing with human emotion. The play was written especially for Miss Joyce and consequently gives her free play for emotional scenes.

Begin Work on "Forest Rivals."

World Pictures began the production of "Forest Rivals," a five-reel feature starring Dorothy Green and Arthur Ashley. The scenes of this play are laid in the Canadian Northwest. Prominent in the cast in support of the stars is Frank Montgomery, who was leading man and husband of Mona Darkfeather, the well-known Indian actress who it will be remembered toured this country for many years in her own plays dealing with Indian life. "Forest Rivals" was written by Charles Forsythe, and the scenario by Harry O. Hoyt, who is also directing.

"Temperamental Wife" Nearing Completion.

"A Temperamental Wife," the first of the Constance Talmadge series of six First National pictures, is now being cut and titled, and the first cut will be delivered to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit some time within the next ten days. The picture was written and supervised by John Emerson and Anita Loos, and directed by David Kirkland.

Semon Comedy Has Large Cast.

Larry Semon, the Vitagraph comedian, finished his picturized burlesque of itinerant stage life this week. The comedy is the most ambitious effort so far attempted by Mr. Semon. It will introduce 150 players on the screen, which according to Mr. Semon's statement is a record for two reel comedy productions.

Latest Ford Weeklies Show Prison Life and Education

THE Goldwyn Distributing Corporation announces the three latest Ford Educational Weeklies as ready for general distribution. They are "At the Crossroads," a story of the life led by the inmates in the Federal Prison, at Leavenworth, Kansas; "School Days," a trip through a modern industrial school where vocational training goes hand in hand with academic high school work, and "The Fable of the Olive and the Orange," in which the culture and marketing of the olive and the orange are presented in full detail.

"At the Crossroads" opens with an atmospheric caption to the effect that the prison itself looks like a modern banking institution, being built of white limestone instead of the proverbial dull gray blocks. This beginning is admirably carried out when the prisoners are seen at their various tasks in the stoneyards, the tailoring shop, the machine shop, the printing shop, or any of the other rooms devoted to educating the prisoners for some useful trade. In short, the picture presents a school for grown-ups rather than a place of detention.

In "The Fable of the Olive and the Orange," the pickers are shown in the vast olive and orange groves gathering the fruits from thousands of trees.

"School Days" takes us through a modern industrial high school, where the boys and girls are given a sound training in the different trades. Forge work, carpentering, cooking, sewing, modeling and draughting are some of the subjects which the boys and girls are taught in so workmanlike a way that we feel sure these students will one day go forth to leave the impression of their training in some world-benefiting way.

Harry Morey Completes "The Gamblers."

Harry T. Morey has completed "The Gamblers," the third of the plays by the late Charles Klein to be featured on the screen by Vitagraph, and is now busily engaged on a new play under the direction of Paul Scardon.

The story gives Mr. Morey plenty of opportunities for dramatic and emotional acting as Wilbur Emerson, a man who neglects his sweetheart for business and sees her marry another. The scenes are tense and required the services of the strong cast which Vitagraph provided in Charles Kent, Agnes Ayres, Helen Ferguson, Eric Mayne, George Majeroni and George Backus.

A Gallery of Fashion in New Pathe Film.

In "Our Better Selves," which is a big, thoughtful, modern play, Fannie Ward makes herself the centre of a brilliant fashion show. And this emotional play is a vitally essential part of the story that Ouida Bergere wrote especially for the star. This extra selected star photoplay will be released by Pathe on July 27.

The entire action takes place in Paris on the Riviera and in rural France. It gives Miss Ward an opportunity to wear some marvelous Parisian creations, gowns, dresses, hats and a perfectly stunning bathing costume.

Fay Tincher Happy in Cowboy Role.

Fay Tincher wasn't really bad enough and tough enough in Rowdy Ann, so she is being real mad and real rough in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," which is now being produced at the Christie Studio and in the San Fernando Valley near Los Angeles. In the story, which was written by Maie B. Harvey, Miss Tincher livens up the town of Dead Dog, Wyo., which has been dead for many years. The professor of the tale is to be played by Eddie Barry, for whom the part was especially written.

but hardly worth five reels. Some of the "kidding" sub-titles will bring laughs and the action also in places, but on the whole, the offering has a tendency to drag. It would have been much more successful in two or three reels.

The Story.

In "God's Outlaw," Andrew Craig, sheriff, living in a small town, is in love with a pretty girl named Mary Mason. His rival is the village blacksmith, Rufus Sanborn. The girl's heart is very uncertain and she is inclined to laugh at Andrew because he dresses in country style. Her mother also has other aspirations for the girl, and wishes her to marry money.

Mrs. Mason becomes attracted to a cigarette-smoking youth, named Percy Smallwood, who will some day inherit a fortune. She invites him to call on Mary, and the latter meekly obeys. But it soon develops that Percy is wanted by the law, he being suspected of betraying a poor girl, named Nellie, in a neighboring village.

Percy, pursued by a constable and others, rushes to Mary for protection. The girl conceals him in the good old-fashioned way, and all goes well until Andrew Craig appears on the scene. Andrew soon learns that Mary is protecting Percy, and is about to give the latter over to the law, when Mary says she will marry him if he will spare Percy. Andrew struggles a moment between love and duty and finally says he will accept the bargain. He allows Percy to escape. Later, it develops that Percy is innocent of wrong-doing, and Andrew then magnanimously releases Mary. But Percy does not really love Mary, and generously surrenders her to Andrew. The latter, in the meantime, has met and vanquished Rufus, his other rival, in a hand-to-hand battle.

Advertising Angles: Follow the lead of the story and kid the "drammer." Offer it as a burlesque on the palmy days style of play. Los Angeles Theatre Books Vitagraph.

The management of the Palace Theatre in Los Angeles has added Vitagraph's Larry Semon and the Big "V" Special Comedies to its weekly bill. Each of the comedies will be run a full week.

The addition of the Vitagraph comedies to the Palace bill practically eliminates everything but Vitagraph pictures from the theatre.

COMMENTS

Universal Film Company.

NELLIE'S NAUGHTY BOARDER (L-KO), June 18.—A two-part comedy featuring Dot Farley and Phil Dunham. The picture contains some good farce comedy situations and treats of the trials of a husband because of a male boarder who persisted in appropriating his belongings, and sought also to alienate his wife's affections. One of the funniest things in the picture is the method used by the boarder in trying to get rid of the husband. He puts his own clothes on a wax figure and throws it in the water, leaving a note stating that the woman's husband is his murderer. At the trial he appears in disguise as the defendant's lawyer, and is discovered and duly punished in farce comedy fashion.

KINGDOM COME (Western Drama), June 21.—Pete Morrison is featured in the two-reel production, "Kingdom Come." A child picked up on the desert by the cowboy hero is brought to town on the eve of prohibition enforcement. The child is put to bed and is laboring with the Lords' prayer when he sticks at "kingdom come." The cowboy goes into the saloon and asks if anyone there knows what comes after "kingdom come." He is greeted with much laughter and no information. A dancer who turns out to be the mother of the child, which has been living with its grandfather, repeats the words of the prayer, and the child goes to sleep in peace. The story develops a romance between the cowboy and the girl which is very entertaining. The picture is clean and stirring and has excellent Western atmosphere.

A MODEL HUSBAND (Star Comedy), June 23.—Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appear in this as two ladies' tailors. Their wives are kept in an anxious state because of their employment of models. Lee himself appears as a model at a fashion show and creates a riot. This makes a brisk and pleasing comedy subject.

IN SEARCH OF A NAME (Universal), June 30.—Episode No. 16 of "The Red Glove." This number takes up the question of Billie's real parentage. She visits the Oasis Dance Hall and makes inquiries of Gentlemen Geoff's old friends. While she is gaining valuable facts a fire breaks out and a Vulture raid ensues. The fire scenes are realistic and the number a good one throughout.

MOVIE QUEEN, Feb. 24.—A comedy number, by Harry Wulze, featuring Ernie Shield as a moving picture director and Jane Bernaudy as a slavey with aspirations to appear on the screen. The latter gets her chance when the leading lady develops an overdose of temperament. This works up some amusement, though hardly realizes all the possibilities of the situation. A fairly strong number.

OH ETHEL (Star), March 3.—A two-reel subject, by Fred A. Palmer, featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Peggy Prevost and Fred Gamble. The young men are caught in a gambling raid and become stowaways on a passenger boat, on which the girl and her father are passengers. Not much of a plot in this, but the situations are amusing and a number of laughs result.

SCARED STIFF (Star Comedy), April 21.—One of the cleverest plots imaginable, featuring Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. The young men wake up at different moments on the morning after, and each conceives the idea that he has killed the other. The complications are of a farcical nature and very laughable. A delightful comedy of errors.

Signs of Striking Contrast

Oplex Signs are signs of striking contrast —raised snow-white letters on a dark background in the daytime, at night solid outlined, clean-cut letters of light standing out from the darkness.

This means an Oplex Sign has maximum pulling power twenty-four hours a day, that it is a sign that can't be missed and that it will lend an atmosphere of distinctive refinement to any show house.

Another reason for choosing an Oplex Sign is that you can take advantage of Oplex interchangeable unit letters—the regular Oplex characters mounted on metal panels of uniform size, so the sign can be changed at will; it only takes a few minutes. All that is necessary is to take out one set of letters and put in another. No wiring to change.

Full information in regard to Oplex Signs and Oplex Interchangeable Unit Signs will be sent upon request. Also a sketch showing how your sign will look.

BOYLAN EVEN TENSION REEL

is a combination reel and tension take-up device which absolutely eliminates all tension take-up troubles. It requires no attention and is positively automatic and fool proof.

It will save you trouble and money.

Gentlemen:

We wish to take this opportunity to thank you for placing the Boylan Even Tension Reel on the market which I am sure is the best remedy for loss of lower loop, checked sprocket holes, undercut sprockets.

Since using the reels I have not had a single stop and I firmly believe that in the near future they will be a part of the equipment of every theatre in the country. The reels are doing all you promised for them.

Yours respectfully,

SELECT YOUR NEXT PROJECTOR AS YOU WOULD YOUR MOTOR CAR

If a recognized authority on motor cars took you by the arm and led you over to a prize-winning car that was recognized by the industry as the leader in design, workmanship, endurance and power, and if you were told that you could purchase this car at the same price as one that was without its merits, WOULD YOU NOT BE IMPRESSED?

Do you realize while you've been running your present projector that wonderful strides have been taken in picture machine building by the makers of the Simplex?

Do you know that owing to its superior material, workmanship, exclusive features, ease of operation and low cost of upkeep, the Simplex is now regarded everywhere as having outdistanced all competition and stands as the world's leading projector?

Suppose you figure how much your present projector cost you—how much for repairs and upkeep—suppose you visit a man who has been using Simplex—ask him why he purchased Simplex—what it cost for upkeep—study his projection—

Then suppose you visit the man who sells the Simplex—he'll be glad to explain all about its construction—you'll be amazed at its many features, and in all probability its cost will be no greater than that of your present projector.

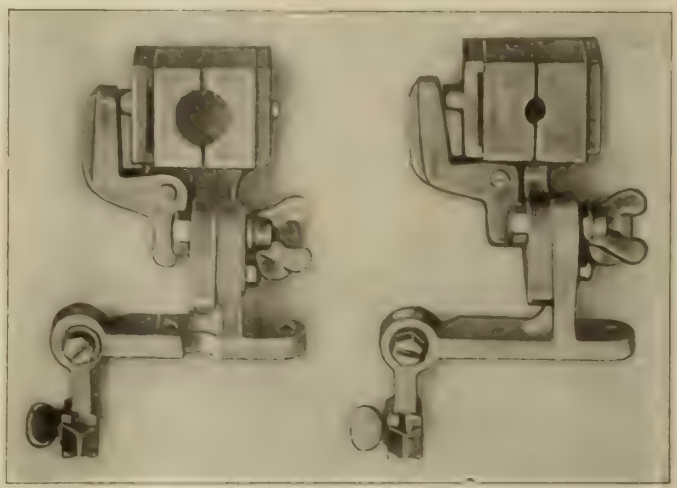
"GRIP-O"



"GRIP-O," which is illustrated above, is a distinct improvement in Carbon Holders. The clamping member comprises two heavy inserts held fast between two walls by means of a thumb screw, each insert being grooved to fit half the circumference of a carbon. When the carbon is placed between the inserts and the screw tightened a perfect contact results extending almost around the entire circumference of the carbon. This practically eliminates arcing with consequent overheating. The inserts are grooved in a number of sizes to fit any carbon.

"Tad's" Cat And this little Figure are shaking the world with laughter. It's a toss-up whether this cat and this little figure are bigger drawing cards every week than the big news events. This is the famous "TAD" (T. A. Dorgan) cat that has brought requests from all parts of the country for more of this stuff.

Brilliantly executed and with more humor than any moving picture cartoons ever filmed.

You can FEATURE this famous "TAD" cat and little figure, and make them the talk of your town.

People love this kind of stuff, yet these figures tho' they appear regularly every week in HEARST NEWS are only a consequence to the big drawing powers of the BIG THREE—HEARST NEWS—UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS—and—INTERNATIONAL NEWS.

Always something exclusive—always miles ahead of all other News Weeklies, because they stand 3 to 1 in news getting advantages. Make the BIG THREE news weeklies your feature attractions. Boost them. They will draw the crowds every week.

PALACE THEATRE
SILVERTON, OREGON

THE JEWEL PRODUCTIONS, INC.,
1600 Broadway, New York.

Gentlemen:

I am certainly pleased and wish to make special mention of the biggest picture ever thrown on the screen, "THE HEART OF HUMANITY. I played this picture to capacity house both Saturday and Sunday night and you can mail me a contract for a return on this picture six months from now and also one year from this date. I played to 50 cents top and they forgot all about the price of admission two minutes after the show began. Hundreds saw it twice and asked that I play it again. Two gentlemen came in late looking for a doctor and stood at the door a moment looking at the picture while I got the doctor. When I got back to them they remarked that they had seen so much of the show that they couldn't leave and asked the price of admission. When I told them, they remarked that they had 50 cents worth already and forgot all about the doctor and remained to see the finish of the show. It excels the greatest sermon ever preached and can be shown ten years from now to just as appreciative an audience. It brought me larger box receipts than any picture I have ever shown, and I could have paid five times the amount I did for the picture and then have made good money. I thank you kindly for service in the past and beg to remain,

Very truly yours,
WALTER JOHNSON.

THE REASON WHY

OF course you will be surprised to know that after seven years' service with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, I have resigned from the company to become associated with the National Film Corporation of America.

There's a reason—I had intended to enter the producing field myself. But, after looking over the facilities and organization of the National Film Corporation and discussing with Mr. Parsons, its president, and Mr. I. Bernstein, production manager, their plans for nineteen nineteen-nineteen twenty, I decided that I could not possibly carry out my own plans any better than by becoming associated with the National.

If there had been any doubt in my mind as to the ability of the National to carry out my ideas this vanished when I saw The Blue Bonnet, featuring Billie Rhodes, and The Confession, featuring Henry B. Walthall.

Those of you who have exhibited the Universal serials know that I have produced serials that have made money for you, but I have never supervised a better serial than the one the National is now producing.

LIGHTNING BRYCE

A serial replete with thrills and feature effects that will guarantee its appearance in the best theatres of the country.

By special arrangement with Jesse Lasky the National secured the services of Ann Little, Paramount star, and when I tell you that she is dividing honors in this picture with Jack Hoxie, the western dynamo, and that Paul Hurst (who has just completed The Tigers Trail and has more successful serials to his credit than any other director) is directing the picture, you get a fair idea of the calibre of this serial.

I have seen three episodes and they positively surpass any serial I have ever seen for photography, direction, acting, and thrills.

Take my tip and don't book any serial until you see sensationally successful presentation of

LOUISE GLAUM in SAHARA

By C. Gardner Sullivan - - - Supervised by Allan Dwan

Jules E. Mastbaum, President, and A. R. Boyd, general booking manager, The Stanley Company: Just say for us that "Sahara" has been given the most remarkable reviews in all the Philadelphia newspapers that any production has received in the past eighteen months. You can also tell exhibitors that in hot weather "Sahara" has commanded remarkable business in the Stanley houses; such business that we are exceeding the 100 days booking we gave this production.

Read These Striking Reviews:

PHILA. INQUIRER: Louise Glaum in "Sahara" plays one of the greatest emotional roles ever seen on the screen. A truly remarkable picture in every respect.

PHILA. RECORD: One gets a feeling of the vastness of things when he sees "Sahara" which indicates a prodigality of expenditure. Splendid!

PHILA. NORTH AMERICAN: ★★★ "Sahara" is quite the best thing seen in Philadelphia for months. Wonderful acting, admirable direction and lavishly produced. Photographically splendid. This great story held the interest every minute.

PUBLIC LEDGER: Louise Glaum was the one choice of the screen stars for the leading role in "Sahara." A simple, impressive and unquestionably beautiful and powerful production.

NEW YORK REVIEW: A fascinating picture and story that will enrapture all women. A powerful drama of a woman who gave all, yet gave nothing.

PHILA. PRESS: "Sahara" has been received this week with wonderful favor and with good reason. The plot is faultless and the acting excellent and there has been no better picture in this city in years.

MARTIN RECOUNTS KANSAS PROSPERITY

Despite Heat and Exodus to Wheat Territory Business Has But Slight Decrease—New Houses

FRED R. MARTIN, salesman for the Kansas City (Mo.) office of the Film Clearing House, Inc., now traveling through Kansas, sends an interesting letter concerning moving picture conditions in that state, at the present time.

He writes that business is exceptionally good for this season of the year and that only a slight falling off was noticeable during the first week in July, despite the intense heat and the general exodus of men in the smaller towns to the wheat fields. Even merchants and other business men are assisting in harvesting the largest wheat crop that Kansas has known in years.

Many modern theatres are being built throughout the state and will be in readiness for opening in the fall. What with the wonderful crops and the good prices that will prevail, and also with the large influx of returning soldiers from Germany, great prosperity is looked for after September 1.

Open Booking Approved.

Open bookings are meeting with general approval in the small towns, and the majority of exhibitors are planning longer runs and increased admission prices for high class pictures. Program bookings are practically dead. Exhibitors throughout the state are alert and eager for higher class productions and more pretentious presentations.

Mr. Martin states that the Rothapfel Unit Program has been booked in every town of importance in Kansas, and that most of the exhibitors ran it several days and doubled their orchestras. Classic dances, in which little girls participated, have been successfully used by several houses in connection with the Rothapfel Unit Program. This program has accomplished one good end; it has popularized good music as an accompaniment to pictures. The Rothapfel Unit Program was shown nearly everywhere at advanced prices, ranging from 25 to 50 cents, with the war tax added.

Changes in Kansas Territory.

Mr. Martin has also furnished the following information on new theatres and changes in management, etc., in Kansas territory:

The Odeon Theatre and the Elm Airdome, in Cottonwood Falls, have been sold by M. K. Harmon to John Wendell, and will be managed by Miss Ada Summerhill, who at one time was a member of the Chicago staff of Jones, Linick & Schaefer. She was also a ticket seller at the Covent Garden Theatre on the Lubliner and Trinz circuit here. Mr. Wendell has been engaged in the booking of state-right features in Kansas and owns a house in Horton, in that state.

Oil Towns Build Theatres.

In Peabody, a big oil boom is on and a new picture theatre, with 900 seats, is well under way. J. P. Barkwell is the owner. He formerly ran a house in Eldorado, another thriving oil town. The Idle Hour, seating 400, is the only picture house running in this town at present. It is managed by W. E. Brewer, who is turning people away at every show.

At McPherson, the only theatre in the town, which is owned by W. D. Robertson, of Hutchinson, was sold last week to Siers & Jones. Mr. Robertson owns the Royal Theatre, in Hutchinson.

Emporia will shortly have a new theatre that will seat 900. It is being built by Harry McClure, who is now running the Electric in the city mentioned. The new house will be thoroughly up to date and only high class productions, at increased prices, will be offered. Mr. McClure is considered one of the most successful exhibitors in Kansas, being progressive and a thorough show man.

A Movie Candidate.

Mr. Martin mentions Miss "Glad" Parker, a talented young brunette of pleasing personality, who recently won the contest at the Kansas Exhibitors' Convention, held at Hutchinson, to be given a chance to show her ability as a moving picture actress, in one of the Los Angeles studios. Miss Parker will leave for the Coast sometime this month.

F. R. Martin Weds.

Since hearing from Mr. Martin last, "he has gone and done it." He is now a benedict and a very cheerful one, too, judging from the glowing reference made to his happiness. Mrs. Martin hails from St. Joseph, Mo., and is "a mighty sweet little girl," who served her country as a nurse in the army. As most of us know, Fred also served in the army. He never got to the front,

KANSAS CITY'S ISIS IS A FINE HOUSE

Suburban Theatre Is Constructed Without Any Visible Pillars—Free Use Made of Venetian Marble in Lobby and Entrance—Music Supplied by Organ and Orchestra

NEXT to Chicago, Kansas City is the possessor of the handsomest and best equipped suburban motion picture theatre in the country. The Isis Theatre, in Kansas City, was erected at a cost of $100,000, while $35,000 more was expended for the interior furnishing. It has a seating capacity for 1,500 and there is not a post to obstruct the view.

Entrance is through a large marble finished lobby fifty by twenty-five feet in dimension, the Venetian marble dressings harmonizing with the colored decoration, which, like those of the foyer and theatre, are delicate and unobtrusive in design. From the lobby one passes into a foyer seventy-five feet long and twenty-five feet wide, with Venetion marble facings and ceiling decoration in white and gold. It is well lighted and fitted up with easy chairs and every convenience desired by a theatregoer. One of the attractions of the foyer is a Ladies' Nook, bright and cosy, carpeted and furnished with divans, easy chairs and table in solid oak.

Of Large Dimensions.

The theatre proper attracts one by its dimensions, few of the legitimate stage houses in the West surpassing it. It is 175 feet long and 75 feet in breadth, while the ceiling is 50 feet above the floor at the stage. Many stained windows relieve the side, and these are of a color in harmony with the other interior decorations. The decorations of the wall are of a delicate shade of green. Of the 1,500 chairs, there is not one obstructed in any way from a full view of the stage.

Adjustable Lighting System.

The stage is regulation, set for the legitimate, and is thirty-five feet deep. The side entrance door is lofty enough to admit any kind of scenery.

The lighting is artistic, any degree, dim or vivid, being easily regulated upon each of the four stage curtains. Concealed electric bulbs throw down a flood of light. All lighting in the theatre is concealed.

Two Power's machines project the pictures the 168 feet from the lens to the stage curtain.

Ventilation System Good.

Not only are the decorations, the seating, and the means for producing good displays all that could be desired, but sanitary conditions have been looked after in an unequaled manner. In the basement is a tunnel large enough for a team and wagon to drive through, which is used to conduct the foul air from the theatre outside. Electric fans pump fresh air into the theatre. In the basement are also commodious rooms for the orchestra, the organist and leader, and the ushers.

Kansas City's Isis.
Which is credited with being one of the handsomest and best equipped picture houses in the country.

The Hope-Jones organ costing $22,000 is capable of furnishing all the accompaniment, but it is augmented at night by an orchestra of eight men, conducted by the organist, Carl Stalling.

Organ Has Many Effects.

This organ is run by electric motor with pipes incased in two separate swell boxes at either side of the stage. This swell box for all pipes gives greater variety of tone, the loudest stop thus being turned into the softest of tones without change of manual. The stops —open diapason, clarinet, kinura, orchestra violin, violin celeste, flute, vox humana and tuba horn, are made more effective by the "borrowing system" by which four or five different tones may be produced. The numerous traps are accessories for making the "silent drama" realistic. Besides the imitation of the various instruments of the orchestra such as the chrysoglott, harp, chimes, bells, snare drum, tambourines, castenets, Chinese block, glockenspiel and xylophone, there are the equally important auto horn, blown at the dramatic moment; steamboat whistle; beat of horse's hoofs, used for the inevitable horse chase in the Western drama; clanging of fire gong; the troublesome telephone bell; tom-tom; and bird whistle. All these are necessary accessories, although a little out of the realm of music. But they are all performed from the organ.

Running a Year.

The Isis (Blackstone Amusement Company) has been playing to full capacity ever since it opened last summer, although it is a suburban theatre with a seating capacity larger than most downtown legitimates. It caters to the better class of theatregoers and none but the better kind of films are used. John Roth, the manager, was formerly manager of the Regent. His assistant is Gus Eyssell.

Interior Views of the Isis.
It will be observed that the view from none of the fifteen hundred seats is obstructed and that the foyer is large and handsomely furnished.

FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM "MIRACLE MAN"

G. M. Cohan's Crook Play, Staged Two Years Ago, Is Now Produced by George L. Tucker

ONE of the greatest pictures, not only of the year, but of all time," is the way executives of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation characterize the George Loane Tucker production, "The Miracle Man," which is announced as a September Paramount-Artcraft release.

Mr. Tucker has taken the play by George M. Cohan, adapted it to the screen himself and produced a picture which, Famous Players asserts, will take its place immediately as one of the achievements of photodrama. Avoiding the exploitation of any particular star, he gathered together at the Brunton studios in California a cast of capable players, paying careful attention to the matter of selecting types.

Dramatis Personae.

For the leading male role of Tom Burke he chose Thomas Meighan, whose work as leading man in a large number of Paramount pictures has gained him wide popularity. Mr. Meighan's characterization of the leader of a band of crooks whom he dominates by sheer force of personality is said to be artistic and forceful.

Playing opposite Mr. Meighan in another crook role is Betty Compson, an acknowledged beauty of the screen whose experience, however, has been more or less limited to comedy. Miss Compson has been featured in Christie comedies for some time, but her few excursions into the realm of the dramatic, notably in the Pathe serial, "The Terror of the Range," and in support of William Desmond in two or three recent pictures, revealed talent that marked her for bigger things.

Several Crook Roles.

Joseph J. Dowling, in the role of the Patriarch—the "miracle man," as he is called by the crooks who seek to capitalize his healing power and in the end are reformed through the influence of daily contact with him—gives a performance which in its dignity and impressiveness is one of the striking features of the production. Lon Chaney, long famous for heavy roles, and J. M. Dumont, a character actor of experience, have interesting crook roles which they enact with realism. Elinor Fair, a star in the Fox organization, W. Lawson Butt, artist of both stage and screen experience, and Lucille Hutton, who has enjoyed success in comedy parts, are also seen in prominent roles.

When "The Miracle Man" was produced on the stage in New York some two years ago, with George M. Cohan himself in the role of Tom Burke, which Mr. Meighan essays in the Tucker version, the picture possibilities of the story were commented upon freely by all practical motion picture men who saw it.

George Loane Tucker.

The career of the man who has given this great story to the screen provides interesting reading. George Loane Tucker was born and reared in Chicago and was allowed by his parents to determine along what lines he should shape his life course. So, several years later, discarding his cap and gown at the University of Chicago, he joined the staff of a western railroad.

At twenty-one he was chief clerk in the maintenance of way department of the company and soon thereafter found himself promoted to the position of contracting freight agent, the youngest man in Chicago who had ever held that or a similar position. After the loss of his young wife, who died while giving birth to a son, he resigned his position.

Enters Movie Field.

Motion pictures were beginning to make their influence about then and Tucker made a strike into the new field. He wrote a scenario, but stipulated that he act in the picture himself. He did, and with a success which, if not startling, assured him that there was where his future lay. He decided to be a producer. D. W. Griffith was in the new game at that time and he and Tucker got their heads together and evolved a distributing plan.

The sound philosophy of the idea struck Griffith "between the eyes." They shook on it. And George Loane Tucker made the first million-dollar American picture, "Traffic in Souls," the scenario of which he wrote himself.

Goes to England.

England heard about "Traffic in Souls." She sent for the producer and he forthwith became director general of the London Film Company. Mr. Tucker allied himself with some of the big authors, including Hall Caine and Anthony Hope, and gave to the British public and the world "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Christian," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Manxman" and other screen masterpieces.

America called him back again, and he became director general for the new Goldwyn corporation. Soon thereafter he personally directed "The Cinderella Man."

"Virtuous Wives" was the first film he personally produced.

Abrams Adds Four to Field Staff; Fourteen "Big Four" Branch Managers Now Appointed

WITH the appointments announced this week, fourteen of United Artists Corporation's seventeen sales managers to head the company's distributing depots have been engaged.

William H. Jenner will be in charge of the Boston distributing depot, Carlos Moore will be the sales manager for the Pittsburgh territory, Louis H. Reichert will be in charge of the San Francisco distributing depot and Jack Von Tilzer will be at the head of the New York exchange.

These appointments, together with those previously announced, complete the list of sales managers with the exception of the Minneapolis, Dallas and Atlanta offices, for which Hiram Abrams has not yet announced his men.

Ben Wilson.

Featured in Frank Hall's first serial, "The Trail of the Octopus."

Jenner Has Had Wide Experience.

William H. Jenner brings to his post as sales manager of the Boston distributing depot a vast experience, not only on the exchange end of the business but likewise on the theatre end of the amusement field. For two years Mr. Jenner was stage director for "legitimate" attractions. For three years he was managing director of the Aceo Theatre Company, operating the Vista, Marlowe, Monroe, Shakespeare and Windsor Park theatres in Chicago. For the last five years Mr. Jenner has been exclusively identified with the film exchange business.

Louis H. Reichert, who takes over the sales managership of the San Francisco distributing depot, is a veteran film man. He has been in the business for fourteen years. For over three years he has been on the Pacific Coast and his appointment to the San Francisco office gives United Artists a representative who has the full confidence of the showmen he will serve.

United Artists' Pittsburgh sales manager, Carlos Moore, though relatively a newcomer, has already built up a remarkable reputation. Mr. Moore has been in the Pittsburgh territory for about a year, having gone into the business from other lines. He is a tried and seasoned executive and in the twelve months or so that he has been in the Pittsburgh territory he has won the confidence of the theatre men.

Von Tilzer to Head New York.

Jack Von Tilzer, who will be the sales manager for the New York distributing depot, came to the film business some two years ago, from his successful career in the music publishing field. For the last two years Mr. Von Tilzer has been prominent in the New York film exchange circles and the same intensive sales and promotion ability that made him a dominant figure in the music publishing field has brought him to the front rank among local film exchange men.

Authors and Directors Who Will Give Entertainments Under the Fox System

GREAT authors as well as great stars; the best stories the world of literature affords; names will be a real asset in exhibitors' advertising—that is the announced policy of William Fox for next season.

It is not a policy to be confined to any particular class of pictures, but one that will extend to all—to the special features, the star series, and to Victory pictures and Excel pictures. Practically all the productions thus far completed for next season are based on stories by writers of international renown—Henry W. Longfellow, Zane Grey, David Belasco, Henry M. Blossom, Jr. It is to the works of such writers as these that Mr. Fox has turned in his quest for the best material.

But these are not all. Arrangements have been made for the picturization of novels and stories by Frederick S. Isham, Agnes and Egerton Castle, Justin McCarthy, Clarence E. Mulford, Forest Halsey, Louis Tracy, Jackson Gregory, Karl Edwin Harriman, editor of the Red Book; Dion Boucicault, H. H. Van Loan, Ralph Spence, E. Lloyd Sheldon and others.

A reputation established in the last three years by such big productions as "Les Miserables," "Cleopatra," "A Daughter of the Gods," "Salome," "Queen of the Sea," "The Prussian Cur," "The Land of the Free" and others will be materially enhanced by the release early this fall of "Evangeline," based on Longfellow's classic poem, and "Checkers," a picturization of the play which brought fame and fortune to Henry M. Blossom, Jr.

The publicity and advertising value of names such as these is beyond computing. Longfellow, "Evangeline," R. A. Walsh—author, story, director—is a combination that, in the opinion of the Fox organization, will fill any theatre any where at any time if well advertised.

Every exhibitor—and every one else—knows "Checkers." It holds a place in the front rank of great successes of the spoken drama. It established Henry Blossom, Jr., as a playwright and novelist. It is associated in the public mind with such other Blossom winners as "The Yankee Consul," "The Red Mill," "Mlle. Modiste," "The Prima Donna," "The Velvet Lady," and others.

David Belasco is one of the authors contributing to the forthcoming program. This producer of many of the great dramas of modern times and author of stage plays, wrote "La Belle Russe," in which Mr. Fox has cast one of his greatest actresses, Theda Bara. This picture, made under the direction of Charles J. Brabin, is said to be notable for the masterly manner in which its many tense dramatic scenes have been developed.

The fourth Zane Grey picture produced by William Fox will be released this coming season, with William Farnum in the leading role. It will be called "The Last of the Duanes." The wide popularity of Zane Grey novels—his publishers report a sale exceeding a million copies a year—and the general and timely interest in western stories will be of enormous value to the exhibitor in the exploitation of this picture.

George Walsh is shortly to begin work on a Benjamin F. McCutcheon story, "The Seventh Person"; William Farnum has made a picture based on Louis Tracy's well-known novel, "The Wings of the Morning"; Dion Boucicault's "Kathleen" has been completed by Theda Bara, and other stories of similar merit—the best works of popular authors—have been purchased by Mr. Fox for production.

Skillful Directors Will Supervise Fox Productions

ANSWERING the roll call of the expanded producing scheme of the William Fox organization for the coming season here are the Fox directors, the "men behind the pictures," whose fertile brains contribute so materially to the greatness of Fox productions. Upon their work depends largely the question of success or failure. They make up a carefully tested, remarkably balanced and versatile staff.

Men with Records Here.

Each of these men has mastered his own peculiar line; each has made a study of his public and known his star like a book. Hence each, in his own field of production, is the most fitting agent for bringing to the public what best will meet its demands.

J. Gordon Edwards. Long associated with William Fox as director of dramatic companies at the Academy of Music, and the first director for Mr. Fox when the latter entered the motion picture field, Mr. Edwards applies to his work a thorough and varied experience.

He is an indefatigable worker, most exacting with his stars and his company, as with himself. In his high ideals for the art of cinema presentation he epitomizes all the best that is embodied in Fox productions.

Dean of Fox Directors.

To the credit of J. Gordon Edwards stands a long record of big box-office successes, including the best work of Theda Bara. Most noteworthy, perhaps, among these were the brilliant Bara productions of "Cleopatra" and "Salome." Mr. Edwards has just directed William Farnum in several productions taken from famous novels—a field in which Mr. Edwards shines particularly. These pictures will be released early in the coming season, making the enviable combination of famous stories, a famous star and a famous director.

Del Ruth Makes Sunshines.

Hampton Del Ruth, with his corps of assistants, is the man who makes the sun shine on the screen—the creator of Sunshine Comedies, those sparkling laugh provokers that are one of the biggest features of the Fox output. Under the general direction of Mr. Del Ruth five comedy companies are now working in the Fox studios in Hollywood. The Sunshines are referred to fully on another page.

Famed for big pictures, R. A. Walsh, the director behind such pictures as "The Prussian Cur" and "Every Mother's Son," has assumed responsibility for a forthcoming picture that will tax his directorial and artistic ingenuity to the uttermost—a work of art both as film drama and as literature. It is founded on the work of one of the greatest of modern writers, and promises to mark an epoch in motion pictures.

Millarde Has Long Record.

Harry Millarde, with a long series of Fox successes to his credit, is a man who never fails to divine the greatest possibilities of his star and to set them lifelike on the screen. Among the pictures he has directed are those fine emotional dramas featuring Madlaine Traverse, "Gambling in Souls," "The Love That Dares," and "When Fate Decides."

Richard Stanton is a director rarely gifted in handling big themes. He is responsible for the patriotic American picture, "The Land of the Free." He also brought forth "Why I Would Not Marry," and "The Jungle Trail," with William Farnum. He is now putting all his energy into a new Fox creation, the story from a celebrated novel, with an all-star cast.

Le Saint Most Successful.

The fine artistic discrimination of Edward J. Le Saint made his production of "Kultur" famous. After three successes with Tom Mix—"Hell Roarin' Reform," "Fighting for Gold" and "The Wilderness Trail"—Mr. Le Saint has just produced a forthcoming Mix picture, which, in the opinion of practically all who have seen it run, is the best the cowpuncher star ever has done.

Linder Returns to Screen

Henri Diamant Berger, publisher of Le Film and other French motion picture trade journals, who recently visited this country to study conditions here preliminary to launching himself and his organization in the producing field in France, announces that he will shortly complete a motion picturization of one of the most successful French musical comedies, "The Little Cafe," which, it will be recalled, was produced here as a legitimate piece some years ago and proved very popular.

The filming of "The Little Cafe" in France, with all the required color and settings easily available, will actually be done on the grounds which inspired the author, Tristan Bernard, to write the play, but what should be of greatest interest to the picture-going public is the fact that Max Linder will enact the principal role.

CINCINNATI UNIONS UNRECOGNIZED

Only One Exchange Gives in—Other Members of Association Firm—Three Picketers Arrested

THE situation in the strike of the employes of the Cincinnati exchanges remains practically unchanged, with no signs of an early settlement. The exchange managers remain firm in their refusal to recognize the union of bookers, shippers, inspectors, etc., and the union leaders are maintaining their position, although some of their members are said to be applying for reinstatement. One of the exchanges has withdrawn from the exchange managers' association and has recognized the union, but it is claimed by the others that this will have no effect upon their stand in the matter.

Union Claims Central Backing.

It is claimed by the union officials that they have the backing of the Central Labor Council and other union bodies in the city, but this backing appears to be only a half-hearted support, and it is not believed by those well informed that it will lead to any sympathetic action either by labor unions in general or the Motion Picture Operators Union in particular. The Central Labor Council at its last meeting appointed a committee to attempt a settlement of the controversy, composed of Adolph Krummer, William Prout and Thomas Mugavin, but the exchange managers refused to confer with them, declaring that they have not changed their minds regarding the recognition of the union. They further claim that business is being transacted as usual, despite the picketing and sign-carrying indulged in by the opposition.

Union Pickets Arrested.

This picketing resulted in the arrest of three members of the union on charges of disorderly conduct. The defendants, who said they were John Hass, Carl Weinberg and Edward Altvator, it was charged, yelled "scab" at several girls employed by the Paramount Exchange, as they were leaving their work. Judge Fox, in Municipal Court fined all three of the defendants upon the testimony of the arresting officers, declaring that "No man has a right to yell at women or accost them if he does not know them. Women will be protected in Cincinnati." Since that time the ardor of the pickets has cooled to a noticeable extent.

Managers Not Inconvenienced.

There are about 125 employes of the fourteen exchanges out, but the managers declare they are not seriously inconvenienced as it has been possible to replace most of them. They further declare that they cannot see the necessity or reason for a union along the lines of the one recently formed, for the reason that its members are not skilled tradesmen, and that anyone with ordinary intelligence can do the work they have been doing.

New Hanover Opera House Leased.

Fred C. Bitner, manager Havens Theatre, Olean, N. Y., and Dave Newcomer, of Hanover, Pa., have leased the New Hanover Opera House, which has just been remodeled. They are now installing two Powers' 6-B machines, motor driven, with an up to date equipment, and will run pictures during the summer season. The policy for the winter season will be road attractions and feature photoplays.

Bray Pictures Have Filed Papers of Incorporation

THE Bray Pictures, Inc., came into official existence this week, when papers of incorporation were filed with Secretary of State Hugo. The concern is one of the largest which has incorporated in connection with the motion picture business in some time, the company incorporating at $1,500,000, and naming as its directors George J. Johnstone, J. M. Sullivan and Marion E. O'Brien. The past week has also seen the incorporation of the Oliver Production, at $300,000, with Agnes Head, Teresa L. Thompson and Teresa A. Schickling as its incorporators.

There appears to be no let up in the number of firms incorporating and about to begin some end of the motion picture business. The Life Grams was incorporated last week, at $5,000, with James Gillespie, Alexander Yokel and Joseph Tramutolo as its incorporators.

Other concerns incorporating, together with the amount and those interested include the Schenectady Strand Theatre Company, $400,000, William Coombs, Thomas Conniffe and Mildred Fairchild; Victory Reflector Company, motion picture accessories, $20,000, H. Stuart Raleigh, Hugo von Hagen and George W. Breffit, of New York; Long Island Motion Pictures Company, $75,000, George and Ida Mausert, Edward Cupurullo, Richmond Hill; Hermes Amusement Company, $3,000. Walter Brown, William Bell and Fred Retig, all of New York; Reenoip Enterprises, $1,000, D. Levy, J. L. McIntosh and May Jones.

Complete Theatre Interior Is Erected to Greater Verisimilitude to "The Brat"

THE construction of an entire theatre interior, from stage to foyer, is one of the big scenic achievements in the newest Nazimova production, "The Brat," which Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger have announced for release September 1. This playhouse, erected at the Nazimova studios in Hollywood, was formally christened "The Nazimova Theatre" in recognition of the star's part in assisting in its design and decoration.

For a number of scenes in the screen version a theatre of the New York Winter Garden type was required. The usual procedure in such a case is to rent a playhouse and photograph the scenes during the morning hours. However, Messrs, Rowland and Karger decided a special theatre should be built.

It is at a benefit performance in this society playhouse that "the brat" at last achieves her dream of being a star dancer, and at the same time wins the love of the novelist who has studied her as the heroine of his masterpiece.

A Full-Sized Auditorium.

M. P. Staulcup, special art director, was assisted by the star in planning a full-sized theatre auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,000. They designed the interior along Greek lines and evolved a color scheme of chaste gray and purple. A magnificent curtain of purple velvet hangs behind the proscenium arch.

The theatre is complete in every detail before and behind the footlights. A back drop hangs at the rear of the stage. Then the wings, the curtain, the tormentors, the footlights, the orchestra pit and the boxes are all complete.

Has Glass Runway.

The floor of the auditorium has a rise of six feet to the "front of the house," one hundred feet behind the orchestra pit. Regulation orchestra seats to the number of 1,000 have been set up and there is even a glass runway down the centre of the house on which the chorus girls dance to the stage, over the heads of the audience.

"The runways in stage use are illuminated from the side by ordinary incandescent globes," said Staulcup, in discussing the problem. "For motion pictures, lights that would reflect into the camera lens are out of the question, causing as they do halation. We shall be compelled to use Kleigearcs and have them shining through the bottom of the transparent runway."

This Is "The Half Way Inn."
But Bill Parsons is more than half way through the door in this Capitol comedy for Goldwyn.

New Universal Comedy Series.

Universal is to issue a new brand of high class comedies under the name of "Okeh Komedies." The new comedies will feature Neal Burns, Ben Wilson and George Odey.

The new comedies will be issued every other week alternating with the Lyons-Moran comedies. The Lyons-Moran comedies produced by Edward Lyons and Lee Moran have previously been issued once a week. This has been the case for the past two years.

BAY STATE ROUNDS UP DELINQUENTS

Three Arrests Made in Connection with Charges of Diverting Moneys Collected on Admissions

MOTION PICTURE theatre proprietors in Massachusetts are being caught in a dragnet thrown over the state by the United States Internal Revenue Department to catch those who have failed to put into the coffers of the government war taxes collected on admissions to their theatres.

Three motion picture house proprietors are already in the toils of the law, and Internal Revenue Department officials said that more arrests will be made within the next few weeks.

Department's Patience Exhausted.

"Our patience is exhausted," declared General Deputy Collector Edwin F. Myers, as he stood behind his desk in his office in the Boston Little Building. "We have done everything possible to get these men into line and to try and make them see their duty to their country, but our advice has gone unheeded. They have deliberately ignored the law. Now they must suffer the consequences of their folly. This department is going to close down on the guilty ones. The penalties are severe as you will see by reading over the law."

The general deputy, of course, would not make known the names of the proprietors who are to be arrested.

Three Arrests Made.

George E. Gordon, proprietor of the Strand Hall, Holyoke, was the first motion picture owner hauled in. It is charged that Gordon is a debtor of the United States government for about $6,000—that is, $3,000 in unpaid taxes, and as much more in penalties. When arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes, in the Federal Building, in Boston, Gordon pleaded not guilty, and was held in bail for a hearing next month.

On July 8, Alfred Tomaselli and Charles Bonanno, of Lawrence were seized at their homes by Sergeant Inspector John J. Kelleher, of the police department of Lawrence. Kelleher made the arrests at the behest of General Deputy Collector William P. Murphy. Tomaselli and Bonanno were proprietors of the Lawrence Opera House, showing motion pictures. It is alleged that the two men collected about $1,000 during a period of five months, which it is claimed they failed to turn over to the government. Fines fixed by the law increase this amount to about $2,000. In addition there were other penalties. Both men were arraigned before Federal Commissioner Hayes. They pleaded not guilty and were held in $1,000 bail each for a hearing before the commissioner, on August 9.

"Conversion of Public Money."

Officials of the Internal Revenue Department in Boston point out that the Revenue act of 1917 requires all persons collecting war taxes to turn them over to the Collector of Internal Revenue before the last day of each following month. A second section provides a penalty of $1,000 or imprisonment of one year, or both, for failure to comply with the provisions of this law. The officials also pointed out that all persons violating the law are liable to the penalties imposed by the general statutes of the United States, for they claim withholding war taxes is nothing less than conversion of public money.

A Lead, Director, and Two Heavies Join Universal

TWO new "heavy" actors, one new lead and one assistant director have been added to the Universal forces within the last week. All are known widely in the screen world.

Val Paul, who will be remembered as the "heavy" in many of the old Universal features starring the late Myrtle Gonzalez, has rejoined the Universal forces in the role of assistant director to Lynn Reynolds. He is now working on "The Brute Breaker," the picture which will star Frank Mayo and Kathryn Adams.

Arthur Carewe, who has been playing heavies in support of Geraldine Farrar and Lou Tellegen, has joined Universal to play the genteel villain in "Auld Jeremiah," a new Mary MacLaren feature.

Spottiswoode Aitken, the veteran character actor, has been engaged by Universal to play the title role in the above production, which was written by Henry C. Rowland.

Arthur Mackley, who for many years was widely known as the exceptional portrayer of the roles of "sheriff" in many Western productions, has been engaged to play the role of Detective Tyron in Universal's new all-star production of "Loot," the Saturday Evening Post story written by Arthur Somers Roche.

Robertson-Cole Closes Two More Foreign Deals, Disposing of Rights to 35 Pictures

THE great demand on the foreign market for American pictures of the better type is reflected in the activity of the exporting department of Robertson-Cole during the past few months. With the dawning of peace there has been a big call for American films, and one big deal has followed another by Robertson-Cole.

Now comes the announcement of the closing of two more contracts disposing of the rights to thirty-five Robertson-Cole features in some of the most lucrative territory in the world.

Closes for Latin-American Countries.

Arthur Ziehms, of New York, representing Saenz and Mai, considered one of the most influential motion picture organizations in Latin-America, has purchased for Argentina and Paraguay the rights to eight Hayakawa productions, beginning with his new series, eight Barriscale attractions, eight Warner offerings, and eight Desmonds.

The Barriscale features ready for immediate delivery to the South American firm, are "All of a Sudden Norma," "A Trick of Fate," "Tangled Threads" and "Josselyn's Wife."

The Desmond dramas prepared for shipment are "Life's a Funny Proposition," "The Prodigal Liar," "Bare-Fisted Gallagher," "Whitewashed Walls" and the "Mints of Hell." "A Sage-Brush Hamlet" is now in the course of completion and will be forwarded in a couple of weeks.

"Man Who Turned White" Included.

H. B. Warner's initial Superior Picture for Robertson-Cole, "The Man Who Turned White," is included in the deal with Saenz and Mai. "The Pagan God," second Warner offering, is another attraction which comes under the arrangements concluded by the Robertson-Cole foreign department.

The Hayakawa contract will not start until the Japanese star has completed the octette of productions which comprise the first Hayakawa series for Robertson-Cole.

Closes With Holland Firm.

In another deal, the Robertson-Cole foreign department disposed of three features to J. C. Barnstyn, American representative of the British and Continental Trading Company of The Hague, Holland. The features are "Just Squaw," starring Beatriz Michelena, and the two Brentwood productions, "Better Times" and "The Turn in the Road."

The territory included in the arrangement is Holland, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Germany and German-Austria. Mr. Barnstyn had previously taken over some other Robertson-Cole product.

Rupert Hughes.
Who has gone to Culver City to supervise production on "The Cup of Fury," his first Eminent Authors' picture for Goldwyn.

Thurston Hall Leaves Screen.

Thurston Hall, who has been featured as leading man for Priscilla Dean and Mary MacLaren in several Universal pictures, has temporarily deserted the screen to return to stage.

He is now appearing with Oliver Morosco's Los Angeles stock company in their presentation of "Civilian Clothes," a new comedy production by Thompson Buchanan.

WASHINGTON BILL TO HELP SHIPMENT

Measure Now Before House Provides for Quick Return of Films Not Reaching Destination

EARLY action on the passage of a bill by the House of Representatives authorizing the return to the sender or the forwarding of undeliverable, second, third and fourth-class mail matter, is expected. This measure would prove of great value to the motion picture industry.

As it is now, when an exchange ships a show to an exhibitor and the films are refused or wrongly addressed, they cannot be moved until the sender forwards sufficient postage to have them moved, either to a new address or to the point of origin. Very often many days elapse before the films can be recovered, and large rental losses may easily occur.

Bill Well Backed.

This matter was put up to the postal authorities—it was suggested a long time ago by the Washington Exchange Managers' Association, and now the Post Office Department is itself back of the proposed legislation. The bill was introduced by Congressman Steenerson, who is chairman of the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and this fact really insures the passage of the proposed law.

Will Benefit Movie Men.

"The moving picture men," said Congressman Steenerson to the Moving Picture World correspondent, "will be greatly benefited by such a law as is proposed by the bill I have introduced in the House of Representatives. The experience of the Post Office Department convinces the postal officials that it would be advantageous to have such legislation as this. It is often that parcels of a perishable nature cannot be held until the sender furnishes the postage and a loss is sustained. The motion picture men, of course, lose because their product is somewhat in the nature of a perishable article—the value of the film is in its availability for use, and I realize that when delays of this nature occur it works a hardship on the movie people."

Measure Means Economy.

The Steenerson bill provides that after its enactment into law, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe, fourth-class matter of obvious value which is of a perishable nature may be forwarded to the addressee at another post office charged with the amount of the forwarding postage, and when such matter of a perishable nature is undeliverable to the addressee it may be returned to the sender charged with the return postage.

The measure further provides that other undeliverable matter of the second, third, and fourth classes may be forwarded to the addressee or to such other person as the sender may direct, at another post office, charged with the amount of the forwarding postage, or it may be returned to the sender charged with the return postage, when it bears the sender's pledge that the postage for forwarding and return will be paid, such postage to be collected on delivery. The bill specifically provides that when the sender refuses to furnish such postage in accordance with his pledge, the acceptance from him of further matter bearing such pledge may be refused.

Film Shipment Information from Bureau of Explosives

THERE has been considerable confusion reported among motion picture distributors as to exact interpretation of Interstate Commerce Commission regulations governing shipment of films. The subject is cleared up in an important phase by a letter from W. S. Topping, of the Bureau of Explosives, in which he describes a recent amendement to the regulations.

P. H. Stilson, chairman of the transportation committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, states that the ruling marks a distinct step forward in the campaign his committee has been making to get a definite and authentic decision on the subject of film shipment.

The letter is as follows:

I am in receipt of advice from the Interstate Commerce Commission to the effect that the note to paragraph 43(a) of the Interstate Commerce Commission Regulations covering the transportation of other dangerous articles than explosives by express has been amended so as to change the effective date after which only specification packages will be permitted for the shipment of motion picture films, from July 1, 1919 to October 1, 1919.

"The effect of this ruling is to require that shipping containers purchased prior to May 15, 1918, may be used for the shipment of motion picture films until October 1, 1919, provided they are securely closed and in good condition; and provided further that if fitted with telescopic covers, the covers fit tightly against the shoulder of the box body. Leather or web straps, if used, must be in good condition and tightly fastened. String or rope must not be used.

"My attention has recently been called to the fact that some dealers in motion picture supplies have sold or offered for sale to motion picture exhibitors or exchanges, film cases constructed in accordance with the old regulations, and which do not, and could not be made to, comply with I. C. C. Shipping Container Specification No. 32. It seems extraordinary that in view of the wide publicity that has been given to the revised regulations, any reputable concern would either offer for sale or purchase supplies of motion picture containers that do not meet the requirements of the specifications, and it will be our duty to prohibit the use in transportation of any such containers which were purchased subsequent to May 15, 1918. In view of the co-operation that the Bureau of Explosives has always extended to the Motion Picture Industry as a whole, such action on the part of any representative of the industry is inexcusable, and I trust that, so far as lies within your power, you will, through your Committee, impress upon the trade, the strict necessity of complying in all respects with the Federal regulations as they now stand.

"It is my understanding that no further extension of time will be requested or granted."

Neither the Predicted Ice Famine Nor Piratical Tonsorial Prices Disturb Tom Moore in "The City of Comrades."
Tom is reaching for a string of pearls at the left, but evidently the loot did not enable him to lose the beard which supplants the Tom Moore smile in this, his current Goldwyn feature.

Hobart Bosworth Is Secured by T. H. Ince to Star Under the Famous Players Banner

HOBART BOSWORTH, one of the most popular of screen stars, an actor of real ability and a personality that has made him a favorite with the film-going public for a number of years, has been engaged through a contract with Thomas H. Ince, producer of pictures for Paramount-Artcraft release, to star under the supervision of Mr. Ince in a number of high-class productions.

The first picture will be started in a few days at the Ince studio in Culver City, California.

Hobart Bosworth has had a notable career in pictures as actor, producer and writer. In the legitimate he appeared opposite such well known actresses as Julia Marlowe, Amelia Bingham, Mrs. Fiske and Blanche Walsh. He was engaged to appear in Belasco stock in Los Angeles and from there emerged into the motion picture field.

Will Probably Direct Own Pictures.

Hobart Bosworth is physically a splendidly built man, possessed of a technical and artistic training that is far above the average. He is a patron of all outdoor sports and is accomplished at swimming, boxing, fencing, riding, etc. It is assumed that he will direct his own pictures under Mr. Ince's personal supervision.

With a new studio which ranks among the finest and most completely equipped in the world, with an enlarged production staff and with new stars of such recognized prominence, the coming year promises to be the biggest in the history of the Ince organization.

Mr. Ince has just started at Culver City the first of the several big special productions for Paramount-Artcraft release which he will personally direct. The title is "Americanism" and C. Gardner Sullivan is the author.

Metro Signs Margaret Campbell.

Margaret Campbell has been signed by Metro. The first picture in which Miss Campbell will play the lead will be "Please Get Married," in which Viola Dana will be the star. Prior to entering the pictures Miss Campbell was leading woman for the Bramhall Players for five seasons. Since then she has appeared as the adventuress in Wharton's serial "The Eagles Eye," and as Helen in the "Prince of Innocence" for the Buffalo Motion Picture Corporation.

Hobart Bosworth.
Signed up for Paramount productions under the direction of Thomas H. Ince.

Locklear, Who Jumps from Airplanes, Will Be Featured in Universal Five Reel Film

LIEUTENANT O. L. LOCKLEAR, the world famous aviator, is to star in a motion picture. This arrangement was completed last week at Universal City by Carl Laemmle, Universal's president.

Locklear, claimed to be the only aviator in the world who has gone from one airplane to another while the two planes were in mid-air, startled thousands recently at Atlantic City by doing this remarkable feat. He has also reversed the act by climbing from a lower plane by the aid of a rope ladder, to the one above.

Universal secured the services of Locklear and his two asistants, Lieutenant Elliott and Lieutenant Shirley Short, to take the leading parts in a five reel melodramatic production. The production has been given the tentative titles of "The Winged Trail," or "Cassidy of the Air Lanes." The plot will show the attempts of "air bandits" of the future to rob one of the "express air mail lines." In retrospect will be pictured the outlaws of former days, holding up stage coaches and the more modern bandit robbing the express train.

Production Will Be Costly.

The production will be one of the costliest and most daring produced at Universal City. Three planes belonging to Locklear and his two assistants were brought to Universal City recently and several others will be used in addition. One of the planes will carry Jacques Jaccard, Universal's well-known serial director, who will direct this feature, and cameraman Milton Moore, while the air acenes are being made.

The story was written by Mr. Jaccard and the supporting cast will be an all-star one. Francelia Billington will play the leading feminine role, with Carmen Phillips as the feminine heavy. Raymond Ripley will be cast as the male heavy and Wallace McDonald will have the part of the straight lead.

Pershing to See Himself in Film on His Return

WHEN General Pershing returns to the United States—and announcement of his sailing date may come at any time—he will be invited to attend a special showing of the William Fox patriotic photoplay, "The Land of the Free." General Pershing is the central figure in this special production of which the life of the brilliant Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Force furnishes the theme.

He will be especially interested in viewing his double, Olaf Skaval, the actor who plays the role of General Pershing. Skaval's resemblance to Pershing is really startling. Not only are his features remarkably like those of the general, but his general makeup corresponds closely.

The film places on the screen practically all the prominent figures of the world's war. They include, besides General Pershing, President Wilson, Hindenberg, King George, Marshal Foch, the Crown Prince, Emperor Wilhelm, Premier Clemenceau and Admiral Tirpitz. All these world figures are shown with wonderful fidelity to the originals, not only in face and figure, but in manner.

Goldwyn Creates Costume Department at Culver City

GOLDWYN PICTURES has met one of the most annoying conditions with which film stars have had to contend by instituting a costume department under the direction of an experienced costumer, Miss Wachner. She is one of the best known designers of stage costumes in the country, and is on her way West to take charge of the new department.

She will have a large workroom with assistants who are experts at cutting and fitting. In addition she has connections with the most exclusive shops in New York, from which the latest models will be sent to her. Miss Wachner has designed all kinds of stage clothes for costume plays, modern plays and the elaborate things for the Follies.

Lieut. O. L. Locklear.

Jose Engages Frankie Bailey.

Frankie Bailey, a well known show girl in the early days of the old American Music Hall, has been engaged by Edward Jose, to play the part of a cabaret dancer in "Mothers of Men," a screen adaptation from the book of the same name by Henry William Warner and De Witte Kaplan, which will be the first Jose Production for Film Specials, Inc. In the same scene, Claire Whitney, who has the leading role in "Mothers of Men," with Lumsden Hare playing opposite her, appears as a cabaret singer.

EVE UNSELL WILL SAIL FOR ENGLAND

Famous Players Scenarist Soon to Take Charge of Scenario Department of British Producers

EVE UNSELL, Famous Players-Lasky scenario writer, sails for England next week to take charge of the scenario department of the newly organized Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., whose intention it is to produce the works of the greatest Continental writers on the actual locations specified by the authors, whether they be London, Paris, Madrid, the Alps or the battle-scarred areas.

The selection of Miss Unsell for this important post places her in the rank of premier international scenarists. Her work in connection with such pictures as "Wildflower," "The Man from Mexico," "The Dummy," "The Parisian Wife," "Eyes of the Soul," "The Test of Honor," and many others equally well-known, was responsible for her being chosen. Miss Unsell will work in association with Robert A. MacAlarney, scenario editor of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who remains in America.

Will Adopt English Plays.

Among the first productions to be made by Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., will be adaptations of stories and plays by Henry Arthur Jones, Arthur Wing Pinero and other English dramatists. Already one of these plays is in script construction, awaiting Miss Unsell's arrival in England for the completion of certain details relating to locale.

Miss Unsell is enthusiastic in the anticipation of her new work and the abundant possibilities which it entails. "The day of libels against British authorship by means of motion pictures is over," she says. "Production of stories by British celebrities on their original locales, without the cheapening or inaccurate process of transplanting or imitation in scenic form, opens a new epoch in the motion picture industry. It should mean a cementing of international friendships, since only in this way can the beauties of English scenery and the true British ideals be brought vividly before other nations in pictorial form."

Comes From Cowboy Country.

Born in Caldwell, Kansas, in the midst of the habitat of the cowboy who was destined to contribute much atmosphere to the then unknown drama of the screen, Miss Unsell began at an early age to lay the foundation for her career. Following a brief term of attendance at Hardin College, Mexico, Mo., she entered Christian College at Columbia, in the same state, being graduated four years later with the degree of bachelor of arts and winning the Senior Essay medal. The subject of her prize-winning essay was "A Brief for Xantippe," and the judges arriving at their decision largely because her effort was brief in fact as well as in title, Miss Unsell says that she attributes much of her success as a writer and adaptor of screen stories to the fact that she has consistently followed the implied advice.

After graduation Miss Unsell took a special course at Missouri State University, followed by a tour of Europe with her parents. The drama "bug" had already bitten her, she admits, and on her return to this country she matriculated at Emerson College in Boston where she took a two-year course in literature and drama. The following summer she again went to Europe and attended a course of lectures by Philip Wicksteed at Oxford University.

Has Been on Stage.

Returning to America she went on the stage, doing repertoire with Nance O'Neil and stock with Paul McAllister, and then played extended engagements in "Excuse Me" and "Seven Days." It was during this period that she did her first scenario work and it attracted the attention of the Famous Players company. She had been with the company but a few days when she was entrusted with the adaptation of "Wildflower" for Marguerite Clark, working from the galley proofs of the novel. So successful was "Wildflower" that important assignments followed in rapid succession, among her early adaptations being, "The Eagle's Mate" for Mary Pickford, "One of Our Girls," for Hazel Dawn, "The Man from Mexico" and "Are You a Mason?" for John Barrymore, and later, with Hugh Ford, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," "The Morals of Marcus" and other prominent features.

Miss Unsell's later work has also been uniformly successful and includes "Sunshine Nan," "The Honeymoon," "The Silent Sacrifice," "The Whirlpool," "The Test of Honor," "Three Men and a Girl," "The Marriage Price," "The Parisian Wife," "Eyes of the Soul" and "The Shadow of the Rope."

G. A. Smith Back From France.

G. A. Smith, known in the film industry through his four years' connection with Pathe, is back after eleven months' active service in France. Following the armistice, Mr. Smith, formerly a newspaper man, was sent by the Government on a tour of France and Germany, visiting every place where the American forces operated.

"Wherever I went," said Mr. Smith, "I found the motion picture. During the war, of course, there were not the same opportunities, but when the fighting stopped, there were motion picture shows almost every night to cheer up the doughboys through the dreary days of waiting. I do not believe the folks back home fully appreciate how eagerly the boys over there looked forward to this entertainment. Generally it was their only form of amusement. The pictures, for the most part, were recent releases."

Mr. Smith has temporary headquarters in Room 624, Knickerbocker Theatre Building, New York.

Metro's Hollywood Studio Has Large Lighting Plant

METRO'S new million dollar studios in Hollywood, now the home of Screen Classics, Inc., are tuned up to the highest production pitch for the "fewer, bigger and better" pictures drive that is scheduled for the early fall under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, Screen Classics, Inc., director general.

Since their virtual completion last November, the studios have been put through a finishing process that has brought the plant now to the highest point of efficiency.

Has Greatest Number of Lights.

One of the large Hollywood studios of another company is the closet rival of Screen Classics, Inc., in the matter of lights. It has a total of 10,000 lights, but the Metro plant has a total of close to 11,000.

These lights include several dozen great Cooper Hewitt stands and "goose necks," Kliegs, California Sunlight arcs and spots by the hundreds. Under a system recently installed at the studios under the supervision of David Thompson, studio manager, not a line of electric cable is ever stretched across the floor of the immense enclosed stage. All cables are strung overhead, and out of the way of the players and directors. The overhead Cooper Hewitts are suspended by cables from movable cranes running in grooved rails and able to be moved rapidly to any part of the stage whenever required on any particular set.

Laboratories with Large Capacity.

This immense lighting equipment, for which power is supplied by huge dynamos manufacturing both direct and alternating current, is another evidence of the far-sightedness of Screen Classics, Inc., executives, who foresaw the increasing desirability and necessity of "light effects" to enhance the beauty and artistry of a screen production.

The laboratories which will turn out the original negatives and finished prints, have a daily capacity of output even in excess of the enormous requirements of the new Screen Classics, Inc., productions. And the accessories, such as properties and specially designed scenery are either in stock or can be supplied on the premises quickly by the large, electrically-equipped carpenter shop which can turn out anything from a window sash to a grand staircase for a ballroom.

ERWIN J. W. HUBER ANSWERS THE CALL

In Absence of Minister, Picture Man Steps Into Pulpit and Delivers a Sermon on the Cinema

IT is not often that a picture man gets a chance to dole out his wisdom from the pulpit, but Erwin J. W. Huber, who is quite active in exhibitor circles at Rochester, has added new lustre to his fame as an orator and a pinch hitter for screen men's doctrines.

Last Sunday at Bayview Mr. Huber filled the bill to a goodly congregation who occupied the pews in the community church. The pulpit had been supplied during the pastor's vacation by ministers from nearby towns or by some who were summering in the adjacent territory, but it seems that last Sunday the reverend gentleman who was to preach met with an accident and at the eleventh hour had to send word that he could not be present.

A Request to Preach.

Mr. Huber was among the congregation who had comfortably settled back in their seats waiting for the services to begin. He had been motoring to the city, and being a good man, had been attracted to the little wayside house of worship. One of the trustees of the church, George I. Jennings, recognized Mr. Huber as an old friend, and knowing of his ability as an orator during the recent Sunday opening campaign, asked him to speak a few words.

Talks of Movies.

Mr. Huber, after a little protest, rose to the occasion and elucidated on a subject dear to his heart: "Why I Am a Movie Fan." He pointed out in a graphic word picture the great good that the moving picture has done for the average community and the world in general. Mr. Huber said that he made no pretense of being able to advise his hearers on their spiritual needs, but could only dwell on how the movies had done much to soothe the restless feelings of men who wanted to visualize things that cold type could never effectively describe, and on how the screen was an educator, an entertainer, an uplifter and the nemesis of evil attractions.

In the vernacular Mr. Huber "got by." He was warmly complimented after his talk and invited to come again. Incidentally, it might be said that Mr. Huber's father and brother are ministers.

Ellen Terry and Irving Star in "The Lyons Mail"

THE third production announced in Triangle's Big Four Classics series is H. B. Irving in a screen adaptation of "The Lyons Mail," while the fourth of the series stars Ellen Terry in an ambitious offering entitled "Her Greatest Performance," in which the most famous living actress on the English-speaking stage is cast in a role showing her as she is today and at the same time giving her the opportunity of playing one of the most powerful emotional roles of her long and remarkable career.

Photographs and sketches of the lives of these two famous stars were sent out broadcast to announce their early appearance on the screen. As if by magic, valuable photographs and stories appeared in print which supplied the picture press-agents with a wealth of material that it would have taken months of labor to uncover. Investigation showed that the brilliant stage careers of Ellen Terry and H. B. Irving had supplied the newspapers and periodicals with records of their successes which, in volume and interest, are rivaled only by the records kept of our foremost statesmen.

Picturizations of Two Popular Novels Scheduled for Release July 20 by Famous Players-Lasky

SCHEDULED for release July 20 by Famous Players-Lasky are picturizations of two of the best known works of English and American fiction. One is "The Career of Katherine Bush," by Elinor Glyn, a Paramount-Artcraft Special, with Catherine Calvert in the stellar role, and the other is "Louisiana," Frances Hodgson Burnett's quaint novel, in the Paramount version of which Vivian Martin is starred.

"The Career of Katherine Bush" was scenarioized by Kathryn Stuart, and directed by R. William Neill, this being his first production since his connection with the organization of Thomas H. Ince. Miss Calvert, as Katherine Bush, is seen as an ambitious young woman who begins her career as a typist and succeeds in wedding the Duke of Mordryn, a member of the British Parliament, after a turbulent courtship.

The cast is a large one and includes among its principals John Goldsworthy, Fred Burton, Craufurd Kent, Mathilda Brundage and Ann Dearing.

"Louisiana" Adapted by Alice Eyton.

"Louisiana," which is from one of the later successes of the author of the immortal "Little Lord Fauntleroy," was adapted by Alice Eyton and directed by Robert Vignola. The scene is laid in the mountainous district of South Carolina in order to get the proper backgrounds and atmosphere.

The story on which the picture is based concerns a little mountain girl who goes down to the city for the first time when about seventeen years of age, and there she falls in love with a young playwright. The jealousy of Louisiana's mountain lover is aroused and he is determined to hold her love even though it involve the death of his rival at his hands.

Robert Ellis is Miss Martin's leading man and the supporting cast includes Noah Deery, Arthur Allardt, Lillian West and Lillian Leighton.

The "Get Married" Plea Made Viola Dana Give Us These Pretty Pictures.

The matrimonial role of "Please Get Married," the popular Broadway production, will be the first of Viola's parts for the Metro "fewer and better" schedule.

Pathe News Scores Beat When President Returns

A SPEED record was set by the Pathe News in the celerity with which the pictures showing President Wilson's return to American soil were placed before the public. The President was expected to debark at Hoboken early in the afternoon, and then to make a speech in Carnegie Hall at 3.00 p. m. Ceremonies over on the Jersey side were more elaborate than was expected, and it was long after 4 when the Presidential party started across the river.

It was 4.45 when the President, after being whirled in an auto up Fifth avenue, began his address. But by 7.30 the entire procedure, the debarking at Hoboken, the reception by school children, the triumphant dash up the avenue, the crowds in front of Carnegie Hall, and the start for the journey back to Washington were being flashed in a number of New York theatres.

It was an achievement in line with the news beats scored by Pathe on the Toledo fight pictures and the arrival at Mineola of the British dirigible, R-34.

Sydney Chaplin Going Abroad to Produce First of Four Pictures For Famous Players

SYDNEY CHAPLIN, the most recent star to join the forces of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, with which concern he has signed a contract to make four five-reel productions, will film his first picture in France. The indication that Chaplin would go abroad was his arrival in New York and his announcement that he would sail for England July 24.

Accompanying the star will be his wife and several members of the executive force of his organization. These include Carlyle R. Robinson, who for the past three years has been identified with both Charlie and Sydney Chaplin in the capacity of director of publicity and was recently engaged by Sydney as studio manager; Henry Clive, under whose supervision the art direction of Chaplin's productions falls; Mrs. Clive and Alexandre de Bray, prominent in the Society of Authors, France.

Will Have Studio in France.

Upon his arrival here Mr. Chaplin disclosed the fact that he had already acquired a lease on a new motion picture studio six miles out of Paris, on the banks of the Seine. The studio has never been occupied, having been completed just as the war broke out. The plant is modern in every respect.

According to his schedule Mr. Chaplin will arrive at Liverpool on July 31 and immediately go to London. He will spend two weeks with his mother, and then continue to Paris and start work at his studio on August 15. Messrs. Robinson and de Bray will go straightway to Paris, following their arrival at Liverpool, and all arrangements will be completed to have the studio in working order upon the star's arrival.

An estate of sixty acres within a short distance of the studio has been taken over by Mr. Chaplin, and it is here that he will make his home for the duration of his stay in France. The place is the property of a family who, through circumstances brought on by the war, have been forced to moderate their mode of living.

May Star on Stage.

While near Paris Mr. Chaplin will entertain the idea of co-starring in a stage play with Elsie Janis. He has already been approached by the London managers of the actress who are seeking his services for night performances exclusively.

Mr. Chaplin will not take members of his immediate company from the United States, but will fill up his cast from the professional colonies of London and Paris. A musical comedy star, now under another contract, has been in communication with Chaplin regarding affiliation as leading woman.

During his sojourn in Paris Mr. Chaplin has made arrangements to visit his mother in London weekly. He will have an aeroplane capable of flying 150 miles an hour and the screen star will be a week-end aviator.

Those acquainted with the fact that Mr. Chaplin has selected France as the proper place for the production of his initial Paramount-Artcraft picture have come forward with expressions of doubt regarding the undertaking, to which the player replies:

Wants Authentic "Location."

"I see no reason for any particular comment. I lived in England and France the greater part of my life and believe that I understand the conditions. I have made a very thorough investigation and taken everything in consideration.

"My first picture is one calling for numerous scenes in and around the city of Paris. I am fully aware of the fact that I could put on such scenes right here in the United States and build my 'sets' in such a manner as to fool even the expert familiar with conditions abroad. But it is my desire to give the public the very best obtainable, especially after having been in retirement for almost four years.

"For that reason I am going after the genuine article. I am the one who has everything at stake and it is my desire and aim to make good. Exclusive of any motion picture business it has been my wish for a long time to visit my mother, whom I have not seen for six years.

"My brother and myself endeavored to bring her to this country, but because of conditions brought on by the war could not do so. The next best thing is to visit her."

Mr. Chaplin's first production will be completed about November 15. He has made no plans for the second of the remaining four pictures.

George Melford Ready to Start Filming "Everywoman"

GEORGE MELFORD has practically completed arrangements for the production of the Paramount-Artcraft version of "Everywoman," Walter Browne's play, which he is to direct at the Lasky studio. Under his supervision a number of big sets, built on the scale of elaborateness which all those familiar with the play can readily appreciate is necessary for an adequate picturization, have been constructed, and the work of filming the scenes will be under way in a day or two.

Violet Heming, whose engagement to play the title role was recently announced, is already in California, and in addition Mr. Melford has assembled a cast of prominent players, including Theodore Roberts, Irving Cummings, Tully Marshall and James Neill.

The selection of Mr. Melford to direct "Everywoman" comes as a fitting recognition of the high quality of the work which he has turned out since his connection with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

His most recent work was "Told in the Hills," the Paramount-Artcraft picture in which Robert Warwick is starred and which was completed but a few weeks ago.

"Tiger's Cub" Is Feature of Pearl of Serial Fame

AFTER nearly a thousand well-known plays and books had been delved into by the scenario department of Fox Film Corporation, "Tiger's Cub," an Alaskan melodrama by George Potter, has been selected as the vehicle in which Pearl White will make her debut as a Fox star. Miss White will be seen in the title role—that of Mary "the Cub," daughter of Hank Bloss "the Tiger."

"Tiger's Cub" was produced in 1915 at the Garrick Theatre, London, and achieved notable success, running for years with Madge Titerage, one of England's foremost actresses, in the title role. It was novelized later, and in book form was rated as one of the best sellers in the British isles. The novelization is by George Goodchild.

"Tiger's Cub" is a tale of the Alaskan wilds and of the lawless and motley society at Dawson City in the latter days of the gold rush. Despite its sensational contrivances and distinctly melodramatic leanings, the story is a vivid, full-blooded and realistic narrative and reminds one of Jack London's style. The romance centers around "Cub," the reputed daughter of the grim and callous ruffian known as "Tiger," and David Summers, an English lad who comes to the Far North to avenge the death of his father.

Arrest of Bathing Girls Increases Theatre's Takings

SOL LESSER'S Bathing Girls, from the Mack Sennett stable of screen beauties, skedaddled to Coney Island, shortly after the Broadway Theatre engagement began, disported themselves in one-piece suits upon the sands and were arrested by the vigilant coppers. Haled to the police station, they were kept in cells until Magistrate O'Neill could attend to their case. Then "hizzoner" admonished the girls not to do so again and sent them away with the press-agent rejoicing.

It is asserted on behalf of the Broadway that business picked up instantly the New York paper began exploiting the sensational beach encounter of the bathing girls and the police. Photographs were made and carried in the newspaper advertising, after some of the dailies had run "stills" of the event on the day it all hapepned.

CENSORSHIP BODY SEEKS POPULARITY

Makes General Appeal to Citizens of New York State for Suggestions as to Who Shall Be It

Albany, July 14.

IT does not matter whether you are an exhibitor, producer, distributor or a member of organized labor, providing you are a resident of New York State and have any idea as to the make-up of the proposed committee on censorship advocated by the State Conference of Mayors, W. P. Capes, secretary of the conference, is anxious to secure a suggestion from you as to the make-up of this committee.

Mr. Capes has just returned to Albany from a trip to New York, during which he got in touch with Frederick C. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry, and as a result, Mr. Elliott will probably call a meeting of moving picture exhibitors, distributors and producers of the metropolis in the near future. Out of this meeting, Mr. Capes expects that three or more names will be suggested to him as representing the three branches of the industry who will act as representatives on the coming committee.

An All-Embracing Project.

Judging from the present appearance of things, the committee will consist of not less than nine members, including a representative from the exhibitors, the producers, the distributors, organized labor, educational forces, women's clubs, the Catholic and the Protestant churches. There has been some discussion of late as to the advisability of the New York State Housewives' League being represented.

In conversation, on July 14, with a representative of the Moving Picture World, Mr. Capes said that the make-up of the committee was still in the air, and that he is open to suggestions as to its personnel. These suggestions should be sent to him in care of the State Mayors Conference, Albany, N. Y. Mr. Capes has also sent a number of letters to upstate exhibitors so that both the metropolitan and the outside districts may be represented in the formation of the committee. The National Board of Review will also be asked to provide a member.

To Study Censorship.

As soon as sufficient names are secured to warrant a selection, Mr. Capes intends to place them before Mayor Walter Stone, of Syracuse, president of the Mayors' Conference, and an announcement will probably be forthcoming shortly after.

The real object of this committee will be the study of the entire problem of censorship so far as New York State is concerned, and in the studying of the same, to provide an answer to the question as to whether or not censorship, under state control and supervision, is necessary at the present time, and if so, what recommendations should be made to the legislature next winter, as to the kind of censorship and its method of administration and control. If this proposed committee, according to Mr. Capes, discovers that there is really no urgent need for censorship in New York State, then it is supposed to offer some suggestions which will in a measure replace censorship, but at the same time exert a controlling influence over pictures, which will do away with any possibility of certain types assuming greater latiture and fringing on the salacious.

Albany Still to Decide.

According to Mr. Capes, there is little or nothing now happening in the state in connection with the further thrashing out of the Sunday motion picture proposition. The majority of cities have settled the matter for themselves, Albany being a possible exception, as the proprietors of motion picture houses there have decided to leave things as they are until next fall, when it will be carried to the common council and some decision reached. Mr. Capes states that none of the adjoining states have recently written him in connection with New York's attitude, and that, apparently, the situation has been settled for all time.

There is little doubt, however, but that censorship will become one of the issues in the legislature next winter. There is every probability that Speaker Thaddeus Sweet, who has been keenly alive to the situation for the past two or three years, will himself ask for the introduction of the bill along some such lines. There is an underlying sentiment among a certain type of legislators that there is a need for state censorship, but whether or not this will assume any great strength next winter, or will meet with the defeat which has come to similar bills in the past, is a question which time itself will alone settle.

Lehrman Studios at Culver City Have Elaborate Arrangements for Water Scenes

THE Henry Lehrman Studios at Culver City, Cal., the future home of the comedy producer, are rapidly being brought to a point where construction is far enough advanced to permit the starting of the first Henry Lehrman Comedy within a few days. Large forces of carpenters and painters are now engaged in putting the final touches on the first of the big stages, and diffusers are already being put in place, preparatory to the actual beginning of production.

Lake in Studio Grounds.

The administration building fronting Washington boulevard will be distinctly Venetian in design. A lake 600 feet in length will be formed in front of the property, and access to the grounds and business offices will be by means of ornamental bridges.

The first of the stages, now nearing completion, is one of the largest in the country, measuring 100 by 250 feet; and construction plans also include the erection of an enclosed glass studio of the same dimensions. In the first stage three large concrete tanks are located at intervals throughout its length, so that three companies, if desired, can produce "water stuff" simultaneously. Opening off the stage, and extending entirely along one of its sides, is a large building which will house the property department, carpenter shops and scene docks, so that any article may be moved to the desired set without waste of time or effort, and without the necessity of moving it off the floor on which it stands.

In this building will also be constructed the mechanical effects which enter into the mixing of the modern comedy, and enable the cavorting comedians to defy everything from the law of gravity to the police force. Flanking the stage on the opposite side are two large two-story buildings, one of which will be given over to dressings rooms and temporary business offices, while the other will be devoted to various technical departments.

Represents Investment of $200,000.

The Lehrman Studios, when completed, will represent an investment of approximately $200,000, and will be the means of adding another heavy payroll to the credit of the motion picture industry in Southern California.

Henry Lehrman, after many years as a director and producer of screen comedy, began in 1917 the production of the Henry Lehrman Sunshine Comedies, which proved so successful that the reissue of thirteen of these subjects, less than two years after their original release, has just been announced. Mr. Lehrman has been personally responsible for every Sunshine Comedy since the inception of the company.

"The forming of my releasing affiliation with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit," said the producer last week, "is in itself an incentive to the production of comedies."

We're Glad He Made Her Cry.

Otherwise we wouldn't have seen this dandy picture of Katherine MacDonald from her Goldwyn, "High Pockets," starring Louis Bennison.

Colonial Reverts to "Legitimate."

The Colonial Theatre, Providence, R. I., one-time legitimate theatre, but for the past five or six years a motion picture house, is going back to its former status. The theatre is being remodeled and will be opened in September.

E. H. ROTH HAS OPTIMISTIC OUTLOOK

Finds Producers Are Consulting Experience of Exhibitors in Determining What Public Demands

OPTIMISM, with a big O, is a description of the attitude of Eugene H. Roth, managing director of the California and Portola theatres, San Francisco, in regard to the immediate future of the moving picture business. He sees a new era dawning in the industry, with the old order disappearing and but few inclined to mourn its passing. Better pictures, better presentation and better profits for all concerned are among the things he believes are right at hand and he advises a thorough house cleaning in the industry in order to make the visitors permanent guests.

In an interview following his recent trip to New York he said: "Since my return from New York a few days ago I have in my spare moments reflected upon the result of the trip. Heretofore, these visits have always resulted in securing approximately the same information, some minor changes in the policies of producers, a new wrinkle in the art of screen presentation, and the like. On this occasion, however, I noted a great change in the general air of the business, with many interesting developments to the credit of both producers and exhibitors.

Now Accept Exhibitors' Suggestions.

"I found that at last producers have realized the need of catering to the demands of moving picture patrons through the influences and suggestions made by exhibitors who are constantly agitating the likes and dislikes of their daily clientele. As a result, I think the coming year will show a greater development in the production of feature pictures than any in the history of the business, with fewer pictures made but these of an infinitely higher standard. Instead of using cheap and imperfect scenarios, as heretofore, every producer is aiming to secure bigger stories by our best authors, and seem willing to pay an adequate price for the same. The producers, instead of making a series of eight pictures with a star, will make only four. It is obvious to those in the industry that by giving more time to the making and by taking keener interest in the stories, much better results will be obtained, especially in view of the fact that the supporting cast will be stronger and more care given to the selection of the same.

Better Pay for Better Pictures.

"I had the pleasure of visiting all the principal producers, and in nearly every instance there seemed to be an honesty of purpose and a real desire to make good pictures, which, of course, was very gratifying to me. For the past year these producers have been battling with problems that have been of an extremely serious nature, and now that their ideas are in more concrete form and will be given out to exhibitors throughout the world it is the duty of the latter to encourage their efforts to the fullest extent. It is the aim of the producer to give us for our patrons pictures of a higher standard and in turn we should be willing to pay higher rentals for these superior productions. The tendency has been among a majority of exhibitors to discourage high prices, but we have now arrived at a point where we must seriously analyze all angles of the game, and give a financial support to encourage further progress.

Believes in Open Market Policy.

"We all realize that we will be offered picture by concerns who lay back and watch the movements of others, endeavoring to ride the tide with progressive concerns and force the use of pictures of inferior merit, but apparently the open market policy will be the method of release, and therefore, the pictures will stand on their merit alone. The rental values will be determined by the effort and money put in these releases. Everywhere in the country, in the largest cities and in smaller communities, palatial houses are either in course of constructions, or are being planned. More moving picture "fans" are being created, and the army of enthusiasts will be greatly augmented when we have a better type of pictures as well as better places in which to exhibit them. Producers and exhibitors have a great deal in common and it is up to all of us in the industry to assist in working out the problems as presented and to take off our coats and assist each other in perfecting our standards. I found a very healthy condition existing at every point I visited and feel very optimistic for a big season in 1920."

Hall Resumes Magazine and Scenario Writing

EMMETT CAMPBELL HALL, who was one of the first star scenario writers and who kept in the business until a couple of years ago when he dropped out of sight with the completeness of a man wanted for murder, has located himself again.

When he severed his connection with the Goldwyn company he announced to his friends that he was going to quit writing and buy an orange grove in Florida. Last September he purchased a strip of ocean frontage 200 feet by 1200 deep and about 22 acres back of this strip, near Delray, Florida. Last year was a bad one for the groves, for there was a heavy frost and other setbacks, but Mr. Hall writes that he made $6.43 in money and about $10,000 in health while the value of the land has increased about 75 per cent. This coming season he expects to make a real showing. Meantime he has taken up writing again, both for the magazines and for the studios.

Saunders Is Famous Players Field Exploitation Head

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY'S field force of exploitation men, organized to assist in the presentation of the big productions to be released under the Selective Booking plan, will be in charge of Claud Saunders. Vice-President Walter E. Greene, in charge of distribution, announced the engagement of Mr. Saunders for this important work.

Although Mr. Saunders will be at the home office of the company in New York, he will employ immediately representatives to be stationed at Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Kansas City, San Francisco, and other principal cities of the country. Showmen of the highest type will be representatives of the exploitation department.

With the engagement of Mr. Saunders and the organization of his division Famous Players-Lasky fulfills the promise held to exhibitors in its recent announcements of the new plans to establish an exploitation bureau on lines as elaborate as the other divisions of its operations. Mr. Saunders will work in close co-operation with Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution; S. R. Kent, general sales manager, and John C. Flinn, director of publicity and advertising.

Mr. Saunders has a wide acquaintance in the motion picture field and he was one of the pioneers in exploiting the big film productions to the trade and to the public. He was connected in an executive capacity with the distribution of "The Birth of a Nation" and personally exhibited this picture in a number of the leading cities. He was also connected with Mr. Griffith's productions, "Intolerance" and "Hearts of the World," and for some time was the western representative for Mr. Griffith with headquarters in Chicago.

"Exhibitors all over the United States will find the Exploitation Department their constant aid, as the results of our efforts will be measured by the money the productions attract to the box office," said Mr. Saunders.

Write Song for Hodkinson Release.

That another of Hodkinson releases has been an inspiration to a trio of lyricists and composers is revealed in the announcement of Waterson, Berlin and Snyder that they are to publish soon a song of the West, "Desert Gold," which will be advertised nationally in conjunction with Benjamin B. Hampton and Eltinge F. Warner's first Zane Grey picture "Desert Gold," scheduled for early release. Samuel Lewis and Joseph Young, authors, are the sponsors of "Desert Gold."

FOX OPENS SIXTEEN FOREIGN BRANCHES

Carlos in Charge of New Exchanges—Paris His Headquarters—Offices Established in Northern Africa

THE signing of peace has been the signal for Fox Film Corporation to open sixteen new branch offices abroad and three new branch offices in Canada—an expansion of the Fox company's foreign policy that places that concern in touch with exhibitors in practically every corner of the earth.

The opening of these foreign exchanges is the result of plans formulated on the recent visit abroad of William Fox, head of Fox Film Corporation, and Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager. Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan made arrangements for a liberal extension of the company's foreign service, and the establishment of these new exchanges is the culmination of those plans.

The arrangements for inaugurating these exchanges being completed, the actual openings awaited only the consummation of peace. It was considered an inauspicious time to open new exchanges when peace terms were not fully agreed upon.

Carlos in Charge of New Exchanges.

Abraham Carlos, general representative of the Fox company, is in direct supervision of these exchanges. Mr. Carlos is making Paris his headquarters, and from that central point is directing the operation of all the exchanges. He is familiar with foreign conditions in the motion picture business.

The new exchanges, opened under the direction of Mr. Carlos, are:

France—Lille, Bordeaux, Lyons, Marseilles.
Holland—Amsterdam.
Italy—Milan, Turin, Rome, Naples.
Spain—Barcelona.
Portugal—Lisbon.
Switzerland—Geneva.
Belgium—Brussels.

Opens Offices in North Africa.

Arrangements also have been made for covering the field in northern African colonies, and offices have been established in Algiers, Tunis and Morocco.

In addition to this expansion abroad, Sam Dembow, Jr., home office representative, has established branch offices in Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, thus covering the Western Canadian field. Eastern Canada is already thoroughly canvassed, with well established branches in Montreal, Toronto and St. John.

There are twenty-three United States exchanges, so distributed that they completely cover the country.

Twenty-Three Exchanges in Europe.

Publicizing "Letter Box" Becomes Baremore's Duty

COMES the announcement that R. W. Baremore, with the Exhibitors Trade Review since that journal started, has resigned to go with Kashin & Cohn to handle the advertising and publicity for their Screen Letter Box. This is a work Mr. Baremore has been indirectly concerned in since M. Kashin and Jack Cohn formed their organization.

On the Trade Review, Mr. Baremore specialized in advertising guides for exhibitors and service pages to aid in promoting photoplays regularly released. Before going with Editor Mason, Every Week and the Associated Sunday Magazines employed Mr. Baremore in the work of organizing their screen features. During his service in the trade paper field he has handled personal publicity for several stars, including Corinne Griffith, Betty Blythe, Louise Huff, Agnes Ayres and Edward Earle.

With Kashin & Cohn he will have opportunity to utilize his inventiveness in designing and creating publicity.

English Beauty Appears in "Man Who Stayed at Home"

BETTY HUTCHINSON, the famous beauty who has been painted by Whistler and other artists of world renown, walked into the Screen Classics, Inc., studios as a visitor during the making of some scenes in the all-star production, "The Man Who Stayed at Home."

Miss Hutchinson made a fourth at a table where were already seated Alexandre Herbert as young Norma Preston, Ricca Allen as Miss Myrtle, and Ida Darling as Mrs. Sanderson. Her wealth of silver hair, exquisitely coiffed, and her modish costume gave added distinction to the handsome scene supposed to take place in the private sitting room of Mrs. Sand, an adventuress, in a fashionable seaside hotel.

Miss Hutchinson is still a young woman. Her coloring is most unusual. She has rosy cheeks, large violet eyes, and snow-white hair with which she was born. As "that beautiful white-haired girl," she created a furore during her residence abroad.

Stock Roll Tickets Ended.

The National Ticket Company, of Shamokin, Pa., has been notified by the Government that the sale of stock roll tickets must be discontinued and the National has imediately done so. All tickets must conform to Government regulations and bear the established price of admission and tax paid. This ruling makes the sale of stock roll tickets illegal and theatre-managers trafficking in them should at once take heed.

EXHIBITOR XYDIAS EN ROUTE TO GREECE

Will Also Visit Balkan States, Turkey and Egypt and Expects to Open Export Office on His Return

PASSING through New York en route to Greece, Anthony J. Xydias, prominent exhibitor and exchangeman of the Southwest, called at the Moving Picture World offices and proved to be a most interesting visitor.

The primary object of Mr. Xydias' trip to Europe is to visit his father whom he has not seen for twenty-six years and who is now living in Constantinople. He intends, however, to make a thorough study of the film situation, visiting Greece, Turkey, Egypt and the Balkan states, with a view to establishing an office for the exportation of motion pictures to those countries on his return to the United States, which will be about Christmas.

Has Had Varied Film Experience.

Mr. Xydias is a native of Greece and is well qualified for such an enterprise, as he has had a number of years' experience in various branches of the industry in this country and in addition has command of several languages, speaking English, French, Greek and Italian together with a little Turkish.

Well-known in the Southwest, Mr. Xydias first came into national prominence through his fight against the local censorship regulations in Houston, Texas, about five years ago, where he conducted five motion picture theatres. The regulations required, says Mr. Xydias, that an exhibitor should each morning submit to the local authorities, all films to be shown that day and receive a permit for their presentation. This he considered an unjust and unnecessary hardship and determined to fight it as a matter of principle, as he stated he was careful at all times to show no objectionable pictures.

Backed by the newspapers and exhibitors Mr. Xydias decided to test the ordinance by showing films without a permit. He was arrested and after spending about $5,000, the case reached the Texas Supreme Court, but was finally decided against him.

Opened Exchange in New Orleans.

Mr. Xydias disposed of his Houston theatres and securing a partner opened the Central Feature Film Company in New Orleans to handle state right pictures. Early in 1918 he took over the Lomo, a 1,000-seat house in Hattiesburg, one of the largest in Mississippi. Almost immediately thereafter the Government established Camp Shelby at that point, and due to the enormous increase in population, there being about 30,000 soldiers in the camp, and the consequent exceptional opportunities, he disposed of his holdings in New Orleans and assumed active management of the Lomo.

Business proved so successful at the Lomo that Mr. Xydias also took over the Gem, a 600-seat house, and met with the same success. During his management of these houses high class pictures were installed and the admission prices gradually raised from 5 and 10 cents to 15 and 20 cents with 25 cents for special productions. After the signing of the armistice and return of condition in Hattiesburg to the normal, Mr. Xydias disposed of his interests in these two houses to the Saenger Amusement Company and then decided to visit Europe.

Mr. Xydias is accompanied by his wife and they are stopping at the Hotel Markwell while awaiting the issuance of their passports. He is a great admirer of the Moving Picture World and has made arrangements to have each issue forwarded to him throughout his entire trip.

Gene Warren Is Made an Assistant Director

BELIEVING that a woman is more efficient, and by her sympathy is capable of getting more out of his players, John William Kellette, director of the Paramount-Briggs Comedies, has engaged Miss Gene Warren as his assistant director. Miss Warren is now at work with the Briggs company in its enlarged quarters in the Ideal Studio, Hudson Heights, N. J.

There are only a few women directors in the profession, and of women assistant directors there are even fewer —a fact which probably is due from the vast amount of detail which an assistant director has to attend to. But it is for this very reason, says Mr. Kellette, that he has engaged Miss Warren, because he has found from experience that women are more adapted to caring for details and are more efficient than men in studio work.

Miss Warren has had a thorough experience in motion pictures, having been identified with several of the leading companies as player, studio employe and production aide.

Anna Lehr Ill With Poisoning.

Anna Lehr, who was selected to play opposite David Powell in the all-star cast of "Teeth of the Tiger," now being produced at the New York studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, under the direction of Chet Withey, has been compelled to withdraw from the cast. Miss Lehr was taken ill with ptomaine poisoning three weeks ago and her continued illness has necessitated a substitution and the retaking of the scenes in which she has worked.

Marguerite Courtot has been engaged to take Miss Lehr's place.

Will Soon Start Work on "Bob Hampton of Placer"

HAVING completed his production of "In Old Kentucky," featuring Anita Stewart, Marshall Neilan will leave for New York, and from there will make a hurried trip to London. During his absence the staff will make preliminary preparations for the initial Marshall Neilan Special to be made for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

This will be an adaptation of Randall Parrish's novel "Bob Hampton of Placer." The motion picture version will be titled "The Eternal Three." While in many scenes thousands of people will be used the production will not be of the spectacle type. It is expected that in some of the scenes as many as two thousand horses will be used.

Lewis Stone, it is expected, will play the title role, and Marjorie Daw the female lead. Little Wesley Barry, now known internationally as "Stickers," will have the part of his career. He will be a bold, bad buckaroo in miniature. Mahlon Hamilton, featured with Mary Pickford in "Daddy Long Legs," and at present playing the leading male role of "In Old Kentucky," will have a prominent part, being in fact the third angle of the well-known triangle. The other two are Lewis Stone and Miss Daw.

KEENAN LECTURES AT MINNEAPOLIS

Speaking at Banquet He Says That Picture Industry Has Advanced and Left Some Behind

BETTER moving pictures and an industry united in one common cause, the uplift of the screen, was the keynote of addresses at a banquet given in the Gold Room of the Dyckman Hotel in Minneapolis July 12 in honor of Frank Keenan, the actor and producer.

The occasion was one of the most representative gatherings ever assembled in film circles of the Twin Cities. It was arranged by Charles Stombaugh, manager of the Minneapolis Pathe office. Mr. Keenan was the principal speaker, and Theodore L. Hays, manager of the St. Paul New Garrick and New Liberty, acted as toastmaster. Minneapolis and St. Paul newspapermen were among the guests.

Champions Independent Producer.

Mr. Keenan, in his address, championed the cause of the independent producer. "I am an independent producer myself," he said, "and I recognize no boss but one—the people. The independent producer has the edge on the others. While he wants to make money, he has a personal pride in his output that is bound to make him work for something more than merely a matter of dollars."

Makes Prophecy.

Speaking of the future of moving pictures Mr. Keenan said: "Of course, everyone who is informed on the situation knows that the future of the films is bound to grow bigger and bigger and has in store unlimited possibilities. It is a deplorable fact, however, that the moving picture industry has grown much faster than many of the men who are in it. Those men who are losing pace with the development of the industry haven't tumbled yet to its bigness, but I am hoping to see the time come when it will be moving along smoothly on a stabilzied basis.

Advent of Better Picture.

"The day of just simply any old kind of a moving picture is past. The erratic and indecent pictures will not do. The people do not want to see them. The day of the sensational picture is also dead, and flamboyant and extravagant advertising is no longer successful. The people have been fooled too often, and things of this sort will no longer get by. The exhibitor who buys must know what he is buying, and the only thing for him to do is to watch the man who is making big pictures that the people like. He must advertise honestly. The public does not want the morbid picture, for the trend of the times is assuredly toward optimism. There is enough sorrow in life without heaping on more.

Patron Wants Real Stories.

"There is a change in the general tendency of the public, marked by a desire for better and bigger pictures. The using of vital stories with the atmosphere of the present day seems to have struck a popular chord. Real stories, not bunk, are what the patrons of the screen want. The public has had its taste of the blood and thunder stuff, it has seen an improvement toward better things, and wants more of that kind of entertainment. The public has been educated to like something better. It is an educational step forward such as the child takes when he drops his fairy tales to take up literature of a more advanced type, and so the patrons of the screen have become educated to a new vision of the screen. Consequently, those in the industry who have failed to keep pace with its growth as a recreational and educational medium will be lost unless they awaken to the needs of the times promptly."

Sets Forth His Ambitions.

Referring to his film, "World Aflame," which will be released through Pathe in August, he said:

"If I cannot thrill you and your patrons, make the tears come to your eyes, cause a wholesome laugh and send the audience away with a feeling of optimism, a note of happiness, then I have failed. This is what I am striving for, and I hope that such is the aim of everyone connected with the great moving picture industry."

Makes Personal Appearances.

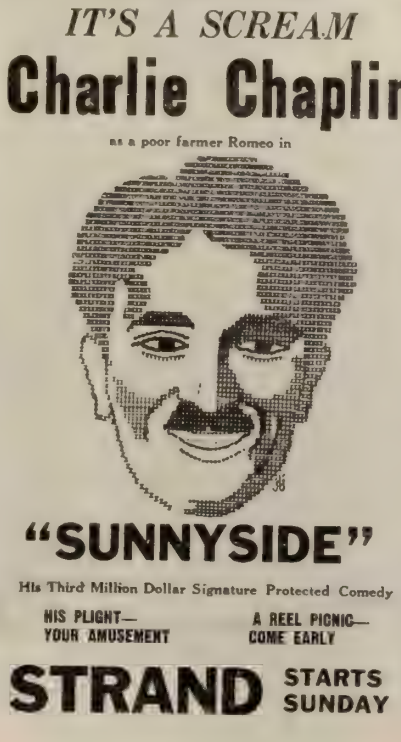
Mr. Keenan, during the day, appeared in person at the Minneapolis, New Garrick, the St. Paul, New Liberty and the St. Paul New Garrick. He made eight addresses. At each of the theatres he spoke of himself as "producer, actor and general master of ceremonies for Keenan productions, anxious to have a chat with my boss, the only master I have in the world, the people." Mr. Keenan was heartily applauded at the theatres.

Among those who attended the banquet in his honor at the Dyckman were Theodore L. Hayes, Charles Stombaugh, T. Van Horn, J. C. Johnson, H. Murphy, Billy B. Watson, William Koch, Edward Tunstall, George W. Granstrom, Bert Goldman, C. C. Perry, W. F. Vance, Phil R. Reisman, A. J. Fischer, Harry Rathner, Tom Burke, Les E. Davis, Ira Mantzle, A. S. Holmes, A. J. Stinson, F. Fischer, H. C. Andress, J. F. Cubberley, C. W. Jones, F. M. Woollen, J. L. Johnston, G. W. Briggs, A. A. Hixon, H. Hellweg, B. N. Judell and Carlton Miles.

Mr. Keenan stopped in the Twin Cities while en route to Seattle, where he will attend the Northwest Exhibitors' convention. He will speak at the Chamber of Commerce in Seattle and will also be a guest at a ball to be given at Tacoma. When these festivities are over he will return to California to get back into harness.

More Facile with a Typewriter Than a Press Agent.

Is John Le Roy Johnson, Ruben & Finkelstein advertising manager, who, with his little machine, concocted this stunt ad for the First National attraction.



Will Build Large House in Melbourne, Australia

MELBOURNE is soon to have a huge motion picture theatre, fashioned after the familiar type that had its origin in New York and counts its largest number of representatives on Broadway, although prototypes are now to be found in the leading cities of the country. J. C. Williamson, whose activities in the antipodes rank with those of the leading American amusement firms, announces through his American representatives, Sanger & Jordan, that arrangements have been completed for the immediate erection of the house, which is planned to seat 4,000.

The policy will follow that which has been standardized by the best American motion picture establishments—a mixed program of educational, news, scenic and comedy films, with a feature, and marked attention devoted to the musical side. It will be the first undertaking of the kind in Australia and will mark a pronounced advance for the motion pictures in that distant land. An intimation is made that American pictures will figure largely in the programs.

Two existing theatres in the heart of the amusement district will undergo demolition to make room for the new house, which is designed to rank among the largest theatres of the world.

Sketch of Chaplin, Made on Typewriter, Is Film Ad

JOHN LE ROY JOHNSON, publicity and art director for Ruben & Finkelstein's Minneapolis houses, created a novelty in the illustrated line which has aroused interest in Northwest film circles. As an opener to the campaign for "Sunnyside," third of the Chaplin productions distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, he prepared an advertisement carrying a picture of Charlie Chaplin drawn with a typewriter instead of pencil, pen or brush. A replica of the whole head and face of the famous comedian was pounded out by a typewriter on a piece of paper, and was reproduced in the newspapers.

Because of the interest aroused in this unique idea, Johnston plans to use many other similar ads, art work and all, made with a plain typewriter. Old time showmen have all endorsed the idea as clever. "Sunnyside" goes into the Minneapolis Strand the week of June 29.

MOVIES THRIVE AMONG THE GUSHERS

Salesmen Don Overalls and Vend to Texas Oil Field Exhibitors Who Give Shows at $2 a Seat

BRIGHT young men who tie up exhibitors for unlimited celluloid yardage may have invaded the snow-roofed igloos of the Eskimos or sold film in the sweaty zarebas of darkest Africa, but they never experienced any heavier going than Dallas film salesmen have in their recent invasion of towns in the West Texas oil fields.

About a month or so ago the big Dallas film exchanges were suddenly stricken with the idea that much valuable business lay in the tiny oil towns of central and western Texas—miles from a railroad—which have swelled into wild mobs clamoring for amusement owing to vast oil discoveries. Almost every film exchange in Dallas sent salesmen into this virgin field where moving picture shows are building overnight, and it is a "punk" film that does not show for a minimum of a dollar admittance.

Salesmen in Overalls.

The Dallas salesmen sauntered nonchalantly forth faultlessly equipped with Panama hats, Palm Beach suits and creases in their pants. They came back in overalls, hungry, needing shaves, but with contracts and orders which gratified the most exacting and grouchiest of film exchange managers. Whittlesey and his "lost battalion" had nothing on the birds who spread their wings for the mud, filth and tents of golden oil sands. They were gone three weeks, covering territory which under normal circumstances and with proper rail connections should have taken them three days to traverse. Their expense accounts listened like a Democratic rivers and harbors appropriation bill.

They Journey to Mud Hole, Texas.

Through wasteless tracks of mud, over roads which are impassable to any but a money-mad oil speculator or a business bent film salesman, the Dallas men hit the bumps to little towns which a year or so ago could count their population on their finger tips, but which now are tented cities sheltering thousands of transients.

R. I. Brown, of Metro and First National, was one of the first of the contingent to return. He was badly battered as to raiment and his pocket book sagged. His story is typical.

A Survivor Speaks.

"I blew into Desdemona after a twenty-six mile automobile ride through seas of mud from De Leon, the nearest point on the railroad," Brown says in describing his trip. "The automobile bandit who hauled me charged $18. There were seven other men in the flivver and the trip took almost five hours. We alighted every few miles to aid in hauling the car out of deep mud holes. Just before we reached town we swam a bridge which was under water owing to a flood, and the car was washed clean for the first time in months.

"On our way we passed 'gassers,' gas wells which have such a strong pressure that it is impossible to cap them, and the roar of the gas almost deafened us until we moved a few hundred feet away. I found that Desdemona had been called Hog Town until the discovery of oil and the advent of the multitude had caused it to choose a more aristocratic name. There is one hotel situated in the midst of a sea of mud and various mud-smeared tents. People sleep in automobiles, on planks, under mesquite bushes, and, in fact, in any place they find in town after spending the day in the oil fields.

Movies at $2 a Seat.

"Desdemona is about three months old, so far as the real oil boom is concerned. Already they have two moving picture shows running and one is being built among the derricks. They are all crowded twenty-four hours each day. 'The Unpardonable Sin' brought $2 a seat for two weeks. The average film calls for a dollar admittance. The oil men, workers who are earning $20 or more a day, and the speculators who are reaping thousands and hundreds of thousands, will pay any price for a good show.

But the Place Is Dry.

"The absence of saloons makes Desdemona and other oil frontier towns mere mild replicas of what you see in Bill Hart's pictures. Since the world has gone dry I discovered that hard liquor—possibly a Texas product—which is guaranteed to make any oil man believe a duster is a gusher—costs $80 a quart in the oil fields. At that price the city jails are full of 'stews' worth their weight in gold. The oil men simply don't realize the value of money.

"All these little towns, far from civilization and the steel rails, have moving picture exhibitors who want the very best that money can buy. They think nothing of driving twenty miles through the mud and waiting hours for the arrival of film on a train which has no running schedule or arrival time.

Writer Talks Bunk.

"I was lucky to grab a bunk at Desdemona. A man rented me a cot for $4 a night. I slept on it under some trees. Luckily it did not rain. Beds, eight in a tent, cost $3 a night. The hotels have no dining rooms. You have to eat in restaurants in tents, where food is mutilated over gasoline stoves. A fragment of tough and almost inedible beeksteak costs $2. If you want an extra glass of water you have to pay a dime. One quickly doffs city clothes for overalls and high boots if you want to keep alive and do business.

Eight Bucks Per Mile.

"All travel in the oil fields is by automobile or on horseback. Automobile rental is charged according to the weather which is mostly rain this year. After a heavy downpour a trip which might cost you $10 in ordinary times costs you anywhere from $35 to $50 for a half-dozen miles."

Mr. Brown during his recent trip visited Breckenridge, 20 miles from the railroad with three theatres; Caddo, 23 miles from the railroad with three theatres; Desdemona, 26 miles from the railroad with two theatres; Gorman, which has three theatres; De Leon, Comanche and other West Texas towns where dollars are worth less than doughnuts at the present time. He lived to tell the tale.

Lucas Theatre Supply Company of Atlanta Opens Dallas Branch; E. J. Callahan, Manager

A SECTION of the industry which has received little notice, but which has grown apace with the film production and exchange branches of the business, is the equipment or supply business.

One of the representative type of progressive supply men is Harry K. Lucas, head of the supply house which bears his name, and which is located in Atlanta. For the past nine years, the name of Lucas has been before the exhibitors throughout the South. Having as his territory the twelve states south of the lower half of Virginia and running westward as far as New Mexico, the handling of this territory in a business-like manner called for the building up of a well organized selling machine and establishment.

Occupies Entire Building.

The Atlanta office of the Lucas Theatre Supply occupies the building at 158 Marietta street, and is pronounced as being one of the most completely equipped and finely finished supply houses of its kind. A showroom 40 by 60 feet occupies a section of the lower part of the building, in the show-windows of which are located the latest type of Simplex projectors for which Mr. Lucas is the sole Southern distributor. Everything that can possibly be used in the line of theatre equipment can be seen in these showrooms.

Downstairs is located a handsome and fully equipped theatre, the dimensions of which are 12 by 32 feet. A feature of this theatre is the projection room which is 7 by 6 by 12, and which, besides containing the latest type of Simplex Mazda Incandescent Lamp Equipment, motor driven rewinders, and high grade film cabinets, has all of the necessary fixtures found in the latest theatre projection rooms. The theatre contains forty seats.

Has Extensive Repair Department.

Around the Minusa screen is arranged an eight-inch border of royal blue velvet trimmed with gold. All lighting effects for both the stage setting and theatre illumination are operated from the projection room.

Downstairs, in another section of the building, is located one of the institutions for which the Lucas company has become famous—namely, the extensive repair department and service station. In this department, facilities are at hand for taking care of all kinds of repair work of a mechanical or electrical nature. In this 30 by 30 feet of floor space are installed a twelve-inch swing engine lathe, buffing, emery and grinding wheels, upright drill press, and other necessary machinery for turning out first class repair work.

Mr. Lucas, who is still a young man, is keen on publicity, and owing to the bulk of his business being of the mail-order type, many thousands of inserts, stuffers, pamphlets and the like are sent out from his office yearly through his mailing list of 4,100. His knowledge of publicity was gained by him through his experience as publicity man for several of his own theatres in the earlier days, besides acting in a similar capacity for several theatres in Dubuque, Iowa, in 1919.

The "Cosiki," which is the house-organ of the House of Lucas, is a twelve-page monthly periodical and is edited by Mr. Lucas himself. The word "Cosiki" is a composite word, using the first two letters of the maiden name of the mother of Mr. Lucas.

Opens Dallas Branch.

The large amount of business being handled through the Atlanta office, which worked under severe handicaps during the war and again during the "flu" epidemic, was so great that it prompted Mr. Lucas going to Dallas, where the Simplex Projectors and other products were being handled through the Superior Electric Company of that city as a Lucas agency. One of the members of that company was E. J. Callahan. During his recent three weeks' sojourn in Texas, Mr. Lucas established a branch office of the Lucas Theatre Supply Company, and installed Mr. Callahan as its general manager. The branch is located at 1816 Main street, Dallas. A Simplex service station is also installed.

Wilkinson Is Appointed Realart's Buffalo Head

HENRY E. WILKINSON has been appointed manager of the Buffalo exchange of Realart Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Wilkinson was educated at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, being graduated with the degree of civil engineer. After his graduation, he spent five years in the City Engineer's office of Buffalo. But being more inclined toward business than engineering, Mr. Wilkinson went into the stock brokerage business as a salesman with the firm of John F. Steele in Buffalo. With the experience gained with Mr. Steele and others, Mr. Wilkinson went into the business of buying and selling stock and bonds for himself. He remained in this field until the United States entered the World War.

With four years' service in the National Guard of New York to his credit, Mr. Wilkinson enlisted in the American Army. Having been an aviation enthusiast for years, he took the "air" examination and was soon commissioned a lieutenant in the Aviation Corps.

Upon receiving his discharge from the Army, a photoplay proposition presented itself and Mr. Wilkinson became the partner of Joseph A. Schuchert, who has seven theatres in Buffalo, one in Niagara Falls and a second under construction at Niagara Falls at an estimated cost of $250,000. Mr. Wilkinson took charge of the Ellen Terry Theatre in Buffalo.

Having been a member of the Theatrical Managers' Association of Buffalo, Mr. Wilkinson is well acquainted with the exhibitors in the territory in which he will operate in the interests of Realart. Buffalo offices will be located at 221 Franklin street.

Scores of French Towns Await Picture Exploitation But Have No Electricity

QUITE naturally G. Carroll Johnson called at the office of Moving Picture World, where he was welcomed only a few hours after he had landed from France, a member of the A. E. F., but soon to be demobilized at Camp Grant. Mr. Johnson, before he joined the colors, was long employed by the firm now known as Rath, Bell & Mills, of Minneapolis, specialists in moving pictures for commercial exploitation.

For two years and two months Mr. Thomas was in the service, coming out a sergeant in the air service, connected with the Headquarters Staff of photographers. His assignments in France, Belgium and as one of "The Watch on the Rhine," was to do special ground work, take historical photographs, and to make movies for the Red Cross. He is going back to Minneapolis, when he is "demobbed," where his family resides and where his brother, John Le Roy Johnson, is making an excellent reputation as publicity and advertising manager for Ruben & Finklestein.

Restricted Lighting Facilities.

Sergeant Johnson found time to watch the progress of motion pictures as entertainment in the towns he entered, and discovered that the backwardness of France, as compared to the enterprise of the United States and most of the European nations, is restricting the exploitation of pictures to a deplorable degree. The lack of electricity supplied by public corporations is the first and almost insurmountable barrier against the general showing of photoplays, according to Sergeant Johnson.

He cites instances of towns numbering 25,000 or more in population that have only gas for illumination—while small villages nearby are supplied with electricity. The influence of corporations in controlling lighting monopolies over there seems to be too potent to give motion pictures a fair chance. In communities where they may be shown, pictures are immensely popular, says Mr. Johnson, and the French are willing and eager to pay good prices for that class of entertainment.

In numerous towns of one to two thousand populations, according to Sergeant Johnson, the natives have never seen a moving picture. The Y. M. C. A. service gave to thousands of Frenchmen their first look at a moving picture while the soldiers were being entertained.

Careless Projection Prevails.

In Paris, among the largest cinemas, Mr. Johnson particularly noticed poor projection and insufficient lighting of the screen. In houses where large and skillful orchestras are employed and where the best pictures in Paris are shown, the projection was wretched and permitted but a meagre idea of what pictures properly handled might develop as satisfying entertainment Ninety per cent. of the pictures shown on French screens are American products, projected through foreign machines.

"It was like old times in America to visit the shows over there," said Sergeant Johnson. Bells ring to attract the crowd and dingy unsightly rooms are used for theatres. There was a great deal of the Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross picture equipment available for purchase, but the French showmen would not buy it. They are satisfied with old-fashioned and inadequate outfitting for their theatres.

There should be a great field for Delco lighting systems—if the French could be induced to buy them. Acetylene gas outfits are in general use now. Hundreds of towns are laying wide open for picture exhibitions—if the electric lighting could be available. Unlike France, the German territory occupied by the A. E. F. is remarkably favored with enterprise and advance methods in comparison to Belgium and France," concluded Mr. Johnson.

Famous Players Receive Numerous Indorsements of their Open Booking Plan from Exhibitors

THAT the majority of exhibitors throughout the country enthusiastically approve of selective booking and the production plans embodied in the recent trade paper announcements of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is the conclusion which Walter E. Greene, vice-president in charge of distribution for that organization, draws from the countless letters and telegrams during the past few days.

"With few exceptions—in fact, so few as to be almost negligible," said Mr. Greene, "exhibitors everywhere are seizing the opportunity to let us know that they are with us heart and soul in our plan for better pictures, booked on the basis of their individual merits. In the first place, we decided upon the new policy only after many months of most thoughtful consideration. When we unfolded it to the members of our sales force it was approved by them with absolute unanimity. Now the final jury is passing upon it, and in such a manner as to convince not only us, but the entire industry, that we are on firm ground."

Queries Sent to Showmen.

Shortly after its announcement of its plans for the year 1919-20, Famous Players sent out queries to hundreds of representative exhibitors, large and small, operating under widely divergent conditions as to location and clientele. Many of the messages received were entirely spontaneous, antedating the receipt of the query, and practically all have evidenced a thorough understanding of the proposition and an appreciation of its benefits.

Managing Director Ellison, of the Rialto and Princess Theatres, Denver, lost no time in signing first-run contracts for the first two Paramount-Artcraft September releases, and in so doing stated that he believed the selective booking plan to be the greatest step forward in the history of the motion picture industry.

Those Who Have Indorsed Plan.

Similar indorsements have been received from hundreds of other exhibitors, among whom may be mentioned Ruben and Finkelstein, Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minnesota; McCarthy Brothers, who operate theatres in Aberdeen and Watertown, South Dakota, and Fargo and Duluth, Minnesota; Tom Furniss, Rex Theatre, W. Abrahamson, Savoy Theatre, Duluth; C. M. Waterbury, Lyric, Palace and Rex Theatres, Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin; H. C. Miner, Princess, Nemec and Miner Theatres, St. Cloud, Minnesota; Phil Reisman, Dale Theatre, St. Paul, and Rialto Theatre, Minneapolis; E. U. Carter, Garden, Venus, Ohio, and Palace Theatres, St. Paul; C. L. Graham, Forest and De Luxe Theatres, St. Paul; H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theatre, Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

An Excellent Source of Information for Censors

Here is part of an interview our Rochester (N. Y.) Representative had with Curtis W. Barker, deputy commissioner of public safety. His chief is R. Andrew Hamilton, and censorship of films in Rochester rests in their hands.

"Your boss seems to have the right dope," said the World man to Mr. Barker.

"Come over to the office and I'll show you where we get our dope," said Mr. Barker.

In due course the World man breezed into the City Hall and found Mr. Barker safely anchored in a comfortable looking chair deeply engrossed in a perusal of the Moving Picture World.

"We read this carefully and get much wisdom therefrom," said Mr. Barker.

The city of Rochester subscribes to Moving Picture World for the benefit of its censor and his assistants and it is the only film trade publication for which the city subscribes.

"We looked them all over and decided that Moving Picture World was the best," said Mr. Barker.

Universal Wants to Hear of Funny Doings in Army

STORIES from which comedies may be produced are as hard to get as stories for five-reel productions. Now that the returned soldiers are settled and resuming their usual avocations they will no doubt think of many comical and humorous events and experiences that they saw or were in during their life in the service.

Universal wants to hear of these events and invites every soldier in the land to submit a story telling of the funniest thing he saw or took part in during the time he was in service.

These incidents, or at least many of them, Universal believes should make good short comedies. The complete details leading up to the event are wanted in the story.

All such stories are to be mailed to the office of the general manager Universal Film Company, 1600 Broadway, New York, and if the story is accepted it will be paid for according to value.

Start Work on Clara Kimball Young Film—First of the Series to Be Distributed by Equity Pictures

FOLLOWING last week's announcement of the organization of the Equity Pictures Corporation for the purpose of distributing the four special productions which Clara Kimball Young will make during the next twelve months, word comes from the Coast that the work of making the first picture, "Eyes of Youth," has been actively begun.

Miss Young and her associates will work in the Harry Garson studios in Los Angeles, where Albert Parker, chosen as director for "Eyes of Youth," has been for some weeks making preliminary arrangements for the beginning of the work. Mr. Parker, it will be recalled, directed Douglas Fairbanks in "The Knickerbocker Buckaroo," one of his recent and most successful Artcraft releases.

Actors Start Work.

William Courtleigh, Vincent Serrano, Edmund Lowe, and Gareth Hughes, who are among the principals that will support Miss Young, left New York for the Coast some days ago and are already at work.

The release of "Eyes of Youth" is expected about the middle of October, and while the production is to be unusual in every respect the advance preparation which has been made will make rapid, good, and economical production possible. The play was purchased a number of months ago and there has been lots of time for preparing the screen version, with the result that the director and his numerous assistants have all had ample opportunity to fix firmly in their minds just how the story is to be handled. Mr. Parker's trip to the Coast in advance of Miss Young was for the purpose of preparing the studio sets and arranging for the necessary locations.

Distributing Office Active.

Activities at the offices of the Equity Pictures Corporation in the Aeolian Building, New York, indicate that Herbert K. Somborn and Joseph I. Schnitzer, respectively president and treasurer of the recently organized distributing company, mean to have everything in readiness for the efficient distribution of the first release when it reaches their hands. Announcement of the connections the company is making from day to day is expected in the near future.

Gives 21 Days First Runs to Robertson-Cole Films

THE Waldorf Theatre, Akron, which has long been noted for its promotion feats, has added to its unusual list. Recently this first run house began issuing a twelve-page booklet, which is a combination advertising proposition and memorandum book. Eight pages are devoted to heralding forthcoming attractions, and four to blank pages on which notations may be made. The booklet can be slipped into the vest pocket without feeling bulky.

Virtually all of the June issue was devoted to advertising Robertson-Cole features distributed by Exhibitors' Mutual. "The Man Who Turned White," the first Superior Picture starring H. B. Warner, played the Waldorf the third week in June, marking its initial appearance in Ohio; Bessie Barriscale, in "Josselyn's Wife," was also accorded a week's run; Billie Rhodes, in "The Love Call," ran the first four days in June, and William Desmond, in "The Mints of Hell," the following three days.

Robertson-Cole features were thereby accorded twenty-one days' first run bookings in a theatre that shows only the finest attractions, holding the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise for Akron.

There is one thing the management of the Waldorf Theatre does. It invites criticisms of stars and pictures, and really acts upon them.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation Inaugurates Nationwide Billboard Advertising Campaign

SOME morning in the near future, America will wake up to find the names of Goldwyn, Eminent Authors, and the Goldwyn stars on twenty four sheet bilboards in every available location in the United States. For some time past, the Goldwyn organization has been considering the advisability of instituting a national advertising campaign to supplement its many other publicity ads for the benefit of exhibitors.

When the new campaign opens, no district in the country will be left uncovered. From New York to San Francisco, from Buffalo to New Orleans, billboards advertising the merits of Goldwayn and Eminent Authors' pictures, as well as the individual excellence of their stars will tell the story of this organization to everyone who reads.

Seven Types of Posters.

Seven different types of posters have been made, and at the moment, these are being distributed to every section of the country to be ready for the big day on which Goldwyn will blazon forth on the billboards of the nation. This is in keeping with the national publicity campaign recently instituted by Goldwyn.

In making of the seven different poster designs no expense has been spared to produce the best results obtainable. A staff of artists has been engaged to lay out new designs, thus giving assurance of a continuous change in poster material.

Mary Miles Minter Host to Belgian Military Mission

MARY MILES MINTER played hostess to a distinguished party of guests at her home on Fifth avenue, New York, Wednesday night when she entertained the heads of the Belgian Military Mission to the United States at dinner, followed by a party at the Midnight Whirl at the Century Grove. The event was declared to be highly successful in every particular.

The guests included General Leon Osterreith, head of the Military Mission, foremost soldier of Belgium, who has been decorated by King Albert seventeen times for valor in battle. The general is here preparing for the coming of King Albert to America in the fall. He is a Knight of the Order of Leopold II and a Knight of the Crown, the two highest honors a Belgian can win. Lieutenant William Van Goethem, one of the youngest and handsomest officers in the Belgian army, who has also been decorated, was also in the party. The lieutenant was selected personally by King Albert to be personal aide, diaison officer and guide for President Wilson during the latter's tour of Belgium, and arrived in American a few days ago. The third member of the party was William Augustus Whitely, American attache to the Belgian Mission.

After dinner the entire party attended the performance of the "Midnight Whirl" at the Century Grove, where the officers and their many decorations and the beauty of Miss Minter attracted unusual attention.

SUNDAY SHOWING AIRED IN INDIANA

Jury Cannot Agree on Exhibitor's Culpability —Church Has Mass Meeting—One Arrest Made

PICTURE theatres will probably be operated on Sunday at Hartford City, Ind., in the future as a result of the action of a jury in the Blackford county circuit court July 6, in the case of F. D. Walters, proprietor of a theatre, who was arrested a few weeks ago on a charge of desecrating the Sabbath by operating the theatre on that day.

Jury Cannot Decide.

The twelve jurors, before the case was tried, were evenly divided from the start, and were unable to reach a verdict after twenty-four hours of deliberation. They were later discharged by Judge Gordon and state officials announced that no further action would be taken. The case was first filed in a justice of the peace court, but later was dismissed by the state when a jury was found to be unsatisfactory to both sides.

During the recent trial counsel for Walters asserted that members of the Hartford City Ministerial Association, said to have been responsible for the prosecution, attempted to influence some of the jurymen by shaking hands with them as they were on their way to dinner during a recess.

Church Opposition in Bluffton.

As a result of the action at Hartford City, it was believed by residents of Bluffton, a town in the same judicial circuit, that the theatres there would begin the operation of Sunday shows, but it is understood that the exhibitors later agreed not to open their theatres on Sunday.

A mass meeting of church people was held at the Reformed Church, Sunday night, July 6, and a committee was appointed to draw up by-laws for a law enforcement organization to be known as "The Good Citizens' League of Wells County." The original purpose of the league was to back the authorities in fighting the Sunday show question, but an understanding was reached later by which the exhibitors are said to have agreed not to open their shows on that day.

Arrest Made at Marion.

George Spurr, treasurer of the Mutual Theatre Company, which operates theatres at Marion, Ind., was arrested Sunday, July 6, on a charge of desecrating the Sabbath when he attempted to open up the Indiana picture theatre. Spurr sold one ticket, it was said, and then the police placed him under arrest. He waived a preliminary hearing in the city court Monday afternoon and appealed his case to the Grant county circuit court.

The case is of more than ordinary interest because it is believed it marks the beginning of an aggressive effort on the part of Marion theatre owners to operate their places on Sundays.

Director Jack Conway Is Back with Metro Pictures

HAVING fully recovered from an illness which has kept him away from pictorial circles for the best part of a year, Jack Conway, one of the foremost of the younger motion picture directors, has returned to the megaphone and Kleigs of the studio.

It was about a year ago that Mr. Conway felt the need of an indefinite vacation from the life of a director. As soon as he has declared himself again fit, Screen Classics, Inc., engaged him to direct one of the earliest of its forthcoming thirty-six big screen versions of stage successes, "Lombardi, Ltd."

Atlanta Censors' Action Gives Publicity to Film

THE Fulton County Superior Court of Georgia provided the most phenomenal advertising matter in the history of that state when Judge George L. Bell issued a written opinion overruling the mandates of the local Censorship Board and the Trustees of the Carnegie Library in the case of the distributors of a motion picture attraction booked to appear at the Atlanta Theatre.

Popular comment started in Atlanta when it was announced that the local censor board had placed a ban on "Auction of Souls," starring Aurora Mardiganian, and of which First National Exhibitors' Circuit is distributor. Then followed announcement that the First National circuit of Virginia had sought an injunction in the Superior Court of Fulton County restraining the Board of Review and Board of Trustees of Carnegie Library from interfering with the showing of "Auction of Souls," as scheduled.

The biggest stir was created on June 28, when a copy of Judge Bell's opinion featured a half-page advertisement announcing that the film would be shown during the week, at the Atlanta Theatre. The opinion was headed by a seven column streamer—"Supreme Court Lifts Ban." Double column news stories announced Judge Bell's decision in favor of the production.

Two Architects Added to Personnel of Screen Classics to Help with New Policy

ADDITIONS to its technical and art staffs and further enlargement of its studio facilities in Hollywood have been made by Screen Classics, Inc., as the company's newly announced policy of "fewer, bigger and better" pictures beginning with September 1 is getting under way.

Expansion of the art and technical department of his big organization was recognized by Maxwell Karger, director general of Screen Classics, Inc., productions, as an immediate need of primary importance.

Mr. Karger consulted with Edward J. Shulter, supervising technical director, and they decided to put applicants for new positions on the staff through a rigorous test of efficiency. It resulted in the selection of Homer I. Mesick and John K. Holden, both architects with years of motion picture experience.

Design Sets from Visualization.

In conducting the test each of the two dozen applicants was handed a manuscript scenario, instructed to read it carefully and then design three or four sets as he visualized them from the script. He was then to furnish the sets in character with the personalities of those who were supposed to occupy them. Mr. Mesick, Mr. Holden and two others were the only ones successful to pass the test.

As the forthcoming screen versions of great stage successes will be made on a most elaborate scale, work has been started at the Screen Classics, Inc., studios, upon an additional two-story building to accommodate the enlarged casting and wardrobe departments and to permit of a dozen or more large dressing rooms besides the fifty already in use at the studios by stars and supporting players.

A parking shed housing twenty-five automobiles has been constructed against the west fence of the main lot. All the space has been alloted to executives, stars and a few others of the organization.

A "Corner" in the Money Market.
This unusual situation is lifted from Rex Beach's Alaskan story for Goldwyn, "The Girl from Outside."

Weeks to Consult with Hampton.

Charles A. Weeks, treasurer of Great Authors Pictures, Inc., and Zane Grey Pictures, Inc., went to Los Angeles last week to consult with Benjamin B. Hampton on several important matters in connection with the exploitation of the second Great Authors and Zane Grey pictures. He will be absent from his desk at 547 Fifth avenue two or three weeks.

The new pictures for these two organizations are "The Sagebrusher," Emerson Hough's popular novel for Great Authors, and for Zane Grey Pictures that author's newest novel, "The Desert of Wheat." Work on both these productions is well under way on the Coast.

Wide Exploitation on "Auction of Souls" Results in Big Business for Michigan Showman

PROVING that the populace of Bay City, Mich., would rather attend a motion picture performance than patronize a score of warm-weather remedies, James H. Rutherford, manager of the Bijou Theatre of that city launched an advertising campaign that will go down in Bay City's theatrical history.

Mr. Rutherford started his advertising in exploitation of "Auction of Souls," starring Aurora Mardiganian, and of which First National Exhibitors' Circuit is the official distributor, by getting control of every bit of available billboard and window display space in the city and environs. Three days before the opening he started his newspaper advertising. This increased in size until the showing of the attraction.

Uses Big Space in Dailies.

Disregarding exploitation precedent in Bay City, Mr. Rutherford kept his advertising during the exploitation in newspapers at a larger space than ever before in the history of his theatre. This, he maintains, is the outward sign of an exhibitor's continued faith in his show.

"'Auction of Souls' was one of the biggest successes I have ever played at the Bijou," Mr. Rutherford said. "My only regret is that after I gave it such a wonderful exploitation I was not able to reap the full harvest of what I had paid for because the picture was only booked for a three-day stay. After the newspapers appeared with their favorable reviews of the production, audiences increased immensely. In fact, the audiences were larger toward the end of the showing than they were at the beginning of the run of the picture.

"But it's all in the exploitation. This alone can beat hot weather. Advertise your show right and the general public will prefer it to any source of amusement."

Real Courtroom Scene Used in Gilbert Parker Picture

THAT Sunset Pictures Corporation officials and Director Frank Powell left nothing undone to make "You Never Know Your Luck" stand out in realism is attested by the appearance of several prominent Texas jurists and state and county officials in three important scenes of the Sir Gilbert Parker story, starring House Peters.

This W. W. Hodkinson release was filmed for the most part at the Sunset plant on the outskirts of San Antonio With work on the exteriors completed, the director began preparations for the big courtroom scene, one of the outstanding features in the production.

Accompanied by the director, the Sunset official called on Judge William Anderson at the 37th District Court. It required but little persuasion on Mr. Webster's part to obtain the necessary permit. Here Mr. Powell took a hand and smilingly remarked to Mr. Webster: "Wouldn't Judge Anderson make an imposing screen jurist?" And, as Mr. Powell tells it, "the judge never waited to be asked and, not only consented to act himself, but promised to get every court, county and state official within reach to take part."

Also present at Judge Anderson's request were County Judge James R. Davis, Sheriff John W. Tobin, County Attorney T. S. Newton, County Clerk F. R. Newton, District Attorney D. A. McAskill and his assistant, W. S. Anthony, all of whom, including Judge Anderson, gave up an afternoon of fishing to appear in the production.

Row with Atlanta Censor Helps Jacksonville Show

IN Atlanta, not far from Jacksonville, "Auction of Souls," starring Aurora Mardiganian, of which First National Exhibitors' Circuit is the official distributor, meant a priceless free-publicity wrangle with the local censor board in which the Supreme Court of Georgia was involved.

The management of the Arcade in Jacksonville knew it. Atlanta papers are sold every day on the streets of Jacksonville.

And talk started. This was encouraged by the Arcade Theatre. Every usher, musician, ticket-taker and seller in the Arcade organization helped scatter the information broadcast over Jacksonville. The Arcade's word-to-mouth organization talked "Auction of Souls," in terms of how this attraction had been made a court issue in Atlanta, Ga.

No big newspaper ads were published. No bill posters were used. The system through which the Arcade manage circulated news about his forthcoming attraction was purely a personal one, prompted mostly by the desires of all employes of the Arcade Theatre to ameliorate their respective positions.

Herbert Miles Heads Moving Picture Expedition to Labrador; to Make Scenic and Educational Films

A LARGE party of picture men and scientists left a week ago on the yacht "Carmen," bound for Labrador. The party is headed by Herbert Miles, of Miles Brothers, of New York.

The place is of such great interest that Mr. Miles expects to bring back with him at least 20,000 feet of scenic and educational film.

The party is equipped with all the latest modern inventions that will enable them to secure the best of picture results. So far as history goes, they will make visits to places that have only been visited by three expeditions of white people since exploring began.

The expedition is not without great dangers. Besides having to contend with wild animals, they will also have to put up with long and dangerous portages across snow covered land that holds death in its hand.

When the party was last heard from, they telegraphed from Newfoundland that they have not been able to operate their wireless, which had gone wrong before they sailed. It was also mentioned that they have been able to secure the services of the required lumberjacks, who will help them in the perilous journey.

Places to Be Visited.

Among the prominent places that will be visited by the expedition will be the famous Musk Rat Falls and the Great Grand Falls which are much larger than our own Niagara Falls.

Among those included in the party going as far as Hamilton Bay, Labrador, are J. B. Seaman, Colonel W. B. Chantland, Stanley Arthur, Dr. W. P. Colvin, Frank Milham, Jack Young, and Herbert Miles.

The party expects to return in about six weeks, bringing a goodly bag of film for educational and scenic short subjects.

ROBERTSON-COLE PROGRESS OUTLINED

Starting with "Cannibals" Film Six Months Ago Company Has Placed Thirty Pictures on Market

THE past six months have been noticeable for the rapid rise in the domestic field of Robertson-Cole. A resume of the activities of this organization, which half a year ago entered the field, was issued this week. It called attention to the progressive nature of this firm's career.

It was in January that Robertson-Cole's first contribution appeared on the film market. Martin Johnson's, "Cannibals of the South Seas," which has proved one of the most successful features, was the picture which launched Robertson-Cole into the domestic film field. Several years of increasing success in the exporting trade was back of the Robertson-Cole movement in the United States.

Has Produced Thirty Films.

Since the issuance of Johnson's feature, Robertson-Cole has placed thirty productions before the public with Exhibitors Mutual as its distributing agency.

Sessue Hayakawa has appeared in four up to June; Bessie Barriscale in five; William Desmond in five; Billie Rhodes in five; H. B. Walthall in three; Alma Rubens in one, and H. B. Warner in one. Then there are the specials, "What Every Woman Wants," featuring Grace Darmond, and "The Turn in the Road," with an all star cast. Another Brentwood production, "Better Times" was also issued in the six months' period. Beatriz Michelena appeared in "Just Squaw," a western drama.

H. B. Warner Revived.

H. B. Warner was brought back to shadowland by Robertson-Cole in his first Superior Picture, "The Man Who Turned White." Superior Pictures were inaugurated by Robertson-Cole to establish a class of productions that could be rated as "specials" in every sense of that brow-beaten word. The success of the experiment is left to the judgment of the exhibitors who played this film.

One month after the release of "Cannibals of the South Seas," Robertson-Cole productions were scarcely to be found in any first run houses.

Today, through the quality of the plays and intensified selling and exploitation, Robertson-Cole features are playing in a host of the foremost first run theatres in every section of the country.

Sessue Hayakawa Popularized.

Hayakawa has come to be regarded as one of the foremost exponents of the silent art since becoming affiliated with Robertson-Cole. He has always been popular because of his ability to act intelligently and with fervor, but since joining the Robertson-Cole constellation, his following has nearly doubled. His features are now playing in 4,000 theatres in the United States alone.

Bessie Barriscale has come back with a punch. She has made pictures under her own management that have been surpassed by few female stars. All of Miss Barriscale's films are clean, and well acted, with substantial settings and expert direction.

William Desmond has proved his merit with the comedy-drama type, and exhibitors are finding him one of their best attractions.

"What Every Woman Wants."

Few pictures issued since the first of the year have met with the success accorded "What Every Woman Wants." Two of these are "The Turn in the Road" and Johnson's "Cannibals."

"The Turn in the Road," a simple, human story, with no star, has been rebooked time and again by exhibitors, and in some towns it has been booked by an exhibitor after his rival around the corner had played it to capacity.

Robertson-Cole entered the motion picture industry with the intention of applying business principles where business methods were not always regarded with the kindest feeling. Results have proved the wisdom of this action. Robertson-Cole, it is recognized, stands well to the front in the alignment of big names in the country today.

Plans for the 1919-1920 campaign are now being formulated by Robertson-Cole, and will be announced in the late summer.

Los Angeles Showman Carries Out Atmosphere of "Mints of Hell" in Theatre Decorations

DRESSING up a theatre in the atmosphere of a motion picture production is an art that few managers possess, yet it adds materially to exploitation value to any film drama. Anything that resembles snow is always a welcome sight in the summer, and with a snow picture as the attraction any manager should be capable of arranging an attractive setting for his lobby.

Clune's Theatre in Los Angeles, recently did unusual business with the Robertson-Cole feature, "The Mints of Hell," which is distributed by Exhibitors Mutual, not alone because of the popularity of William Desmond, the star, but through its exceptional lobby display.

Put Up Frosted Cardboards.

The production is essentially a "snow" picture, being laid in the Yukon, and containing some big blizzard scenes. Clune's carried a good part of the atmosphere to the lobby, making it not only attractive but invitingly cool.

Inside and outside of the lobby the manager had frosted cardboard to imitate icicles, while from the ceiling he ran hundreds of pieces of cotton on black threads to resemble a snow storm.

Cotton to represent snow was piled over the cashier's booth while here and there were hung snow shoes. All about the lobby were scenes from the play with the emphasis on the "snow stuff." The money spent on this display was insignificant, but the returns were marked.

Write Song "The White Heather."

"The White Heather," the Paramount-Artcraft Special produced by Maurice Tourneur, is the latest release of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to have a special song written around it. This is published by the McKinley Music Company, of 145 West Forty-fifth street, New York, and 1501 East Fifty-fifth street, Chicago, with words by Charles S. Snyder and music by Alfred L. Haase and J. Fred Coots.

The McKinley company has supplied a full line of accessories which will be furnished free.

Viola Dana's "Don't-get-wet" Bathing Suit Christened with Real Water in Starting "Please Get Married"

VIOLA DANA splashed right into "Please Get Married," the successful stage farce that is to be Miss Dana's first starring vehicle for Screen Classics, Inc., under its new "fewer, bigger and better pictures" policy. The splash was literal, but unintentional. It was the first time on record that a not-meant-to-be-wet swimming creation was not only dampened but soaked.

The scene was the fresh-water marble swimming pool that is set like a jewel in the elaborate sunken gardens at the Long Beach, Cal., home of John J. Haggarty, Los Angeles millionaire. Gay colors dotted the terraced lawns where guests sipped cooling drinks, and a long sweep of foaming surf, beyond which a white sail flashed, pounded on the shore of a few yards away.

Canoe Capsizes.

The first day on this location, used by special permission to Screen Classics, Inc., Miss Dana, in her don't-go-near-the-water creation danced gaily in the animated picture and greeted the girls and men who were disporting in the swimming pool. Miss Dana was not supposed to get wet, Director John Ince had carefully informed her. She was supposed, however, to negotiate a voyage of some ten feet in a very small canoe that bobbed on the surface of the water.

In this juvenile boat she was safely seated, and thrust off, when alas!—she waved to a friend and the craft upset. There was a splash, a gurgle, and up bobbed a much-moistened star.

The production just started by Miss Dana is a screen version prepared by Finnis Fox from the original Morosco stage success, "Please Get Married," which was from the pens of James Cullen and Lewis Allen Browne.

Miss Dana has the role of Muriel Ashley, the demure little bride whose honeymoon is so rudely and so often interrupted.

Welfare League of Sing Sing Makes Gift to Zukor

AS a token of appreciation of the many courtesies extended to the Mutual Welfare League of Sing Sing prison by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, President Adolph Zukor has received from the League a handsome hand-engrossed copy of his recent statement to exhibitors in connection with the announcement of the selective booking plan of the corporation.

The engrossed copy, which is the work of one of the members of the League, was done in ink on heavy white bristol board of full size. A succession of white circles on solid black background, in which are repeated the words "Paramount Artcraft Pictures Famous Players-Lasky Corporation," each circle containing one word, forms the border. Each line of the text is underlined in black ink, and each separate word further underlined with two lines of gold.

New System of Distributing Goldwyn Films Involves Elimination of Release Date

THE new system whereby every Goldwyn picture will be sold on the foundation of its own merit and with no other qualifying condition whatever will have as one of its essential features the elimination of all release dates. Pictures will be put out in groups arranged in that way and wherever possible that order will obtain in their release. The play is already in process of operation, although none of the great pictures which are to be sold under this arrangement will go on the public screen until after September 1.

A letter which has recently gone out to Goldwyn branches points out that each branch will have in its possession, prior to the commencement of the new system, not less than six subjects to show.

Debars Weak Productions.

It is clear from the letters which are coming to Goldwyn officers that exhibitors who have been reached by the new announcement understand fully the relationship of the new plan to the quality of the product. The new system was worked out to automatically debar any weak production of motion pictures. It forces every picture when it leaves the studios to go out on the market and face the world and demand its attention entirely on the basis of what it can offer in the way of story quality, star quality, director quality and production quality.

Will Create Longer Runs.

One of the important results of the distributing plan will be a demand for longer runs not only in large cities, but in small cities all over the country. The Goldwyn company was one of the first to realize that one of the chief elements in the progress of the motion picture industry would be the creation of pictures great enough to hold more than the momentary attention which was won by pictures as they have been produced in many instances in the past.

Clubmen Give Picture Show Despite Board of Selectmen

It seems that the Board of Selectmen have refused to grant the Nantucket Athletic Club a license to show moving pictures. This angered the clubmen, and they went ahead and held a show just the same. Then they advertised they were going to have more shows, and that they would have the "better class of pictures." This last thrust was considered as a rap at a member of the Board of Selectmen, who is alleged to hold the only motion picture license on the island.

Members of the athletic club declare that they will carry the fight into the next town meeting and that the chief issue in the next election campaign will be motion pictures in Nantucket.

It is a far cry from the "nickelodeon" to the first class theatre of the present day. The view to the left demonstrates that. The booth in its perfect cleanliness look more like an operating room in a hospital where everything must be clean and always right.

GIVES VIEWS ON MATERIAL FOR SCREEN

General Manager Atkinson of Metro Says Popular Plays and Novels Form Best Matter for Pictures

GREAT stage successes and novels by well-known authors upon which time has stamped its seal of approval are the best material for motion pictures, in the opinion of W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation. Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro, shares Mr. Atkinson's conviction. This is one of the chief reasons why Metro decided, in pursuance of its new "fewer, bigger and better" pictures policy, that Screen Classics, Inc., productions to be distributed by the Metro organization should consist solely of picturizations of popular pieces of prose fiction and dramatic composition.

"The stage success and the famous novel possess invaluable qualifications as screen material," said Mr. Atkinson, discussing Metro's new plans. "In the first place they are the products of trained literary minds. The plots must be strong or they never would have survived to achieve recognition. The character drawings are true to life and strikingly done. They are works of art; a thing that, unfortunately, cannot always be said of the original screen story, which is not infrequently written in a hurry and designed to sell rather than to live as a finished work of the imagination.

Advertising Values Enormous.

"And of course the advertising values in an established stage success or a famous novel are enormous. Their renown is cumulative, so that the screen translation of the work receives the full tide of the popularity that the work has earned in its original form. It is sound logic to reason that the millions of persons who have read a great novel and the hundreds of thousands who have witnessed a triumph of the stage are eager to see it upon the screen. And if the picture production excels the story in its original form, there is added prestige and glory for the producer.

Have Filmed Many Plays and Novels.

"We are convinced that such picturizations are bound to arouse the keenest interest, and we have the exhibitor and his natural desire for big profits, equally as well as the artistic advancement of the motion picture industry in mind in our intention to produce screen versions of the thirty-six notable stage plays and novels to be made by Screen Classics, Inc., and distributed by Metro."

Mr. Atkinson pointed out that Metro has ever been a consistent advocate of the successful stage play and the successful novel as admirable screen material. Within the past twelve months, he recalled Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., have picturized a great number of world-famous plays and novels, as well as adaptations of notable short stories appearing in the most prominent American magazines.

Some of the Plays and Novels Bought.

Scheduled for first production among the thirty-six big stage and fiction works acquired by Screen Classics, Inc., are "Fair and Warmer," Avery Hopwood's farcical triumph, with May Allison; "Lombardi, Ltd.," by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, with a record run on the stage, starring Bert Lytell, and "Please Get Married," by James Cullen and Lewis Allen Browne, which just wound up a six-months run on Broadway, with Viola Dana as star of the picturization.

Metro will also distribute the new Nazimova production, starting on the Pacific coast, "The Native Born," from the novel by Miss I. A. R. Wylie. Miss Wylie is also the author of another popular novel acquired by Screen Classics, Inc., entitled "The Temple of Dawn."

Other productions to be made include James A. Herne's stage vehicle of a popularity of thirty years, "Shore Acres"; "The Willow Tree," "Yosemite," "The Yellow Dove," by George Gibbs; "The Right of Way," "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," "The Walk Offs," "Maison de Dance," "L'Homme de Riche" (The Rich Man); "The Hermit Doctor," Someone in the House," "The Heart of a Child," "The Brat," and "The Wholly Innocents."

Internal Revenue Bureau Gets After Tax Evaders

WITH the decision in the English-O'Brien case, in Boston, as a precedent, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has inaugurated an intensive campaign for the detection and punishment of persons and concerns who failed to render tax returns or who evaded the payment of part or all of the taxes due the Government. No quarter will be shown, no compromises will be accepted and the prosecution of tax-evaders will be pushed to the limit, it is declared. The only persons who will receive any consideration are those who innocently filed incorrect returns, or persons who attempted to evade the law who come forward with a confession and a correct report.

5,000 Men to Scour Country.

Within a few days, the Treasury Department will have not less than 5,000 thoroughly trained men scouring the country for persons who have not paid their taxes or only paid in part. For the first time in the history of the country, it is declared, a millionaire has been sent to jail for non-payment of taxes, and the same slogan of "without fear or favor" will be followed in the prosecution of others who may be detected in attempts to evade taxation.

Kept Two Sets of Books.

Business concerns especially will be subjected to scrutiny. It appears that, as in the English-O'Brien case, certain concerns throughout the country have been keeping two sets of books—one for themselves and one for the revenue inspectors. During the past two years, firms which formerly made but comparatively small profits have reaped a harvest through the war demand for the commodities in which they dealt.

In such cases there has been a temptation to falsify returns, the idea being that a return can be filed showing only a moderate increase in business, which, compared with previous returns, will appear to be a straightforward report. Messrs. English and O'Brien adopted that procedure and nearly saved a million dollars in taxes.

Rickard Confers with Hall.

Tex Rickard, promoter of the Willard-Dempsey contest, and interested with Frank G. Hall in the motion picture of the big sporting event, has arrived in New York, for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Hall on important details concerning the exhibition of the Willard-Dempsey pictures. Mr. Rickard is stopping at the Biltmore.

Manager of Olympic, Opening in December at Wichita Falls, Likes Exchangemen

LATEST in the chain of theatres owned by Dye Ford & Rogers, of Amarillo, Texas, is the Olympic, of Wichita Falls. This will be sixth in the list of those located at Plainview, Canyon and Amarillo. This theatre concern has been in the business for almost ten years. According to Ross D. Rogers, Dallas has "the best bunch of exchange managers in the United States." He says: "We consider them all our friends —endeavoring at all times to play the game square in every respect."

House Well Equipped.

The new house will cost $125,000. The seating capacity will be about 1,500, with a large balcony. The lobby will be equipped with rest rooms for men and women, and will be arranged with built-in frames for photographs. The front will be finished in white terra cotta. A concealed lighting system in the main auditorium will flood the house with any color of light without any fixtures being shown. Interior finish will be old rose and gold, with deep purple and gold hangings.

The house will have a modern ventilating and heating system. The operating room, twelve feet by eighteen feet long, will have the latest Powers machines, a rotary converter, and lavatory for the operator. It is hoped to have the house open by December.

In a letter to the World, Mr. Rogers says:

"The writer has been a subscriber for the Moving Picture World continuously now for nearly seven years. Of course we will want it for our Wichita Falls house too. Our Mr. H. S. Ford will have charge of the theatre there, and the writer, Ross D. Rogers, will have the active management of the two Amarillo houses and supervision of the Plainview and Conyon houses."

J. W. Kerrigan Invited To Be Hero of a Novel

J. WARREN KERRIGAN, hero of many stage and screen dramas, who has just completed "A White Man's Chance," first in his series of Robert Brunton productions for W. W. Hodkinson distribution, is to be a fiction hero, the central character of a novel by Marie Bjelke Petersen.

Miss Petersen, author of "The Captive Singer," and other books published in England, wrote to the film star from her literary retreat in the islands near Hobart, Tasmania, asking his permission to use him as the prototype of the hero in a novel she is now writing and that she be allowed to use his portrait as the picture of that hero in the front of the book.

Another idea was to have the other illustrations done in soft-focus photography with Mr. Kerrigan and other persons chosen to fit the types of the book, posing in character for them. Miss Petersen, in her letter, also requested a photograph of Mr. Kerrigan's leading woman, Lillian Walker.

Fox Buys "If I Were King."

Announcement is made at the offices of Fox Film Corporation, 130 West Forty-sixth street, that the world's screen rights to Justin Huntley McCarthy's romance, "If I Were King," have been purchased by William Fox as a starring vehicle for William Farnum. This drama ran for five years in the United States with E. H. Sothern as the star, and for a similar length of time in England with Herbert Beerbohm Tree. Arrangements for its production in picture form will begin at once.

Frisco's Picture Welfare Committee Holds Meeting

AT a recent meeting of the Motion Picture Welfare Committee of San Francisco three additional organizations joined this body and pledged their support to the plan to attract studios to that city, these being the Mission Merchants' Association, the Hotel Men's Association and the Transportation Club, making a total of twelve with a combined membership of several thousand business men.

Joseph A. Eliason, production advisor to the committee, and a Los Angeles producer, has left for the southern city to place the advantages of that city before location experts and directors as a first step in getting practical action on San Francisco's plan of getting its share of the producing business.

Louis R. Greenfield, of the Kahn & Greenfield Circuit, and vice-president of the United Picture Theatres of Northern California, attended the recent meeting of the committee and pledged the support of exhibitors in this part of the State.

Plans for the offering of practical help to producers desiring to locate there were discussed, and these will be gone into in detail at a general meeting to be called soon.

Hodkinson Managers Holding Nationwide Trade Showings of Stewart Edward White's "Westerners"

A GROUP of important pre-release presentations of Stewart Edward White's "The Westerners," the first Benjamin B. Hampton-Great Authors' production, will be announced as a result of special trade showings being held this week in thirty American cities. The Hodkinson managers at the thirty Pathe distribution centres covering the entire United States like a blanket have arranged invitation performances, and those held the early part of the week were characterized by the same enthusiasm for "The Westerners" that was shown by audiences at its premiere presentation in Los Angeles at the Kinema and Quinn's Rialto, where the production had two first runs.

Following its Los Angeles presentation no bookings were solicited or accepted on "The Westerners" until its producers and distributors could complete their showmanship and exploitation plans based upon its initial California showing. Distributors are beginning to see the values of early pre-release engagements which give their exploitation men the advantage of seeing actual showmanship and exploitation applied to a picture, and the Hodkinson organization expects to follow this policy with the majority of the big productions it releases.

The special exploitation men of the organization will be on the spot at pre-release engagements and there perfect and devise a complete campaign for a picture based upon actual exhibitor experience instead of a theoretical campaign.

"Only the Best Is Good Enough"

SO runs the slogan of the Royal Opera House, Port Hope, Ontario. To prove that Manager J. S. Smart, of the Royal, is consistent in every detail of theatre management here is a letter written by him under date of June 27:

"As I lost my copy of the Moving Picture World for June 7, I inclose 20 cents for another, and sincerely hope that you can supply it, for I would miss even one number many times a year when referring to my files for information.

"I might say that I have seen all the American trade papers, but there is only one for me and will be only one as long as its present high standard is maintained."

Silversmiths Anxious to Design Mut and Jeff Cup

MUTT and Jeff, Bud Fisher's mirth-making characters, are keeping the silversmiths busy these days. All because Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of Fox Film Corporation, began a big sales drive on Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons, and Bud Fisher, as sponsor for Mutt and Jeff, offered a silver loving cup to the salesman who would secure within a stated period the largest number of contracts in proportion to his territory.

Bud Fisher awarded the contract for the trophy to the Reed & Barton Company, and the other day the president of that concern sent the Fox company word that delivery of the trophy would be delayed a week. "The delay is caused," he said, "by the fact that the designers and engravers are in a bitter competition to see which will submit the design to be accepted. Mutt and Jeff are great popular favorites and all the designers are anxious for the honor."

One feature of the contest has especially appealed to salesmen working in territories less closely settled than others; this is that the final award will be based upon the amount of business produced in proportion to each salesman's territory, so that it will not necessarily be the one who captures the greatest number of new contracts that will carry off the cup, unless his percentage also is highest.

The result of this will be to make the contest entirely equitable; it gives the salesman in a sparsely settled district an equal chance with those in other thickly settled sections.

QUARTET OF FILM PLAYERS INCORPORATE

Lewis, Nilsson, Owen and Welch Combine to Form Company with Individual Directors

THE latest quartet of prominent players who have affiliated comprises Mitchell Lewis, impersonator of northwestern and French-Canadian types; Anna Q. Nilsson, recently seen in "Auction of Souls;" Seena Owen, one of D. W. Griffith's discoveries and the first leading woman for Douglas Fairbanks, and Niles Welch, prominent as a leading juvenile.

Each of the stars will head his and her own company, with individual directors. The four concerns were incorporated in Delaware recently. The Mitchell Lewis, Anna Nilsson, Seena Owen and Niles Welch Productions Company, Inc., will be general titles of the quartet, directors for which have not been announced.

Players' Film Records.

Mr. Lewis has played on the screen with the late Harold Lockwood and with Viola Dana, besides gaining prominence under the supervision of Edgar Lewis, "The Sign Invisible," "The Bar Sinister," "The Barrier," "Children of Banishment," "Jacques of the Silver North," and "The Gulf Between" are his best known vehicles. Mr. Welch has played in World, Universal, Pathe, Famous and Selznick photodramas. He made his debut in motion pictures in the Metro program, and was featured with Mary Miles Minter. He left the Metro to play leads for Mary Fuller and Violet Mesereau with the Universal and was also leading man for Kitty Gorden in "The Crucial Test." He recently completed the leading role with Pearl White in "The Blossom of the Bee" for Pathe.

Miss Nilsson a Veteran.

Miss Nilsson, though young, is a picture veteran. All older fans recall her in Kalem releases, and the newer generation with Famous Players, Goldwyn and Metro. Miss Owen made her first big hit with the Fine Arts Studio, playing leading roles in "The Lamb," with Douglas Fairbanks, "The Penitents" and "Martha's Vindication." Born of Danish parents in Spokane, Washington, her education began in the schools of that city, but was completed in Copenhagen. A trip to Los Angeles caused her to become a member of the moving picture colony.

Miss Owen always wanted to become a director, now at the head of her own company, her wish will be gratified. The biggest success achieved by Miss Owen was in Griffith's "Intolerance."

Vallie Belasco Martin Appears in Truex Comedy

VALLIE BELASCO MARTIN, who appears in support of Ernest Truex in his first two-reel comedy under the management of Amedee J. Van Beuren, is a demure little person, modestly effective and projects a personality of girlish charm, fresh, vivacious and individual.

Miss Martin was born in Milwaukee, being the daughter of the late Sam Martin, formerly past exalted ruler of the Milwaukee and Seattle lodges of Elks. When her father named little Vallie Belasco Martin after his cousin, David Belasco, he had no thought of the outcome of the act. The name had its effect, however, and when Vallie grew up she decided to become an actress.

Soon Came to New York.

She made her professional debut at the Little Theatre in Milwaukee. Then following this engagement she starred in an adventure film in Detroit, sponsored by a local newspaper. Later she played in stock in Seattle and Kansas City.

She soon decided to come to New York—Broadway—and visited her cousin, David Belasco, who decided musical comedy would be the proper sphere for her. Whereupon she was cast for the role of Elsie Darling in "Very Good Eddie," following this production with an appearance in "Watch Your Step." A vaudeville engagement in an original act of her own preceded her appearance in the Truex comedy.

"As a Man Thinks" Completes Second Week of Extended Run at the Garrick in Los Angeles

ONCE more Augustus Thomas' stage success "As a Man Thinks" is proving its power of appeal in its screen form, this time at the Garrick Theatre, Los Angeles, where the W. W. Hodkinson release has completed its second week of an extended run to heavy patronage.

The Garrick management had deferred the playing of "As a Man Thinks" because previously scheduled pictures left no opening for an uninterrupted run until July, when the house had four consecutive open weeks. The patronage of the first week gave promise of the success of this Harry Raver-Four Star production for its second and subsequent weeks.

In St. Paul the production had a continuous first run for ten days at the Blue Mouse Theatre; in Denver it broke the year's patronage records for A. G. Talbot at his America Theatre; in New Orleans it had a continuous eleven-day first run at the Globe, and received doubled playing time at all of the houses of the Saenger circuit; in San Antonio it enjoyed a continuous ten-day run at the Lytle House.

One of the New 10,000-Square-Foot Stages at Vitagraph's Western Studios.
Construction activities are being rushed in anticipation of the Vitagraph move from East to West for production in the fall.

Vitagraph Increases Size of Studios on West Coast

NOT only in anticipation of the increase in number of working companies that will come to the west coast studio in the fall, but also because of the top speed activity of present production, the Vitagraph Company is enlarging its western plant as rapidly as human effort can increase its size. Visible results of the recent visit of Albert E. Smith, president of the company, are seen in the army of carpenters, masons and mechanics in all branches of construction work that are working day and night erecting new stages, laboratories, cutting rooms, dressing rooms and garages that will furnish accommodations for twice the number of people now employed.

The need for more space is so urgent that sets are being put into place on the half finished stages and circus wagons used in the "Iron Test" serial are being utilized as dressing rooms pending the completion of the new quarters. The cutting room building that formerly was a single story building, is now a "double decker" and the upper story was in use before the roof was in place.

In the midst of this work of enlargement, a fire occurred at one of the oil wells near the plant and for several hours the western Vitagraphers were worried lest the blaze spread to the plant. Happily, however, it was finally extinguished and every one breathed easier.

LIBERTY OPENS DOORS IN FORT SCOTT

Recently Opened Kansan House Declared To Be Finest Locality—Has Been Building Some Time

WHAT is said to be the finest theatre in southeastern Kansas opened its doors July 1 at Fort Scott. The new house, known as the Liberty, opened with a photoplay, although it has contracts with the Klaw & Erlanger and Shubert theatrical syndicates. The owner is H. L. Stout, who has been endeavoring to complete alterations to his house on Main street for some months. War conditions, however, delayed alterations for some time.

Description of the House.

In a description of Fort Scott's latest amusement house a local journal says:

"As you enter, you find a spacious lobby, ample for those waiting to purchase tickets, in the center of which is the box office—three sides of glass. In this will be installed the latest automatic ticket vendor of National Cash Register manufacture.

"Flanking the ticket office are two flights of stairs leading to the lounge, which is on the mezzanine floor. This is one of the most attractive features of the playhouse. It is furnished in settees, chairs and tables of wicker, in Madieriense style. Here is a trysting place for friends, and for women awaiting their escorts. The management will keep this lounge open during the day for the convenience of shoppers.

Well Equipped Retiring Rooms.

"A retiring room for women and a smoking room for men open off the lounge, both furnished with every convenience, even to baths. A maid will be in attendance in the women's room during all performances.

"Divided stairs again lead up to the gallery, in the rear of which is the projection room. Here are the three modern Simplex projectors, and a $600 transformer.

Unobstructed View for Chairs.

"The most pleasing feature is that there are no posts to obstruct the view of the stage, so that each of the 900 persons who are provided for in the seating capacity has an uninterrupted view of the stage. Attention is next drawn to the lighting system, which is indirect throughout. A great convenience will be the hooded lights in the aisles, at the end of the rows of chairs, so that patrons may be seated during the run of a picture without stumbling over persons' feet.

"Two large fans, one six feet, the other four feet, in diameter, draw out the heated and vitiated air with such rapidity that the air of the whole house is changed completely every two minutes.

Has Stage for Spoken Plays.

"The stage's the thing! In the Liberty it has an opening of thirty-two by forty feet, and a floor space which will permit the production of road shows. The management has booked several big productions. Men and women actors have comfortable dressing rooms on opposite sides below the stage.

"One evidence of the modernness of the Liberty is the absence of the old-fashioned boxes. Instead the loge system is used, the loges fronting the gallery floor, with seats for sixty. The mural treatment is attractive throughout the building.

"In the basement is a soda grill."

At this grill, as was announced directly and on the screen the opening night, the women present were served ice cream gratis. Favors were distributed to the women.

A special program was given on the opening night which included speeches by leading citizens and a reception by some of Fort Scott's leading society women. George Beban in "Hearts of Men" was the feature film.

Detroit Police Remove Own Ban on "Auction of Souls"

REMOVING his own ban against further showings in Detroit of "Auction of Souls," starring Aurora Mardiganian, and of which First National Exhibitors' Circuit is the official distributor, Police Commissioner Dr. James W. Inches was cheered to the echo by 10,000 persons in Cadillac Square recently, when his announcement followed an appeal for Armenia by the star, Miss Mardiganian herself.

Police Commissioner Inches had ordered "Auction of Souls" removed from the screen after it had been shown as a pre-release for one week at the Washington Theatre in Detroit. His action was taken at a private presentation. He allowed the management one week's run to compensate them for part of their heavy advance advertising. In removing his own ban, the Commissioner expressed the wish that Miss Mardiganian and the picture starring her, remain in Detroit for an indefinite period.

Screen Star Rides in Pageant.

Aside from this honor paid Miss Mardiganian, she was asked to ride at the head of the Safety-First pageant which was a procession two-miles long. Seated in an automobile with Lieutenant James Anderson, special representative of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and Harry Scott, First National executive at Detroit, Miss Mardiganian was cheered during the entire parade.

The Police Commissioner further accommodated the management of the Washington Theatre by posting extra patrolmen to prevent throngs of Detroit people from blocking traffic. Several times it was necessary to order ticket sales stopped for short periods.

Montreal Methodists Decry Idea of Church Movies

A NUMBER of Methodist ministers of Montreal have come out in opposition to the decision of one hundred ministerial delegates at the Methodist Centenary Exposition at Columbus, Ohio, on July 9, to favor the use of moving pictures in the church. Rev. Mr. Whiting of the Dominion Methodist Church, Montreal, declared in an interview that he did not believe that pictures should replace the sermon at any time. They could not be used as a satisfactory substitute.

Rev. F. H. Sproule, of the Sherbrooke Street Methodist Church, has taken a more lenient view. He believes that pictures "of the better type" should be seen in the church and may even be substituted for the sermon.

Rev. T. E. Hollins, Westmount Methodist Church, has declared himself against pictures as a permanent institution of the church. Others declared that it would take a considerable amount of time before they could accustom themselves to the idea of seeing pictures [illegible] church.

HALL HAS PLANS FOR FALL CAMPAIGN

President of Independent Sales Intimates as to Changes in Store—Deplores Action of Ohio Censors

A PROGRAM of such elaborate dimensions for the Independent Sales Corporation, to be launched during the fall season of 1919, has been mapped out by Frank G. Hall and those associated with him that the incorporators of the concern are considering an expansion of office quarters to taking over an extra floor of the Leavitt Building, 126-130 West Forty-sixth street, or moving into a more commodious home.

Hitherto, the Independent, while promoting only first class productions of comedies and dramas, has confined its efforts to an exclusive, small range photoplay field which offered every opportunity of making an intensive study of the motion picture art as seen from a producer's standpoint.

Special attention has been given to the exhibitor whose observation and opinions concerning the wishes and desires of a diverse motion picture public, have led the Independent officers to the conclusion that something new in the way of film offerings must be placed upon the market if the picture industry is to maintain its present position.

Not Yet Ready to Reveal Plans.

"Although I am not in a position at present to give the public an outline of what my company proposes to do in the way of putting new life into the picture play industry, I can say with all candidness that the Independent is about to close a deal which will, in my opinion, add something of no little significance to the progressive trend of filmdom.

"One of the best known director-producers of the picture world came to me the other day with an idea, which although it will take thousands of dollars to exploit, will mean more to the field of screen work than any other single idea advanced since the six-reel feature was conceived," said Mr. Hall.

During the past two weeks Mr. Hall's time has been taken up with duties connected with the exploitation of the Willard-Dempsey prize-boxing exhibition film, which has been looked upon with disfavor by the Ohio State Board of Motion Picture Censors, but which, in the opinion of a large part of America's sport-loving public, should be allowed a state-wide showing.

Spectators of Fight Cannot See Film.

"The most curious and unique anomaly exists in connection with this picture in the opinion of many prominent sport writers of the country," said Mr. Hall. "The actual battle was allowed to take place on Ohio soil in one of the most thickly populated cities of the state, and yet the same people who viewed the spectacle and thousands of others who were unable to attend are prevented from seeing a motion picture review."

Unable to Explain Censor Stand.

Ray O. Archer, business manager and intimate friend of Jess Willard the defeated champion, who is now in New York, expressed himself as being entirely in the dark as to the attitude taken by the Ohio Board of Censors.

"I cannot understand their position," declared Mr. Archer. "Neither the federal nor the state law of Ohio contains any clause that carries the slightest intimation that a showing of the Willard-Dempsey pictures would be in violation of any statute. It is purely a matter of discretion with the Ohio censors, and for the life of me I cannot see why they refuse permission for a showing."

View of Beach Film Marks Opening of Goldwyn Branch

TO inaugurate the opening of Goldwyn's new Omaha branch office, Rex Beach's "The Crimson Gardenia" was shown at the Muse Theatre to every exhibitor in the district. Special invitations were sent out for a morning presentation of this photodrama, after which the guests were taken in automobiles to the new Goldwyn office and shown the novel arrangements which have been installed for expediting the handling of films.

They are distributed from a steel-lined room, which connects with a vault in which the reels are kept. Further down a corridor, the reel boys call for their posters and advertising material, while at another window, they receive star photographs and scene stills.

The business office is fitted up with mahogany desks and trimmings, with every convenience and time-saving device which a modern office affords.

Marjorie Daw Is Engaged for First Neilan Picture

MARJORIE DAW, who has been leading woman in a number of Douglas Fairbanks films as well as scoring heavily in important roles with the Famous Players-Lasky organization, has been engaged to play the principal part in "The Eternal Three," the inital production to be made by Marshall Neilan under his contract with the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

Although quite young in years, Miss Daw has an enviable record of successful and artistic interpretations.

She first attracted the attention of the picture public while appearing in films made under the direction of Cecil De Mille at the Lasky studio, and subsequently in support of Mary Pickford.

Miss Daw has appeared in many Fairbanks films during the past two years. She did striking work in the leading opposite roles of "He Comes Up Smiling," "Mr. Fixit," and "The Knickerbocker Buckaroo," and she is an important member of the cast of the Fairbanks picture now in the making.

Miss Daw's work in "The Eternal Three" will afford her the opportunity of doing the best work of her career. She has modestly expressed herself of the opinion that the part is worthy of the ability of an actress of greater experience than she possesses, but she feels that Marshall Neilan's direction will enable her to do justice to the role.

Florence Deshon Joins Goldwyn Repertory Company

FLORENCE DESHON, who is to be one of the members of the Goldwyn repertory company, has had the kind of life one reads about in books. Her mother was a gypsy, and her father was an English musician. She was born in Tacoma, Wash.

When she was still a young girl, just wearing long clothes and putting up her hair, she came on to New York, to go "on her own." Her first job was in an advertising agency. Perhaps being half gypsy makes it hard for one to work in a business office; Miss Deshon was fired.

Her first appearance on the legitimate stage was in "Jaffrey" by William J. Locke. Lawrence Trimble saw her in a play in London and was so impressed with her beauty that when he and Rex Beach were casting "The Auction Block" he demurred when Beach told him he had found a girl for the play. Then she came in—and of course it was the girl he had seen in London. That was Miss Deshon's first picture, but she has been in a number since.

Announce Cast for "Everywoman."

A large part of the cast for "Everywoman," the Paramount-Artcraft production which George Melford has started at the Lasky studio, has been chosen, among the players announced being Violet Heming as Everywoman, Wanda Hawley as Beauty, Mildred Reardon as Conscience, Bebe Daniels as Vice, Mary McIver as Youth, Margaret Loomis as Modesty, Irving Cummings as Passion, Theodore Roberts as Wealth, Raymond Hatton as Flattery and Noah Beery as Bluff.

Mutt and Jeff to Girdle the Globe.

Mutt and Jeff, the mirth-provoking characters made world-famous by Captain Bud Fisher, are to make a world tour for William Fox in behalf of their Animated Cartoons.

Captain Fisher is now in Paris, on the second step of a trip that will circle the earth. He will depict Mutt and Jeff in comic antics in each country he visits. Mutt and Jeff in London, Mutt and Jeff in Paris, and Mutt and Jeff in Ireland will be the first three of this Animated Cartoon series.

This around-the-world feature is expected to increase greatly the popularity of the Mutt and Jeff cartoons.

CHANGES ON UNIVERSAL'S PRESS STAFF

Rice Put in Charge of Exchange Publicity Men—Schneider to Write for Company in Indianapolis

IN keeping with the advancement of its productions and sales department, Universal has made some radical changes and promotions in its exploitation and publicity departments.

The latest addition to the New York home office staff is Harry Rice, publicity man for Universal's exchange in Chicago. Mr. Rice arrived in New York last week and began work in the New York office. He has been put in full charge of the exchange publicity men, who number twenty-five, and who exploit Universal pictures in every state in the country.

This in a way is a newly created position, the supervision of this work in the past having been carried out by the other members of the New York staff. Mr. Rice will begin plans to standardize the exchange publicity methods and advertising. Mr. Rice was a captain in the army and after receiving his discharge joined the Universal forces as publicity man for the Chicago exchange.

Dekruif Succeeds Rice.

George Dekruif, formerly with the Chicago Examiner and Chicago American and until recently sales promoter of the sign department of the Commonwealth-Edison Company, of Chicago, has been selected to succeed Mr. Rice at Chicago.

Another addition to Universal's outside staff was made last week when L. V. Schneider was made publicity man for the Indianapolis territory. Mr. Schneider has for a number of years been employed by the Indianapolis News.

Press Boxes for Special Pictures.

The entire exploitation department in the home office is composed of department heads, under the supervision of Tarkington Baker. John W. Krafft, former newspaper man, has charge of compiling and editing the Universal press books which are issued for each special attraction and Jewel production.

Prior to assuming charge of this work Mr. Krafft made an exhaustive study of the larger newspapers in the United States and has adapted the style to the press book, so that in the majority of cases newspaper editors can use word for word the publicity material on the picture which is receiving a showing in a local theatre.

With the exception of Mr. Rice and Fred Baer of the New York exchange, Mr. Baker's home office staff is a hoosier one. Miss Lee Reiner, formerly of Indianapolis, is in charge of Universal's still department.

Gulick Oldest in Point of Service.

Publicity material for trade papers is under the supervision of M. Lowell Cash, who is assistant director of publicity. Mr. Cash, also a former Indianapolis newspaper man, has charge of Universal's general information bureau and is the author of several articles on picture productions.

Oldest from the point of Universal association is Paul Gulick, editor-in-chief of the Universal Weekly. Mr. Gulick is the treasurer of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

Flinn Speaks at Meeting of Methodists at Columbus on "Motion Pictures and the Church"

AS the representative of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, John C. Flinn, director of publicity and advertising of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, on the afternoon of Tuesday, July 15, addressed 3,000 Methodists at the Centenary Celebration of American Methodist Missions, at Columbus, Ohio. The centenary has been in progress since June 20.

Dr. Christian F. Reisner, of New York, a pioneer in making use of the motion picture in connection with the church service and the foremost advocate of its general use in churches everywhere, was chairman of the meeting.

Mr. Flinn, whose subject was "Motion Pictures and the Church," on behalf of the National Association, pledged the support of the industry to the program of extension of pictures among the churches of America and foreign countries.

"A heavy responsibility rests upon those in this country who were in favor of national prohibition to provide a substitute better than the saloon for recreation purposes," said Mr. Flinn. "Moreover, it is evident from the keen interest manifested everywhere that this responsibility is well recognized and that the motion picture is looked upon as the wholesome medium by which this recreation may be supplied.

"It therefore follows that the church needs the motion picture far more than the motion picture needs the church.

"Whatever the denomination, the church need not look askance upon motion pictures, for in this country any institution which is supplying amusement daily to ten million people is right and sound fundamentally, as it could not be otherwise and fulfill its function."

It is certain that the prominence given motion pictures at the gathering will result in a big increase in the number of churches using them regularly.

Kley Back in California.

After about a month's absence in New York, Fred Kley, studio manager of the Lasky studio, Western plant of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has returned to take up the duties of his office.

"I am glad to be back again in California," remarked Mr. Kley, "despite the fact that I had a most enjoyable trip—my first visit East in a number of years.

"New York," he continued, "in fact all the East, is picturemad. Crowds that are astonishing flock to the cinema.

Mr. Kley was accompanied by Mrs. Kley.

Self-Contained.

THE self-contained program is not as numerous as it used to be for some reason, perhaps because fewer programs of any sort are now used, but the Holton theatres, the Pearce and People's, Port Arthur, Texas, uses a program front which is also the mailing face. The program is 6⅝ by 3¾, printed on stout paper. It encloses a four page on white news, which gives two pages to each house for the program with the days dated as shown in the second cut. This example was clipped from a left-hand page. So the box is on the right-hand pages the box is moved to the other side so as to run on the outside margin of the type page. The reproduction is slightly reduced, but the idea can be seen, and it is worthy of being followed, for it makes a neat arrangement. In a two-house program it might add to the effect to run three lines in the box, the top line naming the house at which the subject will be seen. It might be well to do this in all cases to get the mind to remember the house, day and date as one concrete fact.

Another Toronto.

Here is another display from the Strand, Toronto, employing the two house signatures shown recently, but in this case at the top and bottom of the display because of the difference in the argument. The space is a five elevens with the second half of the week getting the large share of the space, owing to the difference in the cuts. That portrait of Miss Dana suggests that she is a hunchback, and we do not think that it will help materially to sell the feature. We do not like that "in their most recent success" in the Roaring Road. It does not sound convincing, but suggests that the copy writer does not know anything more definite about the story. It is not so much that it is a bad line as that it is not a good one. A better would have read, "In the famous Saturday Evening Post story." No mention of the origin of the plot is made, yet it has a definite value even where the publication is not widely read. Apart from this it is a distinctly good display.

General Interest.

Lee Kugel, publicity man for World-Pictures is a trained press agent who can go over the road ahead of a show with the best of them, and he knows the value of general stuff as few house men seem to. Recently he planted a series of stories on the proposals June Elvidge had received in a string of 500 papers. There was not a line in the entire set about World-Pictures, and the stories were planted by a syndicate. They probably did the star more good than straight advertising stuff, and they certainly got a wider display. It is interest which counts, rather than the number of times a house or attraction is mentioned.

In Great Falls.

Great Falls. Mont., seems to need some advertising men. The two samples shown here offer about the best displays of the five theatres. That of the left, for the Palace, is a three sixteens. It hooks the play with the O. Henry story that it gives a good showing to the smaller features, but there is nothing in particular to make you want to see this particular program, not even the "A perfect picture." The cut comes out unusually well, but the cut alone cannot sell the story. On the right the Alcazar takes three fourteens for a display which is good, apart from the small lettering used for star and title. The name is a thirty point gothic and the title is in 36 point. It tells more about the story than any of the other displays, and probably has the stronger selling value. Apparently the week begins on Saturday instead of Sunday, for one of these displays refers to "last night's patrons" and the other says the show was "packed to the street yesterday," though the paper was printed on Sunday. The Imperial took a half page to advertise Mack Sennett's bathing girls, and another house takes four tens and wastes it by merely announcing Tom Mix and the play in which he appears, but the Sexton takes a three fulls and beyond the stars and title advertises only the cast. It is a good cast, but it should be possible to do more than this in sixty column inches, particularly where the attraction is a play really out of the ordinary. Even where the patrons are trained to come anyway it is better to try and sell to the stranger who may be in town, but only three out of the five offer any selling talk, and these three do not argue very strongly. It is a waste of space to buy inches and throw away on cuts and more white space than is needed.

Exceptionally Good.

The Varsity Theatre, Palo Alto, Calif., sends in a weekly card program that is exceptionally good. It is a French grey card 3½ by 5½, with the program for the week, side dated days and well printed, but what gives it the effect is the excellent choice of types. There is not a line of bold face on the card, and most of it is in eight and ten point, but it is one of the prettiest jobs we have seen in a long time. We will try to get a copy on white paper, so it can be reproduced. It is worth looking at.

Ruff Stuff.

Ralph Ruffner got the idea that he could clean up with The Roaring Road and proceeded to demonstrate that he could. The first thing he did was to get a hook-up with the automobile concerns for a double middle page, taking rather more than the usual share of the space himself. This hook-up has been used before for Shoes, What Every Woman Wants, Skinner's Dress Suit, and others, but it is as good as ever, if you have something that will work with the picture. This worked right into the automobile end and he got ten spaces besides his own display. His regular advertising was based on a cut sent by Paul Noble, of the Jensen and Von Herberg Portland theatres. He also used the cut of the girls, shown at the bottom. The display the fans. He had two big window displays in desirable locations, but the photographs did not show up well. He also built a big display on the house marquise. That to the left of the cut was an action picture while the other is a regular stand. The action picture had the car wheels rapidly revolving while a panorama on an endless belt streaked past to heighten the suggestion of motion. This attracted considerable attention, and no one went past the house on either side of the street who did not learn the title of the current attraction. A third window display was merely a giant tire in one of the auto stores, with large stills to back up the big shoe. They just happened to the rest. He put all of the girl ushers into overalls such as auto mechanics use, and lettered the costumes with the name of the supposed auto company. To avoid too great a reduction we show only half of the layout. The two newspaper cuts show the full detail. This picture was posed on the roof of the theatre, the letters being cut out of card, with real tires used between the two words. With a little touching up it made a far better layout than any drawn design could possibly have done. The girls wore the uniforms during the run, and smaller photographs were made of them in pairs and used as advance press work. Ruff figured that dressing up the ushers for the run would get him nowhere unless he advertised it beforehand, so the single stunt got him a half column in both papers, a good advertising cut and a house novelty. That's Ruff all over. He takes an idea and works all angles, instead of merely using the most obvious one.

Still Hooking Up.

Here is another Mickey hook-up, this time from Clifton Forge, Va., a town so small it can only afford a four page, five column paper daily, but they took a whole page. On the front page the paper announces that it did not come out the day before, owing to the illness of their linotype operator, and that the current issue is gotten out by a beginner, which possibly accounts for the poor composition, for the page is full of cross rules which chop the spaces up so that you have to study the page to make certain just where an advertisement ends. The Mickey promoters suggest a list of sixty items which can be hooked up with the play and the current display advertises Mickey sandwiches, ties, waists and sundaes. One of the banks uses "A picture you will never forget—Mickey. The bank you should always remember—Clifton Forge National Bank," which is going some for bank officials, who generally are poor advertisers. These hook-ups are always good if you do not try to spring them too often.

From Minneapolis.

L. A. Johnston sends in some Minneapolis displays. The two for the New Garrick are three thirteens. That on the right is badly lettered, and the design around the cut means nothing. Had the space within the circle been kept clear of design, the effect would have been better, but the face is obscured by the background. Advertising must be big and smashing to be effective. Here the dots are meaningless and confuse the eye.

A Double Page Display Based on The R oaring Road at the Rialto, Butte, Mont.

Without the splatter of dots the face could stand the background within the circle better, but as it is it does not strike the eye. The lettering is too fancy. The design on the left is better because the lettering is clearer and more easily read and the title is so displayed that it stands out. A better display is a double tens for The Probation Wife, set all in type, but we think that the use of a smaller cut to give a more prominent letter to the title would have been advisable. This would also have permitted the star to be drawn away from the house signature. As it stands the two fight each other and neither gets a proper display. The message is always more important than the attractor, and if the cut interferes with a proper display, it is well to reduce the cut. The Aster display is harsh because too formal. Cutting off with full rule is a bad plan, and a two thirds dash would have been better than the rule straight across.

Advertise.

Perhaps a big feature can sell itself, but you at least have to tell that you have the feature, and the more widely you advertise the larger your clean-up is likely to be. The more you pay for film, the more you should pay to advertise it. It doesn't pay to advertise a poor story. It doesn't pay not to advertise a good one to the limit of your powers.

Mickey Again.

Mickey seems to be perennial, and some of the holders of franchises announce that they are just getting ready to start in to boom things. Down in Texas the film played at the Hippodrome, Texas, for three weeks in a run to a total of 168 performances. Of course the phonograph hook-up was used and painted windows all over town helped along. The house spaces ran to quarter pages, as in the examples shown, and the song played its part. The cut shows a couple of the displays in four tens, rather heavy with type, but always with a big title which was sufficient by itself to keep the interest up, and the play is said to have broken all records at the Hulsey house. Probably New York is the only town where Mickey has not been played across the boards. Even in Chicago Mickey windows were plentiful, and in some sections there is a special circular on window displays which is sent direct to merchants in an effort to obtain hook ups.

K. C. B. (Bleich).

George Bleich has been K. C. B.-ing for Common Clay. It is no disgrace. Everyone from Rothapfel, down or up, has been using the short line stuff for some picture or other, and Mr. Bleich uses this in addition to a two inch strip across page. He does it well and probably attracted more attention than a full page would have done. This choppy, chatty style seems to drive home its points. He used this right through the run, changing copy each day, but sticking to the same general style and letting it ride on the strip. This text is from the second of the series:

Changed to Heralds.

The Third Street Theatre, Easton, Pa., seems to have changed from programs to heralds, or perhaps has added them. They are more properly throwaways except that they are more carefully prepared than the usual throwaway, and some of them are even in two colors. The one shown is printed in green, with

Griffith Offers a Substitute

We have asked for carbon stubs carrying 60 to 90 ampere craters. The response has been liberal, and I am now really sorry, for it is the only time in nine years that I've fooled you. It was not my fault, however. Here is a letter from Griffith which explains. Would suggest that you keep it with your lens chart for future reference. Griffith says:

Quotes Griffith's Letter.

"I see you are fishing for carbon stubs to gather data for extension of lens charts. Now I don't know that it will be good policy to extend the charts, based on crater diameter, beyond its present scope, at least as applied to D. C., because crater area, hence heat, increases very much more rapidly after .5" diameter has been reached. For instance: a circle .25 of an inch in diameter has an area of only .049 of a square inch, and a circle ⅜ of an inch in diameter has an area of .11 of a square inch, a difference of only .051 of a square inch. A circle .5" in diameter has an area of .196 sq. in., and a circle ⅜ of an inch in diameter an area of .3 sq. in., which is a difference of .104 sq. in., so that you see, allowing that each square centimeter of area gives off the same amount of heat, heat will increase very rapidly as crater diameter increases. This is, I believe, the reason why the chart apparently is not so effective on unusually small amperages. Another thing, I do not believe that it is advisable to reduce the distance from condenser to aperture less than the minimum established in the chart for 60 amperes D. C. (16 inches.—Ed.).

A Better Way.

In my opinion a better way would be to maintain the distance advised for 60 amperes D. C., and increase the focal length of the front condenser one inch for every additional 15 amperes, or fraction thereof. This proportion maintains the usual size spot, at the same time safeguarding the rear condenser lens from undue heat. It places the crater approximately .25 of an inch further from the lens for each additional 1" added to focal length of front condenser lens. It also reduces the waste between the condensers to some extent."

Limits Comment.

I am not going to comment on brother Griffith's letter except to say, (A) I don't think crater diameter increases as fast as he believes it does, and (B) regardless of that, his plan may be best, because it is, in my opinion, exceedingly important that distance from condenser to aperture be kept at maximum, and 16 inches seems to me to be as short as it ever ought to be.

A Few Crater Measurements.

I shall now give a few crater measurements, selected at random from the great mass of stubs sent in. Some of the letters accompanying the stubs will be published in due time.

Yonkers, N. Y. National cored ⅞ upper, used with ⅜ Silver tip at exactly 70 amperes D. C. (NOTE—First figures are width, second height of crater.) 7/16x11/16, ½x⅝, 7/16x⅝ full, 7/16 fullx11/16, 7/16x 11/16, 7/16x¾. In three of these stubs the core was eaten out a short distance below floor of crater, which acted to give a very deep crater, with a dark spot in its center. In one of the samples, this feature was very bad indeed. In only one of the stubs was the core space held level with the floor of the crater. If one may judge from appearance, these carbons were working pretty close to capacity at 70 amperes. Projectionist R. H. Edwards submitted the stubs. His letter will appear in the department later.

From Topeka Comes.

From Harry Anderson, Topeka, Kansas, comes the following: ⅜ stub, maker unknown, working at 72 amperes 60 cycle A. C., pencilled 1 inch back. Core very poor and practically no crater. Another stub, end cones off ¾", with flat crater 5/16" diameter. Core eaten away in cone shape 3/32 deep. Another ¾ stub working at 65 amperes shows practically same condition and same crater diameter, but core eaten away full size fully ⅛" deep. Maker of these carbons unknown. B. Steinhauser, Terre Haute, Indiana, sends following: Amperage exactly 73. National ⅞ cored, working with Silvertip ⅜. All craters quite flat, but not well defined. Cores all good. Carbons not working to capacity apparently. Craters much smaller than Yonkers samples, at three amperes more current. Same size carbons. Lower apparently has not quite enough advancement. Some craters a bit smaller than others, but average about 7/16x½ inch. And here is another lot of three, name of sender of which unfortunately is lost. Maker of carbons unknown. Size ¾. Sample No. 1, 80 ampere 60 volt arc, ½x¾. Crater deep, well defined and core eaten out in shallow cone shape. Sample No. 2, 75 ampere, 60 volt, and one of the prettiest craters I have looked at in quite some time. Core perfect. Size ½" scant, by 11/16. Third sample, 65 ampere, 55 volt. Also a beautiful crater. Practically perfect. Sorry I cannot show it to you. 7/16 full by ⅝ full. All ¾ carbons. Lethbridge, Alberta, sends in samples of stubs used at 80 amperes A. C. They are National ¾, presumably special white flame A. C. carbons. They all show perfect cores, and in all cases the end comes down from about ⅝ inch back to a well defined crater a bit more than .25 of an inch in diameter. Best A. C. craters I have seen in some time, though they seem to me a bit small for 80 amperes.

Samples from Rivoli.

Fred Stoefregan, New York City, sent in a big lot of samples from Rivoli Theatre, some of which show as follows: Speer ¾ at 88 to 95 amperes. Craters all very flat. Cores varying from perfect to eaten away in shallow cone shape. Lower could have more advancement with advantage. Carbons apparently working close to capacity. G. A. Stevens, Patterson, New Jersey, submits a box of stubs working under following conditions: Size one inch. Name of maker unknown. Amperage 90 to 100, at 70 to 90 volts at arc. Average size ½x¾. Craters mostly of good shape and well defined. Cores mostly perfect, though an occasional bad one appears. Unless I am in error, these stubs are Speer. I find what seems to be Speer metal coated lowers with them anyhow. Brother Stevens is projecting a seventeen-foot picture at 135 feet, and I imagine his projection lens has a working distance (back focus) of about five inches. I would recommend to him the close study of department May 3 issue. I believe it is quite possible that he may materially reduce his amperage and still get the same, or even a better result. Let him try brother Griffith's suggestion in first part of this article. I would like to know just how it works in his case. He would need 16 inches from center of condenser to aperture, a 6.5 lens next the arc, and a 9.5 in front, with not to exceed 1/16 of an anch between their apexes.

The stubs I have given data on are typical of many sent in. To public more measurements, etc., would serve no good purpose.

Important Notice

OWING to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Lens Charts for Framing.

The December 28 issue, containing the lens charts, was exhausted very quickly. The demand for lens charts was so great that we have had a limited number printed on heavy paper, size 11x17, for framing. Covers amperage 25 to 60 A. C. or D. C., and Plano-convex or meniscus bi-convex; also gives necessary projection lens diameter to avoid waste and distance of revolving shutter from aperture. Every progressive, up-to-date projectionist should have one. Price, 50 cents, postpaid, to any part of the world. Send U. S. 3-cent stamps or money order.

Handbook Put to Good Use

Says Milton O. Field, Lethbridge, Alberta:

"Here I am butting into the, or into 'our' department, rather, just to let you know that we are not all dead up this way. Quite the contrary, we are very much alive and getting along nicely. Am today ordering Optic Projection, which you recommended to brother Tom C. Smith recently. Have a book called General and Practical Optics, loaned me by a friend, which I believe is of more value to pro-jectionists and operators than any other work on the market today. It is published by Frederick Boger Publishing Company, New York City, and is by Lional Laurance. Am writing publisher today for price, and intend to have one. Have your latest handbook and have put it to such good use that I have been able to pass the best examination of any man in our fair city. Yes, there are others who have the handbook, but maybe I have studied mine a bit harder than they studied theirs. Am forwarding carbon stubs, as per your request."

Will see if I can get hold of a copy of General and Practical Optics. If so, will give you my views as to its applicability to projection, or its value to the projectionist, rather. I see you belong to the Calgary local. Well, that is a very live-wire local. I remember Lethbridge very well. Stopped there a cuppla hours between trains one morning, but not a theatre man could be found, so I absorbed a good breakfast and let it go at that.

Porch Climber a Gentleman—

The Howe Theatre Supply House, Portland, Maine, sends in a sample sprocket I wish you all might see. Its teeth are to all intents and purposes worn completely off. Perhaps there are three or four left with a height of as much as 1/32 of an inch and the thickness of writing paper. Many teeth are entirely gone. The Howe folks say:

"In a season's run we have some sorry looking mechanism sent to our office for repair. As an example we are sending lower sprocket from a Simplex. We consider this toothless sprocket as quite a curiosity, and wonder how the projectionist ever kept his lower loop at all. The other two sprockets of this machine were almost as bad. We feel that this crank turner has need of a Richardson handbook. What do you think about it?"

More Likely Manager Needs One.

It is more likely his manager needs one. I could not conceive of the most ingrowing solid-ivory-top projectionist using such a sprocket of his own free will. If for no other reason, he would want a new one to avoid the re-setting of his lower loop every fifty feet. No, it is the manager who is, I am sure, to blame. And beside a theatre mis-manager of this sort the porch-climber is a gentleman. This mis-manager not only is willing, in order to "save" the price of repairs, to butcher up the film belonging to another, but to rob his audiences as well. For it is nothing short of plain robbery to charge an admission to a show and then make it impossible to put up anything even faintly resembling a decent screen result. I doubt if a handbook would do such a man any good at all. The man who would do such a thing as this hasn't brains enough to appreciate or understand a handbook. He is a curse to the motion picture industry. I really feel sorry for those who patronize his "theatre."

Oh, yes, I know it is strong language. I am only sorry I am unable to really express my candid opinion of such work and not have the paper barred from the mails. Heaven hasten the day when the long suffering industry will be purged of such rank incompetence, in both the projection room and the theatre manager's office.

From Operator to Projectionist

F. E. Wright, Rock Island, Illinois, writes:

"Your address on projection, at the time of your visit to the Tri-Cities by the Father of Waters, certainly did make a wonderful difference in Moline and Rock Island. As I wish to graduate from 'Operator' to Projectionist, I enclose the sum of five dollars for the handbook, both sets of questions, and the lens chart for framing. I also wish to thank you and the department for what you have done for we poor 'grinders.' I also wish to sincerely thank brother John Griffith for giving us the benefit of his optical knowledge in such practical form. Tell him to keep up the good work. I will have a hot one for him, through the department, in about three weeks.

Why Not in Davenport?

So the lecture, or talk on projection, did good in Moline and Rock Island. Um, why not in Davenport also? Illinois is a grand old state, BUT Iowa, just across the line, is my own, my native hay-pile, and I'll bet the Davenport men are just as wide awake as the Moline and Rock Island boys. And be it known that the editor was impressed with the wide-awakedness of the whole bunch over there. As for thanking me, well, it does help to know that one's efforts and hard work are appreciated. There is nothing in all this world so entirely discouraging as to work and toil to accomplish something by which many are benefited, and to see no visible indication that those one is working to help care a tinker's damn. That, at least, thanks be, we have not been called upon to endure. By and large, the men, as a whole, have been appreciative, and that fact has helped us pull the load through many a mirey spot where, without the encouragement of you men, the inclination would have been to have uttered the time honored "Aw, what's the use," and have turned to easier paths. So you see, brother Wright, the "I thank you" is mutual. Will be on the lookout for the warm one for Griffith.

Says We're Not Quite Fair

R. E. Hitchins, Olive Hill, Kentucky, hands us the following jolt:

"Your article entitled 'Interesting Shutter Data,' March 29 issue, is not quite fair to the one-and-one-half-to-One shutter. You acknowledge its freedom from flicker, but say it is not economical as to light, its ratio of opening to blade being only 36.6 per cent.

"This 36.6 per cent. is not the ratio of opening to blade, but the percentage of the total light reaching the screen. The illustration of Simplex shutter tests shows the shutter named as having two main blades of 114 degrees each. This shutter was evidently designed for a machine having a very slow intermittent movement, as our Baird projector has a one and a half to one shutter, the two main blades of 104 degrees each, which allows 42 per cent. of the light to pass, and we can use a shutter with both blades .25 of an inch narrower than this without travel ghost. You will therefore see that the Baird standard shutter is just as economical in light as is the second design from the top, which gives 43 per cent.; also it is a whole lot better when flicker is considered."

Hit the Editorial Goat.

I guess you've hit the editorial goat a rap in the short ribs, neighbor Hitchins. Just what a one-and-a-half-to-one shutter with two 104 degree blades stands for in economy, frankly I don't know, nor do I know just how to figure it out. Also I have not time to dope the thing out now. That the one-and-a-half-to-one reduces flicker to its lowest denomination I have always held, but have never myself doped out its action as to light cutting. Seems to me that with two 104 degree blades it would amount to a three blade shutter having 104 degree blades and—um, nope, that won't work out because the item of increased speed must be reckoned with. You seem to have the thing all figured out. S'pose you tell us how it is done.

Explains "the Degrees."

And right here let me explain to those who don't understand the "degrees" thing, exactly what it means. A circle is divided into 360 degrees. Now, suppose you have a shutter ten inches in diameter, which would be, very roughly, 30 inches in circumference, and that it had two blades 104 degrees in width. The shutter being 30 inches around its outer edge, one degree would be 1/360th of 30 inches, which is .08333 of an inch, and 104 degrees would be .08333 x 104 = 8.66632 inches. In other words, a degree represents 1/360th of the circumference of any circle, and its width may be found in inches by dividing the circumference of the circle by 360.

A New Supply Company

B. F. Shearer, President and General Manager, Western Theatre Equipment Company, Billings, Montana, sends in a subscription, and says:

"The writer, who is an old I. A. man, and who has for three years past been with the Rialto Theatre Supply Company, Minneapolis, feeling that there was need for an up-to-date supply house located in this territory, has organized this company to that end. Billings has been selected as our base, since it is ideal, from the distribution point of view. We expect to serve Montana, Wyoming and Idaho; also we expect to give the best possible service, and to handle those things which experience has shown to be best adapted to the service they must perform. In accordance with your request for addresses of supply dealers, April 26 issue, we hand you ours, together with the best wishes for the department of both the company and myself personally."

Welcome to Our City.

Welcome to our city, brother Shearer. We wish you success, and if you stick to that "best service possible" stunt, you will succeed. Remember this, however, the very best advertisement any firm can possibly have (barring an ad in the Moving Picture World, of course) is a satisfied customer. As a business proposition it is, under any ordinary conditions, better to lose money on a deal rather than leave the man dissatisfied. A dissatisfied customer, even though he be himself at fault, can and usually will do a dealer more damage than the dealer could possibly lose by making him satisfied. I remember a case, not so long ago, where a dealer, a personal friend of the editor, wrote for a bit of information, and in course of the letter, described a deal he had on in which he had installed two projectors, and the projectionist (God save the mark) not being familiar with that particular machine, proceeded to raise merry sheol with both the mechanisms. The exhibitor promptly blamed the machines and demanded that they be replaced.

Now What Can One Do?

"Now, what can one do with a proposition of that kind?" asked the dealer. To which I replied: "Take my advice and supply him two new mechanisms. You can have the others put back into shape for ten or fifteen dollars at most. Pay express both ways and then explain to the exhibitor what you have already told him about his projectionist, and show the projectionist himself. You will thus lose maybe twenty dollars, but in the end it will pay you."

He took my advice, albeit with considerable doubt. Here is part of a letter from him which came last week: "Say, Old Man, you were right. That old hog up in ———— must have been ashamed of himself after the way I fixed him up. He is building a new 900 seat house over in ———— and has given me the order for everything, from seating and ventilation plant to projection equipment, and, so that there will be no trouble this time, has asked me to get him a chief projectionist. I am sending you herewith the price of a good hat. Wear it in remembrance of one who is converted, and who will remember that money is sometimes made, in business, by first losing money."

Of course, the case was a rather extraordinary one, and the loss of twenty dollars excessive, under the circumstances. Moreover, it might not have turned out so fortunately. But we maintain that in the long run that dealer who compels, if necessary, his customer to be thoroughly satisfied, is the one who will win out. Service is the thing.

Objective Diameter

Dr. Henry Phelps Gage, Optical Laboratory Corning Glass Works, and co-editor, with Professor Simon Henry Gage, of "Optic Projection," a book well and favorably known to projectionists, writes as follows. It is probably meant as a personal letter, but we feel that the profession at large should have the benefit of the views of so eminent an authority on optics as Dr. Gage, hence, first having asked permission from Dr. Gage, I am publishing it:

"Since returning to Corning, I have very carefully gone over the paper you read at the semi-annual meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, in Philadelphia, having particularly in mind some of the criticisms offered by Dr. Kellner. His main criticism seems to be directed at your conclusion that 'the projection lens should be redesigned in such way that no lens will have a back focus greater than two, or at most two and one-half inches.'

Advantage in Large Aperture.

"Both the experiments cited in your paper and those which I illustrated show that there is decided advantage in the use of an objective of large aperture with respect to equivalent focus, that is to say, in which the individual lenses are rather large, but I am not at all certain that an odd shape objective of say 6 inches equivalent focus would necessarily be highly efficient if so designed that one of its factors was within two inches of the film. This particular matter is one which will require much study and careful experiment before a definite conclusion and agreement as to its merits can be reached. Whatever Dr. Kellner's views upon the subject may be, I am convinced that the objective should be so designed and have lenses of sufficient diameter so that the bulk of the light which gets through the aperture will find its way through the lenses of the objective and reach the screen.

Dr. Kellner Suggests.

"In addition to expressing his views upon the objective design, Dr. Kellner suggested a number of changes in wording, such as the use of 'working distance' instead of 'back focus,' when the distance between rear lens of the objective and film is meant. It also seems to me desirable to substitute the term 'objective' for those various designations now in use, such as 'projection lens,' 'objective lens,' etc., for the reason that a projection objective is made up of a number of separate lenses held together in one mount, hence the 'lens' should not be used in this connection. Objective is quite sufficient, and shorter. Dr. Kellner also suggested the term 'light cone' or 'beam' when what is meant is the entire bundle of light proceeding from the condenser.

And Dr. Story Suggests.

"Dr. Story made the suggestion that instead of stating that the divergence beyond the aperture plate is exactly in proportion to the diameter of the condenser and its distance from the aperture, it would be better to say that the divergence is in proportion to the diameter of the condenser and inversely proportional to the distance from condenser to aperture. This is, in general, true, but strictly speaking, the proportion is not mathematically exact."

Increased Diameter Creates Difficulties.

I really feel a bit foolish in presuming to set my views up in contradiction to the views of such men as Dr. Kellner and Dr. Gage, yet I feel it my duty to even do that, if I feel there is good ground for believing them to be in error. If I am wrong, at least I am but voicing my earnest conviction, and doing so at the risk of having it later appear that my presumption was just that and nothing more.

Agrees with Dr. Gage.

With regard to large diameter objectives, I could heartily agree with Dr. Gage that increase in size would be highly desirable and an easy solution of the whole matter, but for two things, viz.: the fact that the objective must work in conjunction with a revolving shutter and increase in objective diameter sets up grave difficulties. These difficulties might or might not be eliminated if the revolving shutter could be located at the aerial image of the condenser. I am not certain as to this, but as projectors are now made and projection rooms are now built, it is almost impossible to always place the revolving shutter at the plane of the aerial image. This constitutes one objection to the use of large diameter objectives. The other objection is even more potent because large diameters make for lack of depth of sharpness of focus. In fact, in many theatres, as now planned, it would be impossible to use a large diameter objective. So much for that. As to the objective I have suggested, which shall have a short working distance (back focus) for all equivalent foci, I make no claim that it will be desirable under all conditions. Dr. Kellner tells us that the addition of a third factor would in itself involve a loss of 12 per cent., so there would only be gain under conditions where the ordinary objective would waste in excess of that amount, and except where it would be possible to view the two illumination values side by side on the same screen, the gain would have to be very decided in order to be apparent to the average person. However, a ten or twelve per cent. difference means a lot to the screen result and makes a decided difference when it comes to an actual photometer reading of the screen illumination.

Suggestion Regarding Names Is Excellent.

As to the suggestions regarding names, they are all of them excellent, and will be adopted by this department and used in the editor's handbooks for the future.

With regard to Dr. Kellner's views as to the best method of correcting the loss from the divergent ray between the aperture and objective, I have finally made up my mind, but will deal with that matter in another article presently.

They Are Quite Wobbly

F. W. Rinks, Springfield, Illinois, sends for lens chart and arises to say:

"Was reading your remarks concerning tight tension and wobbling reels, in recent issue. Oh, boy, you surely did hit 'em in this town! Give 'em merry hallelujah. I'm for you. You just ought to see them here, and I hope you succeed in waking some of them up."

Whatsthematter with you fellers down there, huh? You get those rewinders in line, slow 'em down, and use good reels for the projection room, even if the exchange manager hasn't brains enough to send his films out on good ones, or I'll come down there and slap you on the wrist again, real hard. But Springfield is not the only offender, not by several good long jumps!

Projection Room Equipment

R. H. Edwards, Yonkers, New York, accompanied a bunch of carbon stubs with a letter, part of which reads as follows:

"Here is my contribution of stubs. I was one of those who, upon reading the first request, thought you would get so many that mine would not be needed. . . . Will take opportunity to describe our projection room equipment. The 'our' includes brother Stradling. We both belong to local 453.

Describe Equipment.

We have two Powers' Six B projectors, equipped with automatic dowsers, change-over signals (home made) and Barlow Arc Regulators. Personally, I consider the latter are being the best and most simple of its tribe. We have a Hallberg double arc generator, this latter for use in case of emergency. The projection room is entirely green, including that part of the floors under the machines. Remainder of floor is covered with rubber. All ports are glass covered. We have fine ventilation and healthful conditions. To go into details would require too much space. Suffice to say we have everything we want, and are fortunate in having a 'boss' who says: 'If it will operate to improve screen results, get it.' If ever you have a bit of time to spare, both brother Stradling and myself will be delighted to have a visit from you."

Glad to Hear of Installation.

I am always glad to hear of an installation like this. Not only is the installation fine, but such equipment is invariably in the hands of progressive projectionists, because the "Oh-that's-good-enough" chap wouldn't bother to get it, or to keep it up if he had it; also a manager progressive enough to take the position yours does would have nothing but live, wide awake, progressive projectionists working for him. Will be glad to visit you if opportunity affords, but cannot promise. Thanks for the stubs.

Is Still Learning

Harry Henderson, Topeka, Kansas, sends in carbon stubs, and in course of accompanying letter, says:

"Dear Brother Richardson: I address you thus because I firmly believe you are one of us in every sense of the word. . . . I am not an expert, having only been following the business since 1901, and am still learning. For the love of Heaven, can't you get after those hole-punching misfit projectionists?"

It is a very hard thing to do. The exchange manager who has no more sense of decency than to punch identifying numbers in the body of his films, and the projectionist who has no more brains than to mutilate film with a punch, are hard to reach, because they can only be reached by me with argument, and to understand argument requires brains, and —there you are.

As to the "still learning," same here, brother. I have been in the profession quite some time myself, and am still learning. When a man gets so terribly wise that he stops trying to learn, right there he starts dying of what corresponds to dry rot in trees.

This will accommodate three one sheet posters level with the eye. Each of the plate glass doors has two locks.

YOUR LOBBY IS YOUR SHOW WINDOW

Make as Good Use of It as a Dealer in Hats, Shoes or Clothing Does of His Own Glass Front

WHEN a building is being fitted up for a retail dealer in hats, shoes or clothing the first detail to which attention is given is the arrangement of the show window display space, and as long as the establishment continues in business the proprietor makes a point of appealing to the passing public through this medium.

The clearest and largest possible sheets of plate glass, the costliest backgrounds of fine woods and draperies illuminated by artistic lighting systems are none too good to serve as settings for staple goods which every one must purchase from time to time and which could actually be sold without any display whatever. And yet display methods are so profitable to the retailer that it pays him to keep that window filled with costly samples whose exposure to the sunshine so lessens their value that after having served as a few day's attraction they are disposed of at a reduced price as shopworn goods.

The exhibitor is dealing solely in goods which appeal to the eye, which are not actual necessities of life and which must sell on the sole merit of appearance. To him the show window method of salesmanship is a thousand fold more important than to the retail merchant.

Must Be Brought Back.

The exhibitor's lobby is his show window, and should be built and laid out with a view to securing the maximum of display space in which to impress upon the passers-by the attractiveness of his screen showings.

And it is not sufficient to bring in an audience from the street. One must keep it coming back time after time by interesting it enough in future showings.

And the best way in which to accomplish this result is to have one's lobby so built that there is space for a dignified display of photo gelatines, posters and announcement cards so arranged that they give the impression of being part of the decorations instead of having been stuck up to cover a bad spot in the wall.

The reason why so many lobbies have this latter appearance is due to the fact that they were designed with a view to accommodating a certain number of mirrors, panels and other ornamentations, and the advertising display took what was left. Sometimes this residue of wall space is so limited that mirrors and panels are the only places for the display.

Look Ahead on Lobby.

The best way is to lay out the lobby walls with regard to poster sizes and utilize the remaining space for non-productive loveliness, which is more susceptible of varying dimensions than standard sized advertising matter.

It is better to build one's lobby around the display fixtures than to hang the display fixtures around the spare space of the lobby after the architect and decorator have done their worst.

And there is no use in saying that one cannot obtain display fixtures that are just as artistic and dignified as anything in paneling and mirrors that the decorator can supply.

Just to make good on the above statement here are a few of the designs which may be obtained in finishes to harmonize with different decorative schemes:

Illustration 1 is a combination wall rack which may be used to display either a three-sheet poster or photos in removable frames on a velour background. The frame measures four feet in width by seven feet nine inches in height, exclusive of the fancy top. The finish is in dull gold and brown, which harmonizes with almost any style of decoration.

Illustration 2 shows a narrower type of wall rack which provides a striking display for one announcement card and five 11x14 photogelatines on a rich velour background. The frame measures either two feet two inches or one foot nine inches in width, as the exhibitor's available space may require, by seven feet nine inches, exclusive of fancy top.

Attractive Utility.

This rack may be obtained in either copper and antique green or mahogany and antique green as desired.

Both of the above are fitted with plate glass fronts locked top and bottom.

Illustration 3 is a wall poster frame that will accommodate three one-sheet posters on a level with the eye. It is eight feet four inches wide and four feet nine inches high, exclusive of top, and has three plate glass doors, each with two locks.

Illustration 4 is a floor case finished in Empire style, the centre frame, which will accommodate a one-sheet poster, has a plate glass door with two locks and hinges. Each of the side panels will take four 11x14 photos, and has also specially constructed mats for use with 8x10 photos. A wooden easel with step ladder hinges allows the exhibitor to place this frame in any desired position.

Illustration 5 is a changeable banner which offers a means of showing the day's attractions in a dignified and attractive manner economically without defacing the front with oilcloth or paper signs.

With the assortment of letters and punctuation marks furnished with these banners it is possible to change the wording in a few minutes.

With the devices described and illustrated it is possible to utilize the display facilities of one's house to the greatest advantage not only in the lobby, but by taking advantage of that heretofore generally dead space as represented by the back wall of the interior on which specially lighted frames may be installed and which catch the eye of the patron while he is leaving the show.

In order that exhibitors may avail themselves to the utmost of both display space and ingenuity in laying out same, Menger, Ring and Weinstein, of 306 West Forty-Second street, New York, by whom the above devices are manufactured, have placed at the exhibitor's disposal the services of their traveling representatives who will visit picture theatres on request and suggest a plan of installation for advertising fixtures adapted to the facilities and requirements of each individual house.

Tom Moore Appears Next in Klein's "Heartsease"

TOM MOORE'S next Goodwyn picture, which will shortly be released for general distribution, is "Heartsease," from the play by the late Charles Klein. The character of Eric Temple presents him as a struggling composer, whose musical genius is about to be recognized when his opera is stolen and the fruits of his genius become the temporary property of an unscrupulous amateur society musician.

In the unfolding of the drama Eric Temple falls in love with the daughter of a titled Englishman, whose wife decides to become the patroness and, if she can, the secret "inspiration" of the charming, unknown musician. However, a scurrilous attack on her is printed in one of the London society scandal sheets, which precipitates a breach in the lady's household; and in the confusion which follows, Eric Temple's opera is sent in error by his patroness to his worst enemy, who has it produced as his own work.

Helene Chadwick, as the girl who discovers Temple, renounces him and finally clears his name, plays in her first Goldwyn picture. Her beauty, coupled with her long experience on the screen, present a worthy foil for Tom Moore's romantic characterization.

Doris Kenyon Begins Work on Vance's "The Band Box"

FOLLOWING the announcement of the formation of Deitrich-Beck, Inc., to produce a series of Louis Joseph Vance's well-known stories, with Doris Kenyon as the star, the producers have lost no time in beginning their first Keyon production, "The Bandbox." Theodore C. Deitrich and Arthur F. Beck, respectively, president and treasurer of this new organization, have gone to Lake Mohegan, New York, with Miss Kenyon, R. William Neill, the director, and members of the cast, and production is under way.

Upon completion of the scenes at Lake Mohegan the company and its executives will go to Jacksonville, where many of the scenes will be made.

While voyaging to the Florida city from New York several important scenes will be photographed aboard ship.

Ruth Roland Announces Cast for Serial.

Ruth Roland, Pathe serial star, announced the cast for "The Adventures of Ruth," her first picture by her own producing company, Ruth Roland Serials, Inc.

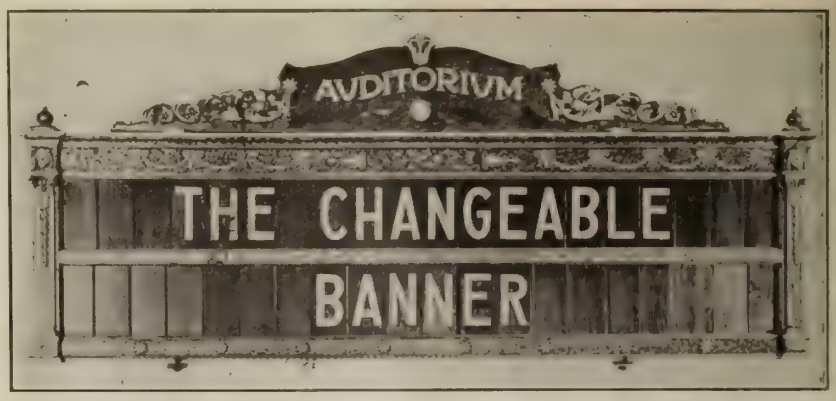
Heading the supporting cast as leading man is William Human, a popular juvenile.

Thomas G. Lingham, the heavy, has a stage career, including engagements with James O'Neill, E. H. Sothern and Robert Mantell. For many years he was associated with the Kalem Company.

Warwick Completes "In Mizzoura."

"In Mizzoura," the Paramount-Artcraft picturization of Augustus Thomas's play, in which Robert Warwick is starred, has been completed at the Lasky studio by Director Hugh Ford. Mr. Ford leaves shortly for New York, whence he will go to London to direct the first production for the newly organized Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

Warwick has already started work at the Lasky studio on his next Paramount-Artcraft picture, an adaptation of Anthony Hope's popular novel, "Captain Dieppe." The scenario was written by Elmer Harris and the production will be directed by James Cruze.



5: Changeable Banner.

With this device the day's attraction may be announced. The lettering may be changed at will with little expenditure of time or effort.

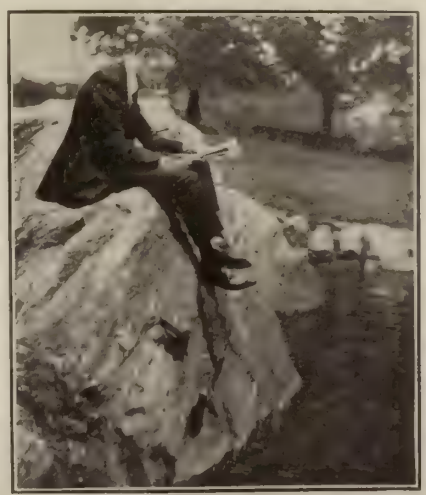
Will Visit Canada.

F. H. Richardson, editor of the Projection Department, will attend the convention of the Maritime Exhibitors this fall on behalf of the Moving Picture World. He will motor up through Maine and will stop over in such cities as desire it and lecture before projectionists on the optical system of the projector, the said lecture being illustrated by means of stereopticon slides.

Those desiring this visit will do well to communicate that fact as soon as possible.

Striking 24-Sheet for "Gamble" Serial.

The striking twenty-four-sheet stand for the Western Photoplays serial, "The Great Gamble," released on August 3 and co-starring Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison, shows one of the many thrilling stunts done by the screen daredevil, Hutchison, in the course of the story. He jumps from the wing of a speeding hydroplane seventy feet to the water below. Frederick Brown McDan, artist, designed the poster.



Octavus Roy Cohen.

Picks out a picturesque spot for the consideration of his script for his first Goldwyn picture.

William Hart Appears as Guide in Western Desert

WILLIAM S. HART'S new Artcraft picture, "Wagon Tracks," which is released July 27, is cited as another example of the genius of C. Gardner Sullivan, who has written many good stories which Thomas H. Ince has produced for the screen.

This picture embodies a tale of the old Santa Fe trail, about which clings a romantic and at times pathetic history. Great caravans making their arduous way across the plains toward the lands of fabled riches often met with disaster at the hands of the red marauders of the West, and the tracks left by the heavy wheels were for a time a silent reminder of lost hopes. Then they were covered by the sands and forgotten.

Hart appears as a guide of the wagon trains. His younger brother is murdered, and the sister of a gambler is believed to have shot him in defending herself against his advances. A henchman confesses that it was the gambler who really shot the brother.

Lambert Hillyer directed, and Mr. Hart's leading woman is Jane Novak. The gambler is played by Robert McKim. The production was supervised by Thomas H. Ince.

DeMille to Start Next Picture in August.

Cecil B. DeMille expects to complete "Male and Female," his new picture based upon the Sir J. M. Barrie play, "The Admirable Crichton," within a few days. About the middle of August, Mr. DeMille will begin work on "Why Change Your Wife?" which was written by William C. DeMille, and for which the cast will be announced in the near future.

Change Title of World Picture.

World Pictures has been compelled to change the working title of Montagu Love's feature, "The Mark of the Beast," because of the prior right of the title obtained by Princess Troubetskoy through her production made on Broadway two seasons ago. "The Battler" is the title selected for this release.

One is to be located in the northeastern section, while the other is to be located in the northwestern. The plans for the theatre in the northeastern section call for a house to measure 50 by 150 feet, located at Milton avenue and Hoffman street. The latest method of ventilation and cooling systems, as well as the finest projection possible, will be employed. The seating capacity will be 1,000, with room for 1,200. This playhouse will be conducted by a company operating several other large theatres in Baltimore.

BOOKING COMBINATIONS ARE POPULAR

Northwest Exchanges Favor the Arrangement Which Encourages Longer Consecutive Runs

THE buying power of exhibitors' combinations is beginning to be appreciated in Oregon, as is evidenced by the many circuits now in successful operation. One recently formed has C. G. Vaughn, of Kelso, Wash., and E. Hettum, Kalama, Wash., as the principals. These towns are close enough together to permit pictures purchased to be run on consecutive days.

Other successful booking combinations are the Globe Theatres Company, headed by C. F. Hill, which includes Albany, Medford, Grants Pass and Roseburg, all in Oregon; the Yacolt and Battleground theatres, in Washington; the Echo and Alhambra theatres and the Mutual and Home theatres, in Portland.

Portland exchanges are not opposed to these combinations, as might be supposed. It has been discovered that while smaller daily rental is paid for films, the consecutive runs are productive of more revenue from each picture, and in these days of somewhat limited production, exchange profits can be realized quicker by encouraging booking combinations.

BUFFALO IS STRONG FOR SUNDAY MOVIES

Chief of Police Higgins Indorses Them and the Best Citizens Attend Them While Theatres Multiply

BUFFALO is an excellent example of a city where Sunday motion pictures are permitted, where they are shown with profit to both the exhibitor and patron, and where disorder is a thing unknown. There are few of the approximately one hundred theatres in the city that do not enjoy capacity business on the Sabbath; in fact, this city seems to have designated the "movies" as the family recreation on this day. Sunday movies have the support of all the local newspapers, and some of the ministers have even gone so far as to declare from the pulpit that the films are the greatest agency in the country for the spread of the Americanization movement.

Buffalo's best citizens can be found in the Sunday movie audiences every week, and Chief of Police Higgins is on record as being greatly in favor of motion picture entertainment on Sunday.

"Queen" of the Movies.

Cities throughout the country that prohibit Sunday pictures need only look at the Queen City of the Lakes to see that the inhabitants gain real enjoyment and profit educationally from picture shows on the seventh day of the week. New York's recent law putting the proposition up to the communities was a wise move, but as far as Buffalo goes the community was in favor several years ago, and it is becoming more in favor each year as the pictures and theatres are improved.

This gaining popularity is one of the reasons for the large number of picture houses in the city and for the number of new houses projected, such as the $1,500,000 Shea Amusement Company Metropolitan and the $85,000 house being erected by the South Park Amusement Company on Triangle street, South Buffalo. Cities barring Sunday films don't know what they are missing.

Among Independent Producers

Conducted by C. S. SEWELL

Victor Kremer Reissues Three Series of Essanay's

ON August 4, Victor Kremer will reissue on the state rights market thirty of the pictures secured from Essanay. These will be issued in blocks of ten, there being ten of George Ade's Fables in Slang, ten Broncho Billy Western dramas and ten Snakeville comedies, with Slippery Slim, Sophie Clutts and Mustang Pete.

New prints have been made and the pictures re-edited. An excellent supply of advertising for these one-reel pictures has been prepared, there being one and three sheets in five colors, eleven by fourteen lobby displays in sepia, slides, press matter and other accessories for each subject.

Each of these series is distinctive and portrays a different phase of life. George Ade's Fables in Slang are unique. Both the titles and the action are full of humor and appeal because of the simplicity of style and the slang phraseology which is readily comprehended by all classes, and the humorous philosophy of life on which the stories are founded.

The Broncho Billy series deals with Western life in the early days, and is replete with dramatic incidents, rough riding and thrills, as well as wonderful Western scenery. The Snakeville comedies are slap-stick, and present amusing travesties on the village characters in small Western towns.

Mr. Kremer will late in August release a series of ten, five and six-reel features in one block, with release dates set one week apart. New prints and advertising material are now being prepared.

Jans Reports Big Business With "Unpardonable Sin"

HERMAN F. JANS, president of the New Jersey Rolfe Film Company, controlling the rights to "The Unpardonable Sin" for that state, announces that this picture has made an unusual record. It opened at the Broad Street Theatre, Newark, at dollar prices, and continues for thirty days.

Although Mr. Jans had considered two prints sufficient for the spring at least, it was necessary to order two additional prints, and four companies toured the state for three months. What was looked on as an excessive advertising appropriation was made, but the results justified it.

Convinced of the wisdom of extensive exploitation for big pictures, Mr. Jans has added a publicity department to his Metro Exchange which will release three big pictures monthly in his territory commencing September 1.

Many theatres have booked "The Unpardonable Sin" for fall dates, and during the week of July 7 it played simultaneously to big business at four theatres in Union Hill—the Fulton, Franklin, Rialto and Wilson.

Hirsh Gets Jersey Rights to "The Birth of a Race"

NATHAN HIRSH, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, announced he has closed the biggest deal since the formation of that company in securing rights to "The Birth of a Race" for New York and New Jersey, and bookings are now being arranged for these two states.

This is a spectacular production, several months being spent in filming it at a large cost, and an unusually large number of people are employed in a number of the scenes. It pictures the history of the human race, starting with the days of Adam and Eve, passing through several successive episodes in history and is brought down to the present time.

Mr. Hirsh considers this picture as the greatest box office attraction he has ever been able to offer exhibitors, and states it is an out of the ordinary picture built on a stupendous theme.

AFTER having completed one of the most successful trips ever made in the interest of a state rights feature, Bert Lubin, general sales manager of S-L Pictures, has returned to New York. On June 1, he left this city for the purpose of selling the S-L production, "Virtuous Men." His trip covered thirty states in which he came in contact with the leading buyers.

Bert Lubin.
Sales manager of S-L Pictures marketing "Virtuous Men."

Mr. Lubin has established what is claimed to be a record, as he disposed of twenty-five per cent. of the territory of the United States on this trip, including one sale which embraced thirteen states, or seventeen per cent. of the country. He credits the success of his trip to the box office value of the production, as indicated by showings in several large theatres, and to the very comprehensive exploitation campaign as outlined to the buyers.

During his trip, Mr. Lubin secured an abundance of information which will prove valuable to the S-L organization in handling their next production. Following a brief period in New York, he expects to leave on a three weeks' trip to close out the remaining nine states which are still open.

Burston on Way from West With "Mystery of 13" Print

LOUIS BURSTON reports that when the first print of "The Mystery of 13," Francis Ford serial, is shown for regular release in August all speed records for the filming and marketing of high-class serials will have been broken.

Before Mr. Burston left California for New York last winter the story, locations and title had been decided upon and the cast, with the exception of Ruth Maurice, Marc Fenton and Doris Dare, who joined the company when actual production was begun, selected.

Before many thousand feet had been filmed the advertising campaign was tentatively decided upon, so that when stills and reports arrived supplies could be ordered and consideration given to the business end of the production.

Mr. Burston's idea is that the only way to do a thing quickly is to know that you are right, be prepared for any emergency and then go ahead at top speed. He states as a result of this policy there was clear sailing ahead both for the Eastern and Western headquarters of Burston Films, Inc., and without sacrificing quality the picture was produced at a pace that kept everyone "pepped" up to the limit.

The Francis Ford Company, with Mr. Burston, numbers thirteen. However, notwithstanding the chances taken with stunt work, Mr. Ford reports that no serious accident has occurred.

Mr. Burston expects to arrive in New York soon with the prints, which have been shown on the West Coast and are said to have received high praise.

Franklyn Farnum Meets with Unusual Accident

JACK WEINBERG, president of the Canyon Pictures Corporation, announces receipt of a telegram from the studios in Los Angeles regarding an unusual accident which befell Franklyn Farnum, who has just completed his first Canyon picture, which has been titled "The Desert Rat."

An animal picture is being made in the same studio, and Mr. Farnum unknowingly went too close to a lion's cage which had been temporarily placed supposedly out of the way at one side of the studio. As a result, Mr. Farnum is bearing a painful though not serious wound on the arm inflicted by the animal. He expects, however, to be able to start work on his second picture within a few days.

Foreign Rights Sold on Two Pioneer Films

THE Pioneer Film Corporation reports great activity in disposing of rights on "Virtuous Sinners," starring Wanda Hawley, and "The Girl from Nowhere," with Cleo Madison and Wilfred Lucas. The entire foreign rights on these productions have just been disposed of. Already a number of important sections of this country have been sold, while negotiations are under way for the remainder, and the company hopes to establish a record by disposing of the entire rights within a short time.

Good reports are also being received on the territorial sales of the other Pioneer productions, "The Boomerang," with Henry B. Walthall; "Suspicion," and "The Sins of the Children."

Samuels of Southeastern Here to Secure Features

THE Southeastern Pictures Corporation, with headquarters in Atlanta, has opened a branch office in New Orleans, with Will T. Richards as manager, in order to better serve exhibitors in that section.

The company, of which A. Samuels is president and A. C. Bromberg vice-president and general manager, was organized only eight months ago, and during this period its growth has been very rapid. Operations are now carried on in North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee, and in all of these states it has built up a large clientele. Mr. Bromberg, the general manager, is one of the best known and most popular exchange men in the South, and a great proportion of the success of the company is due to his efforts.

President Samuels is now in New York making arrangements to secure rights to additional productions, and is making his headquarters at Arrow Film Corporation.

Illinois Rights to Sennett Film Sold.

Announcement is made by Sol Lesser of the sale to Elliott & Brockwell of the Illinois rights to "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," including the personal appearance of the Sennett bathing beauties headed by Alice Maison. One "Virtuous Men" Sale Covers Thirteen States

THE remarkable series of sales for "Virtuous Men" recorded by S-L Pictures during the past six weeks, was materially strengthened recently by the sale of rights to thirteen states in one block to T. E. Larson, of the Okla-Ark Attractions at Tulsa, Okla.

Territory secured by Mr. Larson includes Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. He has established a branch office in each State and formed a sales organization consisting of thirty road men headed by six district managers, and expects to announce the releasing conditions on this Ralph Ince production in the near future. Mr. Larson already controls extensive rights to "The Shepherd of the Hills," a picturization of the successful novel of the same title by Harold Bell Wright.

With the sale of this territory, Messrs. Sawyer & Lubin has outstripped their excellent sales record made with "The Warrior" some time ago. Within a period of eight weeks they have disposed of rights to forty states. Reports indicate that the production is meeting with great success and is being presented in many prominent theatres for runs of one or two weeks or more. Several of the purchasers have advised S-L that bookings have been secured on into September and October at very high rental prices, and the S-L executives are highly gratified at the success of this production, which marks their debut in the field of picture making.

Exclusive of New York, which is said is being withheld pending a late summer run on Broadway, all territory has been sold except Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, the Carolinas and eastern Pennsylvania.

Pioneer Advances Release of "Long Arm of Mannister"

PIONEER FILM CORPORATION announces that due to the usual activity of its state rights department it has been found necessary to place "The Long Arm of Mannister" on the market several weeks in advance of the date originally set for its exploitation.

This picture is described as an elaborate film version of the novel of the same name by E. Phillips Oppenheim, which ran serially in a prominent magazine and then through several editions in book form. It is the second of a series of Walthall specials being made by the National Film Corporation of America for Pioneer.

Helene Chadwick and Olive Ann Alcorn have the principal feminine roles. The cast also includes Hallam Cooley, William Clifford, Barney Furey and John Cossar. The story is a romantic narrative of the experiences of a rich man who is almost ruined by a band of financial sharks, in addition, his wife deserts him for another.

For two years he trails the pair and finally comes upon them on a desert during a sand storm. Learning the identity of the member of the band who played him false, he returns alone to civilization and arranges so that one by one the band are driven to death or dishonor. The story ends happily by his forgiving his erring wife.

The production was directed by Bertram Bracken, and it is announced that novel exploitation plans are being devised which will be put in full swing within a week.

"Stolen Orders" Is Sold for Western Pennsylvania

WILLIAM A. BRADY announces the sale of "Stolen Orders" for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to the Globe Film Attractions, of Pittsburgh.

In connection with the sale of this picture for western Pennsylvania and West Virginia the Globe Film Attractions expects shortly to inaugurate an extensive campaign of exploitation.

Many Territories Sold for Helen Holmes Serial

HELEN HOLMES' popularity with both state rights and foreign buyers was indicated recently when the S. L. K. Serial Corporation's office received a large number of telegrams, long distance 'phone calls and special delivery letters offering to purchase rights on the new serial in which Miss Holmes is working.

In one day seven offers were received for Washington, D. C., and contiguous territory, six for eastern Pennsylvania and six for western Pennsylvania, and considerable territory has been sold.

The new serial is being made at the E. K. Lincoln studios in Grantwood, N. J., and it is expected that the first three episodes will be ready next week. Donald Mackenzie, who is directing the production, is enthusiastic over the story, the nature of which is being withheld. It is announced, however, that it contains clean, wholesome romance interlinked with mystery and the kind of stunts for which Miss Holmes is well known.

Mr. McKenzie, as well as Mr. Krellberg, the producer, express themselves as being well satisfied with the results so far obtained, and declare that the entire fifteen reels will be just as thrilling and contain as strong climaxes.

"The Mystery of 13" Ad Causes Many Enquiries

THE film trade that deals in serial is still agog over the effect of the thirteen-page insert with which the veteran film exploiter, Louis Burston, initiated his advertising campaign in the Moving Picture World, last week, for the newest Burston serial, "The Mystery of 13."

With Francis Ford again the man of mystery, as he was in the introductory Burston-Ford serial, "The Silent Mystery," the new production is evoking the interest of speculative buyers, standard film men and exhibitors.

The appearance of the advertisement with its trick of making the number of pages used a symbol of the superstition the story is based upon proved a tocsin that started the wires of the country humming. The first twenty-four hours after the issue of the Burston announcement the Longacre Building offices of its promoter had recorded more than 140 inquiries, with more than 60 per cent. of the queries provisional offers for territory rights. The concession is general by the trade that the title chosen for the new serial is especially felicitous. Hitting as it does at a universal subject, the superstitious aversion to the number 13, the picture, even before a public showing, is fast riding into general trade interest. The idea of capitalizing in a film serial the centuries of superstition attached to the number 13, with memory of many of the infinite tragedies related to the symbol, is regarded generally as a fine stroke of acumen.

A statistician of different racial superstitions has discovered the psychic aversion to the cabalistic numeral existent in 119 distinct peoples of the world's infinite millions, covering a research of four centuries.

Rose Werner Goes to Coast

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation announces that Rose Werner, secretary to William L. Sherrill, president of the company, has on wire instructions from Mr. Sherrill proceeded to Los Angeles to take charge of the Frohman offices at the studios where the two-reel Texas Guinan and one-reel Mack Swain comedies are being made. It is expected that Miss Werner will remain on the Coast for several months at least until the new series now contemplated is finished.

As soon as Miss Werner reaches Los Angeles, Mr. Sherrill will return to New York to complete plans for the future productions to be made by this company.

Abramson Making "Someone Must Pay."

The latest Ivan Abramson picture, described as a social mystery drama and titled "Someone Must Pay," is nearing completion at the Talmadge studios, and it is expected will be ready for showing to the trade at an early date.

This production is being made for the Graphic Film Corporation, and prominent in the cast are Gail Kane, Edmund Breeze and Jackie Saunders, who Director Abramson announces were selected not only for the dramatic ability and drawing power, but as being the ideal types for the respective roles. The cast also includes Hugh Thompson, Jere Austin and Baby Dorothy Arnold. Camera work is by Jack Brown.

"Yankee Doodle" Winning in New York.

Announcement is made by Sol Lesser that the receipts for the third week's showing of "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," with the Mack Sennett bathing beauties appearing in person at the Broadway Theatre, New York, are running even higher than for the two previous weeks, and that the engagement may have to be extended.

Mr. Lesser is leaving for Chicago to arrange for a postponement of the opening scheduled to take place at the Zeigfeld Theatre in that city on July 29.

Canada Sold for "Masked Rider" Serial.

The Arrow Film Corporation has closed a deal with the General Film Company of Canada, T. S. Cooper, manager, for the Western serial, "The Masked Rider." Mr. Cooper will use ten prints and put on a big publicity campaign. Arrow has also sold to the Southeastern Pictures Corporation, of Atlanta, "The Mysterious Mr. Browning," for Louisiana and Mississippi, this company having already bought this subject for the other six states in their territory, and in addition rights to the Sunbeam comedies.

INTERNATIONAL SECTION JULY 26, 1919

Ante-Bellum Conditions in the East and Their Relation to Pictures

By J. B. SUTCLIFFE

MR. SUTCLIFFE, who has represented the Moving Picture World interests in England for some time, has had exceptional facilities for investigating actual moving picture conditions in a number of countries which have been closed to international commerce during the war which has just ended. He was aboard the first ship to pass up the Dardanelles after its four-year period of closure. He relates intimate facts in this article.—The Editor.

Now that the fate of the principal enemy country has been settled, and, by this time, let us hope, finally disposed of, the questions remaining to be dealt with by the international council at Versailles include the division of Turkey. Curiously enough, at the time of writing, the suggestion is being made that the city of Constantinople, the "Sublime Porte" in the language of those whose ecstasy of vision deprives them of their sense of smell, should become an international port under the administration, not as tradition or sentiment would suggest, of Greece, but as necessity and modern precaution demand, of a first class power, the United States of America.

Without sidetracking into the pros and cons of this problematical issue, a brief survey of the economic situation of Turkey before and during the war may not be without interest to the prospective exporter in the world's race for the commerce of these countries immediately shipping and trading conditions become normal. Previous to the war there were seven moving picture theatres in the entire country—three in Constantinople, two in Smyrna, one at Ismid, and one at Chanak.

British and American films were rarely, if ever, shown, an exhibitor at an establishment in the Grand Rue de Pera informed me, mainly on account of difficulty of supply and also—he accentuated this—the difficulty of obtaining credit. His establishment was supplied, in pre-war days, by a Frenchman, who brought the films with him, mostly Pathes, and took them away again along with his hire charges after each show. His case may be typical of the others, and if not, there is no shortage of evidence that the credit question has always been the barrier to trading with Turkey.

In the words of the farmer, the Turkish trader cannot carry corn, and his lords and masters, the effendis, the pashas, and the beys are lower in sense of moral and legal responsibility than he is. In the past, British capital in the millions has been invested in Ottoman undertakings, and its division and appropriation by a corrupt government, in the first place, set an example to private traders that made trading with John Turk from abroad uncertain and hazardous. So much for the old regime and a system of administration that will soon be as extinct as the prehistoric monster.

When the Hun seduced Turkey and Bulgaria into his beliefs, his dream of the conquest of the Far East was never brighter. Constantinople was his halfway house on the Berlin-Bagdad line, and in his conversion of Turkish institutions to the German idea, he converted the seven moving picture shows into seventy. Consequently, nearly every Turkish town of any size, during the progress of the war, made its introduction to the photoplay, all German of course, and for no other purpose than propaganda.

What happened to these moving picture mushrooms during the war is not of much interest now. I was aboard the first ship to pass up the Dardanelles after its four years of closure, and I visited one of these moving picture propaganda shows at Chanak, the port of the Dardanelles, on the day that the armistice with Germany was signed. It was left just as the Germans had quit, with full equipment, including piano. In the operating chamber were several cuttings from films.

One of these shows an imaginary list of British, French, Italian and Russian ships destroyed in the Dardanelles attack of 1915, and is typical of the propaganda dope served up to the Turks at that time. The town of Chanak, previous to the bombardment had an extensive population, but is now only a shadow of its former self. It reminds one of San Francisco, after the earthquake, yet in February of this year it managed to maintain two out of its original five moving picture exhibitions. I had only the opportunity of attending one, the Iperia. An old Keystone comedy was the feature, but the letterpress on all the films was "in the English language."

Constantinople and Smyrna Where English Is Favored.

From the beginning of the present year, the capital city of Turkey opened an additional three moving picture establishments, making a total of about a dozen altogether. This stimulus I attribute to the presence of the Allied troops rather than any increase in its humble trade activity. The best are situated in the European quarter of the town, Galata, just below the famous white tower, and were showing films obtained from Austria and Russia, and a few ancient Pathes and Eclair films obtained from Switzerland and Roumania.

The titles—those that had them—again were "in the English language." There is nothing to wonder at in this throughout Turkey, since the favored foreign language always was English. English language schools abound in Smyrna and Constantinople. Even Stamboul, the low quarter of the city and cradle of all its sedition, has its English tutors.

Commercial advantages perhaps weighed heaviest in the balance when the Turk decided what he should study besides his beloved Koran, and in its pursut he is immeasurably ahead of his immediate neighbors, the Greeks and inhabitants of the Balkan states. In confirmation I might mention that since the armistice, an English newspaper, The Eastern Spectator, edited by a Greek, Dr. Theodikas, has been published daily in Constantinople, not for the exclusive benefit of the English speaking residents either—Constantinople is hardly cool enough for the traveler yet.

Chanak, the Port of the Dardanelles, as it appeared before the bombardment. The white building below the arrow, one of the few remaining intact, is a well fitted moving picture theatre and shows "pictures in the English language."

Hope Held Out for the New Byzantium.

To conquer a country is one thing; to conquer a nation is another, and vastly more difficult. It is practically settled by the peace powers that no such country as Turkey shall in future exist, and to prophesy what will happen is treading precarious ground. A considerable proportion of the present population around the Golden Horn and along the Marmora coast is Armenian, a persecuted race befriended by the Allies, and particularly America, during the latter stages of the war.

The Armenians are Christians, and of a higher stamp than the Turk, both morally and physically. An Armenian operated a moving picture show at Ismid, the Turks' naval base. A disreputable looking shanty it was, but then he had no competition, and he said he liked his patrons to feel at home. He spoke excellent English, for which the British Commissioner appointed him an interpreter to our occupying forces, and he implored me to put him in touch with firms who would supply him with British and American films.

My answer to him is the advice I would give to any intending exporter in America or Britain to these parts. Sell nothing without a reliable guarantee of payment through trustworthy accredited agents on C. I. F. terms, and only then when the finances of the bankrupt state have been taken over by a reputed banking corporation.

The rate of exchange at Constantinople at the moment, is too insecure for any form of business. The piastre (normally 5 cents) wavers daily between fifty and seventy to the dollar; even the country's postage stamps are valueless outside its shores. Upon all this is a terrible shortage of food and all kinds of merchandise. The Teuton war vampire in his retreat from Turkey left nothing but a drained country.

And of the future? The hope of the new mandatory rulers of the sublime city of gilded domes, mosaic mosques, scintillating pinnacles, glittering minarets, and the vilest combination of street smells that ever assaulted human nostril must lie in the faith of the ability of the Armenian to make good. Given the chance I have no doubt of it. But for the time being the moving picture development of Turkey upon any extensive scale is a premature and hazardous undertaking. The picture theatres, with perhaps three or four exceptions, are hovels and would not rent as stables in the western world.

The Black Seaports—"Watch Your Step!"

Through the Bosporus and to the opposite shores of the Black Sea are many large and important ports that the termination of warfare promises fair to open up for commercial development. Odessa, Nicolief, Kief, and Sebastopol already possess moving picture exhibitions of a superior character to those in Turkey, but prospects of film trading in South Russia are about as remote as those in the North.

Odessa and adjoining towns are in the throes of violent Bolshevism. Food and clothing are procurable only by the wealthy, and the finances of the country are deplorable. Theatres and moving picture exhibitions are, however, the order of the day and are crowded to overflowing at every performance in face of the exorbitant admission charges. At Sebastopol, the Crimean harbor and town, standing room costs a ruble, and the films shown were Scandinavian and German—old stock of the Deutsche Mutoscope Company.

If film trading prospects are uncertain and risky in Turkey, they are positively dangerous save on philanthropic lines along the coast towns of South Russia. In the Near East are better, worthier and more deserving countries for the moving picture market which the perils of the Mediterranean during four years of war only temporarily stifled.

Glucksman to Buy for All Latin America

Max Glucksman, the well-known moving picture distributor, of South America, has recently decided to enlarge the scope of his business, according to advices received from Jacobo Glucksman, manager of the New York office of this firm.

In the future, Mr. Glucksman will buy for the whole of Latin America. Up to the present time his purchases have been limited to his own circuit, which comprises the following countries: Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

Mr. Glucksman has recently purchased the following productions: the new master mystery with Helen Holmes, in fifteen episodes, for Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia, Brazil and the West Indies; The Isle of Jewels, another fifteen-episode serial, for the whole of Latin-America; The Thirteenth Chair, the new special feature, which will soon be released in this market, also for all of Latin-America from Mexico down to Argentina; all the Metro pictures for his own circuit and Brazil; The Carter Case, for his own circuit, Brazil and the West Indies; and The Great Gamble, for his circuit and Brazil.

Reports from local export circles seem to indicate that a determined attempt will soon be made to introduce American pictures in Italy on a large scale.

The death of 141 persons, mostly women and children, burned alive in the fire of the Yaguez Theatre of Mayaguez, and the two-cent per foot tax on films imported into the country, has practically paralyzed the moving picture business throughout the island of Porto Rico.

Spain and Portugal, at last, have decieded to accept American moving pictures. It took a long time and a great deal of effort to convince the Iberians that good photoplays were produced in the United States. Over $500,000 worth of films were bought in New York by a single concern during the past six months for exploitation in the Peninsula. These purchases include selections of some of our best known brands and many popular features.

All the actresses and actors employed by the nascent moving picture industry of Argentina went on strike last month in regular labor style. They adopted "picketing" and all other methods of obtaining a hearing from the "bosses" in the most approved union fashion. According to reports, the smaller fry got practically all their demands granted, but the stars were left in the lurch.

The boom in the moving picture trade, and particularly in the export branch of it, cannot be better evidenced than by the wild speculation going on at the present time among the buyers for foreign markets. Many pictures could be mentioned that have changed hands three and four times before landing at the office of the ultimate distributor. Cases of buyers for this or that Latin-American country securing the rights on a picture for Scandinavia or Japan are not uncommon. This, of course, cannot last, but it shows the wonderful profits that are being derived from the business, which makes it possible to take all kinds of chances.

Be Wary of the New Markets

The lifting of the blockade opens a new era for American moving picture manufacturers and exporters. It will be an era of unprecedented prosperity and wild speculation that will make fortunes for the lucky ones and might break some of the more reckless operators. The export activities carried on from New York during the past two years will pale into insignificance before the intensive trading that is bound to follow the official conclusion of peace.

It is true that American pictures owe their popularity abroad to the war, but they have only been partially exploited and even in those countries where they are thoroughly intrenched, their development has been curtailed by the different restrictions brought about by the war.

Peace does not only mean the resumption of trade relations with Germany and her allies; it means the abolition of many hampering although necessary regulations and much red tape placed upon the film business while the fight was on.

It may not sound right to say that American pictures have not been properly exploited in Great Britain when it is considered that they practically dominate that market, but the fact is that the British motion picture business has not advanced during the war and its full possibilities are still to be revealed. Peace has radically changed conditions, however. The British market is moving forward at a very rapid gait. Hundreds of theatres are being built, new producing companies launched, new exchanges are established every week, and it will not take very long before the United Kingdom, as a moving picture field, will be twice as fruitful as it was during the war.

France, Italy and the other Allied countries were hit harder than Great Britain by the conflict, and their moving picture business has suffered accordingly.

Its development has also been hampered for similar reasons in all the neutral countries.

With the resumption of peace, there will doubtless follow a boom in the theatrical, moving picture and general amusement business throughout the world, and the American film exporters will face an ideal condition to extend their activities abroad.

A word of caution, however, will not come amiss in regard to the enemy markets now open to our trade as well as those countries in Northern Europe affected by radical doctrines.

Our British correspondent, J. B. Sutcliffe, mentions the fact that when he landed in Constantinople with the first Allied Commission just after the armistice was signed he found that Turkey was operating seventy theatres instead of five or six as before the war.

This, at first sight, might give a wrong impression of the trading possibilities of our late enemies.

Of course, there are thousands of moving picture theatres running in Germany and what used to be the Austro-Hungarian Empire, perhaps even more than before the war, but the truth is that we really know very little about the kind of pictures that the Teutons have been making in the past five years and even less of the conditions that they might wish to impose upon foreigners wishing to carry on trade within their territory.

Russia is and, it seems, will continue to be, an enigma as far as the moving picture business is concerned. The only thing we know is that there is very little inducement to ship films to any part of the broken Empire.

It will not be a bad idea to stick, for the present at least, to those countries that have not suffered from internal upheavals and where we know that the work of reconstruction is already in full swing.

There is enough business in them for everybody and the opportunities will keep increasing as new theatres are being built and the general business activities are resumed on a peace basis.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY INTERESTS CREATE A STORM IN GREAT BRITAIN

Organization of Three Big Companies to Operate in All Branches of Moving Picture Industry Brings About Drastic Action by Aggrieved Exhibitors.

By J. B. Sutcliffe.

London, July 3.—A few days ago nearly every daily newspaper and weekly journal in the United Kingdom contained advertisements of a new million-pound syndicate. Picture Playhouses, Ltd., with a public call for capital to erect large moving picture theatres throughout the country. The directors of the venture as given in the prospectus are Major Davies, M. P., president of Famous Players-Lasky British Productions, Ltd.; N. E. Holden, vice-chairman of Famous Players-Lasky British Productions, Ltd.; J. C. Graham, foreign agent of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; A. Nisbet, director of Famous Players-Lasky; C. A. Glegg, managing director of Famous Players-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., and C. A. Bendix, director of British Industrial Corporation, Ltd.

The company in addition has the strong stock exchange backing of Haes & Co. Ordinarily this announcement would have been hailed by the British industry as a normal post-war development of the exhibiting side of the business, but a close analysis of the directorate and its advertised policy has had the reverse effect upon those British exhibiting interests amalgamated under the Exhibitors' Association.

Picture Playhouses, Ltd., I should explain in the first place, is aimed to embody a parent syndicate which will promote and finance a number of subsidiary companies for the development of its different objects. Current rumor defines some of the most important of these as the purchase of two of our largest circuits of moving picture theatres, the erection in the Strand of the "world's largest" moving picture show on the site of the demolished Tivoli, the acquisition of the White City (the original grounds and plant of the Franco-British Exposition), the leasing of the Crystal Palace (Sir T. Paxton's monstrosity in glass), and numerous other far-reaching and probably far-fetched proposals which the British exhibitor is interpreting as an attempt by the promoters to capture the market.

The Famous Players-Lasky British Productions, Ltd., is also a new company capitalized at £600,000, a separate but associated undertaking to the Famous Players-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., which distributes the films in England of the Famous Players-Lasky Film Corporation of America.

Producing Company Backed by Industrial Interests

The capital for the new producing venture has been subscribed privately, mostly, I am informed, from the industrial districts in the north of England, and its main purpose will be to produce films in England on American lines. "What will become of these films is obvious," said one exhibitor when he was shown the announcements. "These and all other films will be exploited exclusively by Picture Playhouses, Ltd., and its off-shoots."

This view of the situation also appears to have been the prevailing one at the annual conference of the Exhibitors' Association held at Glasgow during last week. R. C. Buchanan, vice-chairman of the Scottish branch of the association, referred to it as a grave danger. When he heard of the formation of Famous Players-Lasky British Productions, Ltd., with a capital of £600,000 to produce in the British Isles films on the same grand scale as they do in America he welcomed the news as an exhibitor. But when he heard that a large exhibiting company capitalized at a million was being promoted by the directors of the Famous Players-Lasky companies he saw a grave danger.

"This Famous Players-Lasky group," continued Mr. Buchanan, "would appear to be working hand in hand with a large financial group whose intention is to form companies in my town, possibly in your town, with the object of building picture theatres which they state are to be the largest and best in the land. It may be that we would have no right to take exception to any new film producing company or any new exhibiting company if times were normal, giving us better films or better theatres, but I think as exhibitors who have been customers for many years of the Famous Players-Lasky group, who have stood by them through good times and bad, who have built up their business by giving them our orders and paying them our money, we cannot be expected to take lying down this invasion of our side of the trade and from which we earn our bread and butter.

"And what do they say to us—'You have served your turn, you have booked our films, helped us popularize our stars, signed contracts to show our films for the next year or two, but before that time arrives we will have built so many theatres throughout the British Isles that we shall be able to dispense altogether with your help, for we shall have extinguished you for all time as co-operators or competitors of ours'." Mr. Buchanan then moved the following resolution:

Exhibitors Take Drastic Action

"I. That all exhibitors be asked to refuse to book any films or enter into any contract whatever with Famous Players-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., until they have satisfied the exhibitors that they are in no way tied up or allied to any large new company formed for the purpose of promoting companies to build kinematograph theatres in this country.

"2. That on and after a date decided upon by the council all exhibitors be asked to refuse to show any films issued by the Famous Players-Lasky Film Service unless the previous clause has been complied with.

"3. That all renters (exchangemen) be asked to refuse to book films to any exhibitor not complying with the above conditions and that all exhibitors be asked to refuse to book films from any company or exhibitor not complying with the above conditions.

"4. That the council be asked to arrange forthwith a meeting of renters, manufacturers and exhibitors to arrange for joint action to be taken."

The resolution was seconded by a Liverpool exhibitor and carried unanimously for ratification before the general council of the Exhibitors' Association. A. E. Newbould, Provincial Kinematograph Theatres, Ltd., said that the association would support contract-breakers under Clause 2 of the above resolution, and would bear the loss in equal proportion among its members.

The foregoing are purely and simply facts and circumstances attending within the first week upon the announcement of Picture Playhouses, Ltd., and its apparent association with the Famous Players-Lasky interests, and will serve to keep American readers of the World in touch with the actual situation. No statement has yet been issued by the Famous Players-Lasky companies or Picture Playhouses, Ltd., the latter at the time of writing continuing to have some of its share issue underwritten.

Comment at such an early stage would therefore be unfair and inopportune, except, perhaps, to point out that the position created is in no way a precedent. A. E. Newbould, the chairman of the Exhibitors' Association, is himself the leading spirit in our largest exhibiting circuit of theatres, a company interested in an associate film company, Provincial Kinematograph Theatres, and the London Film Company.

Stock Sale Competes with Big British Loan

In financial circles the public issue of capital by subscription by Picture Playhouses, Ltd., is considered ill-timed, coinciding as it did with the launch of the government's Victory Loan, but even if the new company overcapitalizes and builds its bigger and better theatres it is doing nothing wrong, either in restraint of trade or monopolizing production.

It has yet to be shown either in England or America how one firm or one group of an industry can corner the market of film production. The Motion Picture Patents Trust tried it to its sorrow. To oppose the issue on principle is to "suspect Caeser's wife." Quite one-half of British renters are either exhibitors or have exhibiting interests.

Miss Violet Hopson

That the British-made moving pictures of the future should feature screen stars who can be popularized in the same manner as has been accomplished in the American moving picture industry is the opinion which is being freely expressed on the other side of the Atlantic, where a lot of interesting things are happening in moving picture affairs.

The Broadwest Films, Ltd., in their production of "The Gentleman Rider," are promoting Violet Hopson along accepted American lines. This paragraph from the Broadwest Company suggests the Yankee press agent: "Nothing but the best will suit Miss Hopson, so a whole racing stable, complete with horses, jockeys and stable lads, have to be procured for the purpose of exteriors in what promises to be the finest film production ever placed on the market by a British woman."

MAKING TRANSATLANTIC TRIP TO SHOW NEW NAZIMOVA PICTURE

Harry J. Cohen, Manager of Metro's Export Department, Constitutes Himself Special Messenger, and Richard A. Rowland, President of Company, Will See "The Brat" in London.

Harry J. Cohen, manager of Metro Pictures Corporation's foreign department, sailed for Liverpool, Saturday, July 12. Mr. Cohen was accompanied by his wife, and took with him, among other things, a finished print of "The Brat," the new Nazimova production, which is announced for release in this country September 1, and which will be distributed exclusively by Metro.

Mr. Cohen left to join Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., who has been abroad making a personal survey of the foreign field since the latter part of May.

Prior to Mr. Rowland's departure the Metro president saw portions of "The Brat" projected on the screen at the Nazimova studios in Hollywood, and was so enthusiastic over the picture that he said he could scarcely wait until it was completely cut, titled and assembled to see it. Mr. Cohen's plan is to surprise Mr. Rowland with a finished print of the production.

At Mr. Cohen's request W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro, rushed through a print of "The Brat," and the foreign manager made it a particularly sacred part of his luggage upon his departure. Mr. Cohen said he will endeavor to stage a private preview of the production some night in a London or Paris picture theatre, with Mr. Rowland as the guest of honor, and with probably a number of distinguished European men of affairs and exhibitors in the gathering.

Mr. Cohen will join Mr. Rowland and the Count di Cippico in a swing through England, France, Belgium and Italy. Originally he announced that he would be away for about five weeks, but just before his departure he said it was probable that his trip would extend into several months, with him continuing the survey of the European field even after Mr. Rowland's return.

Metro has already placed the Nazimova productions in Europe, and the present trip of its executives is for the purpose of paving the way for an extensive invasion of the foreign field with the great "fewer, bigger and better" picture productions to be made by Screen Classics, Inc., from celebrated stage successes and novels, which Metro will distribute exclusively.

Stanley Off for Europe for Export & Import Co.

William B. Stanley, treasurer of the Export & Import Film Co., Inc., is scheduled to sail for Europe Tuesday, July 22, taking with him film aggregating about one and one-half millions of feet, which is to be distributed in some of the extensive markets which his firm has already opened up on the other side of the Atlantic. His first port of call will be Copenhagen, Denmark, although he will visit other important centres before he returns to the United States some months hence.

Mr. Stanley is a brother of Ben Blumenthal, president of the Export & Import Company, and has been associated with Mr. Blumenthal in the moving picture business for a number of years, being best identified in the industry on the other side of the Atlantic because of his long connection with the Stanley Film Company of Rome.

Calvo on Long Trip with Fox Export Product

Following the announcement of the new Fox Film Corporation for 1919-20, unusual activities are seen in the Fox offices for the furtherance of the company's export business, which now touches every country in the civilized world. Abraham Carlos, of the Fox Company, is now engaged in opening branches in the principal cities of Europe. New and important developments are also taking place in the Latin-American field, and it is said that A. C. Calvo is about to leave on an extended tour of Mexico, Central America, Colombia and Venezuela to open additional exchanges. Mr. Calvo has just returned from the West Indies, where he established Fox agencies in Cuba and Porto Rico. Mr. Calvo is enthusiastic over the future of the film business in Latin-America, and considers that closer relations between that territory and the United States are bound to be brought about by the American pictures which are being sent South in such large quantities at the present time.

Back from Europe Brown and Rugged

Ben Blumenthal, president of the Export & Import Film Co., Inc., returned to New York Tuesday, July 5, after an extended visit to Continental Europe in the interests of his firm. A great deal of Mr. Blumenthal's time during his stay abroad was spent in Copenhagen, Denmark, and it was from that port that he sailed.

Mr. Blumenthal brought back with him to the States a tremendous amount of data of almost incalculable value to the export trade and may be expected to make some important announcements soon.

The many friends of the Export & Import president will be pleased to know that, in addition to having profited greatly in a business way by his most recent trip abroad, Mr. Blumenthal has benefited very much physically through his trip. When he left the States Mr. Blumenthal was not in the best of health, but the ocean voyages and long sessions at golf in Copenhagen which he managed to sandwich in with his business duties have made him brown and rugged and have added numerous pounds to his weight and inches to his girth.

nouncement of the activities of the recently formed Trans-Regional Trading Corporation, a newcomer in the moving picture export and import field.

The company has been capitalized under the laws of the State of New York for $125,000 for the purpose of engaging in a general export and import business. Jesse S. Bernstein is named as president of the company and will manage its affairs. His associates are a number of men unknown in the moving picture industry who have long been engaged in the business life of New York City and have had considerable experience in the export and import business.

Members of the New York export colony and not a few foreign buyers who have visited New York during the past two or three years will recall Mr. Bernstein as having been identified with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation export department under Arthur Ziehm. Prior to joining Mr. Ziehm, Mr. Bernstein had been in the employ of various exporting and importing houses in the straight commercial line in the downtown sections of New York and it would therefore seem that he is taking to his new business venture an experience which ought to insure it success.

The Trans-Regional Trading Corporation's first contract is for the exclusive sales rights in all territories excepting the United States and Canada of the well known Automaticket System, embracing the automatic ticket selling and cash registering device and ticket plan which is used in a majority of the best moving picture theatres in this country and Canada. Mr. Bernstein and his associates hope to establish for the Automaticket System throughout South America, Europe and the other sections of the world the same vogue which it has so long enjoyed here.

NEW PORTO RICAN FILM TAX WILL WRECK THE INDUSTRY

Ramirez Torres, of Selection Film Service, Is Actively Working for Its Modification or Repeal—Government's Ends Will Not Be Served, He Says.

Motion picture men in Porto Rico are confronted with a very serious problem in the nature of the bill recently passed by the Porto Rican legislature, levying a tax of two cents per foot on motion picture films entering that territory. From the Selection offices in the Fitzgerald Building, Mr. Ramirez is busily engaged in efforts to effect the repeal or at least the modification of the bill.

"It is the same old story of an immoderate tax which can only defeat the aim," said Mr. Ramirez. "As it stands, the bill will force the use of second hand films in Porto Rico, and throw the growing industry back to its early beginning, for the exchanges cannot afford to pay the ever-mounting prices demanded by American producers in the face of the tax which is practically one hundred per cent. of the declared value of the films. Fifty per cent. of the renters must go out of business, and the balance will stay, just because of their heavy investment.

"European films will be shut out of the market beyond a doubt, because they would pay, in addition to the new tax of two cents per foot, the regular penny a foot import tax on foreign films.

"To the poorer inhabitants of Porto Rico, as in the States, the films provide the only entertainment at a price within their means. How they will act can be imagined if they are forced to pay more or to sit through films of quality which they will recognize as woefully inferior to the good prints, which have been the rule recently. At that, it is extremely doubtful that producers in America will sell second hand prints—the price involved would then be so small that manufacturers may prefer to cancel the territory entirely rather than bother with it.

Law Shows Ignorance of Trade Conditions.

"The legislature has been unjust," continued Mr. Ramirez. "The motion picture business is unique in many ways, and as a result of the apparent lack of knowledge of its workings on the part of the legislators, they have made the tax effective immediately. The result is that exchanges have contracted with exhibitors to furnish serials, for instance, at a fixed price. Not all of the episodes are as yet in the territory, nevertheless, the exchanges are bound to deliver them at contracted prices. This will compel the renters to absorb the tax.

"Contrast the number of theatres in the United States with the number in Porto Rico, about 55, and you will see the impossibility of applying the American fifteen cents per reel solution.

"The same embarrassment applies to programs, for many exhibitors hold contracts for complete programs for long periods.

"Another thing," continued Mr. Ramirez: "Ninety per cent. of the distributions in Porto Rico are controlled by native capital and a tax of such magnitude would not only elliminate dividends, but eat into capital as well.

"There are two new theatres being built in San Juan—the Rialto and the Victory Garden. I hope that these new theatres, the building of which is a real progressive step, will not be compelled to look for second hand films to show.

"But, doubtless, the legislators will see the error of their ways and change the tax to an ad valorem basis. This would be just, and no reasonable distributor in the Island would complain if the Government will be content with the revenue to be derived from an increase of, say, twenty per cent. ad valorem.

"The tax is the only cloud that threatens the bright situation I found in the motion picture business in Porto Rico.

"The Rialto Theatre, now being erected in San Juan, will be owned and managed by Messrs. Gonzales and Bruno. Mr. Bruno has lived a considerable time in New York, and was a lieutenant in the American army. The house will seat about 650, and 25 cents will be the general admission.

"The Victory Garden, also in course of erection, will be much larger with a seating capacity of approximately 1,200, at the same admission price.

"Exhibitors throughout the island are awake to the great possibilities before them, and find the Cine-Mundial, the Spanish Moving Picture World, a great encouragement and aid, for by it they can keep in close touch with developments in the United States, which is considered the center of the world industry.

Will Cut Down Import Footage One-Third.

"The program booking plan is the favorite one, and the Selection Film Service has therefore decided to furnish a complete program throughout the island. Only the best pictures made in the States find their way to Porto Rico, and this remedies to a very great extent the fault of the program booking plan here.

"Human nature is much the same the world over, I guess, for a good picture in Oshkosh is a good picture in Mayaguez, although Porto Ricans are Latins, and therefore their artistic sense is well developed and more easily offended than in the States."

"Porto Rico is importing an average of 300,000 feet of film per month. This, undoubtedly will be reduced one third. Thus, the tax will be a failure for the legislators no doubt expect the same imports to remain.

"I lack information as to whether the tax applies to raw stock. If this is the case, the legislators have succeeded in barring from the island all probabilities of any American manufacturer to take and produce pictures in the island. Contrary to the policy of cities and states of this country, which constantly offer inducements to the manufacturers for the building of studios, etc., etc., Porto Rico glorifies in shutting the doors to this progressive and advantageous industry to the communities where it operates.

"Eighty-five per cent. of the films imported to Porto Rico are leased to the renters by the manufacturers, and these films, as per their contracts, have to be returned. However, the law does not specify whether the renter in cases of films in transit is allowed the return of the moneys paid for the films in entering Porto Rico. This is most unequitable, for in any other country, goods in transit are subject to a reimburse, specially so 'en material para expectaculos publicos.'"

Howells' London Man Served with British Forces

Harry R. Smith, whom David P. Howells has placed in charge of his London office at No. 29a Charing Cross Road, was recently demobilized after two and a half years of service with the British expeditionary forces in France and Italy. He was twice wounded in action.

Harry R. Smith.

Before the war Mr. Smith was manager of the Thomas A. Edison, Ltd., interests in England, and prior to that time had served in the moving picture industry as sales manager for the M. P. Sales Agency and with Ruffell's and the B. & C. Company.

As the Briton Sees It

Signed "Fair Play (Holloway)," "Pictures and Picturegoer," an English moving picture publication, prints the following, under the caption, "Fair Play;" its chief interest lies in the "freedom" of its language:

"People who praise the American film to the detriment of the British film would do well to remember the handicap which the British film industry has had to endure during the last four and a half years.

"Prior to the war, the American film (especially in the matter of small detail) was sad stuff compared with the British film. Since the outbreak of war, the American films have had an unrivalled opportunity of practically gaining the world monopoly of film production. Everything has been in their favour; practically no foreign competition; no vexatious restrictions on imports; no travel and transport difficulties; plenty of the male element; plenty of new plots by collaring British and other countries' authors' plots; yet, in spite of all these advantages, I fail to-day to see where the American film is far ahead of the British film.

"I should very much like to pay tribute through the medium of your admirable little publication to all the British firms who have struggled along so heroically under the war's heavy burden during these lean times, and wish them every success for the future, now that things will be a little more equalized, in overtaking and surpassing their American rivals. Especially would I like to thank Cecil Hepworth (whom I consider to be the cornerstone of the British film industry) for his splendid efforts to maintain the high standard of the British film in Hepworth Productions. There is just one leaf, however, which he, along with other British firms, might with advantage take from the American note-book. I refer to the matter of featuring 'stars.' There seems to be a great dearth of British 'star' favourites who could be featured to prove the draw that American 'star' favourites do.

"If British films are to succeed they must find the feturable 'stars' who will prove as big a draw as the leading American lights. We want no British 'Mary Pickfords,' 'Pauline Fredericks,' 'W. S. Harts,' or 'Douglas Fairbanks.' We want no imitators, but British 'stars' who can create their own characters that will equal and even surpass the best that America can give."

INDIAN GOVERNMENT AUTHORITIES PAYING ATTENTION TO PICTURES

Bengal Legislative Council Asked to Make Appropriation for Touring Outfit for Educational Purposes—Agitation Against "Super-Serials—Notes Reflecting Industry's Activities.

By S. J. Banerjea.

Calcutta, India., June 28.—At a recent meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council, W. H. Phelps made an important suggestion touching the education of the masses. He urged the government to set apart a modest sum for a touring department of education kinematography. This suggestion, though excellent from every point of view, did not receive any support whatever. Perhaps his fellow councillors thought that it was "too previous." I hope, however, that Mr. Phelps will not give up his proposal, but try to impress its importance upon the authorities.

It will be news to my readers that many leading Europeans and Indians are of opinion that the exhibition of the super-serials should be prohibited, once for all, in this country. They hold that these are vitiating public morals. The public are learning up-to-date dacoities, &c. Mr. Phelps referred to this matter at a Council meeting, the other day. He is one of our film censors, and, therefore, his opinion carries weight. He regrets very much that so little provision has been made to suit the requirements and attainments of the Indian youths especially, who flock by the hundreds to kinemas, where they are often entertained with social problem plays and the adventures of very undesirable persons. I have reasons to believe that the authorities are alive to the danger referred to by Mr. Phelps, and I should not be surprised if, one day, an amendment of the Indian Cinema act, on the lines advocated by Mr. Phelps, be made. American film manufacturers, please note.

Hindus Pick Flaws in American Pictures.

The Bijou people have shown us "His Love Fight," "Destiny," "The Triumph of H. M. S. Vindictive," "Polly Red Head," "Me and My Pal," "The Liberation of Jerusalem," "Social Quicksand," "A Romany Lass," "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," "Twenty-One" and "The Million Dollar Dollies." The last-named film drew enormous crowds and formed a topic of conversation among cinemagoers for several days. I regret to say that this otherwise excellent film has one or two defects. For instance, there is a reference to a courtship between the Hindu Raja and his Rani. Hindus do not go acourting or are not courted. Marriages are always arranged by parents or guardians. This may seem strange, but the system is to be commended from the eugenics point of view. Then again, Ranis, or rather high-caste ladies, dress differently, don't wear shoes, and treat their uncles-in-law and such other relatives differently. The defects referred to were freely commented upon by the Hindu patrons of the theatre, some of whom even indulged in unparliamentary language against the producers of the film. Film manufacturers who wish to introduce Hindu scenes in their films should always consult a Hindu, and not depend upon their second-hand knowledge of things Indian. I make these observations in a friendly spirit and trust it will lead to good results.

At the Albion Theatre (Madan's), "The Hidden Hand" has been screened to big crowds. "The Seven Pearls" is now being shown to good houses. Regarding "The Hidden Hand," the salutation to the tiger scene, in episode ten, clearly shows that whoever is responsible for it has little knowledge of matters Indian. Indians do not salute tigers in the fashion shown. In episode 15, the Czar of Russia has been addressed as "His Highness." He should be addressed as "His Majesty." One or two characters have not been well portrayed.

Madan is also showing "America's Answer." The comics, however, are not of a high order. The musical service, which is mainly conducted by Eurasians, should be improved. The Bijou authorities have the best musical service in Calcutta. Madan should take a leaf out of their books.

I have observed more than once in these columns that the American film manufacturers often forget that they cater for non-Americans and non-Europeans, too. Otherwise they would not use "Americanisms" in their texts. Take "The Cold Deck," which the Bijou Grand Opera House screened recently. It is so full of Americanisms that several highly educated Indian men, who sat by me, gave vent to their feelings in language not very complimentary to the manufacturers of this film. I trust manufacturers will see that they give no cause for complaint.

English Restriction Officially Removed.

It will interest film producers to learn that His Majesty King George's Trade Commissioner for India and Ceylon has recently received a telegram from the Department of Overseas Trade, London, advising him that the exportation of films is now freely allowed, no export license being required; but that all films

Tastes in Comedy Differ the World Over.

I read in your issue of 28-12-18 that there was, at least, one person in America, Mrs. Mary Veillette, to wit, who did not smile at Chaplin's comics. Out here, there are hundreds who dislike his comics. Some time ago, a leading Anglo-Indian paper of Calcutta used very strong language against Chaplin comics—which, for obvious reasons, I shall not reproduce. Here, people like Prince, Max Linder, "Fatty," Lloyd, and certain others. If votes be taken, it will be found that Max Linder is an easy first.

The other day, at the Wellington Cinema theatre (Madras), in the course of a show, on behalf of the Parsis of Madras, a medal was presented to Rustomji Dorabji, proprietor of the cinema, in appreciation of his substantial annual contributions to Parsi charity funds of Madras. The proceeds of the day were given to the Parsi Anjuman.

In this connection, I regret to say that the criminal case against Mr. Dorabji, to which I referred in my last, has not been compromised. He has been committed for trial at the next sessions of the High Court on the charge of cheating. He is out on bail. Among the films screened here lately, "The Plunderer" deserves mention.

Our cinema king, J. F. Madan, was recently congratulated by the members of his community, on the occasion of his admission to the order of the British Empire. An address was presented to him, and he was also the recipient of a number of valuable souvenirs. Mr. Madan's charities are cosmopolitan. He is ever ready to help a good cause, no matter whether the party to be benefited be Hindu or Mussulman or Christian. May his shadow never grow less!

At the Picture House the following films have been screened: "The Unknown Woman;" "Red Potage;" "Woman Eternal;" "A Cure for Crime;" "Human Clay;" "Three H. Gordon;" and several other films of no particular merit.

The authorities of the Bijou Grand Opera House have shown "No Man's Land;" "Twenty One;" "The Silent Woman;" "The Crimson Dove;" "Toys of Fate;" "Secret Strings;" "The Cold Deck;" "The Shell Game;" "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters" and several excellent American comics. They do well to screen the "Universal Screen Magazine," which appeals to people much more than the Gazettes. Why does not Mr. Madan arrange to screen this valuable magazine for the benefit of his patrons?

Mr. Madan has shown the following at his Picture Palace: "The Romance of Tarzan;" "Within the Law;" "The Combat" and "The Easiest Way." The two Tarzan pictures were screened for two weeks in succession and drew enormous crowds. This is a record in the Indian film world.

At his Albion Theatre, the super-serial, "The Bull's Eye," is being screened. We have also seen "For Sale" and "Sylvia of the Secret Service" there.

At his Cornwallis Theatre the exhibition of "The Red Ace" has been completed. The American comics were all good. A Pathe film, entitled "Native Dances," has also been screened. This title is, in my opinion, misleading. An Englishman is a native of England; a Frenchman, that of France; and so on. The dances, I found, were Asiatic. So the film should have been entitled "Asiatic Dances." The subheading, "Calcutta Dances," is also wrong. The dancing and the accompanying music are purely Hindustani—not Bengalee, as we are given to understand. I trust Messrs. Pathe and others will see that no misleading titles are allowed to pass in future.

At his Ripon Theatre, we have seen "The Last Flight," "Captain Kiddo," "The Broken Coin," and certain other film of no merit whatever.

At his Kidderpore Cinema, he has shown "The Neglected Wife," "The Crimson Dove," "King Charles," "Land of Lizzards," "The Unknown Woman," and several excellent American comics.

The authorities of the Aurora Cinema have screened, "The Miracle of Life," "The Lamb," "Bombs," "Facing Eternity," "The Mill on the Floss," "Her Golden Hour," "Woman Eternal," "The Hero of Submarine D-2," "The Broken Coin" and "Seige of Calais."

I have observed more than once in these columns that super-serials always draw crowds in this country. "The Mystery Ship," the last installment of which has just been screened in the Phoenix Picture Theatre, has drawn enormous crowds, and proved a financial success. Another serial will be screened shortly, and I doubt not it will also draw good houses.

The Arya Cinema authorities of Poona are screening films of Indian manufacture. "Kacha Dekayani" is a good film, worth seeing, though the acting is not of a high order. But I have no doubt matters will improve in time.

The management of the Lahore Empire have shown, "Love's Innocence," "The Innocent Mrs. Gordon," "Raffles," "Divine Gift," and the new Maciste film, to excellent houses.

At the cinema Precious (Bombay), the following films have been screened: "Torpedoing of the Oceania," "Kinf Attila," and "Maciste, the Policeman."

At the West End Cinema (Bombay), "Tenth Symphony," "Little Sisters of Everybody," "Exploits of Judex" and "The Count of Monte Cristo," have been shown to record houses.

The New Alexandra people have screened "The Bull's Eye," "Who Is Number One?," "Attila" and "False Friends." The attendance was good.

The management of the Imperial have shown "The House of Hate," "Cupid by Proxy" and the new Maciste film to big houses.

The Excelsior continues to screen "The Strange Case of Mary Page."

The Royal Opera House is being well patronized. Among the films here shown, we may mention, "A Fortune at Stake" and "The House of Cards."

Similar is the case of the Empire (Bombay). Its authorities have shown "Holy Orders," "The Voice of Destiny," "Jackie of the Navy," "The Other Woman," "Passing of the Third Floor Back," and "Tarzan of the Apes."

At the Artistic Cinema, the latest addition to our picture theatres, which has been opened on the Howrah maidan, on the other side of the Hooghly River (Calcutta), "The Broken Coin," "Peg O' the Ring," "Liberty," and several other well-known films have been shown to hundreds of the Howraites, who cannot afford to patronize the Calcutta theatres.

Universal Prospering in Island of Cuba

Universal's Cuban manager arrived in New York recently and was given a warm reception at the New York office. Charles B. King, the person referred to, is well known in moving picture circles, especially in New York territory. He was at one time service manager of the New York Universal Exchange.

Mr. King has been Universal's Cuban manager for some time, and came back with a glowing story of Universal's success in the island. According to Mr. King the Cubans are the greatest picture fans in the world.

Change in Organization in Gillespie Bros. Offices

Miss B. Parker, who has been employed in the export film department of Gillespie Bros. & Co., Inc., ever since its establishment in the Candler Building under the direction of Jos M. DeAragon, has recently been elevated in position until she is now in charge of the selling end of the business.

The Gillespie plans as they are being worked out by Mr. DeAragon provide for such an expansion in the business that the internal change seemed necessary. The concern is about to begin the marketing of the world's rights on several big productions which have been acquired.

Broadwest Company Plans Quantity Production

Walter West, the well known producer of Broadwest films, maintains that the next two years hold a big future for British films. Never in the history of the cinema trade have there been such wonderful opportunities for the British to obtain a fair and rightful share of overseas trade as there is at the present time. With this fact in mind, he is so remoulding the organization of Broadwest that in less than two years he hopes the output of Broadwest productions will have increased to one film per week. An ambitious program, but Walter West is a typical English business man, with the hustling spirit well developed.

Greatly Enthused Over Latin American Market

A Robertson-Cole sales agent recently returned from a trip through Latin America, has had his enthusiasm over the possibilities of that market for American photoplays raised a thousand per cent. He says:

"Dramas or comedies which convey the true life in the United States have a most unusual appeal to the South Americans. The thinking South American parents who frequent picture shows, accompanied by their children, begin to realize how much their knowledge of the practical and the useful in every day objects has been increased. In fact, these children know more of the outside world today than the young men of twenty years ago.

"South American authorities are encouraging the exploitation of American films in their country. They are well aware of the vast benefits to be gained by their people from these pictures. I have found, wherever I have visited, that the South Americans are particularly fond of several of the Robertson-Cole stars, among whom are Bessie Barriscale, Sessue Hayakawa, and William Desmond. Hayakawa in particular seems to be a strong favorite. From his pictures there is knowledge of two countries' rule to be gained. The American-Japanese angle, which these productions invariably take, have a powerful appeal for South Americans.

"A good novel in screen form is always enjoyed by the South American. I have heard it said that American dramas were beyond the conception of the people of Latin America, but this is an exploded fallacy."

Kansas City Plans Big Publicity for "Oh Boy"

THE reception accorded the Albert Capellani special production of the musical success, "Oh Boy," and the increased bookings by big houses, according to a statement by Pathe Exchange, Inc., this feature, starring June Caprice and Creighton Hale, promises to equal the vogue of Fannie Ward, in "Common Clay." Director of Exchanges, Fred C. Quimby, who is on a trip through the West to carry out one of the big projects outlined by Charles Pathe during his recent visit to this country, wired from Denver last week telling of the generous reception accorded to the first of the Capellani productions.

"'Oh Boy' closes tonight at the Rialto, Denver's best theatre, nearly breaking the house record," announced Mr. Quimby, "the management say that this picture got more laughs than Chaplin. And it is exceedingly gratifying to learn that the 'Oh Boy' receipts for the week were nearly twice as much as 'Common Clay' which played at the same theatre."

In Kansas City, "Oh Boy" will have the benefit of a campaign unequalled in the history of showmanship in that city. It is planned by Manager Harding, of the Liberty Theatre, where the picture is to be shown on August 31.

Mr. Harding has agreed to spend $1,000 in advertising. He will use at least fifty 24-sheets, three hundred one-sheets, sixty three-sheets, and spend at least $500 in newspaper advertising. He also expects to work out a good window card and either some good sized stickers or little throwaways with a string attached that they can hang on everything, merely stating, "Oh Boy." He is going to put cards in the street cars with nothing on them whatever except the words, "Oh Boy."

Hand of Brunton Seen in "White Man's Chance"

A WHITE MAN'S CHANCE," J. Warren Kerrigan's newest W. W. Hodkinson release, will undoubtedly bring new laurels to its producer, Robert Brunton. This production is the first in a series of ten Kerrigan pictures scheduled for production at the Robert Brunton studios, Los Angeles.

Mr. Brunton began his career as an artist, and has had charge of the scenic end on many big productions. Soon after his entry into the dramatic profession he become art and scenic director for Sir Henry Irving, with whom he was associated five years, three of those being spent at the Lyceum Theatre, London, and the remainder in two tours in America.

Mr. Brunton joined the Triangle Film Corporation as art director, and through wroking out his ideas there brought about big changes in the technical side of the industry. Other big corporations bid for his services, and he shifted his affiliations to Paralta. The next step was the founding of his own film plant, the large Brunton studios in Hollywood.

"A White Man's Chance" bears in every detail the distinctive touch of its producer, and forms fine setting for its star.

Flowers—With a Flower.
This is a flowery view of Mae Murray as she is seen in "On with the Dance" for Paramount-Artcraft.

"Tiger-Lily" Is Powerful Drama of Love and Hate

THE TIGER-LILY," which will be released by American, on July 27, is the pictured love-story of an Italian girl living in America. As played by Margarita Fisher in the title role, it presents a rare study in human emotions—love, fear, sympathy, hate, jealousy, pathos, revenge—brightened by youth and romance and touches of delightful humor.

There is an all-star cast supporting Miss Fisher, with Emory Johnson as the lover, Barney Sherry as his aristocratic father, Mme. Rosita Marstini as his worldly stepmother, and Beatrice Van as a haughty society "flapper"—the girl they want him to marry. George Periolat is seen as a typical Italian inn-keeper, E. Alyn Warren as a vindictive Neapolitan bent upon vendetta, and Frank Clark as a lovable old organ-grinder, living in memories of his past operatic career.

The story is from the pen of Joseph Franklin Poland.

Crane at Work on "His Father's Wife."

Director Frank Crane has begun work at the World Studio on "His Father's Wife," in which June Elvidge will be the star. The story was written by Helen Christene Hoerle and was scenarioized by Philip Lonergan. One of the interesting scenes in this picture is a boarding house located on West Fiftieth street, New York, that in its day was the most noted theatrical boarding house of the country. Here gathered around the table in their early days before they had become famous such well-known people as Eleanor Robson, Edgar Selwyn, Margaret Mayo and Julian Eltinge.

Announce Supporting Cast for "The Four Flusher"

ANNOUNCEMENT by Metro Pictures Corporation of the cast that has been chosen to support Hale Hamilton in his next starring vehicle, entitled "The Four Flusher," reveals a personnel which includes Ruth Stonehouse and Louis Fitzroy, two of the silent drama's most capable exponents of such bright clean comedy as forms the foundation of this new story for Hale Hamilton.

Miss Stonehouse is no newcomer to the Metro all-star casts, having appeared from time to time in various types of parts in screen offerings released by this distributing organization. Her last Metro part was in "The Master Mystery," in which she was seen at her very best. Her part as leading woman in the recent film is a novel character drawing.

Louis Fitzroy, who has the important comedy role of Ford, the clever waiter, needs little introduction to screen audiences. Mr. Fitzroy is a student of the old school of dramatic art, having played long engagements with such famous stars as W. H. Crane, Frank Daniels and Lillian Russell prior to his entrance into the field of motion pictures.

Among the other principals with Mr. Hamilton are Harry Holden, Ralph Bell, Robert Badger and Effie Conley. The adaptation of the original story is credited to A. S. Le Vino, of Metro's staff, and the picture is being directed by Harry L. Franklin, with R. J. Bergquist at the camera.

Chester Instructs Camera Men in Cinematography

A COURSE in C. L. Chester Productions technique will be given three expert cameramen next week by Chester himself. He is going to take them off into the woods, somewhere near New York, and go on a picture taking spree for several days, shooting all sorts of people and places, and watching the cameramen choose positions and subjects.

All these men are to start at once for far countries, and be away for from one to two years. They are master cameramen, and in any sort of ordinary work they would need nothing but the word to go ahead. But in beginning these tours for C. L. Chester productions, Chester wants to make sure that the men will see scenes from an original angle, grasp human and animal interest, and appreciate the story element.

It happens that three cameramen have just been discharged from photographic work in the war. Raymond Agnel arrived here a week ago after serving in the French army. The first two have done some camera work for Chester, and Hugo's work is well known.

In addition to the instruction received in the field from actual contact with Chester's work, and his comment upon and guidance of their photographic technique, each man has been given a subject to film somewhere upon the North American continent, and Chester will comment upon the way this has been done, before the men leave.

"Thirteenth Chair" Seance Scene Has Weird Effects

THE Thirteenth Chair," Bayard Veiller's melodrama which had more than a year's run in New York, with proportionately long-time stays in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, is so well known and of such comparatively recent date, that the bare announcement that Pathe would offer a screen version produced by Leonce Perret, was sufficient to stir the liveliest interest of exhibitors.

The first act of the spoken drama is set in a dimly lighted room, during the progress of a spiritualistic seance. How and where, the question is asked, could you produce a more uncanny atmosphere for this scene than in the studio and by the combination of carbon points and camera?

It will be remembered that the question, "Who killed Spencer Lee?" is asked at the seance. The man who asks it in a darkened room with doors locked and thirteen persons at the table, is almost instantaneously slain in the identical manner. Mr. Veiller agreed with Mr. Perret that the play, for film purposes, warranted the writing in of a prologue, and one was accordingly supplied in a fashion highly acceptable to the author of the original offering.

Marie Shotwell will be seen on the screen in the role of Rosalie LeGrange, the spiritualist, the part which made a Broadway star of Margaret Wycherly, and added to the brilliant achievements of Annie Russell.

Two New Ford Releases Announced by Goldwyn

GOLDWYN announces the release of two new Ford Educational Weeklies, "The Town of Up and Down," a vividly interesting trip through the heart of the Ozark mountains, and "Sweetness," the story of sugar from its cultivation on vast Southern plantations to its marketing in the world's largest cities.

In "The Town of Up and Down," the cameraman follows an unbeaten trail through the Ozark mountains of Arkansas, and discloses in the valleys between lofty crags, straggling villages of mountaineers. The rare beauties of the mountains, which the sun tarnishes to a bronze hue, the occasional fashionable summer hotel and the mountain-climbing automobile, all combine to make an interesting and instructive picture.

In "Sweetness," we follow the planting and cultivation of the sugar cane on the broad acres of Southern plantations. The darkies cutting the grown stalks, and later gathering before their shacks to sing old melodies, bring back pages of warm memories of life before the Civil war. Later, the sugar finds its way to the grinding mills, where it is put through the crushers, and finally pressed into various grades.

"World Aflame" Is Timely Film.

Most timely is "The World Aflame," the Frank Keenan special, to be released by Pathe, August 17. It is a play, lightened by a love interest, and based upon a theme which is compelling the attention of the civilized industrial world.

The scenario is written by Jack Cunningham from a story by F. X. James. It has to do with the problems of employer and employe. While in no sense preaching, it spreads the doctrine of "good service." The author takes the stand that all men are servants, whether one be a millionaire employer, a statesman at the head of the government, or the menial removing the refuse of city streets—all are on the one plane when actuated by the mutual aim of good service conscientiously rendered.

Morey Appears in Drama by Cyrus Townsend Brady

HARRY T. MOREY, who is equally at ease in the picturesque trappings of the cowboy or the conventional evening clothes of the man of society, is afforded opportunities to display his versatility in "The Man Who Won," the current Vitagraph release. In the new feature the star continues the type of character with which he so long and successfully has been identified. Combining thrilling scenes in the mountains of Oregon with club and society life in San Francisco, it is the sort of picture that Mr. Morey has made so much his own.

The drama was written by Cyrus Townsend Brady. It was directed by Paul Scardon in his usual painstaking way, and the cast includes Betty Blythe, Maurice Costello, Bernard Siegel, Robert Gaillard and Denton Vane.

The story deals with the efforts of Christopher Keene, a loyal American citizen, who has managed to obtain a large quantity of platinum in the European war zone, to get it safely into his country in order that it may be used for war purposes. He is opposed in the undertaking by a band of Malays, who are bent on theft, and enemy spies who want the precious metal for their own countries. The love story, which is closely woven in the plot, is appealing.

"Man Who Turned White" Booked by Big Theatres

IF there ever was any doubt about the success of H. B. Warner's return to the screen it has been dispelled by the host of bookings recorded on the Robertson-Cole Superior picture, "The Man Who Turned White," by Exhibitors Mutual.

Among the big enterprises which have closed for the Robertson-Cole special recently are the John Kunsky interests in Detroit; the Henry Crandall Theatres, in Washington, D. C.; the Grand, Klaw and Erlanger's big house in Cincinnati; The Broadway, Columbia; Jefferson, Huntsville; American, Oakland; Strand, Boston; New, New York; Unique, El Paso; Strand, Nashville; Murray, Lawton; Ft. Plain, Ft. Plain, N. Y.; Richmond, North Adams, Mass.

The Hippodrome, of Toledo, has also been added to the list of big theatres playing the production.

"The Leopard Hunt," Short Subject, Receives Tribute

ONE of the most unusual tributes ever paid to a short motion picture subject was that of Harriett Underhill, critic of the New York Tribune, to the Major Jack Allen animal picture, "The Leopard Hunt," which was shown at the Rialto Theatre, in New York, during the week of July 6. This is perhaps the first time that a short subject was given the lead in a newspaper review in New York City.

Starting with the name of the featured picture, the Underhill review read: . . . "which is the feature picture at the Rialto this week, is not nearly so imposing or exciting as 'The Leopard Hunt,' a film which shows Major Jack Allen capturing a leopard single-handed and tying him to a tree, while he sits down two feet away to smoke his pipe. It seems an impossible feat—not the capturing of the wild beast, for that we know was done—but photographing the scene. It was really a thrilling performance and after it the feature seems to come as an anti-climax."

Two more of these exceptional pictures will be shown at the Rialto Theatre within the next two months. They are "Bear Trapping" and "Lion Trapping," and the entire group of three pictures will be given a general release the latter part of this month. The pictures are Universal, made under the direction of Major Jack Allen.

"The Ace of the Saddle" Has Fiery Riding Scenes

SOME of the most beautiful mountain scenery and daring horseback riding ever shown in a motion picture are featured in the Western drama, "The Ace of the Saddle," in which Harry Carey is starred. The story is written by Frederick J. Jackson, and is a true tale of the past days of the Western ranches.

The Carey group of riders is seen to advantage in the picture and provides many of the most gripping scenes in the production. The production was recently completed at Universal City and is scheduled for release next month. Jack Ford has directed the production.

King Fisher Jones, one of the most famous of Western characters, and the cowboy who led the Arizona cattlemen against the sheepherders in the famous Johnson County war, has a part.

Years ago, when the late Colonel Cody, known to all Americans as "Buffalo Bill," formed his great traveling show, he summoned Jones to lead the fearless group of horsemen. Jones appeared in that capacity before the crowned heads of Europe, and is said to have won the admiration of the late Queen Victoria by riding a bucking horse through a fence. Others in the supporting cast are Joe Harris, Peggy Pearce, Zoe Rae, Duke Lee, Jack Walters, Wm. Cartwright, and Howard Emstedt.

"Sunnyside" Smashing Detroit Records.

After playing day and date for one week at the Adams and Madison Theatres, Detroit first run houses within a block of each other, "Sunnyside," third of the First National Exhibitors' Charlie Chaplin productions, has a full succeeding week at the Regent, Orpheum and Liberty Theatres, three of Detroit's most pretentious houses. So popular have "Charlie Days" become among Detroit exhibitors that "Shoulder Arms" and "A Dog's Life" are now being coupled as a program for a third showing in numerous neighborhood houses, 120 of which have booked "Sunnyside," and have been compelled to satisfy the demands of patrons with a return of the two Chaplin favorites while awaiting their dates for "Sunnyside." The Chaplin burlesque of classic dancing is one of the big hits of the picture.

Sidelights and Reflections

THE run of "Broken Blossoms" opened at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York, on May 13, and will close July 20. On the following night the second picture of the D. W. Griffith repertory season, "The Fall of Babylon," will be produced. The engagement of the initial attraction has been remarkable in several ways. It has played to capacity business at the highest prices ever asked for a photoplay. The spectators have represented the leaders in the professional, artistic and social life of the city. Many persons have returned not once but several times to see the picture over again. It has been indorsed by prominent literary men and condemned with equal fervor by a certain class of individuals that prefers to have one half of life a sealed book. No picture has ever before aroused such a storm of comment or made so many ardent supporters. After seeing "Broken Blossoms" Amy Leslie, of the Chicago Daily News, wrote of Mr. Griffith: "He is the most imaginative and sane American who ever revolutionized the theatre when it needed an emancipator."

It is once more in order to call attention to the articles that are being written for and against the large number of stage plays that are being adapted to the screen, also the novels that are being utilized in the same way, and the contention of several photoplay authors that only original work should be encouraged. With the increasing demand for plot material and the limited amount of high grade stories obtainable the producer is going to patronize every available source of supply. There has never been a time in the history of the stage when, like Dumas, it did not take any and every bit of plot material it found suitable to its purpose. The screen will do well to follow the same example. The man out in front is not much concerned with how or where the plot of the story he is watching was obtained. If it entertain him that is all he asks. As for the author whose work is intended solely for the screen, he can get even with the writers who have invaded his field by turning out such corking good screen stories that novelists will bid against one another for the rights to novelize them and stage dramatists will offer inviting royalties for permission to turn the stories into dramas for the spoken stage.

This same spoken stage has never been over crowded with skilled dramatists. Many have felt themselves chosen but few have been called—not because they had no story to tell, but because they didn't know how to tell it. The building of screen stories requires the services of expert workmen and there are large rewards for those who master the craft.

"Bill Apperson's Boy"

First National Photostory of American Home Life in the Hills Affectingly Portrayed by Jack Pickford and a Fine Supporting Cast.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

A STORY of humble American life that is so affectingly real that it arouses deep sympathy and stirs our native kindness of heart, "Bill Apperson's Boy" is one of the best photostories of its kind shown this year. Four characterizations stand out distinctly. The first is the American boy portrayed by Jack Pickford as brave, proud and stubborn in his cherished ideals. In perfect harmony is the characterization by Gloria Hope of a simple and true-hearted little American girl in gentle revolt against her unhappy environment. Strong impersonations are those given by Russell Simpson as the boy's father, and George Nichols as the father of the girl, both hardy old mountaineers.

These people are alive. The entire cast is human, a grouping of distinct characters, as in real life, Bill Apperson's boy merely a part of his community. To these values are added those of logic, consistency and flawless atmosphere. Taken as a whole, the First National attraction will suit any body of spectators, and it will awaken only the kindest feelings of the human heart anywhere, a decided success at the Strand and sure to be a winner whereever shown.

"Buddy" Apperson.....Jack Pickford
Martha Yanton.....Gloria Hope
Bill Apperson.....Russell Simpson
Bill Yarton.....George Nichols

Adapted from story, "That Woman," by Hapsburg Leibe.
Scenario by James Kirkwood.
Directed by James Kirkwood.

The Story.

"Buddy" has ideas of his own, even if he is only known as "Bill Apperson's Boy," and one of these refers to a sainted mother, memory of whom is strongly enshrined in his heart. Another is his love for Little Martha Yarton, sole daughter of old mountaineer Bill Yarton, father also of several tough boys. Buddy has a bitter fight with one of these boys because of an insinuation that Bill Apperson is courting over on Black Mountain. He wins the battle but only to find that his father has decided to marry a second time, and Buddy cannot reconcile himself to calling the newcomer mother. He leaves home and goes to an old hunting camp, but he is tempted to return to Martha at night, and he is outside her father's house when he sees a marauder break in. His protective instinct aroused, he enters the house himself and shoots at the thief, only to arouse the household and suffer from the unjust accusation of entering it for an unworthy motive himself.

Martha's father and brothers are almost ready to murder Buddy, but he is conducted to jail and given a fair trial. The girl's testimony saves the hero from disgrace, but public opinion is against him. He resolves to leave for good, but he does a fine thing before carrying this resolution into effect. He finds that his father's new wife has gone back home, because she feels she has been responsible for Buddy's unhappiness. He rides to her home, calls her the sweet name of mother and takes her back to happiness before he starts away on a lonely career for himself. After a year's absence, Buddy returns and learn that the Sheriff and the Yarton family are at the house of Bill Apperson. Buddy rides desperately to the rescue, only to come upon a reconciliation of the two families, upon a new baby brother, upon a cleared good name, and Martha, the true hearted, who has never ceased to love him with a devotion akin to his own.

Elsie Ferguson's Picture "A Society Exile" Has Elaborate English and Venetian Scenes

ELSIE FERGUSON has just completed "A Society Exile" under the direction of George Fitzmaurice at the Fifty-Sixth street studio, New York. The film will be a Paramount-Artcraft release.

The scenes are laid in England and Venice. Mr. Fitzmaurice was able to obtain realism in the settings because of his intimate knowledge of the countries, having been born in Europe and educated there, and having traveled extensively before coming to this country. Mr. Fitzmaurice broke into the picture business less than seven years ago by writing scenarios, and since then has forged his way ahead until now he is one of the industry's leading directors.

One scene in particular, a canal scene in Venice, is elaborate and artistic. A tank holding water deep enough to float a gondola stretched the whole length of the studio and minute detail, from the moss along the water line to the haze over the water, was provided.

The scenario by Ouida Bergere (Mrs. Fitzmaurice) is from the play, "We Can't Be as Bad as All That," by Henry Arthur Jones. The story has to do with Nora Shard, a charming young American heiress, who has written a successful novel.

William P. Carlton plays the male lead, the part of Sir Ralph Newell. Mr. Carlton made his debut on the stage with the late Augustin Daly. He achieved success in "The Belle of New York," in which he played the male lead for two years in London, and later made the song, "In the Shade of the Sheltering Palm," famous when he sang it in "Floradora." As leading man for Anna Held in "Follow Me" he scored again. Then followed over three years with the Castle Square Opera Company, where he played various leads. It was not until quite recently that he accepted one of the many offers he had to appear on the screen. His first production was with Alice Brady.

Warburton Gamble, playing Lord Bissett, is also well known for his stage career. He made his start with Sir Herbert Tree in London. He later played with Forbes Robertson in "Hamlet," and in that production made his first visit to America. Among many other productions he played "Arsene Lupin," a Charles Frohman production, at the Duke of York's Theatre in London. He came to America again in the original production of "Milestones," and following that played Du Maurier in "Diplomacy" in the London production. Later, in America, he supported Elsie Ferguson in "Outcast" and "Margaret Schiller." His picture career began with Hepworth, the English producing company, and since then he has been in America.

Julia Dean appears as Lady Doris Furnival. She has played in numerous Broadway stage successes for a number of years, one of the greatest of these being "The Law of the Land," which scored a success. "Bought and Paid For," "The Round Up" and "The Woman on the Index" are some her other productions. She played in "On with the Dance." She also starred for a brief period in motion pictures. Henry Stephenson as Sir Howard Furnival, Zeffie Tilbury as Mrs. Stanley Shelby, Bijou Fernandez as Lady Carnforth and Alex Kyle as Lord Carnforth complete the cast.

In "Blue Bonnet," Billie Rhodes Amuses and Saddens

THE BLUE BONNET," recently completed for W. W. Hodkinson distribution at the studios of the National Film Corporation of America, is neither comedy nor drama. It is a skilful blending of the two, the desire being to show Billie Rhodes in all phases of her art. The result is that she has moment of comedy, which gradually melt into episodes of dramatic intensity.

In one scene taken in New York after the Billie Rhodes company had made the transcontinental trip from California the star is seen as a street waif sleeping on a park bench at the foot of the Peter Cooper monument in Cooper Square. The contact of a policeman's billy with the waif's torn shoes starts a train of hilarious situations that culminate in a wild chase along a busy thoroughfare with the waif always a lap ahead of the rotund and breathless minion of the law.

A Salvation Army lassie appears and seeks to aid the waif—the scene that shows Billie Rhodes can evoke her audiences to tears one moment and have them howling with glee the next.

"Cupid Forecloses" Is Film Without Villain

BESSIE LOVE'S new feature, "Cupid Forecloses," is soon to be released by Vitagraph, the completed picture having reached here from the Western studio, where it was made under the direction of David Smith.

While the film is by no means namby-pamby, it is not of the "thriller" class. The author has proven that a good story can be written without the usual sex triangle. There is no villain. No one is shot, or stabbed, or otherwise injured. Yet the interest in the little girl who tries hard to keep the loved homestead from falling into other hands by teaching in a country school is maintained throughout.

"Cupid Forecloses" is based on "Hurrying Fate and Geraldine," the novel by Florence Morse Kingsley, and was put in picture form by Stanley Olmstead and Edward J. Montagne. The cast supporting Miss Love includes Dorethea Wolbert, Wallace McDonald, Frank Hayes, Jim Donnelly, Aggie Herring, Jake Abram, Annie Schaeffer, Gordon Griffith and Otto Lederer.

Universal to Produce "Loot."

"Loot," the popular Arthur Somers Roche Saturday Evening Post story, is to be made into a six-reel feature production by Universal, with Darrel Foss and Ora Carew in the leading parts.

Joseph Girard has one of the leading roles in this new production, which is to be directed by William C. Dowlan.

Mathis and Younger Adapt "Fair and Warmer"

JUNE MATHIS, head of the scenario department of Screen Classics, Inc., and A. P. Younger, of the scenario staff, have completed the screen adaptation of "Fair and Warmer," Avery Hopwood's hilarious and record-breaking farce in which May Allison is to be starred. Miss Allison starts work this week in the production. It is her first under the new policy of "fewer, bigger and better" pictures to be made by Screen Classics, Inc., and distributed exclusively by Metro Pictures Corporation.

Henry Otto will direct the production, which will be under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, who is selecting the supporting cast of farceurs. As yet the personnel is incomplete, but it is announced that Eugene Pallette, a player of comedy talents, will have the role of Billy Bartlett opposite Miss Allison, who will, of course, play "Blanny" Wheeler.

Miss Mathis is to scenarize the play. Raised virtually in the atmosphere of the theatre, Miss Mathis early developed her literary powers until she is now one of the foremost women writers for the silent drama. For Screen Classics, Inc., for Metro and for the Nazimova productions she has made scores of adaptations and written a large number of original stories.

A. P. Younger, associated with Miss Mathis in the scenarization, recently joined the Screen Classics staff after serving in the army. He has had experience not only as continuity writer, but also as a director, and has served with Fine Arts, Universal and Triangle.

Helen Weer Was Leading Woman for Love.

Montagu Love, in his latest production, "A Broadway Saint," had for his leading woman Helen Weer. Miss Weer has just been engaged by John Cort to create the leading role in "Kathleen," a dramatic production which Earl Derr Biggers and Christopher Morley have written. "Kathleen" will have a New York run in a prominent Broadway theatre beginning early in September.

"The Simple Life"

Larry Semon Two-Reeler for Vitagraph Has Not as Much Semon Clown Stuff as Usual.

Reviewed by William J. Reilly.

LARRY SEMON'S comedies for Vitagraph have usually given him an amusing lot of clownish performances peculiar to his own physical make-up, not forgetting his facial expression. Despite the fact that his latest, "The Simple Life," was written and directed by Larry himself, it does not give him, as the featured jester, enough opportunity to absorb the eye of the camera.

Instead, it features the eggs, cops and mud puddles which Larry usually avoids in his fun-making. And the eggs stunt goes a bit too far, even for slapstick. The eggs have gone too far themselves.

Some original comedy is introduced on the farm, where "The Simple Life" is lived. Haymows, haystacks, and bales of straw are given big parts, which they fill well. A bevy of farmerettes illustrate why the song has been revised to read, "How Are You Going to Keep Them Down in the City After They've Seen This Farm."

"A Sporting Chance"

A Paramount Comedy of the Lady and the Burglar, with Ethel Clayton in the Role of an "Impulsive Girl."

THERE is more zip in "A Sporting Chance" than the average Lady-and-Burglar kind of story. Ethel Clayton is permitted to treat the affair of reforming a supposed burglar with a flippancy that suggests his true character, and he is so delightfully correct as a gentleman chauffeur that there is no great surprise when his true identity is revealed. The spectator is made aware that there is no very great secret involved, just a case of mistaken identity, which will be solved in the last scenes.

But Miss Clayton cannot help being a source of delight to the eye, and Jack Holt is such a handsome burglar gentleman that no anxiety is felt as to the outcome. It is all so easy that the spectator can sit back and watch the progress of the story with little other interest than that in the personality of the performers. Margaret Green, as a young and impulsive stepmother, is also charming. It is all very delightful, even if it does not amount to much in the end and affords but mild entertainment meanwhile.

The picture pleased a large audience at the Rivoli, and it should please in any theatre where beauty of setting and charm of human personality are appreciated, but the presentation is not up to the standard set in other plays, whose leading roles have been so effectively interpreted by Miss Clayton. A fair success.

Directed by George Melford.

The Story.

"The Sporting Chance" that Miss Carey Brent is willing to give a fellow creature leads her into an adventure with a man in the striped clothes of a prison convict the day her runabout suffers from a punctured tire. She at once recognizes him from a newspaper description as "Harry the Duke," and is impressed by his politeness in helping her change the tire. She offers him a position as chauffeur, her own having just resigned, and thus aids him to escape guards sent in pursuit. Her interest in him thereafter becomes stronger than that of redeeming a fine young fellow. She is suddenly shocked into her good senses by his attempt at familiarity, and turns her attention to an affair into which her young step-mother, Pamela, is drifting with a society parasite named Seward.

This person has in his possession some indiscreet letters written by Pamela at an early period of her life, and is using them to bring about a relation dangerous to the happiness of Pamela and to the family honor. Carey enters the conflict to win Seward herself and thus get possession of the letters. She permits attentions from Seward until he is completely fascinated. An overheard telephone conversation between Seward and Pamela reveals to the chauffeur and to Carey how the young wife is being blackmailed. Each goes separately to the rooms of the blackmailer, and, between them, the letters are recovered. Carey has heard, meanwhile, that Harry the Duke has been recaptured. The chauffeur can deceive her no longer. He is merely a broker who was knocked down by the escaping convict, his real name is Paul Sayre. Sayre confesses that his romantic interest in the girl led him to continue the role, and she forgives him in the end.

'The Woman Michael Married'

Robertson-Cole Production Featuring Bessie Barriscale Not Up to Former Standards.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Robertson-Cole production, "The Woman Michael Married," released through the Exhibitors Mutual, and featuring Bessie Barriscale, is not up to the standard of recent Barriscale productions.

The fault of the production lies principally in the direction, although the story is scarcely strong enough to supply legitimate action for five reels of film. Bessie Barriscale sustains her reputation in spite of the fact that the role allotted her is not particularly sympathetic. One of the glaring artificialities of the picture occurs when, in order to establish the fundamental situation of the story, a child is allowed to wander out on the rocks and fall into the water, so that the heroine, supposedly a professional diver, may rescue him and provide a reason for the offer of a reward, and the converting of the reward into the one startling revelation of the production.

From this point the story lures the spectator into the hope of dramatic achievement, which fails to put in an appearance. And it is in vain that he looks for the kiss of reconciliation, in quest of which he is dragged through moment after moment of disquieting anticipation, until finally it is decided that Michael and his wife will make up.

Jack Holt and Marcia Manon do noticeably good work in the production.

The Story.

The heroine of the story, "The Woman Michael Married," comes on the scene when Mrs. Steele, a society leader, is presenting one of her new frivolities in the shape of a swimming fete. Mira Sacky, the orphan daughter of a music master, appears as one of the features of the day in a diving act, and is insulted by the hostess because she wins too much attention from her male guests.

When a fifty dollar check arrives at Mira's home as compensation for her services, she recalls a letter left her by her father, in which he tells her that the inheritance of a beautiful voice is all he has to leave her, and that she should not accept money from any man unless she has a just claim on him, because she will be made to pay.

Michael Ordsway, a rich man's son, is thrown from a horse on the polo grounds. One morning, when he is reclining on the beach during the convalescent period, Mrs. Steele's little boy falls from the rocks into the water. Mira, also wandering on the beach, throws off her outer garments and dives into the water, bringing the child to safety. When asked to name her own reward, Mira startles

"Sahara" Is Booked Throughout Country by Large Theatres and Will Be Exhibited with Special Effects

J. PARKER READ, JR.'S, presentation of Louise Glaum in "Sahara" is accumulating a record of public successes. This W. W. Hodkinson special release during the past week has been booked for elaborately advertised first runs in many more of the largest first-run theatres of the country. Marcus Loew and Nicholas M. Schenck personally booked the production for the Loew Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, after having witnessed the metropolitan success of the picture.

Eugene Roth's California Theatre, San Francisco, has booked the film, and will give it a characteristic presentation within the next fortnight. Charles H. Williams, manager of the Strand Theatre, Providence, R. I., during the week just ended closed a contract for an immediate playing date.

In Cincinnati it will be presented at advanced admission prices in Klaw and Erlanger's Grand Opera House within a fortnight, and the plans of its exhibitors call for more advertising and showmanship than have been linked up with a picture in the previous motion picture history of the city. Similar plans for presentation have been made in Toledo. Elizabeth Johnson, the popular Houston exhibitor, pronounces it to be the handsomest picture she has ever booked, and wired her house manager not to present it during her absence in New York, as she wished to handle the showmanship and advertising in person on her return.

In Dallas the film has been booked at the Jefferson Theatre for immediate playing date, and this production likewise will have the most skilfully advertised presentation of recent months over the entire Saenger Circuit in New Orleans, with a first-run at the Saenger Strand.

Give British Atmosphere to "A Woman of Pleasure"

WITH the broad expanse of the Pacific on one side and the Malibu range of mountains of southern California on the other, Blanche Sweet, Jesse D. Hampton star, is working on the initial scenes of her production, "A Woman of Pleasure," from the James Willard melodrama, to be released by Pathe.

No more beautiful location for the English fishing village could have been selected. Here, too, Mr. Hampton and his technical director, Fred Gabourie, have erected the village street, typical of the English coast, where the story opens. Every building is true to the country. Mr. Hampton lived several years in England, and Mr. Gabourie, too, has visited nearly all parts of the kingdom with theatrical companies. They knew just what the structures should be, even to the costumes of the villagers of the late '90s.

Miss Sweet was delighted when she saw the street. In the first part of the story she is playing a little school teacher, with visions of a far different life from what she has found in the staid, rural village. There she lays the foundation for the great drama of life, which is depicted in social London, and later in South Africa.

Brandt Exploits Chaplin's Latest with Novel Stunt

NO photographs are available as illustrations for this story, because on four different occasions, so great were the crowds attracted by the stunt that the cameraman was "mobbed" by throngs who overturned his camera and broke his plates into bits.

This excitement took place July 4 at Coney Island, New York, when William Brandt, manager of Feltman's Open Airdome, hired an imitation Charlie Chaplin to lead a real cow up and down Surf Avenue, unquestionably the most crowded thoroughfare in the world, as a stunt in exploitation of "Sunnyside," Charlie Chaplin's third million dollar comedy released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Using the cow's milk bag for a street cleaner, the imitation of the funniest man in the world would religiously stop at every noticeable chunk of dirt in the street and cleanse said bit of roadway with a squirt from Bossy's bag. And there were other hilarious things that made the crowd feel funny.

The congestion finally became so great on an already crowded thoroughfare, that the police requested Mr. Brandt to "put the cow in a barn."

Alice Lake Has Star Role in "Shades of Shakespeare"

WITH a record of many leading roles in drama and comedy to her credit, Alice Lake is now presented at the head of a feature cast in "Shades of Shakespeare," the Christie special comedy release for July. Prints of this special are being shipped to the exchanges booking Christie productions, and will be ready for showing about July 20.

In the picture with Miss Lake are Earle Rodney, Eddie Barry, Eugene Corey, Thomas Rickets, Jack Henderson, Al Haynes and Ward Caulfield.

"Shades of Shakespeare" was constructed around a plot much varied from those of the first three Christie specials in which Fay Tincher headed the feature cast. The leading character played by Alice Lake is that of a popular girl in a small town who undertakes to present an amateur performance at the local opera house. After turning down Ibsen, Shaw, Oscar Wilde and Shakespeare, Alice decides the only way to get a good play is to write one herself.

Three Leading Women in "Three Black Eyes"

THE descriptive caption, "Three Black Eyes," is the working title of Triangle's fifth starring vehicle for Taylor Holmes, now in production at their Fort Lee studio, to be released the latter part of August. Charles Horan is performing double service for the jovial star, first by having written the story, and now by directing the production.

The cast, which is an unusually large one, supplies roles for no less than three leading women, supporting Mr. Holmes—Miss Clara Moores, who formerly was associated with Mr. Holmes in his Essanay production, "A Pair of Sixes," and who, for the past two years, has been featured as the leading woman for William Hodge, in his stage success, "A Cure for Curables;" Miss Louise Orth, who made her first appearance in pictures under the direction of D. W. Griffith, and who, for the past two seasons, has enjoyed success in her portrayal of the role of "Tisha," the Egyptian, in "The Wanderer," which was originally played by Florence Reed, when this success was presented for the first time on Broadway; and Diana Allen, one of the Follies beauties. William Bailey and Gordon Standing are also in the supporting cast, Mr. Standing reappearing on the screen for the first time since his return from twenty months' service in Europe as a member of the Second Division of the American Army.

Many of the scenes, which were shot during the recent torrid spell, were filmed aboard the private yacht, "Taro," the property of Charles B. Prettyman, of Philadelphia.

Despite fog and much rainy weather, the exteriors are now completed, and the star, his director, and the supporting cast are well under way on the interiors, which include local shots of prominent New York cafes and a fashionable apartment hotel.

Williams Has Semi-Dual Role.

The latest Earle Williams Vitagraph feature, "The Hornet's Nest," which is awaiting an early release, has reached New York from the West Coast studio.

"The Hornet's Nest" was adapted from the story of the same name by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow. While Mr. Williams is not the Hornet himself, appearing more as Asche Colvin, club and society man, he does occasionally assume the character of the master crook, and the dual role affords the star an exceptionally strong opportunity to display his versatility. The cast includes Vola Vale, Brinsley Shaw, Ogden Crane, Kathleen Kirkham, Edward McWade and others. James Young directed the picture.

"The Tiger Lily"

Five-Reel American-Pathe Subject Features Margarita Fisher in Vendetta Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN THIS five-reel picture, "The Tiger Lily," Margarita Fisher is cast in the role of Carmina, a pretty Italian girl. The story contains many Italian characters and centers about an inn conducted by the girl's uncle in America. Near the inn is the home of a wealthy American, Philip Remington, who has married an Italian woman, and the course of events plunge the story into the entanglements of a vendetta which originated in Italy, years before.

The tale is an interesting one, but moves too slowly at the begining, and is rather obvious in plot. This renders certain dramatic moments less thrilling than they would otherwise be, since the spectator is able to anticipate much of what is coming.

The settings are pleasing throughout and in keeping with the story. The scenes in the first reel, picturing the life led by Carmina at the inn, are full of atmosphere, and the Italian types are good. Margarita Fisher appears to advantage in her role, and E. Alyn Warren makes the most of his sanguinary part as Giovanni.

One of the best touches in this production is the scene in which Carmina induces the organ grinder, Antonio, to sing his old aria from Pagliacci. The settings in and about the Remington home are in pleasing contrast with those taken at the inn.

The Story.

Carmina, in "The Tiger Lily," is an Italian girl, living with her uncle, Luigi, at an American inn conducted by the latter. The inn is a resort for many Italians of the neighborhood and the girl is a great favorite with everyone. Giovanni, a friend of Luigi's, desires to marry the girl.

The heroine meets David Remington, a son of Philip Remington, who owns the land on which the inn is located. David comes to protest to Luigi about unwelcome publicity that has been visited upon the inn because of certain knife duels fought there. Giovanni sees David talking to Carmina and becomes intensely jealous.

Giovanni, fearing the girl will slip out of his hands, pays Luigi a price for her, and plans are made for a speedy wedding. Carmina, learning of this, flees from the inn, and is picked up by David in his automobile and taken home. Here she remains as a guest of the Remingtons, much to the disgust of Dorothy Van Rensselaer, who has laid plans to capture David herself.

"Easy to Make Money"

Metro Picture Starring Bert Lytell Has Light Plot and Breezy Action.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE one touch of originality in "Easy to Make Money," the latest Metro Production to star Bert Lytell, is in rewarding a professional safe cracker by making him the cashier of a bank, after he has been caught trying to blow open the safe. The situations that lead up to this astonishing exhibition of confidence in human nature are known as sure-fire, and start off with the wild but warm hearted hero, whose wealthy father is kept busy handing him out checks, winning a pool match at the club when he should have been at the party of his betrothed. Winning bets from his father is the young man's favorite occupation, next to being arrested for breaking the speed limit.

The plot is light and becomes farcial at times, but it is acted in a bright and breezy way, and its whole purpose is to amuse. Bert Lytell, as James Frederick Slocum, Jr., has caught the spirit of the character, and his comedy method is just suited to the likable young chap. He is admirably supported by Gertrude Selby as Ethel Wheeler, Frank Currier as the elder Slocum, and Bull Montana as the safe cracker. Edwin Carewe has directed the picture with good results.

The Story.

"Easy to Make Money" lives up to its name. Young Jimmie Slocum, who keeps his father busy paying his fines and other financial obligations, is always winning bets from the elder Slocum. After betting his father $25,000 that he will not be arrested more than once during the coming year, the boy goes into a saloon, smashes up the place and is given twelve months in jail, at his trial. While in prison, his cellmate is a professional bank robber. Released after three months' imprisonment through the efforts of Slocum, senior, the cellmates part at the prison door and do not meet again until Jimmie, who has started a bank in a small town with his $25,000, discovers his friend at work on the door of the safe. The reformation of the criminal follows, and he is rewarded by being made the cashier of Jimmie's institution.

Noteworthy Cast in "The Girl from Outside," New Rex Beach Picture Released by Goldwyn

ALASKA is a country which offers a never-ending source to the fertility of the imagination of Rex Beach. "The Girl from Outside," which will soon be released by Goldwyn, is his latest picture. Exhibitors who like a picture to have "action," exhibitors who like pictures to have "atmosphere," and exhibitors who like a picture to have "logic," will all be satisfied by Beach's latest. It is a picture with a background of Alaskan scenes, against which a story is developed in accordance with the laws of truth and with the peculiar vital "punch" which Rex Beach has injected into the motion-picture.

"The Girl from Outside" is a young woman (played exquisitely by Clara Horton) who arrives friendless in the town of Nome as the result of having been orphaned while on her way north with her father. She has no sooner landed in the town when she is "spotted" by Denton (Wilton Taylor), a notorious hotel-keeper and gambler. He is instantly covetous of her beauty and youth, but his plans are interfered with by "The Curly Kid" (Cullen Landis).

"The Curly Kid" is the young leader of five scalawags, each one of whom he rallies to the defense of June ("the girl from outside") and all of whom fall in love with her. She is unaware that "The Curly Kid" is at times a robber; and when he offers to lend her money to start a hotel, she accepts it. She thus becomes associated with Harry Hope (Hallam Cooley), a capitalist, with whom she falls in love. He reciprocates her affection.

Sydney Ainsworth, Walter McNamara, Ernest Spencer, and Colin Kenney, as "Spencer," "Mike," "The Swede," and "The Magpie" respectfully do excellent "bits" as the four scalawags. The Gambler and Chow (Louis Cheung) are excellently portrayed.

Alice Brady Leaves for Nantucket Island.

Miss Brady's first vehicle as a Realart star will be a picturization of "Sinners," from the stage success of the same name by Owen Davis. Miss Brady also played the leading role in the stage version.

Eve Unsell, who recently sailed for England to be connected with the Famous Players-Lasky there, has adapted the play to fit screen conditions. The production will be made under the direction of Kenneth Webb.

Levi Praises Coming Robertson-Cole Films

NEWTON LEVI, Pacific Coast Supervisor for Exhibitors Mutual, last week dropped into Los Angeles for a tour of the studios where Robertson-Cole features are being produced. He came away highly satisfied with the product that is in store for the Exhibitors Mutual sales force. In fact, he was so impressed with the promise held forth by the productions, that he dispatched the following letter to S. J. Rollo, director of sales and exchanges of Exhibitors Mutual:

"We believe that you have nothing on us when it comes to optimism. While in Los Angeles, I got a peek at the forthcoming Hayakawa production, 'The Gray Horizon,' and believe me, it has anything he has done for us cheated a mile.

"We also had a chat with Jesse D. Hampton, who showed me a heap of correspondence relative to securing popular novels for future productions from his studio. 'The Pagan God,' which will be Warner's next, certainly looks good, and we saw a lot of stills on 'Sage-Brush Hamlet.'"

Reports Heavy Bookings on Post-Nature Pictures

THE trend of exhibitors toward good short subjects that lend tone and variety to their programs is exemplified in a striking manner by the heavy bookings of the Paramount-Post Nature Pictures, which, according to a statement by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, have had an exceptional reception since the announcement that Famous Players-Lasky was to release them next season.

Aside from the marked originality of the Paramount-Post Nature Pictures, the success which they achieved when shown at special engagements, last spring, at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, has been a large factor in their increasing popularity.

Since the announcement that, beginning September 1, Famous Players-Lasky would release twenty-six of these subjects during the coming season, exhibitors all over the country have proved by their demand for these pictures that beautiful photography in the treatment of beautiful subjects has a distinct field in the motion picture industry. Nearly half of the subjects already have been completed.

"Lucky Thirteen" Sunshines as Summer Features

THE comedy situation during the summer is one of extreme concern to aggressive exhibitors who are anxious to maintain the standard of their program and keep up the box office drawing power," says Tom North, general manager of Fox Film short subjects.

"It is a matter of common knowledge that producers generally show a tendency to curtail production and release of comedies at this time of year, thus preventing the exhibitor from obtaining his usual supply of fun material. Furthermore, this scarcity of comedy pictures tends to increase the price of two-reel comedies.

"It was the far-sighted exhibitors who realized the additional box office value conferred upon the big features by having a two-reel comedy on the bill, as well as the necessity of sending warm weather audiences away in good humor after viewing a serious subject; it was these exhibitors who besieged William Fox with the demand that he solve their comedy problem by releasing one sure-fire Sunshine comedy each week.

"In answer to this demand, Mr. Fox released at the rate of one a week 'The Lucky Thirteen,' representing the thirteen biggest Fox Sunshine comedy successes. As proof of the wisdom of these exhibitors, we are doing fully five times as much business on these Sunshine comedies as our most enthusiastic hopes called for."

In "Nugget Nell" Dorothy Gish Satirizes Wild West

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY promises that "Nugget Nell," which is released July 27, will prove one of the most enjoyable of the Dorothy Gish feature comedies.

Described as "a burlesque travesty on the wild and 'movie' West," "Nugget Nell" was written by John R. Cornish, who possesses a rare gift of satire. The production was directed by Elmer Clifton, who has produced all of Miss Gish's Paramount pictures.

David Butler, Raymond Cannon, Regina Sarle, James Farley, Bob Fleming, Wilbur Higbey and Emily Chichester are among those in the cast.

John Leezer, the cameraman, is said to have obtained some rarely beautiful shots of mountain scenery. One panorama scene, about fifty feet in length, starts in the deepest woods, then emerges into the sunlight and shows in the distance a valley comprising some four hundred square miles.

"Rose of the West"

Five-Reel Fox Subject Tells Entertaining and Dramatic Story of Canadian Northwest.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

STORIES of the Canadian wilds have certain features in common and depend upon their excellence of handling for their power to entertain. This five-reel Fox subject, "The Rose of the West," is a typical number of its kind, but rises well above the average in the matter of general presentation. The stage is really set for a melodrama, but the work of the cast is so excellent that the picture deserves the classification of straight drama. It has many strong moments and the continuity is unusually good.

Madlaine Traverse heads the competent cast, appearing as the wife of a woodsman named Pierre, who disappears for three years, and returns just as the wife is about to marry a member of the Mounted Police. Frank Leigh brings out the brutal character of Pierre, and Thomas Santschi makes an appealing figure as Lieut. Col. Bruce Knight. Minna Prevost is a splendid minor character in the role of Natoosh, and Jack Nelson plays the part of the half-breed to the life.

Some beautiful locations have been selected for this production, the canoeing scenes being particularly attractive. As a whole, the production is conventional in its general type, but has a strong story interest and has been given fine direction. It is a subject that will hold an audience in good style.

The Story.

Rose Labelle is the wife of a trapper named Pierre, and they have a daughter, Angela. At the time the story, "Rose of the West," opens, Pierre has been absent more than two years, and the wife and daughter are keeping their long vigil in the snowbound cabin, with no other company than their Indian servant, Natoosh, and her half-breed son, Jules.

During a storm, Lieut. Col. Bruce Knight knocks on the door and is admitted. He is in love with Rose Labelle, and has been imploring her to marry him, as everyone believes Pierre is dead. Rose wishes to wait until spring before taking so grave a step. Jules brings in a report that Pierre was killed by an avalanche, and on hearing this Rose determines to marry Knight.

With the coming of spring, the wedding preparations are completed, but Pierre returns before the ceremony has been performed. He thrusts Knight from the cabin and treats the wife brutally. Rose endures her lot without complaint until Pierre begins bargaining to sell Angela to a wealthy land owner, named Beaudry, for a strip of land, on which he has discovered gold. Rose protects Angela temporarily, but Pierre arranges to have her taken to Beaudry in a distant cabin. Both Rose and Jules follow. Rose shoots and kills Beaudry. Later, when Rose is about to be arrested, Jules kills Pierre and is himself mortally wounded. He assumes the blame for Beaudry's death also before he himself dies, and Rose is free to marry Knight.

Cast of Beauties Surrounds Bert Lytell in Metro Production of "Lombardi Ltd."

MAXWELL KARGER, director general of Screen Classics, Inc., feature productions, has practically completed his personal selection of the cast to support Bert Lytell in "Lombardi, Ltd.," a picturization of the comedy by Frederic and Fanny Hatton that was produced on the stage by Oliver Morosco for a continuous run of more than two years in New York and on the road.

The cast is about ninety per cent. feminine—a real beauty cast. Alice Lake, Juanita Hansen, Vera Lewis, Thea Talbot, Ann May and Jean Mendoza comprise the sextet of lovely girls who surround Tito Lombardi in his fashionable Fifth avenue dressmaking establishment.

Miss Lake has been selected for the part of Norah Blake, Lombardi's assistant in his gown shop. Miss Hansen is cast as Phyllis Manning, Lombardi's fiancee.

Two Parts Unfilled.

Joseph Kilgour has been chosen to play the part of Robert Tarrant, man about town. Miss Lewis is cast as Mollie, Miss Talbot as Eloise, Miss Mendoza as Daisy, a model, and Miss May as Lida. The parts of Riccardo ("Rickey") Tosello, the "vermicelli king" and Max Strohm, a theatrical manager, are the two as yet unfilled.

In addition to the beautiful girls who will have principal roles in support of Bert Lytell, there will be a bevy of feminine loveliness as mannequins, fashionable shoppers, etc., all selected for their charms and all gowned in the height of ultra fashion.

June Mathis Scenarizes Play.

June Mathis adapted the Hattons' play to the screen and wrote the continuity for the production.

Jack Conway is to direct the production. Robert B. Kurrle will preside at the camera.

"The Wolf" Nears Completion.

Word comes from Vitagraph's West Coast studio at Hollywood that the work on "The Wolf," the picture version of Eugene Walter's drama of that name, has progressed rapidly and that the picture will be completed in a few days. The major portions of the scenes were taken on the picturesque shores of Lake Tahoe, Cal., and there remained but little work to do in the studio when the outdoor work was finished.

Earle Williams has the star part in the new feature, that of Jules Beaubien, played by William Courtenay in the original stage version. Others in the cast include Brinsley Shaw, George Nichols, Jane Novak, Robert McKim, Billie Mason and Beulah Clark. The picture was directed by James Young.

Davidson Practiced Law Prior to Entering Screendom

A FIGHTING hero is William B. Davidson, leading man for Virginia Pearson in the production, "Impossible Catherine," which is now in the course of preparation. Perhaps his fighting tendencies are inherited from the time he occasionally played heavies.

Davidson practiced law after his graduation from Columbia and New York Law School, but almost five years ago business conditions brought about by the world war made him decide to enter a new profession. He joined the Vitagraph company, and before long was playing leads.

Actor and Song Writer.

Next he became one of Metro's leading men. He played opposite Ethel Barrymore in "White Raven" and other productions, and his personality was a striking note in many plays supporting Emily Stevens, Viola Dana, Emmy Wehlen, Mabel Taliaferro and Valli Valli. Among other stars he has played opposite are Pauline Frederick and Madge Kennedy.

Davidson, as well as being an actor, is a writer of songs, and has written the music for "I Want to Go Back to Blighty" and "Gypsy Moonbeams." His career was temporarily interrupted upon America's entry into the war. He enlisted in the field artillery and won his commission at Camp Zachary Taylor in Louisville. Before he could see active service the armistice was signed.

"A Sagebrush Hamlet" Is Next Desmond Western

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Robertson-Cole that "A Sagebrush Hamlet," the next William Desmond production for distribution by Exhibitors Mutual, is another Western offering with a strong comedy relief, which was selected because of the success of "The Mints of Hell," a picture in which Desmond was compelled to "act" throughout. The story by George Elwood Jenks seems to have all the elements so acceptable to fans who like Westerns, mountain and desert scenery, hard riding cowboys and equally hard riding and thoroughly unscrupulous heavies. Then, of course there is a romance. In this instance the usual Eastern girl, who comes West to live, is the heroine, but contrary to the prescribed formula, Desmond not only fails to fall in love with the girl, but tries desperately to lose her. How the girl finally wins his love is one of the many high lights.

Desmond was surrounded by an excellent cast, which was ably handled by Director Joseph J. Franz.

Jesse D. Hampton, who supervised the production, elected five most competent portrayers of Western characters to support Desmond. These are, Edward Piel, George Field, Frank Lanning, Walter Perry and William Patton.

"The Golden Song" Becomes "The World and Its Woman"

GOLDWYN announces that the title of the new Geraldine Farrar production of the Thompson Buchanan story of contemporary Russian life has been changed from "The Golden Song" to "The World and Its Woman."

As the daughter of an American engineer who has lost his fortune in worthless stocks, Geraldine Farrar plays the part of the protege of a powerful yet kindly Russian prince who insures her musical talents their full development. After his death her triumph in the opera house at Petrograd attracts the son of her benefactor, whom she has secretly and vainly loved since girlhood. He, however, has married a woman of his class, and learned too late of her unfaithfulness. However, his interest in the American singer grows to an overwhelming love, and the death of his wife and her lover in the Russian revolution opens the way for a happy conclusion.

Holmes Film Pictures Great Cataract.

A waterfall fifty feet higher than Niagara, more extended and equally beautiful, is shown in the July 13 Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelogue. "The Cataracts of the Iguassu," in Brazil, viewed from different vantage points above and below the grand gorge beautiful in the extreme, in the vicinity of the Grand Hotel del Iguassu, are most wonderful to behold. All kinds of chances were taken to get these pictures, the cameramen risking their lives over the edges of cliffs, being lowered by ropes, and in dozens of other ways recklessly exposing themselves to danger—but the results were worth it, it is declared. Brazil has many beauty spots, but none more beautiful or interesting than these tumbling waters of the Iguassu.

"The Isle of Jewels" Now in Production.

"The Isle of Jewels," Arthur F. Beck serial to be released through Pathe, is now in production at the Crystal studios in New York City. The featured players are Stuart Holmes and Frances Mann. Perry Verkoff is directing the serial.

The story and scenario was written by Charles Turner Dazey, the author of the stage success, "In Old Kentucky." Scenes will be taken in New York, Bermuda and California.

"The Spitfire of Seville"

Six-Reel Universal Special Production Tells Colorful Story of Sunny Spain.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS six-reel Universal production, "The Spitfire of Seville," contains a wealth of charming atmosphere and its picturesque effects in general will more than compensate for some of its dramatic shortcomings. The story is told in Spain and nothing is wanting in the way of special sets and local color, and the bright, attractive photography is a big asset.

From the standpoint of plot, the subject is entertaining throughout, though the action is quite mechanical at times and it dips toward the close into melodrama that is not entirely convincing. This latter drawback will not interfere however with the picture's rank as better than the average, since it has so much in its favor.

The cast is generally pleasing, with Hedda Nova as the Spanish heroine, a role well suited to her, and Thurston Hall as the American artist-hero. The first scenes occur in the mountain country near Seville, where a band of outlaws have for years defied law and order. Later the story is carried to the city itself. The mountain storm is splendidly staged, and the Fiesta of the Roses is attractively pictured. The situations as a whole are of a familiar type, and this partly accounts for the mechanical movement in the final scenes

The Story.

Carmelita Delgado, in "The Spitfire of Seville," is the daughter of Old Don Salvador, for years leader of a band of outlaws. The don is killed, and Carmelita promises to wed the best man of the band. Pedro and Leonardo, two of the younger members, fight a knife duel for the girl, and Pedro wins. Carmelita promises to wed him at the Fiesta of the Roses.

But while dressed in boy's clothes, Carmelita meets a young American artist, named Kent Staunton. He believes her to be a boy, and she passes a night in Kent's cabin during a storm, leaving at dawn. Pedro, learning of this, becomes insanely jealous and attacks Kent, but the latter disarms the bandit, and Pedro is taken to prison in Seville.

Kent returns to his Seville studio, and Carmelita goes to the city. She taunts Pedro in prison for being captured, and then visits Kent's studio, telling the artist her brother sent her. At the studio Carmelita becomes jealous of Alice Foster, a friend of the artist. She vows to kill Kent, having been told by Pedro that the American was a spy. But when her moment comes, Carmelita weakens and confesses her love for Kent.

The artist paints her picture and proposes to hold an exhibition of it. Pedro escapes during the Fiesta of the Roses and destroys the picture, but later he is killed, and Carmelita marries Kent.

'The Unbroken Promise"

Five-Part Triangle Production Featuring Jane Miller Is of Indifferent Quality.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Triangle production, "The Unbroken Promise," featuring Jane Miller, is rich in Western atmosphere, having been made in the region of Texas sheep and cattle ranches, but lacking in dramatic values and skill of direction. It is unfortunate that many of the players have over-acted their parts, and that the director has persisted in making closeups of scenes to which distance would have lent enchantment. An effort has also been made to drag in comedy which refuses to "stay put," much to the detriment of the picture; and the spectator is apt to get out of sorts with the author's characterization, which does not always ring true.

William Human and Sydney Mason do good work, but Jane Miller can not yet lay a legitimate claim to a place in stardom.

"Sun-Up," Film Based on Effect of Sunrise on Human Mind, Will be Shown at Park

GERALD F. BACON, whose production, "Sun-Up," starring Lucy Cotton, is completed, announces that he has finished plans for the second of his series of specials, and will start actual production within the next week. Mr. Bacon says that he is not ready to announce the title of his second production, but states that it will be a screen version of a well-known dramatic success, written by a prominent author, who is in close co-operation with the Bacon forces.

Mr. Bacon's first production is a screen version of Max Marcin's "Substitute Prisoner," and the theme of the story is based on the psychic value of the sun's rise and the influence it has on the actions of men or women contemplating self-destruction. Upon this theme Mr. Bacon's production is based.

In the cast are Lucy Cotton, George LeGuere, Thurlow Bergen, Frank O'Connor, Lillian Bacon, Morgan Coman, Edouarde Durand, Bert Lee and James Cullum. The picture was directed by Oliver D. Bailey, under the supervision of Mr. Bacon. Edward Earl was photographer. A private showing for the trade and press will be given at the Park Theatre, Columbus Circle, Monday morning, July 24, at 11:00 o'clock. Invitations have been sent to the trade and daily press.

Mr. Bacon will produce a series of eighteen special productions, all of which will follow along the lines of his first.

Frank G. Hall, president of Independent Sales Corporation will handle the distribution of Mr. Bacon's productions. He announces that "Sun-Up" will be placed in the hands of the Film Clearing House, his distributing organization, within the next two weeks.

Blackton Adds Three to "Dawn" Cast.

J. Stuart Blackton, president and director general of the J. Stuart Blackton Feature Pictures, Inc., has signed Harry Davenport, Flora Finch and Gladys Valerie for important roles in the screen version of "Dawn," a story from the pen of Eleanor H. Porter, author of the "Pollyanna" stories, which he put into production at his reconstructed studios in Brooklyn last week.

Harry Davenport is one of the best known character men in the theatrical and motion picture professions.

Flora Finch does not need any introduction, her work alone and opposite the late John Bunny in Vitagraph comedies having been too distinctive to be ever forgotten. Gladys Valerie is the young emotional ingenue lead who scored with Marguerite Clark in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and also in other Paramount pictures, as well as Vitagraph and Select productions.

"The Other Man's Wife" Is Still Going Over Big

FRANK G. HALL'S late feature on his list of special releases, "The Other Man's Wife," co-starring Stuart Holmes and Ellen Cassidy, is now on its eighth week of exhibition throughout the country, and, according to reports sent to the New York offices of Independent Sales Corporation from the Film Clearing House branch managers and the exhibitors who have shown this picture for one, two and three days' runs, it represents one of the most popular box office attractions on Mr. Hall's long list of picture offerings.

Quoting from the Wheeling, W. Va., Register, "'The Other Man's Wife' opened during the week of July 1 at the leading theatre in the Capitol City to one of the largest houses ever played to with a special attraction." The writer said: "An exceptionally large crowd witnessed the first showing of 'The Other Man's Wife,' a great photoplay in which Stuart Holmes appears in the leading role. Stuart is ever popular here, and his admirers enjoyed one of his best plays at last night's performance."

Reports of a like nature have come from every section of the country.

"World Aflame" Is Praised by Former U. S. Senator

A FAR better political play than 'The Man of the Hour,' as sweet and appealing a love story as has been written since Tom Robertson gave us 'Caste,' in many ways a more powerful argument and offering a simpler solution of tremendous industrial problems than numberless speeches I have heard on the floor of Congress."

This is former U. S. Senator James Hamilton Lewis' opinion of "The World Aflame," Frank Keenan's newest production to be released by Pathe on August 17. Col. Lewis came on to New York from Washington, whither he journeyed from Chicago to see President Wilson following the President's arrival home. While in the city he was invited to a private view of the Keenan feature, and it was after the projection that he expressed himself as quoted.

Hall Reports Increased Bookings on Willard Film

ACCORDING to reports received from exhibitors throughout the country who have shown the Jess Willard picture, "The Challenge of Chance," the fact that Willard lost the championship battle at Toledo, July 4, has enhanced the value of the picture as a box office attraction rather than lowered it.

The reason for this is given in the report of one well known exhibitor who ran the picture for two weeks to capacity business. He wrote Frank G. Hall, who is handling the distribution of "The Challenge of Chance": "Although Willard lost to Dempsey in the championship bout of July, he received from the prominent sport writers of this country the greatest tribute that can be paid a true sportsman. They were unanimous in their opinion that Willard showed himself to be the gamest of the game and a sportsman of the highest quality.

"'The Challenge of Chance' went over big because of three things. First, it is a big Western drama; secondly, it presents Willard as a true American, and thirdly, it carries the three big elements of the drama whether it be spoken or silent—adventure, romance and love."

The above, according to Mr. Hall, is the opinion prevailing among the exhibitors who have shown the Willard picture. Mr. Hall reports that the bookings on the production have jumped a good percentage since the Willard-Dempsey contest, and he attributes this increased demand to the fact that the American public is attracted by a true sportsman rather than distracted by the fact that a good man was beaten by a better one.

Coney Island Forms Locale for Latest Capitol Comedy

DURING "Smiling Bill" Parsons' recent trip East, he utilized the opportunity to follow out his policy of presenting each new Capitol Comedy in a different setting. This time he chose Coney Island, New York, as the place to make his latest offering, "They're Off."

Mr. Parsons' determination to create new backgrounds for his stories has resulted in a wide increase in the star's popularity.

In "They're Off," "Smiling Bill" shoots the chutes, eats "hot dogs," rides the ponies, and finally is thoroughly bumped about on a revolving floor. But all this is done in the company of a delightful ingenue, who is bent upon having a good time at the Island.

And when her husband finally locates her and hales her to court, she discovers that the judge is none other than her partner in hilarity, "Smiling Bill" himself. And being a Mason, "Smiling Bill" doesn't tell, but confines himself to a few well addressed remarks to husbands who do not know how to entertain their wives on summer evenings.

relationship with the Corliss family, whose ranch is side by side with his. Larger developments breed jealousies, and when Nell Loring has grown to womanhood, and both of the Corliss' sons have fallen in love with her, she finds herself facing a serious problem in the enmity of the older members of the family.

A graver question still arises when she feels herself called upon to be the saviour of Billy Corliss, weak willed and cowardly, and also a drunkard. In hopes that her friendship will help him, she promises to marry him if he will go away and learn to give up liquor. At the same time she is in love with John Corliss, to whom she refuses to disclose the fact, until Billy finally, forced through circumstances to straighten up, returns to the scene a changed man and able to stand on his own feet.

Various side issues in which a villainous cow puncher takes part, and is finally killed, add color to the story.

The Story of a Man Who Even Faced the Muzzle of a Drawn Revolver Rather Than Break His Solemn Promise Never to Take a Life.

Advertising Angles: Identify Miss Miller through the information carried in the press sheet. Advertise it widely as a Western play which does not have to depend upon shooting for its appeal. There is a good chance here to raise the old discussion as to whether it ever pays to marry a drunkard in the hope of reforming him. Start the discussion first, and then hook this production onto it.

"In His Brother's Place"

Five-Reel Metro Pictures Production Features Hale Hamilton in Dual Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A CONGENIAL humor hangs about this five-reel Metro Picture, entitled "In His Brother's Place." It was written by Hale Hamilton, and the author enacts an entertaining dual role, that of twin brothers, one a minister of the gospel, and the other a business man. There are countless instances of double exposure photography, which is so accurately timed that it defies detection, and while this type of story has been frequently enacted, this picture contains a lot of new business and carries the interest well. The plot is of average strength.

The two characters are differentiated in such a manner that there is never any doubt as to which is on the screen. The young minister, Nelson Drake, is a sober fellow, worried about life in general and his brother's worldly ways in particular. The brother, J. Barrington Drake, has a ready smile and knows no cares. Both return home to their parents' wedding anniversary, and J. Barrington, learning of Nelson's semi-failure as a minister, proposes that he take his place in the pulpit and see if he cannot build up the congregation. The general situation offers room for many complications, including a badly mixed love affair. In the end, the brothers wed two sisters, and the story winds up with the author-actor kissing two girls at once.

The story has a good small town atmosphere and is one that should have wide appeal.

Fairbanks Makes Quick Changes in New Film

THERE is so much activity going on around the Douglas Fairbanks studios in Hollywood these days that the casual observer might think that there were three companies working instead of one. As a matter of fact, for all practical purposes there are three companies at work, all with the energetic Doug in the stellar role.

No quick-change artist on the vaudeville stage has anything on the irrepressible Fairbanks these days.

He has three distinct working crews busy on his first United Artists release. As soon as he finishes with one bunch he jumps to another gang that is all set up and waiting for him. Sometimes it means a change of make-up and costume.

Joe Henaberry is in charge of the first company and is director general for the picture. Art Rosson has a second outfit, and Victor Fleming has the third.

Each director has two cameramen and electricians, and, while Doug is working on one set, the waiting directors are either shooting scenes in which Fairbanks is not included, or are getting the set ready for action.

This division of work was made necessary by the magnitude of the sets and the diversity of the action in Doug's premiere production for the "Big Four."

To get the proper atmosphere and lighting in some of the big sets a tremendous amount of detail work was necessary, and in order to avoid the long intervals during which Fairbanks would ordinarily be unable to work the three-company arrangement was made to save the precious hours and to allow more time for the final editing of the picture between the completion of the filming and the release date of September 1.

"House Divided" Is Play That Is Liked in West

THAT domestic problem photoplays of a clean, wholesome type are appreciated by a discriminating picture public is evidenced by the successful running in the South and Pacific coast states of J. Stuart Blackton's special, "A House Divided," adapted from Ruth Holt Boucicault's "The Substance of His House," by Anthony Paul Kelly, and released through the Independent Sales Corporation.

The Portland, Maine, Express and Advertiser writes: "'A House Divided' is a big, seven reel feature, telling a powerful and dramatic story with big emotional scenes, and holds the attention in never flagging interest. The picture is characterized by the Western press as a 'picture of big sets.'"

The film is the third consecutive Blackton feature produced from an Anthony P. Kelly scenario. It presents Sylvia Breamer and Herbert Rawlinson with Lawrence Grossmith and Violet and Charles Blackton heading the supporting cast. President Frank G. Hall is considering a proposition to take over the release of a new six-reel feature, the production of which will be started soon by Blackton.

"This Hero Stuff" Nearly Ready.

"This Hero Stuff," the recently-completed William Russell production, is undergoing the final cutting and titling process. A satire by Stephen Fox on the familiar but embarrassing hero-worship that is handed out to returned soldiers who have distinguished themselves overseas, this picture is said to be one of the crispiest and funniest things Russell has ever done.

With [illegible] Russell, with Mary Thurman [illegible] the other feminine role of importance, J. Barney Sherry, Charles K. French, Harvey Clark and J. Farrell MacDonald carry prominent parts. The feature was directed by Henry King.

Starts Work on Her Second First National.

Constance Talmadge, who, with her sister, Norma, has just returned from a ten days' vacation at the Paul Smith Camp in the Adirondack Mountains, where soon began work on her second First National picture at the Constance Talmadge Studio on East Forty-Eighth street. Miss Talmadge's first picture, "A Temperamental Wife," by John Emerson and Anita Loos, will be followed by a Clyde Fitch story adapted by Emerson and Loos from Mr. Fitch's play, "The Bachelor."

"The Bachelor" is another delightful social comedy-drama of the type which gives Constance Talmadge ample opportunity for her delicate shading of subtle comedy.

Conway Tearle will play the leading man.

Kinograms Show Start of Return Journey of R-34

THE current issue of Kinograms has taken from the news of the world eleven items which form a most interesting screen weekly.

First in matter of importance is the departure of the British dirigible R-34, with scenes incidental to the return journey to Scotland from Roosevelt Field, Mineola, L. I. The detail in outfitting the trip includes the taking on of gas and supplies and other little human touches that made the affair most appealing.

The U. S. S. Idaho, which was placed at the disposal of President Pessoa, Brazil's chief executive, is shown with interesting scenes on board.

California furnishes a picture of the 1,100 Czech heroes who fought with the Russian Army before the Czar's downfall, and who are now returning to their native country via the United States.

Empire Day, which corresponds in England to our Fourth of July, shows the King and Queen of England, the Prince of Wales and the American ambassador entertained by 10,000 who render songs appropriate to the occasion.

Los Angeles celebrates an annual party given by "Uncle Mose" Lowenstein, Godfather of the Ghetto.

From Chicago we are furnished with interesting flashes of Chicago air taxi drivers who entertain their customers by performing stunts on wings of speeding planes.

What is being done to guard the Mexican border by the United States is disclosed in the army scenes at night made clear through searchlights which seek out in the desert waste the Vallista bandit raiding parties.

Gladys Leslie in "Belinda Puts Her Hair Up."

In "Belinda Puts Her Hair Up," Gladys Leslie plays the part of Belinda, who grows up because she wants to and despite the desire of her father to keep her always a little girl.

The film is still in the making at the Vitagraph Studio in Brooklyn. In Belinda, Miss Leslie has a melodramatic role almost tragic, but the early scenes give her an opportunity to portray a lovable little girl. After she has put her hair up she is no longer the child, but a distraught woman. Supporting Miss Leslie are Julia Swayne Gordon, Maurice Costello, Priestly Morrison, William E. Lawrence, Joe Burke, Frank Norcross and Walter Horton.

William Russell in Mountaineer Role.

In the current William Russell production, "The Other Side of Eden," which is now being filmed at Lake Tahoe, under the direction of Emmett J. Flynn, Russell will appear in the role of a young mountaineer. It is said that the story, which is by Stephen Fox, offers him a wonderful opportunity to exercise his dramatic talent in tense and thrilling action, as well as to exhibit some spectacular feats of horsemanship. Mary Thurman will again appear as Russell's leading woman, and others in the supporting cast include Harvey Clark, Frank Brownlee, Pauline Curley and Paul M. Malatesta.

"Cupid Forecloses" Arrives in the East.

The completed picture of "Cupid Forecloses," with Bessie Love as the star, has arrived East from Vitagraph's Western studio at Hollywood. The picture is based on "Hurrying Fate and Geraldine," the story by Florence Morse Kingsley. Miss Love is seen as a little country schoolmistress who is having great difficulty in supporting her mother, aunt and younger brother.

David Smith directed. The supporting cast includes Wallace McDonald, Frank Hayes, Jim Donnelly, Dorothea Wolbert, Aggie Herring, Jake Abram, Anne Schaeffer, Gordon Griffith and Otto Lederer.

who the important members of the congregation are, and other useful information. But instead of gretting Nelson's sweetheart, Kitty Judd, he makes a mistake and kisses her sister Bessie. He meets with other difficulties, but succeeds in carrying out his deception.

J. Barrington preaches a number of sermons which startle the community and fill the vacant pews with interested people. He quickly gets wise to an effort being made by a hypocritical deacon, Abel Cruck, and his son, to get the church property for a small sum of money. This scheme puzzles J. Barrington considerably until he discovers that the church property is directly in line with an adjacent oil field, and that there is oil on the land. He summons his brother, Nelson, and they expose Cruck and his son to the community. Kitty Judd, in the meantime, has discovered the truth, and J. Barrington becomes engaged to Bessie, with whom he is really in love.

Advertising Angles: If you can work but a single angle in your advertising, take up the harum-scarum brother who substitutes in his twin's pulpit, but it should be worth more space to play up the many angles you are offered. Present the star as the author of the play, then work the substitution and pick up the lesser angles. You should direct a large part of your appeal toward church members. This story will interest them above the average, but make it patent to all that it is a brisk comedy and not a religious topic.

"A Broadway Saint"

Five-Reel World-Picture Features Montagu Love in Story of City and Country.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

NUMBERLESS stories have been based on the contrast of ideas prevailing in small towns and cities, and this five-reel World Picture, "A Broadway Saint," is one of these. It plays in a lightly satirical way with the idea sometimes found in small communities that everyone who comes from New York City is dyed in the deepest sort of villainy. The fore part of the picture is devoted to this theme, and is perhaps the most amusing portion of the feature. Later, when the scenes revert to New York, there is a drop in the interest, and the conclusion seems rather pointless.

Montagu Love plays the role of Dick Vernon, a poor young man who lives in a cheap boarding house in the city. When vacation time comes he decides to visit his Uncle Galt, in Boonsburg, a course of procedure which will save him considerable money. He arrives in Boonsburg, and, greatly to his surprise, finds himself looked upon as a bold adventurer, and the Woman's Friendly Society takes pains to spread abroad unfriendly rumors concerning him. In the course of the story, his Uncle Galt inherits a million dollars and goes with Dick to the city, where he finds that Dick has always lived a quiet life.

There is a love story in this number, but the subject is lacking in dramatic incidents, and the characters are not made to seem real. As a whole, the production is only of average interest.

The Story.

Dick Vernon, the hero of "A Broadway Saint," lives in a cheap New York boarding house. He is a poor young man and sees but little of the wordly life of the city. He has one close friend, a hack writer, named Professor Lackland, whom he helps financially.

When vacation time comes, Dick decides to go to the small town of Boonsburg, where his Uncle Galt lives, thinking this will be a comparatively inexpensive way to spend the time allotted him. He arrives in Boonsburg and is quickly suspected of being a "city man," and this suspicion in Boonsburg apparently means that he is very bad indeed. He finds himself shunned by the Woman's Friendly Society, and even the men of the town regard him as one to be avoided. When he ignores the attempted flirtations of some village girls, they spread the report that he has insulted them.

Dick soon finds himself unwelcome at his uncle's home, and goes to the local hotel. Here he meets Mazie Chateaux, a member of a burlesque company. While walking in the country, he saves Mazie from the approaches of a cow with unfriendly designs.

Dick's Uncle Galt, who has always been considered a model man, unexpectedly inherits a million dollars. He changes his attitude toward the youth, and eventually they go to New York, where Uncle Galt is amazed to find that he can teach Dick many things about city life he never knew.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Because He Was From New York They Believed Him to Be Wicked, But He Was Really "A Broadway Saint."

Amusing Satire on the Small Town Idea That Everybody Who Hails From the Big City Is Wicked.

Montagu Love in Amusing Role of a Model New Yorker Who Has a Hard Time Living Up to the "Wicked" Idea His Country Uncle Had of Him.

Clever Comedy of the Adventures of a New Yorker and His Exciting Experiences in a Small Town.

Advertising Angles: Play up Love and hammer hard on the title angle. Start off with a teaser campaign with "What's a saint on Broadway?" "Can a man live on Broadway and be a saint?" Then start your regular stuff and work the other side, telling your patron that he has seen hundreds of hectic New Yorkers, and that here is a chance to see the real New Yorker and not the man people out of town think he is. Work hard on this and you can get a strong interest. Don't tell too much of the story. It would be better not to tell the story at all, to arouse curiosity.

"Our Better Selves" Heads Pathe for July 27

IN the lead-off position on the Pathe batting order, for release on July 27, is a strong society drama of abnegation and self-sacrifice, "Our Better Selves," with Fannie Ward as the star. It presents Fannie Ward in a dramatic role admitting of lavish gowning amid sumptuous stage settings.

The story and scenario are by Ouida Bergere, and the production is made by the Astra corporation. In the play, Miss Ward has another exacting emotional part. The star is fitted with a character molded to her talents and personality.

Another fine number on the Pathe program, for July 27 releasing, is a Harold Lloyd comedy, "Never Touched Me." As usual, this light comedian has the assistance of Snub Pollard and Bebe Daniels in distilling laughter.

"The Tiger Face," episode No. 15 of the Pathe serial, "The Tiger's Trail," starring Ruth Roland, brings the chase for the Pact of Three and the Tiger Idol to a successful conclusion. The serial ends with the wedding of Jack Randall and Belle.

Included in the program is the regular Pathe Review, with a full complement of educational features, and the Topics of the Day release—the nation's editorial opinion, pithily expressed, which is compiled from the daily press by the Literary Digest.

Employ Mirrors to Light Caves in "Male and Female"

SCENES photographed in caves far beneath the earth's surface by the aid of reflected sunlight are one of the many unusual features of "Male and Female (Created He Them)," Cecil B. DeMille's latest special production.

The story has as its basis Sir James M. Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton." The scenario is the work of Jeanie Macpherson, author of a number of recent De Mille successes. In adapting the English dramatist's story for screen use, Miss Macpherson elaborated on some of the details of the original, including the shipwreck scene and the subsequent actions of the survivors.

One group of refugees seeks shelter in the caves of the island near which the wreck has occurred. It was in filming this portion of the story that Alvin Wyckoff, cinematographer, showed his resourcefulness while producing scenes of rare beauty. Several large plate-glass mirrors and a corresponding number of dull silver reflectors were employed. By mounting these mirrors at the mouth of the cave and relaying the light thus captured from mirror to mirror and reflector to reflector an excellent soft light was supplied far down in the earth.

Because of the changing position of the sun and the number of mirrors involved these scenes required unlimited time and patience on the part of actors and photographers.

Bennison's "High Pockets" Gives Him a Strong Role

THE SMILING COWBOY," who has captured the heart of America and at least a score of heroines, once more puts across his personality with a box-office punch in "High Pockets." This is the latest Betzwood picture in which Louis Bennison is starred and will shortly be released by Goldwyn.

Mr. Bennison plays his familiar western part—and his character, it seems, is one that he draws fresh delight from each time he plays it, to judge by its spontaneity and naturalness in his latest productions—and particularly in "High Pockets."

The humor peculiar to the plains is not lacking in his makeup. Neither is the romantic strain. "High Pockets" gives him full opportunity to develop these things and the smile which has fastened upon him his nickname of "The Smiling Cowboy" is as potent as it ever was.

The picture is replete with color and lights and shades. The "general store" dear to the heart of the old west; the dance hall, with its senoritas and senors; and the whole atmosphere of the ranch and the saloon are faithfully reproduced.

Simplex Reports Many Sales for June.

From the house of Lucas in Atlanta, Ga., comes the news that during the month of June, Simplex sales have climbed beyond expectation. Evidence of the Lucas activities in the South along Simplex lines are contained in the monthly reports covering both the Lucas Theatre Supply Company in Atlanta, Ga., and the Lucas dealer, George Viverito, in New Orleans, La.

The following theatres purchased Simplex projectors during June through Atlanta: Academy of Music, Selma, Ala.; Milton Theatre, Milton, Fla.; The Opera House, Wytheville, Va.; New Imp Theatre, Florence, S. C.; Dreamland Theatre, Darlington, S. C.; Palace Theatre, Douglas, Ga.; Blodgett Theatre, Blodgett, Miss.; Pastime Amusement Company, Lumberton, N. C.; Opera House, Farmville, Va.; Dixie Theatre, Winona, Miss.; Lee Theatre, Carrabelle, Fla.; Auditorium, Woodbury, Ga., and Pastime Amusement Company, Lumberton, N. C.

The following theatres purchased Simplex projectors through George Viverito at New Orleans: Elk's Theatre, New Iberia, La.; A. & G. Theatre, Bay St. Louis, Miss.; Washington Theatre, Strand Theatre, Sanger Amusement Company, Globe Theatre, Fine Arts Theatre, all in New Orleans.

"The Rider of the Law" Finished.

Harry Carey has just finished "Jim of the Rangers," a Universal production now titled "The Rider of the Law."

Jack Ford produced the film. The story was originally written by G. B. Lancaster, the English novelist, and was put in scenario form by H. Tipton Steck.

"Toying" with Fate—and the Baby.
Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven collect a few playthings in their comedy for Goldwyn, "After the Bawl."

The cast supporting the star includes Gloria Hope. Her role is that of "Betty," a girl of the old West. The Harry Carey cowboy squadron is seen in this fall release. Among them are Joe Harris, Ted Brooks, Vesta Pegg, Duke R. Lee and Jack Woods. Claire Anderson and Jennie Lee play the feminine roles of a siren, and Betty's mother, respectively.

Viola Dana in "Microbe" To Be Released July 21

THE MICROBE," with Viola Dana in the title role, is announced by Metro for release on July 21.

Adapted from Henry Altimus' original short story published in Ainslee's Magazine, "The Microbe" is described as an appealing story of life created by the ingenious brain of one of America's foremost fiction writers and converted to the silent drama by June Mathis, head of the Metro staff.

Henry Otto directed the production.

"The Microbe" provides Viola Dana with the most piquant and varied roles she has ever portrayed before the camera. The character of the leading role could not have fitted the star better if it had been written expressly for her.

The supporting cast includes Kenneth Harlan, Arthur Maude, Ned Norworth, Bonnie Hill and Lucy Donahue.

Sylvia Breamer on Stage Early in Life.

Sylvia Breamer, the well known Blackton star, is an Australian by birth, and has been on the stage practically all her life. She received her early training in the Antipodes playing in all the imported American productions which found their way from Broadway. Her first engagement in New York was with Grace George, in "Major Barbara," shortly after which she joined the motion picture colony, and has been associated with Thomas H. Ince, William S. Hart, Charles Ray, Sessue Hayakawa, Cecil de Mille and others. She has been under the Blackton banner for about a year.

"Bishop's Emeralds" Going Big.

"The Bishop's Emeralds," the first Virginia Pearson production presented to the public by Louis Meyer, has met with great success throughout the country. Rothschild, manager of Marcus Loew's New York Roof, told of the record-breaking business it brought during its run at his theatre.

In Washington the production played a full week at the Rialto Theatre before starting its series of long runs at other Moore Theatres.

All Sets Ready for Next Lila Lee Film.

Director Robert G. Vignola may establish a record in speedy production on his next Paramount-Artcraft picture, which is to be started as soon as he completes Vivian Martin's latest starring vehicle, "His Official Fiancee." The picture will star Lila Lee. It is from an original story by Beulah Marie Dix, and in order to facilitate production on the picture, which must be completed for delivery by August 20, all the sets will be finished and on the studio stage when Mr. Vignola starts work, so that it will be possible to shoot scenes in sequence.

Real Hindus in Vitagraph Serial.

The Vitagraph film, "The Perils of Thunder Mountain," Antonio Moreno-Carol Holloway chapter play which is now nearly complete in the making, although but eight episodes have so far been released, shows care in making the Hindu scenes. Nothing was faked, and the Hindus were Hindus not extra men dressed to look the part as nearly as possible.

There is also a large Hindu colony on the Pacific Coast, especially in South America, with a goodly settlement in San Francisco. These provided the men used in the film.

Accuracy Efficiency

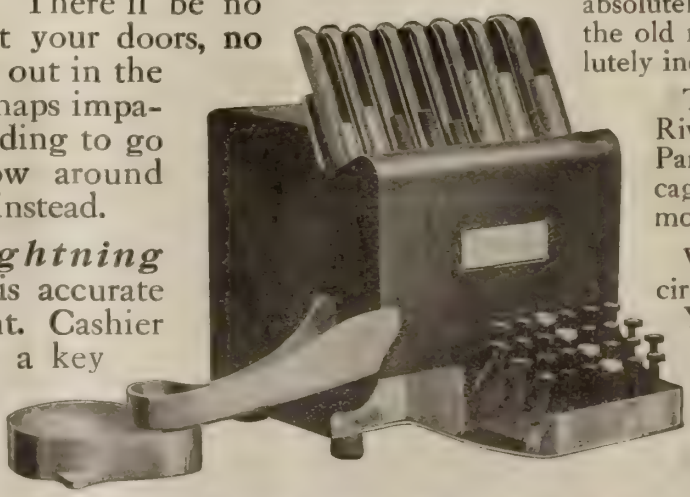
YOUR rush hours are your money makers! Cash in on them! Keep that line at the ticket office moving and let your patrons in.

A Lightning Changer will put SPEED into your service. It will pay out change so fast that no patron need even pause—he just slaps down his money, takes his change, and moves on. There'll be no blockade at your doors, no people kept out in the cold or perhaps impatiently deciding to go to the show around the corner instead.

The Lightning Changer is accurate and efficient. Cashier just presses a key and change jingles out into a metal cup, where it's easy to pick it up even with gloves on. No counting of change; no money slipping between the cashier's fingers; no annoying and delaying mistakes.



The Palace Theatre, Milwaukee, writes: "The Changers are in constant use from 1 p. m. till 10 p. m. . . . we handle an average of 50,000 people weekly—the changer enables us to handle crowds with a speed absolutely impossible under the old method—it is absolutely indispensible."

Two are in use at the Riviera and two in the Pantheon, two of Chicago's largest and finest moving picture houses.

That is used by prominent explorers and educational film makers. IS THE UNIVERSAL MOTION PICTURE CAMERA. This camera is the one-piece machine, every moving part being directly connected to one main casting. There are no bulky or protruding parts and every refinement of motion picture camera making has been built into this machine, combined with the ruggedness and strength that make the Universal stand up under treatment that would put other cameras out of business. Considering the high quality of this camera, its many unique features, the price is surprisingly low. COMPLETE AT $467.00. Telegraphic orders shipped the same day we receive your wire. An Announcement

OUR ACTIVITIES for the past year have been nearly 100 per cent. devoted to war production of vital importance to the government, compelling us to discontinue regular manufacture in practically all of our lines.

The cessation of hostilities has now enabled us to begin the readjustment to a peace production basis. While this adjustment must be gradual, we are pressing it with all possible speed in order to satisfy the requirements of our normal trade at an early date.

We appreciate the patience and understanding with which our patrons have reacted to the situation and trust they may continue to exercise such consideration until our manufacturing facilities are once more on a pre-war footing.

The Test of "Value Received"

If people come to your theatre again and again, you know that you are giving good shows—good value.

The fact that exhibitors buy AUTOMATICKET Registers again and again—every time they need a ticket-selling device—is a record we are proud of.

We are getting letters like the following regularly:

"Please ship us by express—right away—four of your new model ticket machines (Type 402, Model "G" New Perfected Automatic Register).

"These machines are to be like the one billed to us in your invoice of March 11th—your invoice No. 18672."

That "We'll-Come-Again" Smile

They are not aware that Power's Cameragraph was used to project the pictures. They know nothing of an Intermittent Movement—never even heard of a Loop Setter.

What they do know—and remember—is that every picture was projected in a steady, clear and most enjoyable manner. So they "smile" themselves onto your list of permanent patrons.

That's the service of

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH

Its perfect projection of a choice film subject is your best recipe for the "we'll-come-again" smile.

In an attempt to "show up" Hearst News, Universal Current Events and International News, the giant three of the news weekly field, a News Weekly competitor publishes an advertisement in a film trade paper which supposedly answers our big announcement of previous issue wherein THE BIG THREE printed and described 10 sensational complete news "Scoops" and 8 absolutely out and out "beats" accomplished in the space of a few short weeks. This competitor claims that he really and actually had a strip of "fillum" showing one of the news pictures we advertised as a scoop. In 18 times we licked 'em all to a frazzle with our sensational accomplishments in being "FIRST" as usual, with scoops and beats, including the one shot they mention which was that of Pres. Wilson's trip thru war ruined Belgium with King Albert and Queen Elizabeth. International News No. 27 issued July 3rd showed these pictures; 6 days later, on July 9th, this so-called competitor showed them, proving that we ARE Releasing—

Three Mighty News Reels Per Week, Either One Bigger Than Any Other Single Reel News Weekly on the Market

Not one word was mentioned in this competitor's advertisement about the remaining 17 times that we beat 'em and scooped 'em. Nary a word. Absolute quiet regarding 17 sensational news picture achievements that topped 'em every week as regularly as clockwork. And why shouldn't we do it regularly? Who can compare picture news gathering forces with THE BIG THREE?

Hearst News—International News Universal Current Events

Who can show a record of such sensational news picture scoops and beats regularly as THE BIG THREE? What single news reel can ever hope to compare with THREE great big individual news reels secured, prepared and released by the biggest combination of talent in the news reel industry? ANSWER IT YOURSELF!!! All of which enables us to repeat it again and again as we have many times before, i. e.—IF YOU WANT TO PUT YOUR HOUSE ON THE MAP WITH THE EXCLUSIVE NEWS BEATS AND SCOOPS OF THE "BIG THREE" AND GIVE YOUR PATRONS ALL THE BIG NEWS FIRST—BOOK AND SHOW THE "BIG THREE" EVERY WEEK.

Dallas House Will Provide Summer Comfort with Ammonia Cooling Plant

AN office building of fifteen or twenty stories, to cost upward of a million dollars, will be constructed by E. H. Hulsey, in connection with his proposed million-dollar moving picture theatre for Dallas.

Mr. Hulsey announced late in July that he had secured additional property at Elm and Ervay streets—the busiest corner in the downtown district—on a ninety-nine year lease. The transaction amounts to the payment of $2,000,000 and gives the Hulsey interests a solid block 200 by 200 feet in the heart of the town.

To give his theatre and office building a sweeping frontage, Mr. Hulsey will widen Ervay street in front of his improvements, making an ideal park plot in front of the theatre with a concrete areaway for the parking of automobiles.

The additional space secured by Mr. Hulsey makes it possible for the installation of a theatre within a theatre.

To Install Children's Theatre.

A complete children's theatre will be installed within the main building at which special performances will be given. It will also be used for running off film at private showing. The miniature theatre is to seat about 150. A children's performance will be given daily in addition to the regular show.

The rental of the new property gives the Hulsey theatre three entrances on three different streets. The play house will have two lobbies and an immense auditorium seating 3,000 persons.

Plans for a unique cooling plant for the theatre have been perfected. An ammonia pipe system will be installed in such a manner that the temperature of the playhouse during the hot Texas summer can be brought down to any degree which may be agreeable. The pipes in the winter will be used for heating the building.

In the lobby of the theatre during the summer months ice-coated ammonia pipes will display the name of the theatre in crystal white front. The pipes will be so low that theatre patrons can touch them as they pass through the lobby.

Ground will be broken for the theatre early in August. It will be completed in May, 1920.

Movies for Fort Worth House.

Pierre L. Levy, of Fort Worth, who recently purchased the Byers Opera House, one of the historic theatres of Texts, for $200,000, is now remodeling that playhouse for moving pictures. The cost of the remodeling will be approximately $30,000. Mitchell and Holbaugh of Chicago are the theatrical architects employed. They will decorate the entire theatre and change the lobby and entrances. The Byers will feature long run films at 50 cents or $1 admission. A $20,000 pipe organ is being installed and there will be a sixteen-piece orchestra.

Texas Houses May Show Much-Discussed Fight Film

THE Texas house of representatives in special session late in July passed a resolution urging exhibitors to refuse to display the Willard-Dempsey fight picture in the state. Owing to the Texas laws governing the color question no film has ever been shown in the state which portrayed Jack Johnson in action. There is no law, however, against the display of a white men's boxing contest.

Despite the resolution of the legislature the fight pictures are going to be shown in various Texas cities. W. L. Merrill, of the Film Clearing House Association, called on the Dallas board of censors and stated that he had arranged to show the fight films. The censors had no objection.

The pictures will be shown in this territory without much delay, it is expected.

Washington Exchange Heads Abolish C. O. D. Shipments

AT A meeting of the Exchange Managers' Association of Washington, D. C., last week, it was unanimously agreed that all C. O. D. shipments of films should be discontinued. A new rule was adopted providing that remittances covering shows and advertising matter must positively be in the office of the exchange supplying the same prior to the time of shipment. Where the check is not so received shipment will not be made.

The proposed rule will become effective about the middle of August. It has already been approved by the home officers of Vitagraph, Famous Players, Fox, Metro, World, Exhibitors Mutual, and Universal, and adopted by the following local concerns, Super Films Attractions, Inc., Exhibitors' Film Exchange, Capitol Film Exchange and Variety Pictures Corporation.

It is proposed that after August 18, not more than one show will be sent "open" upon the assurance of the exhibitor that his check is in the mail, and thereafter the rule will be rigidly observed.

The exchange managers have been subjected to untold annoyance because of the C. O. D. privileges and have had under consideration for some time the proposal to discontinue this method of marketing their product. They hesitated taking any action that might not be approved by their respective home offices, however, but now that New York is for the plan, it is to be put into operation.

Was Tired of Railroad Stuff; Couldn't Use "Red Lantern"

LOU BICKEL, Metro and First National manager of Dallas, sent out a few telegrams to exhibitors the other day asking when they wanted to book "The Red Lantern."

"Can't use 'Red Lantern' here. I don't want any railroad films," was the reply from Blossomdale, Ark.

Hugh Ford Signs for Long Term with Famous Players

HUGH FORD, special director for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has just signed a new long-term contract with that company.

During the summer, Mr. Ford, who recently arrived in New York from California, where he has just finished "In Mizzoura" at the Lasky studio, will be in daily conference with authors, dramatists and others who are active in formulating plans for the stage presentations contemplated by Famous Players.

Throughout his stage and motion picture career, which covers a period of about twenty years, he has figured in one big success after another.

Sparrows Raise Family in Pipe of Queen's Big Organ

M. A. SMITH, organist for the Queen Theatre, Dallas, is in a quandary owing to the fact that a thriving family of English sparrows are maturing in one of the big diapason pipes of his $30,000 jazz thunderer.

Smith, a kind-hearted musician, was rippling out a merry little Bach composition the other day when an astonishing chorus of tweets and chirps threw him off tone. He investigated and found a bird's nest populated by five. Now he shuns the C sharp key and will skip octaves until such time as the feathered movie fans are old enough to shift for themselves.

Fifty More Theatres for Loew.

According to an announcement received by the Moving Picture World, Marcus Loew is building nineteen new theatres in the United States and Canada, and is buying or leasing others. He will have fifty new theatres before the end of this year.

Rumor of Possible Competition Between Film Concerns Interests North Carolina

RUMORS of new chains of theatres gained considerable interest in North Carolina the week of July 20, when various motion picture leaders in the principal towns of the state received personal letters from William Fox, asking for first bid on any of their theatres which they contemplated leasing or selling. It was not thought that Fox would come into the smaller towns such as North Carolina has, hence these letters created some surprise, not to say consternation, since it gave some exhibitors their first intimation that the Paramount group would find competition entering their hitherto clear field. The S. A. Lynch interests, closely aligned with Paramount-Artcraft, have been very active throughout North and South Carolina recently, and small indeed is the hamlet that has not heard the rumor that "Lynch is coming here."

Lynch has recently acquired entire control of the theatrical situation at Spartanburg, S. C., and at present has three of the Charlotte theatres, including a new one. It is currently reported on good authority that Durham is the next city in the state that he will enter. The readjustment of Paramount-Artcraft territory, made through the opening of an office in Charlotte, will give the Lynch interests additional territory under the supervision of their Atlanta exchange, which was formerly handled from the Washington office, and this to many is seen as a master stroke by Lynch to control the service in the towns which he wishes to enter with his theatrical chain.

Mystery Shrouds Death of Bijou Theatre Employes

MYSTERY surrounds the supposed death in the Pawtucket river of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kempton, employes of the Bijou picture theatre, Pawtucket, R. I.

Mrs. Kempton was the ticket seller at the theatre. Her husband was night usher. They were married recently.

As they left the theatre the young couple talked with Duncan Read, the manager. They told him that they planned to take a vacation trip in their motor launch and were going down to get it ready. Later they were seen to enter a rowboat and put out to the launch.

The following day Mrs. Kempton did not appear at the theatre box office at her regular time and a messenger was sent by Manager Read to her home. An investigation revealed the rowboat floating upside down in the Pawtucket river. The bodies were recovered two days later.

Hart to Make Nine Pictures for Famous Players-Lasky

WILLIAM S. HART will make nine big productions for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation within the next two years.

This definite announcement was received in a telegram which reached the home office of Famous Players-Lasky on Saturday, July 19.

According to the information received from Los Angeles, Mr. Hart on Friday July 18, signed a contract with vice-president Frank A. Garbutt representing the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The contract calls for the delivery of nine pictures to be made within a period not to exceed two years.

According to the terms of the contract the limitations to exact footage are removed and the pictures will deal with outdoor subjects. The producing organization of Mr. Hart remains intact.

Indiana Theatre Commences Fight for Sunday Showing

ACTION was started in the Grant county superior court at Marion, Ind., Saturday afternoon, July 12, by the Mutual Theatre Company, which operates the Lyric, Indiana and Royal-Grand theatres at Marion, for a temporary restraining order to prevent the city officials from interfering with the operation of picture theatres on Sundays.

The action of the theatre officials follows the arrest on Sunday, July 6, of George Spurr, cashier of the Indiana theatre, after he had opened the theatre for business. The case was filed in city court, but was appealed to the higher court. Spurr waived arraignment before Mayor Batchelor and then took the appeal.

The suit filed by the theatre officials is against the mayor of Marion, the chief of police, the three police commissioners and the prosecuting attorney. Hearing on the temporary injunction will be held later in the month.

Several attempts have been made by the exhibitors of Marion to operate their theatres on Sundays, but all have been unsuccessful. At the beginning of Mayor Batchelor's administration, an attempt was made to open the Royal-Grand theatre on Sunday and the manager was arrested. He was convicted before the mayor and was fined $10 and costs.

Davis Made New England Head for Goldwyn Pictures

H. M. DAVIS has become manager of the New England office of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, with offices in Boston. Throughout his career in the moving picture business Mr. Davis has been known to his many friends as "Chubby."

Mr. Davis knows the moving picture industry from top to bottom. Besides being an expert salesman he has been an exhibitor, having had Town Hall in Saybrook, Conn., and Snow's Hall in Clinton, Conn. He was salesman for Unicorn, World and Universal. He became salesman for the Goldwyn company here six months ago.

His popularity and ability, both in and out of the Goldwyn office, should aid him greatly in making a success of his new undertaking.

Locked Behind Gates from Sunset to Sunrise

SUCH was the nightly experience of the dwellers in the Ghetto of old.

But New York's Ghetto on its Lower East Side has no locks or gates, even though it is walled in by the canyons of its buildings. It spills its torrent of humanity over narrow streets, overflowing with life.

What are the likes and dislikes of this human torrent in a moving picture way?

Read the story, "Getting Dough from the Ghetto," another of the letters from Bill in Manhattan to Joe in Dillsburg (on page 649).

Dallas Didn't Like "Sunnyside."

Loud cries of disgust went up from local dramatic critics when they saw Charlie Chaplin in "Sunnyside" in mid-July.

"If this be comedy, give us drama," one newspaper critic wrote.

"Judging from the way he acted, Chaplin's role is the payroll," another newspaper said.

Dallas newspapers, who co-operate heartily with the exhibitors and film men, seemed to be of one accord in branding "Sunnyside" as an imposition and a joke. The film drew for a couple of days and then fell flat.

Lois Weber Signs with Famous Players-Lasky

LOIS WEBER, well-known woman director, will produce a series of big pictures for release by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation during the coming year.

Announcement to this effect was made at the offices of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in New York recently. The pictures are to be known as "Lois Weber Productions" and will be distributed by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as Paramount Artcraft pictures.

E. H. Hulsey Denies Report.

Ephatic denial is made by E. H. Hulsey, owner of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise for Texas, of a report published last week in a vaudeville paper that he had disposed of his theatre interests to Famous Players-Lasky Company or any other group of producer-distributors who were about to enter the exhibiting field.

"Instead of disposing of any of my theatre interests, I am buying more houses," Mr. Hulsey stated in denying the report. "No paper, in or out of the industry, has any authority to make announcements regarding my properties."

Cohen Leaves for Home.

Octavus Roy Cohen, who recently signed a five-year contract to write photoplays exclusively for Goldwyn, left for his home in Birmingham, Ala., last week to begin work on his first Goldwyn story. During his short stay in New York, Mr. Cohen had the opportunity to attend the "first night" of his first play, "The Crimson Alibi," which was written in collaboration with George Broadhurst.

The nature of his first stories has not been revealed beyond the information that in none of them will the comic interest be slighted.

Black Declares He Will Carry Fight Right Into New York State League

In Belligerent Letter President of National Exhibitors Questions Motives and Good Faith of Sydney Cohen and His Associates—Says Agreement Between Old League and Trade Review Was Ill-Advised—Intimates "Interests" May Be Seeking Toe Hold

To the Exhibitors of the United States:

ONCE more, unfortunately, I am forced to reply to the "final" open letter of the executive committee of the New York State Exhibitors' League. If trade paper controversies are as disgusting to each reader of this article as they are to the writer, you can imagine my personal feelings. The Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., is not going to be properly financed and its organization perfected by such controversies, but I cannot remain passive under the unwarranted and unprovable accusations of one set of men whose ulterior motives and good faith I now openly question.

It is quite apparent that under their "rule or ruin policy" they would much prefer to see every exhibitor in the United States lose the money to be saved by the elimination of unjust taxation than to see the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., get the credit of such elimination, realizing that if we do (and right here, New York State Exhibitors or no New York State Exhibitors, that is just what we are going to do) nothing can prevent the success of our national organization. Does the New York state committee realize that their action is giving members of Congress the impression that the exhibitors are divided in obtaining the elimination of unjust taxation?

Charges New Yorkers With Bad Faith.

At the St. Louis Convention, I stated, upon accepting the Presidency, that I would get results and make my promises afterward, but our campaign for taxation relief is so well under way that we only need the co-operation of the exhibitors of the United States to win out, and I don't propose to have the confidence in our efforts even shaken by methods that are unworthy of the men making such attempt. Under these circumstances may I be pardoned from breaking away just once from my platform?

The New York letter states that it has never acknowledged our jurisdiction. I openly charge these gentlemen with bad faith, as their representatives entered the convention as members thereof but apparently with instructions to control according to their own idea or to adopt the "rule or ruin policy" which was immediately done and since carried out.

Says Utica Is Now Ignored.

Why didn't they act like men and be square with themselves? What has Mr. Cohen and his associates ever done to warrant the confidence of the exhibitors outside of New York State? I ask them, as a member of this same New York State League, owning a large interest in and representing the Park Theatre in Utica, N. Y., what have they done to help us get open Sundays in Utica since the bill was passed?

Nothing as far as I know. Has the Park Theatre been consulted in this attempt to destroy unity of action and the perfecting of a National Exhibitors' Organization (which heaven knows we need if many of us are to remain in the theatre business twelve months hence)?

No, we have not been consulted, and this same committee which sees fit maliciously to criticise arbitrarily is adopting such methods which time alone will tell how it may affect the personal interests of some at least, of its members.

Trade Review Agreement Ill-Advised.

It is not the purpose of this letter to hold any brief for Mr. L. F. Blumenthal. He was elected to the chairmanship of the taxation committee by the convention that elected me as president. I have known him, however, for several years, and I have found him one of the fairest and cleanest business men I have ever met.

The agreement between the old Exhibitors' League and the Trade Review was very ill advised. The League did not assist the Trade Review financially as agreed upon. The agreement was the cause of the animosity shown toward it by the other trade papers and the most direct means of the old League's failure. It nearly broke the Trade Review, as I understand it, because the stock that the League controlled, then worthless, prevented the paper from refinancing.

Says New Yorkers Voted Stocks Return.

I conscientiously believed it a wise move to return it and so voted at the Boston convention in which Mr. Cohen, Mr. Berman and other New York men also voted. If this was wrong why didn't they bring it before the Boston convention and not wait until now to "yank up the dead?" Ammunition must be short. The Motion Picture Industry of all industries is living in "futures," not in "pasts."

This same Blumenthal and Mr. William Fox, Mr. Cohen's very good friend, were the leading factors in giving Messrs. Cohen, O'Reilly and Berman their complimentary dinner. Fine appreciation, this personal attack.

Blumenthal Paying Expenses.

This same Blumenthal is paying Mr. McClellan, as campaign manager for the elimination of unjust taxation, besides traveling expenses, postage, stenographers and desk room, upon the confidence that the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America will be able to reimburse him. Give him credit for taking this chance in your behalf and before you put your money in to assist. The very first thing, he asked Mr. Cohen to take charge of New York State in this taxation campaign. The answer from him, you have read it.

Issues Defiance As to Producer Attitude.

Now I defy Mr. Cohen and his associates to disprove that the committee of exhibitors, Messrs, Schaefer, Blumenthal and myself, had more to do with reducing the proposed 20 per cent. admission tax to 10 per cent. than the combined forces of all others.

I defy them to deny that while we were members of the National Association I fought the producing interests at every turn in their various unfair attitudes toward exhibitors, so much so that I was considered by the producers little better than an anarchist, and when we couldn't get a fifty-fifty break in the affairs of the industry was active in withdrawing and organizing independent of the producing interests.

I defy them to show one instance where I have ever worked against the exhibitor's interests.

Asks for One Instance of Unfairness.

Instead of these underhanded slurs I ask them openly to state one instance where Messrs. Loew, Wells, Schaefer, Nolan, Rembusch, Horstmann or any member of the executive committee has done anything unfair to exhibitors' interests. In fact, I believe these men during the coming year will do much in assisting the exhibitors of this country in the difficult problems now facing them.

I have made no appointments of any kind as yet; is it not well to wait until I do before criticism is passed?

The old methods of state voting helped ruin the old League, and it was New York State, Illinois and the large states that were largely responsible by playing politics. We are not infallible, but we are certainly honest in our efforts to make the Motion Pictures Exhibitors of America, Inc., a success under the new methods, and it is dollars and cents in the hands of every exhibitor in this country to help us do it. Get unity first, the method of operating is immaterial, and if the officials are honest the method can easily be changed, if advisable, to fit conditions as they exist at any time.

Asks and Will Give No Quarter.

Now for a "close-up":

The letter is long, for which I apologize. We implore peace, but, if necessary, we will not only fight to the last, but will take the fight to the New York State League, and I so give open notice. Our officials are confident that our organization will be what every exhibitor in the United States wants and knows we must have.

I urge as strongly as the English language will command to give us your immediate co-operation and to ignore these malicious attacks. We ask no quarter from the New York State Committee and we will give none.

We shall watch closely the claim made to us that their attack is an underground means for certain friendly producing interests, buying theatres, to break up the organization and get a toe hold in exhibitors' ranks. Maybe it is, and maybe it isn't, but time alone will tell and the "devil will out."

ALFRED S. BLACK,
President Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc.

METHODISTS USE WORLD'S BIG SCREEN

Churchmen at Columbus Centenary Entertained by Pictures 75 Feet High and 100 Feet Wide

THE Methodist Centenary Celebration, which was held at Columbus, Ohio, from June 20 to July 13, saw the moving picture for the first time in its history occupy a prominent place on the entertainment program of the convention. It is estimated that over one million members of the Methodist society attended the celebration, which was held at the Ohio State Fair Grounds. A surprisingly large number of the members saw a moving picture for the first time in their lives at these meetings, including four bishops. They all expressed unbounded delight at their experience. On the evening of July 4 the largest movie crowd ever assembled watched a moving picture thrown on the largest screen ever erected.

This screen was 115 feet square, the picture measured 100 feet wide by 75 feet high and the crowd in front of the screen was over 40,000 in number. The pictures are reported to have been "remarkably clear and sharp. The blinking of a man's eyes shown in a close up was plainly discernible two blocks away. The pictures as a whole were easily seen from a distance of six blocks."

Success Due to Three Men.

The three men responsible for the success of these picture showings are Dr. Christian F. Reisner, Dr. Chester C. Marshall and Samuel P. Vinton. They were members of a committee having the selection of the pictures in charge and also directed the showing of the pictures in Columbus. Dr. Reisner, who has long been an enthuastic advocate of the use of the screen in the church, is familiar with the proper projection of pictures. He and Dr. Marshall went about the task of choosing the subjects far in advance of the celebration. To supplement their own knowledge of the matter representatives from the different trade papers were invited to add their familiarity with the most suitable pictures for such an occasion to the list.

The response to this invitation was immediate and the reviewers who met the committee were able to suggest the best pictures for the purpose. The cooperation of the National Association already had been secured and its members kept the celebration supplied with the pictures asked for throughout the entire meetings.

John Flinn Makes Address.

On July 8, John S. Flinn, director of publicity and advertising for Famous Players-Lasky, attended the centenary as the representative of the National Association, and addressed a meeting in the main auditorium on "Motion Pictures and the Church." During his remarks he pointed out the large part the screen will have in suplying a substitute for the saloon now that national prohibition has been established, dwelt upon the duty of the church to help the moving picture in every way possible.

At the same meeting Orrin G. Cocks, of the National Board of Review, delivered an address on "The Motion Picture in the Church." Among the things he said was: "The screen is now being recognized in splendid fashion as a handmaiden to the social work of the church." Mr. Cocks also called attention to the fact "that a vast number of splendid motion pictures now exist which are available for the church. The National Board of Review has just selected some 650 educational films for the educators of the United States, and most of these, with slight modifications, might be used for sermons, missionary classes and so forth in churches and church houses.

Half of Product Available for Churches.

"Some three years ago, in its list of the finest kind of selected pictures for the family, the National Board included 26 per cent. of the entire output for the year. This percentage of fine films has increased until during the past year 48 per cent. were adjudged to be of fine enough quality to be included in such a list."

Mr. Cocks closed his address with the following:

"While it is most important that the church should be served with the very finest films adapted as completely as possible to the needs of parishioners, it is also necessary that the rank and file of the American people should be permitted to enjoy those forms of entertainment which they crave. There are some things which the entire American people recognize to be indecent, immoral and improper. With the exclusion of these there still remains a number of subjects with which the church is not primarily concerned.

"A vast number of dramatic and comic subjects have been made entirely for entertainment. These do no harm, while they furnish rest and relaxation to many people with many tastes. Inevitably the more artistic, the more subtle and sincere, as well as the more powerful, dramatic pictures will continue. Out from among these the church should develop the means of making constant selections which shall be used to drive home the truth as it is in Christ."

Film Thefts in Dallas.

Film thefts during the past few weeks have been worrying several Dallas exchange managers.

One of the last thefts of this nature reported was that of "Her Code of Honor," which was stolen from the World Film Corporation. Film stolen in Texas usually finds its way by devious routes across the Rio Grande.

Allen Theatre Enterprises Enter United States Exhibiting Field

Theatre Chain and Distributing Firm, Which Now Predominates in Canada, Marks Expansion Into This Country by Construction of Million-Dollar House in Cleveland and One Worth $600,000 in Detroit.

A HIGHLY important new factor enters the field of American motion picture exhibition with the announcement from Messrs. Jule and Jay J. Allen, of the Allen Theatre Enterprises, with headquarters in Toronto, that they have decided to invade the United States. Not only is the Allen company the dominant organization in motion pictures in Canada, owning and operating forty-five first class houses and having a large number of others in construction, but it is claimed to be the largest single owner of film theatres, whether from point of view of size or importance of the houses, in the entire world.

Built First Two Houses.

Cleveland and Detroit are to be the first two cities below the Canadian line to have Allen theatres. Sites have been secured, the plans completed and work will start within a short time, preparations being made to begin the Cleveland house within two weeks and to start the Detroit structure a few days later. The Cleveland house will seat 3,000 and the investment there will represent an even million dollars. The Detroit house will be still larger, seating 3,500, making it one of the three largest in the whole world. The building alone will cost in excess of $600,000.

Plans for these two cities have been under way for some weeks, but the Allens have been desirous of securing the choicest locations for their theatres, and they believe that they have succeeded in getting the best. In both cities the theatres will be located on the main streets and at points that are considered the very center of the cities' growth. The Detroit house will occupy the Chalmers property on Woodward avenue, the one street that bisects the entire city and which is the unquestioned center of Detroit's civic life. It will be located between Watson and Erskine streets, and its direct neighbor will be the New Orchestral Hall, which is being built by citizens of Detroit and which will be in the nature of a civic institution.

Jule Allen
Secretary-treasurer of Allen Theatre Enterprises.

Good Cleveland Site.

In Cleveland the new theatre will be on Euclid avenue, the one principal street, directly at the intersection of Huron Road and directly opposite the new Hanna building, which will be the largest office structure there. This location is declared by Cleveland real estate men to be the best one in the city, and this is proved by the fact that several other amusement interests made efforts to secure it.

Disparity in the cost of the two buildings is explained by the fact that all of the ground space for the Detroit house, 133 feet on Woodward avenue running back 200 feet, will be occupied by the theatre, except for six shallow stores on the front and a score of offices on the second floor front. The Cleveland plot, however, has a frontage of 100 feet on Euclid avenue and runs back 445 feet to Dodge Court. In the front there will be a six-story office building, and in the rear a twelve-story garage, facing on Dodge court. In the case of the Cleveland theatre it is expected a novelty will be introduced whereby patrons will be able to run their cars into the garage and, leaving them there, enter the theatre through a special entrance.

C. H. Crane Is Architect.

C. Howard Crane, of Detroit, is the architect for both of the houses, which will bear the name of the owners—the Allen, in each case. Mr. Crane is preparing the plans for all of the new Allen theatres in Canada.

An innovation of the greatest importance is planned for both theatres. The owners decline to give even the slightest hint of this, for it is such a radical departure from anything that has been included in motion picture theatre construction that they intend to wait for the actual openings of the houses to reveal the secret.

Plan Special Music.

Music will be on of the big features of the two theatres, far surpassing anything that has been done in either city. Orchestras of fifty pieces will be provided in each house, both under direction of leaders of national fame. Two of the largest organs ever built have been ordered, and in addition there will be soloists of the highest order, since the Allens will be able to promise these artists engagements for the entire year, on account of the number of their first run houses, and at the same time each artist will appear in each house only one week during a year, thereby affording a variety.

Plans are being made for the opening of both theatres, probably at the same time, in the early spring.

Allens' Rise Is Rapid.

Only twelve years ago Barney Allen and his two sons started with a motion picture theatre in Brantford, Ontario. Although then a city of less than 15,000, it was the only place outside of Toronto and Montreal where pictures were regularly shown. Although at that time most of the men who were going into the "movie" business regarded it as only a passing fancy of the public and determined to get the "easy money" while it was there, the Allens were among the few who had the vision of the future.

Concern Moves West.

The Brantford house was followed by another and better one in the same city, and these two grew into a small chain through western Canada. But though they had scored a success there the Allens saw a bigger and better field toward the west and, selling out their Ontario enterprise, they made Calgary their headquarters. Within a short time they developed a string of theatres through the "prairie provinces," centering around the Allen Theatre in Calgary, the first really modern house in Canada. But while the theatres were growing, the exchange idea became dominant and a series of exchanges through the Dominion followed, through which the Allens distributed Universal and other productions.

Move Headquarters East.

This end of the business became so important that the Allens decided their headquarters should be in Toronto and so they moved back to Ontario province. There they organized the Famous Players Film Service, handling the product now known as Famous Players-Lasky and then the Monarch Film Company, which handled independent and other offerings. But after all their success with the exchanges the pendulum swung back again and exhibition began to become the stronger appeal. There came from this the Allen Theatre in Toronto, one of the handsomest in the country, and within a few months ten other houses in the eastern section were built or acquired, making them as strong in the eastern section as they were in the West.

Recent Expansion.

Since that time the expansion has gone on with increasing rapidity. It was only a few weeks ago that announcement was made in these columns that the Allens had taken over the Shuberg interests in western Canada, eleven theatres including three leading houses in Winnipeg, three in Vancouver and two in Victoria. Only a few days ago the Allens paid $800,000 for the site for still another new theatre in Vancouver which will cost in excess of a half million dollars.

As stated, the Allens now have in actual operation forty-five theatres in principal Canadian cities. Before the end of the year a dozen more will be opened and by spring the number will be greatly increased.

Investments Run Into Tens of Millions.

Investments planned for this year and those actually under way, will run into the tens of millions of dollars. With the houses actually under construction they will have in operation in six months first run theatres in all of the principal cities from British Columbia to Nova Scotia, literally spanning the Dominion from coast to coast.

Some of the principal houses now in operation are The Allen, Allen's Beaver, Allen's Bloor Street, Allen's Royal in Toronto; the Regent, Ottawa; Majestic, London; Temple, Hamilton; Windsor, Windsor; Allen and Roma, Kitchener; Allen, Cobourg; Allen and New Grand, Montreal; Allen and Auditorium, Quebec; Province, Dominion, Gaiety, Bijou and Rex in Winnipeg; Rex, Dominion, Globe and Broadway in Vancouver; Royal Victoria and Dominion in Nanaimo; Allen in Calgary; Allen and Monarch in Edmonton; Allen and Rex in Regina; Allen in Moose Jaw; Allen in Brandon, and many others.

Allen theatres are under construction in Winnipeg, London, Halifax, St. John and Vancouver, including a downtown house in Montreal. Besides there are half a dozen neighborhood theatres of the most modern style being built in Toronto and equally handsome structures are going up in a number of other smaller cities.

Do Not Seek Monopoly.

It is not the policy of the Allens to seek to control of all the theatres in various communities, as with the chain system in the United States, but rather to own the leading theatres in each of the leading cities. This policy gives them a control of first run theatres that gives them easily the dominant position in the Canadian field. It is said that the same policy will be followed in any further ventures on this side of the border. In announcing the Detroit and Cleveland theatres they are outspoken in the statement that they mean to provide Allen theatres there that will be far superior to any others, and that they will aim at the same mark anywhere else they may decide to build.

A Father and Son Concern.

Barney Allen, the father, is president of the Allen Enterprises, with Jay J. Allen, vice-president and Jule Allen, secretary and treasurer. Father and two sons make a remarkable combination, for each of the three has a particular field and the work is so divided and at the same time so perfectly co-ordinated that their vast enterprises are cared for with the greatest efficiency and without the slightest friction.

In regard to their film plans for the coming year the Allens have yet made no definite announcement. After September 1 they will no longer handle the Famous Players-Lasky output, but it is stated that most satisfactory arrangements have been made for service which will include some of the greatest productions made. With first run possibilities such as no other exhibition organization can offer they consider the outlook more than satisfactory.

GETTING DOUGH FROM THE GHETTO

You Can Write It on the Cuff, Joe, That It's a Tough Job—And You'd Better Stay in Dillsburg Where the Pushcarts and Whiskers Ain't So Thick

DEAR JOE: Get out the Sunday, cuff, Raymond, I wanna give you a tip to study for some time. I know you're restless out there in Dillsburg, Joe. I gotta hunch things ain't been breakin' right since you had them new keys put onto the organ and your good-lookin' cashier flopped to the opposition.

But take a tip from a fella what ain't a stranger to you, Henry. Stay where you are and don't leave Ioway for the East. Worst of all, don't get disgusted and come here to Noo York looking for a picture house to run. I ain't sayin' but what you might find one, Mowbray, but if you did it would be the rooin of your langwidge, your tortuss shell specktacles, and that latest improved cash register o' yourn.

Bregstein a Big League Guide.

I been down in this East Side sector lately, Joe, with Nat Bregstein, the fella who rides in the Pullmens for the Moving Picture World. And I wanna record myself as sayin', Toto, that this here Nat Bregstein's a guide for the East Side what'd make a guy from the Cook's Tourin' Union look lika pinch hitter in the thickest and most distant removed thickets of the bush leagues.

We metta lotta exhibitors, Joe. Nat would talk the sign langwidge to them and get the idea over that we wasn't fillim salesmen, plain clothes men or birds with a subpoeney from the fire department. After these formalities was over with, the exhibitor would chase away the kids what had been clustered around the lobby, listenin' to the racket, and then we'd all get down to business.

Here's the said tip I wanna pass to you, Xenophon. I heard a lotta dope in these fillum trades papers about how a outa town exhibitor could come to Noo York and make the city fella look like a phoney nickel in a Automat change drawer. But honesta Oscar, a outa town bird would have as much chance on the Lower East Side as a old cloes man would have for makin' a livin' offa Mack Sennett divin' squad or the broonet ladies what romps through them little tank towns in Africa.

It's a Different Field, Joe.

They have different ways adoin' things down there, Joe. In fact, you gotta pay more attention to what the noospaper writers call the-likes-and-dislikes of your patrons on the Lower East Side than you yourself do with them Sunday School teachers of yourn out in Dillsburg. You gotta learn how to cater to them, Xerxes. You gotta watch the little box office ticket lika bird whose just put his last copper inta the oil question. And just when you think you got them trained into the pinka condition, and the six-cents admissions is comin' in by the raftload, along comes the summer and Coney Island and puts your picture house on the same level as a bearskin laprobe business in the Equator belt. And that ain't the least of your worries, at that.

Like I said, Joe, Nat Bregstein and me talked with a lotta exhibitors on the Lower East Side. When it came to agreein' on the big points of the business in their sector, Peyton, they were more unanimous than a Belgian jury would be on the best way to feed the Kaiser. Moe, I'm tellin' you we talked with Mayer & Schneider, I guess about the biggest exhibitors on the East Side, with thirteen houses on the string. And we talked with Louis Goidal, who runs the house on Houston street where Marcus Loew got his first start. And we talked with Mazie, of the Venice Theatre on Chatham Square, which Venice she not only operates, but ticket-takes, telephone-answers, bum-bounces, and everything.

Agreed Just Like the Senate.

Cholly, I'm tellin' you they were unanimous on the big issues—like our worst public speakers say. I guess the first of them big issues is that price-raisin' on the Lower East Side is about as popular as a umpire workin' the ball game for the opposition. A nickel for the kids and a dime for the grown-ups, with a cent war tax thown in, is about as ironclad a rule as was ever put in iron. On the East Side, Clayton, they can go out and see a whole show, pictures, vaudeville, and all for seventeen cents or a quarter. The guy who once charged sixteen cents for a picture admission, Cholly, is now on exhibition in the Museum of Natural History. They got him among the nuts.

Another big issue, Sol, is about advertisin'. About all the advertisin' they do is on the fronts of their theatres. Once in a while they put an ad in the Yiddisher newspapers but mostly an' excloosively they use the well-known lobby. An' the louder the lobby talks, Patrick, the better. When I tell you, Cholly, that there is more people on Delancey street alone than there is in all the state of Ioway, you will see why they don't figure on extensive exploitations and far-reachin' campaigns what the press books talk of.

Society Drama Bill-of-Fare.

And what would you say, Baron, was the kinda play most liked on the Lower East Side? Shoot-em-up Wild West? Not on that tintype you had taken that day of the circus! Society drama is what they like best, and the kinda picture they like to see on the menu, with some serial as an extra thrown in. Wherever you go, Max, Clinton street, Avenue A, the Bowery, you find such to be true.

I met one bird, Joe, who ran a Yiddisher vaudeville house and pictures. Only he didn't run it. "The manager is oudt," he told Bregstein and me, "and I ain't supposed to give you the informations." Joe, we had just asked him how business was and that was what he told us. Can you imagine anybody in this fillim business who ain't willin' to admit he's on the road to bein' a millionaire? He was what you call a unconscious humorist, Joe, one of them kind who says funny things and don't know it, and then when you laugh at him, he's almost ready to sue you. I should like to write some more about him, as also about Mazie, who runs the Venice. If you had Mazie for your cashier, Nathan, you could afford to lose a dozen like the dame you just lost who usta look pretty and get the change wrong.

We Are Greatly Indebted to These Three Fox Sunshine Girls for the Beautifying of This Page.
In fact, we are just about to dictate a letter of appreciation. Have you a little Fox Sunshine Comedy in your theatre?

M. & S. Houses Doin' Good Things.

An' speakin of houses, Joe, Mayer & Schneider is doin' a lotta fine things for the East Side. Take their Clinton Theatre, on Clinton street, for instance. It's a classy picture theatre, with marble trimmin's, indirect light, seven-piece orchestra, upholstered seats and everythin'. It even has a soda water fountain in the back of the balcony, and the projection room is lika hotel suite with a bath. And that bath remark is the truth. Max Cohen is a live wire of a manager, and Julius Berger is some clever acrobat about the twin Simplexes.

Nathan Bloch at the Orpheum on Second avenue is an old-timer who has the East Side doped out from a long way back. And Jack Printz, who manages Freedman's New Stand under the Manhattan Bridge looks like his battin' average will stay amongst the leaders.

It was some trip, Joe, and if I could only speak the langwidge, I'd write some stories what'd make me so famous the Dillsburg firemen would dust off the red shirts when I came to town. Then I'd be gettin' the dough from the Ghetto myself, eh, Joe?

Portland Circuit Has Meeting.

The first Portland meeting of the Northwest Film Circuit was held July 11 when J. Q. Clemmer came down from Seattle to preside at the gathering at the Peoples Theatre.

The Circuit is getting right down to business and the first meeting was well attended. C. F. Hill, president of the Globe Theatres Company, Albany, Roseburg and Medford, R. Kuhn, Lebanon, and Ross Nelson, Independence, were among the exhibitors traveling to Portland for the occasion. A committee viewed several productions for the purpose of booking.

Realart's Sales Manager Arrives on Pacific Coast

J. S. WOODY, general sales manager for Realart Pictures Corporation, has reached the Pacific coast. His first port of call was Seattle, where he arrived on Saturday, July 19. This is familiar ground to Mr. Woody, as he made his headquarters in Seattle for several years while he was Pacific Northwest Manager for Mutual Film Corporation, and later Pacific Northwest general manager for Select Pictures Corporation.

Upon his arrival in the metropolis of the Northwest coast country, his first return there since he had been elevated to the position of general sales manager for Select, and, later, to his present position, grand and lofty doings were the order of the day.

Mr. Woody later departed for San Francisco, from where he expects to proceed to Los Angeles and then hit the trail back East.

Starting out the middle of June, Realart's General Sales Manager has visited the following cities and established exchanges there: Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver, Seattle, San Francisco.

He also stopped over in Salt Lake City between Denver and Seattle in order to confer with George Mayne, of the American Theatre, George Carpenter, of the Paramount-Empress, and other friends.

St. Louis Theatres Take Music Back.

Practically all of the St. Louis picture theatres now have put back music as a result of the temporary settlement of the controversy between the Musicians' Union and the theatre managers. The present contract between the musicians and theatre men runs until September 1.

The question of whether a permanent settlement will be made with the musicians will be known within a week or ten days. If their demands are exorbitant, the theatres will refuse to sign new contracts but will take the music out of their houses.

"GRIEF" MEASURED BY GOLDEN RULE

Troubles of Picture-Showmen, Exchange Men and Home Office May Be Greatly Lessened if Everybody Would Do Their Full Duty by Each Other in Handling Film

By James B. Kelly
("Smiling Jimmy")

I PROMISED to give you a few remarks on the great indoor sport around a film exchange labeled "Grief," and although I realize that the greater share of this article always falls to a film exchange branch manager it is to be conceded that an exhibitor also has his share, but nine out of ten cases of "Grief" we also know are caused by some "bonehead" of some other exhibitor or one of his employes, even though the exchange gets the blame.

Right at the start allow me to prescribe a "cure" that will eliminate 90 per cent. of the grief in this industry. First, Mr. Exhibitor, don't leave the most important thing to some underpaid hireling—and the most important thing in this business is the prompt and intelligent shipping of films, either back to the exchange or to some other exhibitor. If those films have to go off on a midnight train attend to them yourself; and the extra hour that you have to stay up in order to see that films are properly shipped will be repaid to you tenfold some time by another exhibitor who ships your films at night and gets them to you in time for your matinee.

Do as You Would Be Done By.

If we would live up to the "Golden Rule" a whole lot more and not be so blooming selfish, it would save the industry in general much "grief." However there are many exhibitors who live on in a selfish way and don't care who gets "blowed up" just so they get their film. They leave the shipping of film to some boy, or jitney driver who has no interest in the business at all, and they never worry one bit when they fail to get the film off properly. But Oh, Boy! when they fail to get their own film, don't they howl and threaten suit and everything else!

To eliminate this, we should all pull together and be just as particular about the next man getting his film as we are about our own pictures arriving on time. Until we secure this co-operation from all exhibitors, there will always be grief around a film exchange.

Another big kick on the part of the exhibitors is the condition of poor film, and to thoroughly eliminate this it is going to take the combined co-operation of exhibitors, operators, exchange managers and home offices. I mention the latter, for in many instances the poor condition of film may be accredited to the lack of inspection caused by the home office not allowing the branch manager to secure enough competent help to inspect the films.

Blames Poor Inspection.

I have seen this great catastrophe in many exchanges, and although the film inspector is the least paid employe—around an exchange, the film companies try to crowd too much work on each inspector with the results that the films are poorly inspected and in the long run they lose a great deal more by having their positives wear out before their allotted time.

To properly inspect film a branch manager should have sufficient regular inspectors, and then have on a list three or four girls who possibly go to school in the morning that they can secure as extra inspectors by the day when they need them. He should apportion a definite number of reels a day to each inspector, and then instruct them to take their time and have every reel they inspect leave their hands in first class condition.

Make your inspectors take pride in their work, arouse their enthusiasm by competition, prizes, etc., and above all be sure and let them realize that they hold an important position with a great responsibility attached. Did you ever realize that a crew of ten inspectors could badly cripple an exchange if they were careless in their work? Several thousand feet of valuable film could be ruined before it could be found out.

Good Treatment Pays Dividends.

Treat your inspectors like human beings and employ enough of them and you will very soon reap the benefit that is coming to you. It is better to have one too many inspectors than not enough.

Careful routing of films, and bringing them back to the exchange after each booking for inspection also tends to increase the life of a film. Although your rentals will not be as large as if you worked the film every day, in the long run your gross rentals on the print in question will be a great deal more than if you allowed the film to work five and six days a week.

This feature is up to the branch manager, and any B. M. who allows his film to be worked more than three days a week is throwing his company's good money to the "birdies." Did you ever hear a B. M. brag that a certain film was being used five days a week? He seems to be proud of the fact, whereas the film he is talking about is gradually committing suicide.

Now I know some of the real wise boys will say that I am telling a lot of stuff that they have known for years; and they may have. But believe me, if I were in their place I would be ashamed to own up to it. They have not followed out this knowledge in a very intelligent manner, and on that account have a lot of junk back in the vault that ought to be in good condition and earning money right now.

Hints to Picture Showmen.

Mr. Exhibitor to "hop" on you, first of all I would make it the most important feature of your operator's job to inspect every inch of film that comes into your theatre before it is put on a machine. This very important precaution will eliminate many dollars' worth of trouble not only to yourself, but to other exhibitors.

Did you know, Mr. Manager, that one

Fannie Ward in "Our Better Selves" Believes Our "Selves" May Be Made Better by Brilliant Clothes.
These three dramatic glimpses of her newest Pathe feature show that the picture has a powerful story.

little nick in a film not one-quarter of an inch deep or one sprocket hole torn out will, in most cases, cause you to destroy from ten to one hundred feet of film? In some cases that little nick will cause a fire that might burn down your theatre; whereas if your operator had inspected the film he could have either cut the nick out with a pair of scissors or mended the film in fifteen seconds.

The trouble is, Mr. Exhibitor, you are paying too much attention to that "box office" and not enough to the condition of the film that you are making money with. Get wise to yourself and change your tactics if you expect to be a continued success in this business.

Praise for Good Operators.

If I were running a show an operator an operator who "knows his business," studies every angle of his work and takes a pride in the condition of his film, its projection, prompt shipments and above all good conscientious work that knows no "hours" and with one thought only, to give his employer and the exchanges who own the film full value for their money.

If I were running a show an operator of this kind would be worth double the salary that he ordinarily secures, as he is a real godsend to the film industry. Think this over Mr. Exhibitor!

I could write a whole book I believe on "Grief," but will sum matters up as follows: Home offices: Give your B. M. more leeway regarding inspectors and see that their inspection force is letter perfect.

Advice to Branch Managers.

Branch Managers: Watch your inspection closer; don't crowd your inspectors, treat them like human beings. Don't try to personally answer all the mail that comes into your office. Have an assistant or "office manager" to attend to the routine mail, and to also attend to the small details around your office.

Remember that in addition to being B. M. you are also Chairman of the Reception Committee, Publicity Expert, Sales Manager and City Salesman, and unless you shift the responsibility of the smaller matters on to some one else's shoulders and only attend to the real big things yourself, you are going to worry yourself to death with "Grief" and very soon your value to your company will be null and void.

Last Words to Exhibitors.

Two hours a day with the mail and dictation is an ample sufficiency, the other "six" should be spent with exhibitors, salesmen, publicity and sales promotion, and above all "knock off" at 5.30 p. m. and go home with a clear head and forget all about film until the next morning. Anybody that says this latter cannot be done is kidding himself.

Exhibitors: I have explained nearly all to you as above, but if you want to eliminate "Grief" to yourself, your brother exhibitor and the exchange, watch the condition of your film coming in; instruct your operator to watch his film every minute it is on the screen (very important item); see that the film leaves your theatre in even a better condition than when it arrived, and last, but most important, personally see that the film is shipped as per instructions from the exchange you are doing business with—your motto always being "The Golden Rule."

Don't Be "Hard Boiled."

Let's all get together folks. Afford each other as much co-operation as possible. You road men and exchange managers book your films to the exhibitor at "live and let live" prices. Make a special effort to see that the exhibitor gets a good print and that his advertising matter is shipped promptly. In return, Mr. Exhibitor, act like a human being at all times, get away from any "hard boiled" ideas, and you will find that you will receive better treatment from the film exchanges in the matter of both price and service.

Equity Pictures Heads Start on Extensive Tour

HERBERT K. SOMBORN and Joseph I. Schnitzer, respectively president and treasurer of the recently formed Equity Pictures Corporation, will leave New York within the next few days on a tour of the important moving picture distributing centers of the United States and Canada. Upon their return there may be expected a detailed announcement of the plan of distribution and exploitation which has been devised by the Equity people and the important connections which have been made for the company.

The trip on which Messrs. Somborn and Schnitzer are leaving is intended to close a number of important contracts which have already been arranged but which can be most conveniently closed in territory outside of New York.

President Somborn is in constant touch with the Clara Kimball Young organization on the Coast, and is informed that the work on the first production to be handled by his company, "Eyes of Youth," starring Miss Young, is well under way. Pauline Stark has been engaged to play the sister in the bill, Vincent Serrano will appear as the yogi, Milton Sills as "Louis Martin," William Courtleigh as the impresario, Gareth Hughes as the brother, and Edmund Lowe as the "lead." Albert Parker is directing the production from a scenario provided by Charles E. Whittaker.

A research, publicity and advertising department has been established and exhibitors throughout the country are being asked to express themselves as to just how the film, which will be ready in October, ought to be handled to get the most money in their respective territories. Their attention is being called to the remarkable box office strength which the play has shown in New York and on the road.

Film On Care of Teeth for Army.

"Come Clean," a three and one-half reel picture designed to teach oral hygiene, shortly will be produced for the benefit of the Army by the Army Medical Museum. The picture was made under the supervision of Major Leonard G. Mitchell, D. C., and is the outgrowth of oral hygiene lectures delivered to officers and men.

Private Tom Merrill is being ridiculed for brushing his teeth. Some of his buddies hide his brush and a fistic encounter ensues after which Tom explains why he takes good care of his teeth.

Views of several wards at Walter Reed Hospital are shown, including cases of diseases with complications, growing out of the neglect of teeth.

The picture then takes up the scientific part, showing why and how infection from pyorrhea and abcessed teeth, reaches different parts of the body, producing various diseases, the infection being shown on its way by the use of animated drawings.

DOING MISSIONARY WORK IN TEXAS

Bickel, Exchange Manager, Goes on the Road with Film and by Taking Money They Might Have Had Shows Small Town Exhibitors Error of Their Ways

DON'T try to talk to me about small-town exploitation," the exhibitor from Denison, Texas, was saying. "It won't work. The country people won't fall for that ballyhoo stuff. You fellows sit in your mahogany furnished offices and get up a lot of pipe dreams and expect us small-town exhibitors to carry them out with as much success as the big town exhibitors. You're all wrong, Bickel—entirely off on this subject."

"Yep, he's right," said the exhibitor from Sherman. "I've never tried any of this exploitation, but it stand to reason it won't work. It's logic. That's all there is to it. If I owned a house in a town as big as Dallas I'd exploit my pictures, too, but in a small town all the exhibitor can do is to announce his pictures and pray that enough people will come to pay expenses. I know! I haven't been an exhibitor for five years for nothing."

A Live Wire on the Wire.

Bickel, who is manager of First National's Dallas exchange, gave the exhibitors a pained glance. He began running his finger through the pages of a telephone directory, saying, "Well, if you fellows will give me thirty-six hours I'll refute your assertions by taking money from your own town.

A few minutes later Bickel was asking the telephone girl at the Old Mill theatre to let him speak to Mr. Saal.

"Who is Saal?" asked one of the exhibitors of Bickel.

"Saal is a twelve-cylinder red-headed Irishman who is going to help me convince you fellows that a small town exhibitor can become as wealthy as a big town showman," answered Bickel, waiting for Billy to get on the line.

A Business Proposition.

"Little business proposition, Billy," said Bickel when Saal finally got on the line. "Come right over. This is quick work."

The exhibitors listened mockingly while Bickel outlined a proposition to Saal. They winked at one another. Here was their chance to gloat over the failure of a big-town film concern, the Weisenheimers. They shook hands with Billy, wished him luck and went out of Bickel's office laughing. It would be almost as much fun to see one of the city-slickers fail as it would be to them to put something across, they figured.

"I've let you in for a real job," Bickel explained after the exhibitors had gone. "I tried to tell those fellows that showmanship will pay for exhibitors in the smaller Texas towns just as well, in proportion, as it will in Dallas, Austin, or any other city. They laughed at me. I don't like the idea of being a jester, particularly for the benefit of exhibitors who are asleep to opportunity."

Saal Rises to Occasion.

"It doesn't look so hard," Saal responded. "Tell you what I'll do. We've just concluded a mighty successful campaign here in Dallas on the picture you wanted them to book. I'll lift the entire exploitation, bodily, and take it over to Denison and Sherman. I'll use it, word for word, line for line, and sheet for sheet. Perhaps that will satisfy them that the stunts we do in Dallas, and the money we spend to pep up public interest, are just as good money-getters in the smaller towns."

That same afternoon Billy arrived in Denison. It was after union hours and business houses were closing. But it wasn't quitting time for Billy. He was just starting in. He hopped a taxi to the office of the local newspaper and found the editor occupied with the task of writing an editorial welcoming President Wilson back to America. Billy didn't stop to shake hands.

An Incredulous Editor.

"I want to contract for about three pages of advertising during the next four days," said Billy briskly, "I'll have my copy ready in an hour and my checks will—"

"Well, well," interrupted the editor, his eyes wide open, "are they going to have another Liberty Loan drive or something?"

"No, I'm putting on 'Auction of Souls,' a motion picture. Can you let me have that space?"

"Y-e-e-e-s," hesitated the editor, who also happened to be the business manager. "If you think you want it. And can pay for it," he added sharply. "You know this isn't a very large town and I'm a little bit afraid you're buying too much space."

A Deputy Publicity Man.

"Well, you let me worry about the financing of this picture and I'll appoint you my personal publicity representative to see that the columns of your worthy paper are chuck full of copy," replied Billy.

The editor promised to do his best to notify the citizenship of Denison that a truly wonderful motion picture was coming to their city. He began writing news announcements and was still at this work when Billy returned with ad copy and questions regarding the whereabouts of the local billboard owner.

"He's out fishing," replied the editor. "You see there hasn't been much business for him lately, so he's out trying to snag some trout. He'll be in day after to-morrow."

"Where's he fishing?" asked Billy.

Seeks the Billboarder.

And in fifteen minutes he was outward bound in a rented car to locate the man who had a corner of all billboard space.

"You want some billboard space," repeated the billboard man, after Billy had completed introduction formalities. "We-e-el, I got twelve. I guess you can use about the regular three, can't you."

"Three nothing," replied Billy. "I want all twelve and I'm going to help to glue the paper tonight."

"Aw, no," said the billboard man, and shook his head. "It'll be too late. It'll be ten o'clock before we can get back We can wait until tomorrow afternoon."

Billy insisted and the billboard man protested. Extra money was the winning argument and the billboards were soon covered with advertising matter heralding the coming of "Auction of Souls."

To make a short story shorter, the film scored the greatest success in the history of Denison. A two-night's showing in Denison resulted in clearing $350 over and above expenses.

Exhibitor Is Concinved.

The Denison exhibitor was astounded. He couldn't appreciate what had happened. Here was a Dallas man going away with $350 of Denison money which he might just as well have had.

But the Denison exhibitor wasn't alone in his grief. The same stunt was repeated in Sherman and another $350 clear profit was made.

By this time exhibitors throughout the state had heard of the exploitation success in the small towns, and they besieging Bickel to provide prints of "Auction of Souls" for them.

But Herschel Stuart, manager of the E. H. Hulsey concern, was calling Billy back to his regular job.

"Those small town exhibitors will learn some day that exploitation will make them rich," Herschel told Billy. "The staff needs you too much right here in Dallas for you to be wandering around the country showing those fellows the light. You've done enough humanitarian work, anyhow."

Paramount-Artcraft Announces Second Annual National Advertising Week Starting in August

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation that the second annual National Paramount-Artcraft Week will be inaugurated Sunday, August 31. Every city and town in the United States, no matter what its size so long as it contains a theatre, is provided for in the exploitation campaign which involves the showing of Paramount-Artcraft pictures every exhibition day in as many theatres as it is possible to supply.

The full page advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post last year announcing the week proved to be of such great value that another page will be used this year for the first formal announcement direct to the public. This advertisement, which will bear conspicuously the catch lines, "A Drive for Better Motion Pictures" and "Beginning the Greatest Motion Picture Season in the History of the Screen," will appear in the issue of August 30, on the stands Thursday, August 28. The line, "A Drive for Better Motion Pictures," will be the slogan of the campaign.

The newspaper advertising schedule provides for a full-page in about ninety of the largest cities of the country. The copy calls for a general top-page display with space beneath for a list of all the theatres in the city co-operating.

This year, however, the campaign calls for advertising in 375 other newspapers, in every city over ten thousand population in which there is a theatre to present properly Paramount-Artcraft pictures. In the larger of these cities the advertisements will be of half-page size, space being provided for the listing of theatres just as in the full-page advertisements in the largest centers. As in the former campaign, the exchanges will supply the names of theatres, plays and stars to the newspapers carrying the full and half-page ads, as far in advance as possible and will see to the proper okaying of this part of the advertisement.

In the smaller cities, the copy will be about 420 lines, probably five or six inches deep. No theatres will be listed with this copy, which will be placed on a contingent basis with the newspapers, that is, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will pay for the Paramount-Artcraft Week advertising, provided the exhibitor runs beneath it his ad, using equal space. The newspaper list for this advertising has been completed, mats and cuts have been prepared and the final details for the entire campaign are practically completed.

In towns under ten thousand population especially designed postcards will be furnished to exhibitors by the exchanges free of charge to send out to the exhibitor's mailing lists. In addition, a complete line of accessories has been prepared.

Writes Song for "Destiny."

Dorothy Philipps' latest picture, "Destiny," is to be given wider exploitation by the new song hit just issued by the Jerome H. Remick & Company, with the title "Destiny." The words were written by Alfred Bryan, well known song writer, and the music is by Herbert Spencer, known for his many songs in musical comedies and light operas.

Exhibitors throughout the country are advised to get in touch with a Universal exchange or a branch office of the song publishers and obtain slides which exploit the song and the picture.

Brown Discovered Power of the Screen When Movie Man Got Right on the Job

Alderman Introduced a Sunday Closing Bill—One Slide Brought About Withdrawal of Measure.

The following story of "The Power of the Screen" was written by an exhibitor who, as his tale indicates, has had experience in local as well as larger politics. The editor can vouch for the standing of the writer as a manager and among his contemporaries. The correct names of the town and persons concerned are known to us. The story will have interest for those who hesitate to employ their screen for other than straight entertainment purposes.

THE writer has heard that phrase, "The power of the screen," used by speakers, at movie functions, scores of times, and seen it in print hundreds of times during the past twelve years. On several occasions he has noted the effect of its power when intelligently applied, but regrets to note the innumerable cases where exhibitors miserably fail to utilize their legitimate weapon of self-defense.

They never dream of using the screen as an aggressive weapon; don't seem to realize it is the exhibitors' "Big Stick," where one application suffices for a long time in a given locality. But such is the case to my actual knowledge, as the following story will illustrate.

Bill Would Close Sunday Shows.

Ten years ago in a certain large city one of the city fathers introduced an ordinance to close the movies on Sundays. A movie manager with an operator cartoonist promptly threw on the screen:

This is a picture of Alderman Brown, who wants to close this place on Sundays. Tell Mister Brown what you think of it.

Brown, of course, was not his name, but it will suffice. It so happened he had "ran" the ward for years and had a strong faction against him in his own party headed by — we'll call him Green (though that wasn't his name).

The Movie Man knew nothing of this, having been there but a short time, neither did he know the primaries were due that week.

The slide went on on Saturday. It was a workingman's show of about a thousand capacity. This was what actually took place.

"Get the hook for Brown!" they cried. Catcalls and inelegant remarks showed the manager at once what the people thought of Brown. Now note this, you who would aspire to be a power in your ward politically.

Brown Wanted to See that Slide.

On Sunday about 7.30 Brown appeared, offered the manager a real cigar and (after explaining to the astonished Movie Man who he was) begged him to take the slide off. Brown said:

"I only introduced that ordinance for a preacher by request."

"That means that you are not the father of the child?" said the Movie Man.

"That's right," said Brown, "and what's more it's dead so far as I am concerned."

He expressed a desire, however, to see the slide, but the Movie Man wanted him to see its effect, so he shot the order up the tube and poor Brown turned all colors at what he heard and saw. The showman satisfied Brown by presenting him with the glass cartoon, assuring him that he was merely testing the sentiment of his patrons.

It was then poor Brown told of his fears of the results next night—primary night. Shortly after Brown's departure Candidate Green appeared, cigar 'n everything.

The Movie Man did not know him either. Green started with profuse thanks "for giving me a lift. I didn't have a chance till Brown made that break," adding, "Your big Saturday and Sunday crowds have carried it all over this ward and, by thunder, I owe you something, mister!"

But Movie Man Wasn't in Politics—No.

"Mister" modestly explained he was taking no part, intentionally, in politics and Green and his crowd retired very grateful.

The primary was a battle royal.

The issue was "Sunday Movies." Brown was swamped and the nomination was equivalent to election. The big show was packed that night—"on Green."

Green after his election took care of Brown as a "lame duck." Brown afterward thanked the Movie Man, and does to this day, his appointment being lucrative and permanent.

Green still makes a good city father and the movie man has more "influence" with both than any man in the "Bloody Sixth." Not only that.

The story of that slide is well known to every politician in that county and that particular movie man is always the spokesman for his fellow-exhibitors, and always successful. The "Big Stick" has never been used since.

Theodore Roosevelt's theory, in the writer's opinion, is easily applicable, but the man who talks about the "power of the screen," but will not "under any circumstances, no—never—run a slide," ought to forever hold his peace.

Detroit Film Censors Make Change.

Detroit film censors, Messrs. Baker and Potter, are now censoring pictures under the supervision of the Recreation Commission, and not under auspices of the police department, as heretofore. The commission will direct a campaign against lurid posters.

Rambles Round Filmtown

With William J. Reilly

WE'VE CAUGHT THE FEVER TOO—HERE'S THE NEW RAMBLES POLICY.

NOW that Walt Hill is rambling on his vacation up in Maine and staging a daily Keystone in a one-act bathing suit, the office gang is gona pull a Fillim President Act and announce a complete change of policy.

For this and the succeeding issue, Rambles will be strictly pro-Republican, strong for the Sinn Feiners, absolutely against prohibition, and sternly opposed to the matching of quarters. We'd oppose the League of Nations, but we don't want to take the support of Rambles from behind the President, fearing that such a move would be the opening wedge for the Bolsheviks.

Anybody who owes Walt Hill money can mail the check to "Rambles Round Filmtown" and we'll take care of it. Bills sent to the same department will be given the business interpretation of "immediate consideration"—that is, thirty days. Walt'll be back by that time.

The classical owl on the M. P. W. staff was reading an advance story from the press agent of Aeschylus, father of Greek tragedy, the other night. The P. A. was working way back in the B. C.'s with a limited number of reference books, but he dug up a line that might be used by the boys who write that clever stuff for the trade papers. In describing a forthcoming release from the pen of Aeschylus, the enterprising P. A. styled it as "A rare study in love, fear, jealousy, hate, sympathy, pathos and revenge." Not so bad for a guy 'way back there, eh?

The Fewer Kinks the Better.

The Kink of Bavaria thought he was in a Brownsville rent eviction the other day. They grabbed a dozen or so of his castles and left him with only one. If he only were a film magnate, what a good story he'd give out for the trade papers! Something like this:

"This radical step is but another manifestation of the determination of the Bavarian Film Company to give the exhibitor the very best possible in screen entertainment. I have given over my castles to the various Bavarian producing units, and have placed a castle, with all its marvelous interiors and equipment, under the personal supervision of each one of my twelve directors. No expense will be spared.

"Personal sacrifice will be the keynote of Bavarian productions during the coming year." (See any "announcement" for the rest).

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN GREEK MEETS GREEK?
IT'S ALL GREEK TO ME, SAYS SYD.

The trade paper editors dined and 2.75ed Syd Chaplin, Friday, July 18, at the Claridge (No advt.). Syd was called upon to make a few goodbye remarks, in view of the fact that he was about to exit to the continent.

At the conclusion of a neatly framed speech, which Syd said was his first offense (barring one), he announced that his studio manager would pass around copies of the address which had been prepared in advance. Studio manager was more prompt in passing 'em around than Congressional printers engrossing a Lodge speech.

Ye editors opened their neatly bound booklets and found that Syd's remarks had been translated into Greek and printed on the front page of one of Manhattan's Greek newspapers.

"What's all this, Syd?" came editorial chorus.

"It's all Greek to me," was response.

It was then Mr. Chaplin rang for the ambulances.

"The Power of the Screen"

DON'T overlook that tale of the power of the screen which you will find somewhere in this issue. It was written by one of the old war-horses, old but in no sense decrepit. Far from that. He is up to the minute, aggressive, will fight at the drop of the hat for exhibitors individually and collectively when any right is threatened, and knows the officials of his home town well enough to call them by their first names. And he possesses as well a sharp tongue and a ready wit.

Here's one example: In the same large city where this exhibitor resides the city fathers had slipped over on the picture showmen an ordinance that would have taken out of the box office receipts something over $30,000 annually. Behind the movement were the churches. Our friend was as usual chosen as the spokesman for the exhibitors in an effort to have the obnoxious measure repealed—and it is no easy matter at any time to obtain a repeal. He secured from the exchanges a complete list of accumulated educationals, news weeklies and travel and kindred topics.

The spokesman asked of the opposing ministers if they could match such an "array of silent lecturers appearing before hundreds of thousands of the people of the state nightly." One of his opponents explained that this kind of pictures were not accessible because they were all "worn out." The spokesman clinched the argument and incidentally the repeal of the law by calling attention to the fact that the exhibitors had worn them out and delivered their educational messages to thousands who never went to church.

The exhibitor of whom we are writing asks if it is not possible to collate an array of releases similar to that which he found so effective and present it at Washington by a real pleader. "Are we ourselves forever to be merely referring incidentally to this redeeming feature of our business, when such a mass of educative and instructive stuff is being worn out weekly before the churches can get it?" he continues. "You will get nowhere by pleading from the dollar standpoint alone. We should take this angle in the tax fight, spring a big educational surprise, and supplement from the dollar standpoint, and we will win. Give the Congressman a chance to discriminate."

President Black in Fighting Mood

THE soft-spoken president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America is in fighting mood. Alfred S. Black's reply to the New York State exhibitors, printed on Page 645, bristles with defiance. While he admits the national body will not be financed and its organization perfected while controversies rage, he declares he will not remain passive under attack.

The national president charges the New Yorkers with bad faith in their statement that they never had acknowledged jurisdiction. He deplores the agreement between the old League and the Trade Review and says it was the cause of the animosity shown to the League by other trade papers and the most direct means of the former League's failure. He says Mr. Blumenthal personally is now paying League expenses upon the chance that later he will be reimbursed.

As to his personal relations toward the producers Mr. Black defies the New York organization to deny that while the present national executive was a member of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry, he did not fight the producing interests whenever exhibitor problems in his opinion were getting unfair treatment and calls attention to the fact that he was active in precipitating the withdrawal of the League from the N. A. M. P. I.

The whole communication gives a new insight into the character of the man at the head of the national organization. The moving picture business never is dull, but it looks as if the exhibitor branch of the industry in the coming weeks will supply its full quota of lively doings.

"Every Cloud Has Its Silver Lining"

SO after all, as was predicted, prohibition is playing into the hands of the exhibitors of motion pictures. The lining of what many have looked upon as a cloud—and one considerably larger than a man's hand—is to the picture showman the added silver that flows into his cash drawer in the box office. Minneapolis and St. Paul have been heard from, in spite of the fact that prohibition as yet is but an infant industry.

Already in Minneapolis four of the five theatres that represented the last of the "nickelodeons"—and what a disagreeable sound that word always has had—have gone the way of John Barleycorn. They are not out of business, but have progressed to the class of ten-cent admissions. It is well. Theatres of the Twin Cities report a far greater business in the month of July, the first month of the "great drouth," than during the corresponding month a year ago.

Just listen to Frank Smoleski, proprietor of the Mazda, one of the houses that raised, that doubled if you please, its price of admission: "Prohibition is the greatest thing that ever could have happened to the moving picture game. We have raised our admission prices and the audiences are larger than they were in June, despite the heat. I have noticed an increase in the number of men attending the shows. It has not been a great increase, but just the same it's an increase in the face of higher prices."

"Father is paying more attention to the family than to the bartender now," says Harry Billings, general manager of Ruben & Finkelstein's twenty-one houses. "He takes out the missus and the kiddies to see a wholesome moving picture show."

And so goes the testimony down the line. We'll hear a lot of this sort of talk in the next few months, if this story from the Northwest is any criterion. And if we do we may be sure there will be gold as well as silver to decorate the lining of the Cloud.

Macnamara Had Finger in That Pie

IN our issue of last week, in speaking of George Loane Tucker and "Traffic in Souls," the Moving Picture World was made to say that Mr. Tucker wrote the scenario of this great melodrama himself. We'll wager a cigar that somewhere between here and Los Angeles there is speeding eastward a letter from Walter Macnamara gently chiding the editor for letting the just-mentioned statement "get by." And Walter will be absolutely right. For he had much to do with the writing of "Traffic in Souls." If we recall correctly, at the time the subject was released there was no question that the always entertaining Irishman was the author.

And another word about "Traffic in Souls." In the story referred to there was an allusion to the "first million-dollar American picture." The sum mentioned must have to do with the money the production made for its distributors. The cost was roughly between five and six thousand dollars—a figure not without interest in these days of the high cost of film.

Good Luck to Sydney Chaplin

SYDNEY CHAPLIN is on the Atlantic, on his way to France to make pictures. His small party forms the vanguard of the friendly "American invasion," and it is probable he will have many followers. Mr. Chaplin stated before his departure that his brother and Douglas Fairbanks were much interested in the outcome of his trip and that the idea of making pictures abroad appealed strongly to both of them. Unquestionably it will to many others.

Mr. Chaplin admits the question of locations is a matter of concern in Los Angeles. To an American producer abroad that will be one of the least of his troubles. It is likely that just now one of the larger elements militating against him will be the matter of transportation—across country and between countries. But as to locations—these are practically endless. Americans never will tire of looking at American backgrounds so long as these are chosen with even average discretion, but the foreign settings will add the charm of variety and the fascination of viewing scenes associated with the romances of yesterday. The wide world is the camera's empire. The drawing power of the foreign scenic is conceded. Why should not the lure be many times multiplied if these locations are employed for dramatic—or comedy—productions?

The Motion Picture Is Not a Joke

A NUMBER of the daily newspapers in the larger cities have devoted considerable space to the misstatements given out by an exhibitor from California who has been telling a lot of New York clubwomen and other well meaning but poorly informed persons that "the motion picture as it stands today is the biggest joke in the world." As to the reliability of such an assertion a moment's intelligent thought will settle the matter on the negative side. The man who made the assertion may drop out of sight but the industry will go on improving its product without his aid or that of any other reformer perhaps not oblivious to the lure of the limelight. A list of the worthy pictures given to the public during the last three years is all the proof that is necessary to refute this exhibitor's statement.

The really regrettable part of the whole affair is that some of the newspapers have published articles upholding the stand this exhibitor has taken. The following extract from an article in the Pittsburgh Sun is the right view of the case:

> The progress made during the last few years is earnest that picture plays will continue to become better. But the people, who are good judges, are pretty well satisfied that in the films offered them now they are getting all that could be reasonably expected. The photography is excellent; the stories, though overdrawn, generally amusing; and the acting satisfactory.
> As for the stars, it is true one will not find on the screen today actresses of the caliber of Sarah Bernhardt, Ellen Terry, Charlotte Cushman, Maude Adams, Julia Marlowe; but it must be remembered that there are no such tragic and classic roles in the picture plays as gave the women named their fame. The film stars are mostly called upon to play the part of charming American girls, and they do it with surprising cleverness.

The best brains in the industry are constantly striving to make the best pictures possible. They know more about the difficulties in the way than any person outside the business. They do not need any urging from any outside source. They are very much alive to the advantage of making the best pictures possible, and their actual experience in making such pictures is the only practical way to learn how to make them.

Dual Role Kills Realism

MR. WALKER, manager of two theatres in Dartmouth and one in Imperoyal, N. S., enters in this issue a complaint against the dual role. He suggests that the appearance of a player in a dual role is advertised as a wonderful feat, but insists that not one in a thousand picturegoers is interested in any performance in which this illusion-killing device is a factor. He says truly that the playing of two parts by one person takes out the realism. He is not quoting his own opinion; he points out that he is expressing the views of his patrons.

We agree with Manager Walker. Once in a while, a great while, we see a picture in which a dual role may add to the novelty of a subject. But one swallow does not make a summer. The number of subjects in which we have had two brothers or two sisters played by one person is legion. The number of these that have been successful, that really have been satisfying, have been comparatively few. There was a time when the dual role was a novelty. That was a long time ago.

ROBERTSON-COLE AND MUTUAL IN COURT

Distributing Firm Seeks Injunction to Prevent Termination of Contract with Producing Concern

THE Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation filed an action in the United States District Court on July 19 against the Robertson-Cole Company to compel the latter to carry out a contract executed November 18, 1918, under the terms of which the Mutual became the distributing agency for Robertson-Cole releases for a period of two years.

The Mutual alleges in the complaint filed by Wing & Russell that the Robertson-Cole Company notified the officials of the distributing company on July 18 of its termination of the contract and a copy of the letter is embodied in an affidavit subscribed to by William J. Clark, president of the Mutual, filed with the bill of complaint.

Desires Contract Termination.

In the letter contained in the affidavit the Robertson-Cole Company assigns as the reasons for the termination of the contract the claim that the Mutual company is insolvent, that the Mutual has failed to perform certain terms of the contract and that the distributing company has discriminated in exploiting films owned by its officials. Excerpts from the letter follow:

"You have wholly failed to comply with your obligations to intensively and energetically solicit and procure contracts for the exhibition of our motion pictures, and to procure the best prices therefor obtainable, and in no event to accept a price less than the minimum specified by us, and have failed to properly exploit and distribute the same.

"You improperly arranged that the Chaplin re-issues should be acquired by your officers personally, instead of by your company, and are preparing to distribute and exploit same in violation of the terms and conditions of the agreements between us."

Insolvency Denied.

Both in the complaint and in Mr. Clark's affidavit an emphatic denial of the allegation as to the insolvency of the Mutual is set forth in no uncertain terms and Mr. Clark embodies a copy of the company's last financial statement issued last May which shows the assets of the corporation to be $1,874,263 with liabilities of only $167,663 in his affidavit to refute the allegation.

"Plaintiff is not insolvent and has not been insolvent at any time since the execution of the contract of November 18, 1918," the papers recite. "Plaintiff is in all respects a solvent going concern with a large and growing business."

Figures Quoted.

In support of the contention that the business of the Mutual is on a sound basis and is expanding rapidly the papers set forth that the company has negotiated contracts with over three thousand motion picture exhibitors and that its income has increased from $30,000 weekly in January to $64,000 in May, but unless the enforcement of the Robertson-Cole contract is directed by the Court the business of the distributing company will be destroyed it is alleged.

"The films owned and to be acquired by defendant (Robertson-Cole Company) are the productions of a number of high class artists, whose services are unique and which are exclusively controlled by the defendant or persons producing films for it and the said productions cannot be acquired except through defendant," the complaint recites.

Wants Contract Upheld.

If the Robertson-Cole Company is permitted to terminate the contract the Mutual company alleges its business will be seriously crippled, if not entirely destroyed, and the company will be laid open to damage suits by exhibitors with whom it has contracted to furnish films on a rental basis.

The Mutual company asks that the Robertson-Cole Company be enjoined from publishing announcements in the trade of its termination of the contract or circulating statements that the Mutual is insolvent and that the defendant be enjoined from making other arrangements for the distribution of its films and compelled to carry out the contract which is the subject of the suit.

The trial of the issues involved in the suit, which was expedited by the court in the interest of both parties, commenced before Judge Mack on July 23.

Press Representatives Guests at Fox Luncheon

ARTHUR JAMES, the newly appointed supervisor of advertising and publicity for the Fox Film Corporation, was the host at a luncheon given by the company Wednesday, July 23, to about twenty representatives of the trade publications at Rector's Cafe de Paris.

The luncheon preceded the first of a series of showings which will extend over three days, covering three features, as well as shorter subjects which are now ready for the exhibitor but which will not be released for two months. Mr. James explained that it will be the policy of the Fox company to continue to have pictures ready for showing at least eight weeks in advance of release and that exploitation details are being worked out now on productions, some of which will not be distributed for six or eight months. This will be done in order to assist the picture showmen in preparing their own advertising and exploitation campaigns well in advance of exhibition.

Mr. James also introduced to the guests Merritt Crawford, the new director of publicity; J. M. Lufboro, who will be in charge of special exploitation, and Tom North, in charge of the Fox short subjects.

Stahl to Direct Mollie King.

After running its first production, "Greater Than Love," starring Mollie King, Walter Niebuhr, president of the American Cinema Corporation, has signed John M. Stahl to direct the next five productions with Miss King. Work on her second picture will begin within two weeks. Title and author of her next picture will be announced shortly.

Well, Goodbye, Jim—Take Keer Yourself

Is What Insurance Man Will Say to Jim Corbett When James Starts On Features After Completing "Midnight" Serial.

By William J. Reilly

*Round 21.—This round was short. Sullivan was visibly distressed, but he assumed the aggressive. He attempted to rush, but received Corbett's left in his face with terrific force. It staggered him and the big fellow backed to his corner. Corbett was now like a tiger. He delivered blow after blow * * * . Corbett swung his big right hand to the point of the chin and that lick made him the hero of the day and the world's champion.*

THE lights go down. The stage is in roaring blackness, and the scene shifts with amazing rapidity. The ringside at the Olympia in New Orleans, gripped by the cholera scourge of 1892, becomes the ringside at Rector's on New York's little own Broadway, clutched in the grip of the prohibition of 1919.

Corbett is not now crouching like a waiting tiger over the form of the dethroned Sullivan. Twenty-six years, ten months, twelve days and nine minutes have elapsed since the moment John L.'s rugged strength fell before the speed and science of the marvelous young Corbett. Gentleman Jim, instead of being like a bit of cork in the trough of the waves of yelling humanity at the New Orleans arena, is surrounded by a quiet little group of press representatives at Rector's and is ordering sliced peaches as the opening round of a midday grapple with the demon hunger.

A Different Kind of Grapple.

The luncheon grapple was taking place only a few doors below the offices of the Clipper, from whose pages the above account of the final round of the Corbett-Sullivan conflict was taken.

The setting was perfect. Jim Corbett, having completed his serial, "The Midnight Man," for Universal, was in New York for a vacation, and Lowell Cash of the Big U publicity staff had co-starred with St. Swithin in getting a black, midnight-like hour as an appropriate setting in which to ensconce this meeting with "The Midnight Man" himself.

St. Swithin was supporting the publicity man with barrels and bucketfuls of talent. It could not be seen which was predominant, the barrels or the buckets. But, anyhow, the weather was wuthering in that sheetlike formation of rain which made so many congratulations pour into St. Swithin headquarters last week. And the clouds were many and of the blackest hue. And the thunder was supplying the incidental music for the occasion and leaping from one Broadway canyon to another in tone deafening enough to remind the listener of Byron's "Childe Harold."

Ebony Setting for "Midnight."

The only appropriate, surrounding circumstance which the publicity man had overlooked, was the fact that the meeting with "The Midnight Man" had not been called at the moment of midnight. It was probably out of deference to the ladies present, however, that Mr. Cash had put this thought out of his mind.

But such was the dark and lowering setting for the meeting with Gentleman Jim Corbett, "The Midnight Man." He was the center of the occasion last week just as his physical beauty and the graceful force of his body made him the cynosure of eyes at the New Orleans battle over twenty-six years ago. At 52 there is not a gray hair in his head, which is still crowned by the same hirsute adornment which many, many days ago won him the soubriquet of "Pompadour Jim."

Jim Corbett is still the big, straight-as-an-arrow, well-proportioned man he was a quarter of a century ago. He has taken on weight, and his nose-glasses give him the air of a college professor of social survey. But undeniably there is still that athletic poise about him which made the Clipper representative at the New Orleans ringside write:

"Corbett, tall, straight and shapely in every line and curve looked the ideal of the artist. Every muscle was gracefully cut and laid in place with artistic accuracy, and each curve had the ideal length and radius. His proportions everywhere appeared to absolute artistic perfection. His movements were graceful, but there was a power behind them that spoke volumes for the tremendous force wrapped up in that graceful exterior."

"Gentleman Jim" Corbett
Hasn't lost his smile, pompadour, pep punch or poise in Universal's serial, "The Midnight Man."

Will See Same Old Jim.

Such was the Jim Corbett of yesterday. And such, plus a few units of avoirdupois, is the Jim Corbett of today, the Jim whom the serial fans and the Corbett admirers will see in "The Midnight Man," the first of whose eighteen episodes will be released in September.

Jim's favorite gesture, as shown at the luncheon, is a motion approximating no other like it does that of a trained boxer assuming a defensive attitude with his hands. His ring experience is responsible for that, of course, but the habit has been encouraged during the past six months more than ever. For it is during the past six months that Jim has been working, every day, on "The Midnight Man," and it safely may be assumed that no battling bets were overlooked in any episode.

Not one of the eighteen chapters goes by but Jim wages fistic war on the villainous hordes of the picture, collectively or individually. And the fights are none of the rolling-on-the-ground, chair-throwing, punch-pulling kind. They are of the stand-up-and-take-what's-coming variety, each one a classic in feinting, footwork, ducking, and all the other arts of the ring.

Corbett Has Many Admirers.

Jim personally conducted the writer and several other representatives of the press through two episodes of the picture in one of the Universal projection rooms, so the above is not conjecture. It was all Sam Zierler, Big U exchange manager, could do to keep his entire office force out of the projection room in which Jim was commenting on each trick of the villain and each punch delivered into the anatomy of some serial brutish one. And a lot of exhibitors who had come to book Big U pictures and who met Corbett, undoubtedly went home with a mental reservation to pounce on "The Midnight Man" when he makes his debut in September.

Jim is not new to the acting game, as he has been on the legitimate stage and in vaudeville ever since he won the laurels of the world's best fighter under the Marquis of Queensbury rules. His big following of admirers, including those who knew him in his ring days, those who followed him on the stage, and those who read "Corbett's Corner" on the sporting page of many large dailies, will be augmented when his first serial starts its circuit through the country in the fall.

Will Make Five-Reelers.

And in the fall the big Californian is going back to his native heath to make five-reel features at Universal City. The first item on his working calendar will be a visit to his insurance office.

After writing out a few odd extra thousands of insurance for Jim, the agent, mindful of all the villains who are still nursing bruised ribs and reflectively stroking fatal chin points at Universal City, will wipe away the tears from his eyes, wring Jim's hand (and have his own arm pumped off) and say:

"Well, good-bye, Jim. Take keer yourself."

Better opportunities are offered in The World's Classified advertising than in any other medium known to the trade. Large needs have been supplied by small advertisements. Think it over and then try it.

COMMITTEE PASSES SHIPMENT BILL

Measure Soon to Come Before House Provides Return or Forwarding of Film Consignments

THE House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, on July 21, instructed its chairman, Congressman Halvor Steenerson, to make a favorable report to the House of Representatives of his bill authorizing the return to the sender or the forwarding of undeliverable second, third and fourth class mail matter.

It develops that this legislation, which will mean much to the industry, was suggested by Harry Sigmond, general counsel for the Northwest Film Board of Trade, of Seattle, who secured also the assistance of Congressman John F. Miller, of that State. The Post Office Department has expressed its approval of the proposed legislation and, in fact, suggested the wording therefor.

Exchanges Now Deprived of Rent.

Under existing law matter other than of the first class which cannot be delivered at the post office to which it is addressed, may not be forwarded to the addressee or returned to the sender at another post office until the postage for its forwarding or return is first prepaid. This procedure necessitates the holding of such undeliverable matter at the office of original address pending notification of the addressee or the sender and the receipt of the required postage for its transmission to its ultimate destination, and the delay which necessarily is involved frequently causes inconvenience, loss and hardship to the sender or addressee, or both. In the case of parcels containing motion picture films, the owners are deprived of the rental for the films during the period they are being held for the forwarding or return postage.

Matter to Bear Pledges.

The Post Office Department informed Congressman Steenerson that under the circumstances it is believed that provision should be made for the prompt forwarding or return of undeliverable perishable matter and also for the return of other undeliverable fourth-class matter and that of the second and third classes bearing the pledge of the sender to pay the return postage, the collection of such postage to be made upon delivery of the matter. This would expedite the handling and disposition of such matter in the mails and would relieve the postal service of the labor and expense of sending notices that the matter is held and will be returned on receipt of the postage.

"In view of these facts and the widespread demand for this postal facility as evidenced by the numerous communications concerning the subject received by the Department," said Postmaster General Burleson, "I am heartily in favor of the forwarding and return of mail under the conditions indicated and to this end recommend the enactment of legislation as follows:

Wording of New Bill.

"That hereafter, under such regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe, fourth-class matter of obvious value which is of a perishable nature may be forwarded to the addressee at another post office charged with the amount of the forwarding postage, and is undeliverable to the addressee it may when such matter of a perishable nature be returned to the sender charged with the return postage: Provided, That other undeliverable matter of the second, third, and fourth classes may be forwarded to the addressee or to such other person as the sender may direct, at another post office, charged with the amount of the forwarding postage, or it may be returned to the sender charged with the return postage, when it bears the sender's pledge that the postage for forwarding and return will be paid, such postage to be collected on delivery: Provided further, That when the sender refuses to furnish such postage in accordance with his pledge, the acceptance from him of further matter bearing such pledge may be refused."

Feminine Sphere in the Field of Movies Is Large Indeed, Says Clara S. Beranger

OF all the different industries that have offered opportunities to women, none have given them the chance that motion pictures have," says Clara S. Beranger, scenario and continuity writer.

"In every department of the industry women have shown an aptitude that has earned for them the appreciation of their superiors in the form of substantial salaries.

"If women had shown that their sphere was limited in pictures then the number employed outside of purely clerical positions would have been no greater than what holds in other commercial lines. But women have scored as directors. They have shown a marked value in the creation of scenic ideas and artistic stage settings. It is also true that women who have invaded the hitherto sacred precincts given over to men of handling exchanges, have more than succeeded.

Women Hold Reins in Fiction Field.

"In passing judgment on the value of pictures for foreign markets, women are now being employed and so down the list. But in one particular branch women are more than holding their own and in many instances proving that the female angle is worth serious consideration and that is in the contriving of situations in building up a continuity. It is also true that women are the equal of men in writing original stories just as it is true that women today in the field of fiction are holding the reins. No man among the current successful authors has a larger following than Mary Roberts Rinehart or Gertrude Atherton.

"In the writing of picture stories women seem to have the call and just why this should be is easily understood. The largest proportion of motion picture 'fans' are women. Women writers know better what pleases their sisters than men for has it not been true since time immemorial that men never understood women but the baby girl just beginning to toddle knows men?"

Figures Do Not Lie.

"Measured" by this view of Vera Stedman, Rainbow-Universal comedy girl, the old adage is still good. Vera is "figuring" on a new kind of dive.

Films on Sericulture Are Needed by Chinese Trade

THE United States "commerce report" for July 11 gives the information quoted below on the possibilities for American educational films in China:

The following letter has been received by this office from the British Chamber of Commerce of Chefoo, China:

With a view to fostering the pongee-silk industry in this district and to enlighten the Chinese as to the possibilities in the development of the scrub oak and cocoons, this chamber is desirous of exhibiting cinema pictures demonstrating the process of cultivation from the silkworm to the finished article, and my committee would deeply appreciate your services in putting us in touch with some one who could supply such pictures, especially those taken from the Chinese field of operation, which we feel sure would intensify the interest.

As American mills are the principal users of the tussah silk reeled in this district, the importance of this educational movement from an American standpoint will be readily appreciated.

[Firms who can supply motion pictures on this subject are requested to communicate with the American consul or direct with the British Chamber of Commerce, at Chefoo, China.]

Anita Stewart in Vitagraph Film.

Vitagraph announces that it is soon to release an Anita Stewart feature, "Shadows of the Past." As the title would indicate, the story has to do with the efforts of three ex-convicts to tread the straight and narrow path. As the sympathy of the spectator is with them throughout it follows naturally that they were not guilty in the first place. But the fact remains that they are jailbirds and the prey of those who would do them harm.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Mix Has His Waterfall, Banty His Doughnuts, and May Allison Her Make-Up That Wanders

By Giebler

A FAIRLY quiet week, but a week in which much of moment has happened and in which a burning question has been settled in a manner that fills Filmland with joy and knocks the props from another of the preposterous presumptions of a town in the northern part of the state.

D. W. Griffith is not going to arise and depart from our fair city, as has been reported. Here are Mr. Griffith's own words:

"I'm not going to San Francisco to make pictures, and I'm not going to locate in the east, although there is a chance that I may go there for two stories that I have in mind."

Dave Isn't Frisky At All.

None of us took the San Francisco stuff seriously; we knew that Frisco could not frisk us for our Dave, but many of us feared that Gotham might get him.

Tom Mix, Charlie Murray, Bobby Vernon, Fatty Arbuckle, Kathleen Clifford, Fred Niblo, Houdini and Will Rogers helped put over the benefit at the Mason Opera House on Sunday night that brought in seven thousand dollars for the Actors' Fund. And every car owner of the colony is throbbing with expectancy as he looks forward to the coming of the day when all speed feuds will be settled at the Auto Classic race to be held at the Ascot Speedway—also an Actors' Fund benefit.

Players who heretofore have never been able to show what they could really do with their cars because of an unfeeling attitude on the part of the speed cops, are going to open her up, step on it and otherwise show how fast they can go when that happy day arrives.

Cecil De Mille and Eddie Hearne are going to stage an auto airplane race. Mr. De Mille will take the course in the air while Hearne covers it on the ground, and Hal Roach, Charles Ray, Donald Crisp, Tom Mix and several others will tear up the track in their efforts to hang up a record.

Clothes, Melody, and Doughnuts.

Clara Kimball Young is back with ten trunks full of new clothes.

Fatty Arbuckle has written a song—an Irish song called "Molly Malone."

I did considerable Rubbernecking this week, called on the Metroites, and spent part of a night on a Tom Mix location, watching Tom ride his horse through a waterfall, and eating Banty Colwell's doughnuts.

Tom is making "A Hard Boiled Tenderfoot," a play that calls for one of the most unusual scenes ever used in the films. Tom wrote the story and is directing himself, and you can always trust him to figure up something different.

The Tenderfoot is trying to locate the lair of a gang of bandits, and one moonlight night when he is riding Tony, his trusty steed, down a mountain trail, he comes upon a beautiful waterfall.

While Tom is getting an eyeful of the sylvan beauty of the scene, the curtain of water that falls from the racks high above is disturbed, and a rough and rude looking person wearing a wide hat, a ferocious look and a brace of guns, rides through the waterfall down the bosky dell and away.

The mystery of the bandits' rendevous is solved; the Tenderfoot rides up the bed of the stream, straight through the falling water, down a long passage into the bandits' cave and and hornet's nest of trouble.

Oil Paintings 'n Everything.

The bandits, who have been robbing trains with especial attention to the sleeping cars, have got the cavern fitted up with Pullmanesque luxury, ranging from paper drinking cups to colored porters.

Of course the bandits all "pack" guns, and Tom has a terrible time, but he outwits the Pullman pirates, saves and wins the "gell," played by Eva Novak, and makes a typical Mix mix-up of mystery, thrills and massive moments.

Tom hurts himself again—I say again because he manages to get bunged up in nearly every picture he makes. This time he rode too close to the wall in the passageway leading to the bandits' cave and cut a two-inch gash in his left knee when he struck the sharp edge of a property rock. If Tom doesn't stop being so reckless with himself, people will be referring to him as the late Mr. Mix one of these days.

The waterfall was a remarkable example of the ingenuity of the Fox technical department. It reminded me of the story of the Irishman, who upon seeing a monkey for the first time in his life, scratched his head and sad, "Well, well, what will the Frinch do next?" Looking at the waterfall made me ask myself "What'll the movies do next?"

The whole thing was man-made, as of course it had to be. Neither waterfalls nor caves are hard to find; any location man will lead a director to a dozen of each on short notice, but the combination of a nice roomy robbers' cave with a tame waterfall acting as a front door is rare.

A Fire Engine Waterfall.

The mountainside was made of real looking rocks and boulders tastefully decorated with vines, bushes and other vegetable matter used by Mrs. Nature in her best moments.

The opening that led to the cave, wide and high enough for a man to ride through on horseback, was completely screened by thousands of gallons of water that tumbled over the rocks twenty feet above. Two fire engines were used to keep the waterfall going, and water enough to float a battleship was used.

We had quite a little party on the location. Sol Wuertzel, manager of the studio, Mrs. Wuertzel, Howard Sheehan, brother to Winnie, of New York, who has just come to the coast as western district manager for Fox films, Mrs. Sheehan, and Mrs. Tom Mix, who used to be Virginia Forde, were all there.

Along about ten bells we all went over to the chuck wagon and staged an attack on the coffee and doughnuts. The chuck wagon, which belongs exclusively to the Tom Mix outfit, and follows Tom wherever he goes on location, is the real thing, and Tex Graham, the captain and J. D., his brother, as first mate, have covered many miles of the western cattle range with the outfit before it went into the movies.

Tex surely knows how to make coffee. He does not use percolators or any fancy doings; the coffee is boiled over a long trench in the ground filled with blazing greasewood and sage brush, and the coffee is as black as ink and as strong as a mule, but ye gods! how it does warm the cockles of the heart.

Making S. A. Lassies Jealous.

The doughnuts were by Banty Colwell. Banty's doughnuts are as popular around the Fox lot as Tom Mix's films are with the fans.

May Allison Is Well Suited and Bert Lytell Adds It's Just a Question of Form.

At the right are Jack Conway, director; Bert Lytell, star, and Maxwell Karger, director-general, who say that "Lombardi, Ltd.," Bert's first "fewer" Metro, has unlimited possibilities.

we were presented to his pastry, but that is merely a side line with him—doughnuts are Banty's real mission in life.

Banty does all the work on his doughnuts personally, story, continuity, direction, hot grease, hole, everything; and when they are done they are as tender as a hero's heart and as seductive as a vampire's glance.

The day after the Mix location I went out to the Metro camp and saw three films on the fire at once. Viola Dana was making "Please Get Married," with John Ince as director, Antrim Short as lead, Margaret Campbell and Harry Todd in the father and mother parts, and Ralph Bell, Emmett King and Thomas Ricketts in support.

Director Harry Franklin was putting Hale Hamilton through a scene of "The Four Flusher," with Ruth Stonehouse, Harry Holden, Effie Conley as a Spanish girl, Frederick Malatesta, Louis Fitzroy and young Robert Badger as assistant interpreters of the action.

Nothing Limited About Bert.

Bert Lytell was deep in the throes of "Lombardi, Ltd," and from the looks of things he's going to put the piece over on the screen just about as big as it went on the stage. He's got Jack Conway for a director, Alice Lake for a leading lady, Juanita Hansen, Anna May, Vera Lewis, Joseph Kilgour, Jean Mendoza and George MacDonald as support, the cutest little mustache you ever saw, and Maxwell Karger lending his personal supervision.

I've heard a lot about this personal supervision stuff, and I have often wondered how one man could lend anything more than the most perfunctory attention to two or three films all in course of production at the same time.

Here's how Karger manages it.

Usually a director rehearses a scene two, three, or a dozen times, then takes it. Then he rehearses another scene and takes that. By this method it sometimes requires two or three hours to shoot two or three scenes, with an actual shooting time of only a few minutes for each.

The Metro method is to rehearse as many scenes as can be done in a morning or an afternoon, get them letter perfect, and then Karger comes along and watches the final rehearsing and the shooting, which takes only a very short time.

The players all like the new plan.

A Wandering Make Up.

May Allison, who was working in "Fair and Warmer," under Director Henry Otto, was enthusiastic.

"Here we are," she said, "working away on a number of scenes on a hot day. We get all tired out, but it will never show in the finished picture because this is only rehearsal. We'll get a number of scenes all ready to shoot and then go home, get a good night's rest and come back in the morning fresh as daisies, ready for the final taking. And the best part of it is that we can rehearse without make-up. Make-up has an aggravating habit of moving around on the face in warm weather. On many occasions, under the old system, I have found the make-up that I put on my forehead in the beginning had maved down to my chin long before we were through."

Manager Walker Wonders Why Producers Feature Dual Roles

H. R. WALKER, manager of the Royal and Classic theatres in Dartmouth, N. S., and the Princess in Imperoyal, N. S., makes the following timely criticism of the habit producers are at present indulging in of casting their stars in dual roles:

Why are so many stars playing a dual role? is the question Mr. Walker asks. This, he points out, is advertised as a wonderful feat, but whom does it interest?—perhaps the stars and directors, but certainly not one in a thousand picture fans. It only gives the impression that there are not enough players in the company to take the parts—something after the fashion of the old-time traveling shows when three or four players would have to take a dozen parts because there were not enough in the company to put on the play properly.

A Blow at Realism.

Very few, if any, theatre patrons care a cent whether Pearl Prunella or Sapphire Whoosis can carry two or three roles. It does not interest them in the least, but rather tends to decrease their interest in the story. Patrons of the silent drama like to get as much reality out of the pictures as possible. They like to think of it as something that really could happen, and one person, particularly the star, playing two parts takes the realism out of the play for most people. Surely the star can show off his or her accomplishments to advantage in a single part rather than in a dual role.

Showmen Could Tell Them.

I keep in close touch with my patrons, and think that I am in a position to judge from their comments. If producers, directors and stars themselves would condescend to consult the exhibitor near at hand regarding their plays, they would certainly learn much to their advantage. The exhibitor does not know it all by any means, but he certainly has learned by experience the likes and dislikes of moving picture patrons. After all, it is the wishes of the public that makes the picture industry.

The "Gripping" Scene.

Then again, my patrons have often asked me about these long drawn-out scenes where some person is supposed to be driven crazy through grief or fear. Their expressions and actions always arouse an outburst of laughter from the younger people, who look upon it as a bit of comedy introduced for their amusement. This kind of acting may indicate that the star is a wonderfully accomplished person who can truthfully portray the actions of a crazy person, but to whom does insanity make any sort of appeal, I wonder?

MEMBER OF PROMINENT FIRM MARRIES

P. J. Schaefer, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, of Chicago, Is Wedded to Mrs. Clara Arnold

PETER J. SCHAEFER, of the firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago, and nationally known in the trade by his active interest in matters pertaining to the exhibiting of moving pictures, was married to Mrs. Clara Arnold, also of Chicago, on July 16.

The marriage ceremony was held in the French room of the Blackstone Hotel, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion, American beauty roses predominating in the attractive scheme. Judge Joseph Sabath, who has been the fidus Achates of Mr. Schaefer for many years, officiated. The affair was exclusive, as only immediate relatives were present in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Aaron J. Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Linick.

Dinner was served in an adjoining room after the ceremony, and at 6:30 p. m. the bride and groom left for a wedding tour of the Canadian Rockies. They will continue their tour to Alaskan points from Vancouver, B. C., on July 26, where it is expected they will spend several weeks. On the home trip they will visit Yellowstone Park and spend a week at the Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs. They will afterwards sojourn at Hot Springs, Va., and will spend the winter in California.

Bride is Popular in Society Circles.

The bride, formerly of Oak Park, is well known and popular in North Shore society circles, and, like her husband, is a golf enthusiast. She has been prominent at the Country Club horse shows, is an accomplished equestrienne and is conceded to be one of Chicago's most beautiful women. She has closed her former residence at Bittersweet Place.

Mr. Schaefer is well known in club circles and has made his home at the South Shore Country Club for the past three years. He is also a member of the Chicago Athletic Club.

In view of his marriage Mr. Schaefer recently resigned as president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of America and also as president of the Allied Amusements Association, of Chicago.

The Moving Picture World takes advantage of this occasion to wish Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer a long and happy married life.

Fienberg Buys Fern, Milwaukee.

E. Laugmack, owner of the Colonial, Milwaukee, and David Fienberg, owner of the Fern, in the same city, were visitors in Chicago last week. Mr. Laugmack recently sold the Fern to Mr. Fienberg, who has been connected with the Saxe Bros. enterprises for the past twelve years, resigning on June 1.

Mr. Laugmack stated that the past year has been a banner year for Milwaukee exhibitors, the hot weather of the last few weeks causing the only exception to the rule. He has been an exhibitor since 1911 and has prospered. The Colonial seats 860 and the Fern

Rights to Sennett Comedy Purchased for Illinois

F. L. BROCKELL and C. E. Elliott, associate managers of the Greater Stars Productions, Inc., with headquarters in the Consumers Building, this city, announce that they have secured the exclusive Illinois rights to "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," Mack Sennett's successful comedy. The deal was closed in New York during the week of July 7, with Sol Lesser—who owns the rights to this picture for the entire United States, Messrs. Brockell and Elliott having gone on to New York for that purpose.

Messrs. Brockell and Elliott will handle the comedy as a road show attraction, and it will be rented to moving picture and dramatic theatres on a percentage basis only.

The Chicago opening will be given at the Ziegfeld Theatre July 28, and the run will be continued at that house as long as it proves a paying proposition. "Why Bathing Beaches Are Popular," in one reel, will precede the Sennett comedy at all presentations, and Mack Sennett's famous bathing girls will repeat in Chicago the great success won by them in New York and other large cities. They will accompany the picture in all the larger Illinois cities and possibly in some of the smaller ones.

Messrs. Brockell and Elliott, very deserving young men, are favorably known to the trade in Chicago and Illinois. Mr. Brockell was manager of the Chicago office of Famous Players-Lasky for a number of years, while Mr. Elliott was sales manager. They announce—without revealing the figure—that a high cash price was paid for the Illinois rights to this attraction, and admission prices will be fixed by them accordingly.

Fox Chicago Office Makes Enlargements to Its Staff

THE first half of the week, July 14, was devoted by Division Manager Eckhardt, of the Fox forces, to a get-together meeting in the Chicago office, of the salesmen in Chicago and tributary territory, for the purpose of becoming thoroughly familiarized with the new fall policies of the company.

Mr. Eckhardt has added Joe Lyons to the Chicago sales force, as he is intimately acquainted through long experience with all the leading exhibitors. To the road forces he has added Howard Boyle, just returned from the Great War, in which he served for four years, in the British aviation service. He will represent Fox in Indiana and eastern Illinois territory. John Ploner, recently with Universal, has been assigned territory in southeastern Wisconsin, which was formerly covered by M. Whitmoyre, who has been transferred to central Illinois. Salesman Parker will retain his former territory in western Illinois, including the Iowa river towns.

Rents Additional Space.

Mr. Eckhardt informed me that the increased volume of business had necessitated the renting of 1,000 square feet of additional space in the Mallers Building. The added space is on the fourth floor, the main offices being on the fifth.

Mr. Eckhardt had just returned from a holiday trip in northern Minnesota, where he traveled 1,500 miles by auto, and looked fit to undertake the most strenuous tasks. He is at present negotiating principal runs for the Fox product in Chicago, Milwaukee, and in the important key cities, in Chicago territory, along the lines of the fall policy, which he announces is being well received by many already interviewed.

To quote Mr. Eckhardt: "Our fall line-up appeals to the smaller as well as the larger theatres. I expect to be in a position to announce first run houses in Chicago within the coming ten days."

Chicago Picture Thieves in Clutch of the Law

CHICAGO film circles have been much perturbed by the recent revelations in the matter of film thefts in the city. It is exceedingly difficult to write anything definite at the time about these thefts, owing to the natural inclination of exchange managers to keep all information sub rosa, and to the enforced reticence of those specially engaged in the work of investigation for the theft committee of the N. A. M. P. I.

Morris Titus, shipping clerk of the Unity Photoplays Co.; Izzy Cohen, shipping clerk of the Goldwyn exchange; Morris Kline, owner of a film exchange and vendor of raincoats, and Albert Leavinson, who carried the stolen films from the Goldwyn offices to the Morris Kline store, were arrested around July 2 and locked up. They were released on bail and their trial set for Wednesday, July 16, before Judge Trude, in the Chicago Avenue Police Court. The trial was postponed, however, until Thursday morning July 17.

At this trial Cohen and Leavinson confessed that they were induced by Morris Titus to engage in the unlawful business as he showed them that considerable easy money could be made. Judge Trude held the four men for the grand jury, in bonds of $1,000 each.

Goldwyn Films Recovered

The Goldwyn films have all been recovered by Manager Ike Van Ronkel. The list includes "Freedom of the World," "Thais," "The Manx Man" and "Oh, Johnny!"

Izzy Cohen has worked in Chicago for a number of years as shipping clerk. He has been with Goldwyn for two years and prior to that was shipping clerk for the World and the Central Film Company for several years. He was always honest, so far as known, until he made his recent, great mistake. Leavinson also, so far as known, has been straight until this time.

Very mysteriously has been the disappearance recently of three Chaplin films, owned by the Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation. One of these, "The Cure," disappeared about two months ago, on the way from Freeport, Ill., where it was shown at the Strand Theatre by Proprietor Dittman, and afterwards shipped by him to the Mutual office in Chicago, by express. Another Chaplin disappeared on June 2, after it was shown at the Oak Theatre, in Chicago, and another disappeared about June 10. The night shipper states that this third film was checked in at the Mutual office, but he may have been mistaken.

About a month and a half ago "His Birthright," featuring Sessue Hayakawa, disappeared from the Mutual offices. The shipper reported to Manager Levey that he found the film and that it was in the vault. Next day it had disappeared. Manager Levey believes that the shipper likely made a mistake regarding this film also.

Exhibitor Placed Under $2,500 Bond

A short time ago Manager Levey was given the tip that "The Cure" had been shown in a certain Chicago theatre. He immediately got busy and succeeded in securing the film. The exhibitor inculpated was placed under a bond of $2,500 Saturday, July 5, for his appearance. Within the next few days (from the time of writing) he will be given a hearing before the District Attorney when the date of his trial will be set.

At the Magnet Exchange, this city, where it is said films are unlawfully handled, it is held that "The Red Lantern," "The Heart of Humanity," "The Carter Case," "The Red Glove" and also features of Fairbanks, Hart and Mary Pickford had been offered recently.

Within the week of Monday, July 14, it was given out by reliable authority that a large number of Sidney Drew comedies, owned by Metro, were missing and that the State's Attorney had several of them in his possession. At the trial for stolen Goldwyn pictures, held July 17, in the Chicago Avenue police court, my informant says that the State's Attorney had several of these Drew comedies in the courtroom at the time and that he had seen them there.

A. J. OBRESHK and Nick Bikos, leading exhibitors in Gary, Ind., have combined their business and formed the Venus Amusement Company, Inc., of which Mr. Obreshk is president and Mr. Bikos vice president.

This company controls a chain of seven theatres, which includes the Star in Whiting, the Indiana, Venus, Gem, Lyric, Cosmo and Royal in Gary, and the Hegewisch, in Hegewisch, Ill. The Gem and Lyric, in Gary, were purchased since the incorporation of the company. Messrs Obreshk and Bikos have adopted the policy of showing only the best pictures at reasonable admissions.

Catherine Calvert Goes to Ince Studios.

Catherine Calvert passed through the city last week on her way to the Ince studios, where she will begin work on "Americanism," a Famous Players-Lasky feature, under the direction of Mr. Ince. This is the first of a series in which she will play the lead, under the direction of Mr. Ince.

Vivian Martin Pleases

Vivian Martin in "Louisiana" drew good business at Orchestra Hall during the week of Monday, July 14. This is considered her best work on the screen, and she won quite a following from Orchestra Hall patrons. The comedy, the "Unmovable Guest," with Flora Finch, in two reels, was an added attraction for the week of July 21.

Fielder Joins "Big 4" Forces.

E. C. Fielder, who has been division manager in the Middle West for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation for a year, will resign that position to take up the duties of sales manager and assistant manager for the United Artists Corporation in the state of Ohio. His resignation takes effect July 26. He was appointed to his new position by Ralph O. Proctor, assistant general manager of the "Big 4." His headquarters will be in Cleveland.

Rupert Hughes Off to Culver City.

Rupert Hughes stopped in Chicago, between trains, July 17, on his way to Culver City, Cal., where "The Cup of Fury," adapted from his story of that name, will be produced for Goldwyn by the Eminent Authors' Pictures Corporation. Mr. Hughes will co-operate with the director in the production of the story.

Siler Wanted in Chicago.

Detectives are on the trail of E. E. Siler, a Chicago broker, who is wanted on a warrant charging him with defrauding Theodore F. Brett, of the firm of Brett & Lenham, this city. Mr. Brett charges Siler with having failed to account for the 200 shares of stock in "The Birth of a Race" picture, which were placed in his care for sale. Siler has left the city and was last heard of in Indianapolis.

At the Randolph and Ziegfeld.

Clara Kimball Young in "The Better Wife," showed to good business at the Ziegfeld last week. The next attraction at this house will be Norma Talmadge in "The Way of a Woman" (Select.)

"The Woman Thou Gavest Me" drew so well at the Randolph Theatre last week that it has been held over for the succeeding week.

Haas Is Head of Art Branch of Famous Players-Lasky

J. N. NULTY, general manager of the Eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has announced a change in the personnel of the art department, necessitated by the departure for Europe of Richard Murphy, formerly director of the art and technical department of the Famous Players-Lasky studios in New York and W. C. Menzies, his assistant, who have gone to join the staff of Al. Kaufman, in charge of production with the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

Robert M. Haas has been placed in charge of that department and is assisted by W. E. Keller in architectual work. Associated with Mr. Haas is O. O. Cecil, interior decorator and William Reilly, chief property man. Mr. Haas is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, School of Architecture, and had a number of years' experience in designing and art work before becoming connected with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

MAY SELECT CENSOR COMMITTEE SOON

W. P. Capes, Secretary of Mayors' Conference, Hopes to Announce Personnel Next Week

WITHIN the next two weeks Mayor Walter Stone, of Syracuse, will be in a position to announce the make-up of the committee which will have within its province the settling, at least for the time being, of the sort of censorship which in their opinion should prevail in New York State, and the recommendations along this line which will be made to the next legislature.

W. P. Capes, secretary of the State Mayors' Conference, today stated that he already had some eight or ten names which had been submitted to him for consideration as members of the committee. Mr. Capes hopes to receive more names within the next week. He will submit the list to Mayor Stone, who will choose the personnel of the committee.

According to Mr. Capes, the State Mayors' Conference will go no further than to name the committee and place before it the situation so far as censorship exists in this State. It will make no suggestions to the committee as to whether or not censorship is needed, and if needed, the kind which should be recommended to the legislature.

Cities Are Now Own Censors.

Mr. Capes himself is a member of the National Board of Review and has taken a rather active attitude along censorship matters for the past two or three years. Three years ago there was adopted in this state a provision which gives the cities the individual right to censor pictures shown within their own borders. Syracuse and Rochester are doing this now, according to Mr. Capes, through their commissioners of public safety, who view any picture in the respective cities before it is shown, providing that there has been any protest made against this picture, or in case that it has not been approved by the National Board of Review. The scheme is said to be working out in a satisfactory way.

Questions Before Committee.

Just where the proposed committee will hold its first meeting is a matter that will rest entirely with Mayor Stone. Three questions will be put up to the committee. These will be:

"Is the National Board of Review covering the situation today in a satisfactory manner, and if not what betterment is suggested? Are the penalties against salacious pictures severe enough, and if not, to what amount should they be increased?

"Is there need of a state board of censorship in New York, and if so, how large should be its personnel and what should be the limitation of its powers?

"Should the question of what constitutes a morally good or bad film be left to the community itself to decide, without regard to any previous attitude on the part of the National Board of Review?"

Mayors Are Undecided.

Some members of the State Conference of Mayors recently expressed themselves as being well satisfied in leaving well enough alone, saying that they did not believe a state board of censorship was advisable on account of the politics which would be sooner or later injected, and which would work a distinct hardship against the film producer as well as the exhibitor.

It is apparent, however, that the present agitation is either paving the way toward the introduction of a censorship bill at the next legislature, or of clearing the atmosphere for the next few years to come, by recommending to the legislature that present day pictures are not in need of further censorship and that the producers themselves, wise to the situation, will see to it that the pictures which are turned out do not merit criticism which would eventually bring the hardships of censorship.

Mr. Capes returned to his office in this city today. To a representative of the Moving Picture World he stated that with the exception of Corning, which has enjoyed Sunday shows for some little time past, and which through its common council a few days ago decided to give official approval of their continuance. There has been little or nothing doing among the cities in settling for themselves the question of authorizing Sunday shows.

Amendment to California Law Lengthens Life of Actors' Contracts to Five Years

AN announcement that will be of interest to members of the moving picture profession has been made by Albert J. Kidder, Jr., a Los Angeles attorney, regarding an amendment affecting employment contracts in California, which went into effect on July 21.

Heretofore, according to Attorney Kidder, an employment contract in California has only been enforceable against a player for a period of two years from the date of commencement of employment.

This, however, was changed by the forty-third session of the legislature, held in 1919, and an amendment increasing the period from two to five years went into effect on July 21.

Mr. Kidder says that the effect of this new law has made valid a considerable number of contracts of players who continued in their employment beyond the date of the 21st that otherwise would have been void, or if not void, voidable and unenforceable if action to void them had been taken before the date the new amendment began functioning. For instance, a player who has made a contract for two years, with an option on his services for three years all in one contract, and who continued his employment after July 21, can be compelled to finish the full term of five years.

Players executing contracts in the future should take into consideration the effect of the amendment and give careful thought to any contract whereby their services are to be required for more than two years.

City Asks Removal of Old Sets.

A movement has been started by the City Council of Los Angeles to have old sets that have been erected for motion picture purposes removed by order of that body. The set erected on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood and used by D. W. Griffith in filming scenes for "Intolerance," which is no longer in use and which has become unsightly, will be the first to be ordered demolished if the suggestion is adopted.

Lehrman's Diffuser System

Henry Lehrman is equipping his new studio at Culver City with an ingenious diffuser system that gives perfect protection to the diffusers without the necessity of a covered stage. Above the center of the stage is a small A-shaped glass roof, under which all the diffusers are pulled in case of rain, or when work is finished at the end of the day. The system is made up of two sets of diffusers meeting in the center, all made so that they may be pulled in either direction, so that light may be admitted to any desired spot on the stage and nowhere else. To keep out undesired streaks of light, each diffuser is hung at a slight angle and overlaps its neighbors for about a foot on each side. The result is a stage covering that is absolutely light-tight. The system prolongs the life of a great expanse of diffuser canvas, and other studio heads on the west coast are considering plans for using the system on their open stages.

Ince To Build Aviators' Lighthouse

Thomas H. Ince, whose recent prize offer for a trans-Pacific air flight has caused much interest in flying circles, has set aside the sum of $5,000 to build a lighthouse for aviators. The lighthouse will be erected on the Venice field and will be sixty feet in height and surmounted by a globe sixteen feet in diameter. Three thousand 10-watt lights will be used in the illumination, which will be visible for many miles around. A nautical pennant at the top of a 112-foot pole will be flown to show the prevailing air currents, as a further aid to aviators.

Mr. Ratzkowski left last week for New York, accompanied by his wife and daughter. Miss Ratzkowski has played in various pictures produced by French and Italian companies before France and Italy were plunged in war, and she will play an important part in the production to be filmed abroad. The company expects to sail August 1 and to remain away five months.

Buffalo's Academy Theatre Sold to Western Syndicate

THE Academy Theatre, Buffalo, one of the oldest theatrical institutions in New York State, has been sold to a Western syndicate, represented by S. Levy, of Detroit. The first theatre on the Main street site was called the Metropolitan and was built in 1864. Five years afterward, it was named the Academy of Music. The building burned September 1, 1895. It was rebuilt and housed melodrama until the Mark-Brock interests took it over ten years ago. Under the new management the Academy will be a burlesque house showing plays on the second Columbia wheel.

At present the house is presenting feature motion picture plays and stock musical sketches. The house for the past several years has been managed by J. H. Michael who came to Buffalo from Detroit.

The Academy will close Sunday night, July 27, for a two week period, during which it will be redecorated and renovated and will reopen August 23. It is possible that the Mark-Brock interests may move their Academy shows to another downtown house, but nothing definite has been decided on this proposition.

Universal Resumes Use of Studios in New Jersey

UNIVERSAL is once more to produce in the East. This announcement was made the week of July 20 at the Universal home office.

Tarkington Baker, Universal's general manager, who made the announcement, states that the entire studio is to be overhauled and re-equipped with all modern appliances, including a new heating plant. It has been some time since Universal produced at the Fort Lee studio, which is one of the largest in the East.

The plan of producing at the Fort Lee studio has been under consideration for some time by Universal officials. The plans as outlined now are to produce a number of short features there, especially comedies, which will be made under the supervision of Tarkington Baker.

Work on the new comedies is expected to start this week and further details of the new comedies to be made there will be made known within a short time.

In opening the Fort Lee studio again Universal will have studio space to let for any other producing company that may wish the use of an Eastern studio.

Krows Joins Vitagraph.

George Randolph Chester, Vitagraph production editor, has by special arrangement enlisted the services of Arthur Edwin Krows, who will adapt for the screen several literary works purchased by Vitagraph.

Mr. Krows was for a number of years associated with Winthrop Ames at the Little Theatre. He is the author of several works dealing with the theatre and the screen. His first work for Vitagraph is the screen adaptation of "The Winchester Woman," a magazine story, now being produced under the direction of Wesley Ruggles, with Alice Joyce in the stellar role.

FOX TO HAVE STRONG FOREIGN POLICY

Visit of Firm's Heads to Europe Convinces Them World Looks to America for Entertainment

THE strong foreign demand for American-made motion pictures is illustrated by the world-wide policy of distribution which has just been adopted by Fox Film Corporation. This policy is the result of requests for Fox pictures from all parts of the globe.

William Fox, head of Fox Film Corporation, and Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, recently went to Europe to survey the foreign situation. They found that the return of peace had left the entire civilized world looking toward the United States not only for food and other supplies, but for entertainment.

Seventeen Foreign Offices.

Investigation made by Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan caused them to arrange for important extension of their foreign service. Sixteen branch offices were opened abroad and three in Canada. Thus the Fox corporation was put in touch with practically every corner of the globe, and thus the Fox plan for contact with exhibitors all over the world realized. Eight men at present are handling the Fox foreign interests, under the supervision of Mr. Fox and Mr. Sheehan. They are Abraham Carlos, general representative of Fox Film Corporation and supervisor of the foreign exchanges, headquarters Paris; Ernest Reed, managing director for the United Kingdom; Fred W. Lange, foreign manager for Fox Film Corporation; Joseph R. Darling, foreign representative; Joseph P. Ryan, district manager for South America, headquarters Buenos Aires; Alberto Rosenwald, manager for Brazil, headquarters Rio de Janeiro; Aquileo C. Calve, manager for Central America, headquarters Mexico City; Sidney E. Abel, foreign representative.

The Fox foreign chain is to be further increased. The new offices will be established in addition to the sixteen just added and all will be based on the idea of direct contact with the exhibitor. William Fox, who is a pioneer in the foreign field and who from the first has adopted the policy of dealing direct and cutting out the middleman, has found that this policy is more satisfactory.

New York Department.

In New York the Fox foreign department carries a corps of seventy-six, of whom forty-six are experts on foreign relations in motion pictures and thirty have a command of foreign languages. In the new Fox building which is to opened at Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth streets and Tenth avenue, special emphasis will be placed upon the foreign department. A large section is to be set aside for foreign interests in motion pictures, and here will be reference rooms, desks for foreign visitors, and stenographers to take dictation in any language. This department will be conducted as a special feature of the Fox service for foreign buyers and exhibitors, so that their visits to New York may be made as agreeable as possible.

In two special projection rooms attached to the foreign department will be shown pictures titled according to the languages of the countries in which the Fox interest intend to feature them.

All United Artists' Sales Managers Now Appointed

THE seventeen sales managers to head the distributing depots of United Artists Corporation have all been appointed. This week Hiram Abrams named the last three lieutenants still required to round out the "Big Four's" sales organization and the entire staff is now in operation through the company's seventeen offices.

J. E. Luckett goes to the Dallas office, J. F. Brett goes to Minneapolis and M. C. Coyne to Atlanta.

Mr. Luckett, who goes to Dallas, is a native of Richmond, Va. He was originally a newspaper man in Washington, D. C., and then became owner and manager of the Columbus Theatre in that city. For four years he has represented D. W. Griffith in the handling of the Griffith productions.

Mr. Brett has actual theatre experience as a basis for the handling of film rental. For seven years he was general manager of the South Side Theatres Company, Chicago, managing as well as owning the Monroe, Marlowe, Windsor Park, Independent, Victoria, Rich, Ellis, Apollo and President theatres. Leaving the theatre field Mr. Brett embarked as a film salesman and advanced to managerial positions in several of the larger companies.

Atlanta will have a native of the South in charge of its "Big Four" office, in the person of M. C. Coyne. For eight years Mr. Coyne was in the theatrical field doing advance work and looking after the business interests of a number of the largest companies in the "legitimate" field. He operated an independent film exchange for a time and later became D. W. Griffith's representative in the south-eastern territory.

Holt Does Thrilling Stunt in Robertson-Cole Film

CALIFORNIA'S society leaders who gather at the Midwick Country Club near Pasadena are accustomed to thrills but none has ever equalled the sensation that was their's recently when Jack Holt, during the filming of "The Woman Michael Married", a Robertson-Cole feature distributed by Exhibitors Mutual, staged a fall from a fast traveling mount during a game of polo.

The death-defying fall was recorded by three cameras, so that picture audiences will receive the same thrill that was conveyed the elite of California at the Pasadena club when Holt slipped from his pony, crashed to the ground and was nearly crushed under the feet of the mounts racing down the field in pursuit of the white ball.

GOLDWYN HAS BIG EXPLOITATION CORPS

Fourteen Field Service and Publicity Men Are Engaged with Seven More Shortly Joining Staff

RECENT announcement by the Goldwyn organization has been followed by the appointment of fourteen exploitation and publicity men who are already at their desks in the Goldwyn branch offices. By July 29 seven more will begin work, and the entire staff will be under the general direction of Charles D. Isaacson, who has appointed Morton Blumenstock to assist him in keeping the men in the field informed of the plans of the organization and to supply them with publicity and exploitation matter for the various Goldwyn productions.

Force Is Co-ordinated.

According to the ideas outlined by Mr. Isaacson, the duties of the men in the field will, on the one hand, bring them in personal contact with Goldwyn exhibitors, and on the other, with the newspaper and other advertising and publicity mediums in their particular districts. Besides consulting with the individual exhibitor as to the best method to pursue in exploiting a particular picture, the individual press and service men will be equipped to offer to the exhibitor the experience of every other Goldwyn press man in the organization

Regular Reports.

A series of daily and weekly reports, embodying suggestions and plans has been instituted whereby the home office will receive a constant stream of information from the branches regarding the feasibility of publicity stunts, advertising methods and other material which will be of interest to a Goldwyn exhibitor anywhere. This matter will come to Mr. Isaacson, who will pass it on to all the men in the field with suggestions for local application. In this way the press and service man will be the personal representative of the Goldwyn office among local newspapers and magazines, and the personal advertising and publicity adviser to the individual Goldwyn exhibitor.

Distribution of Material.

The plan of the home departments which will take care of the men in the field is so organized that service and exploitation matter will be furnished by the present service department, under the direction of Hunt Stromberg, who will give his material to Mr. Isaacson.

It will then reach his assistant, Mr. Blumenstock for final distribution to the service and press men in the branches. In a similar way, press material arising in the home editorial office, which is under the directorship of Ralph Block, will be sent to Mr. Isaacson, who will distribute it according to the plan outlined.

Scandinavia Builds Five Motion Picture Houses

THE scores of motion picture palaces erected throughout America in recent years to provide the proper sort of presentation for motion pictures have encouraged foreign exhibitors to compete with their American brothers in providing artistic theatres.

This is especially true in the Scandinavian countries.

One of their finest examples of modern motion picture theatre is the Balladian of Stockholm. This magnificent picture house is controlled by Lars Bjorck, one of the leading exhibitors of Sweden, and the Scandinavisk Film Central. It has a seating capacity of 1,200 and was erected at a cost of 3,000,000 kroner, or approximately $850,000 in American money. Here Paramount and Artcraft pictures are shown regularly, each week's program consisting of a Paramount or Artcraft feature, an assortment of short subjects.

Another modern motion picture house is the Palads Theatre of Copenhagen, which shows Paramount and Artcraft productions frequently. The World Cinema, Circus Variete, of Copenhagen is also one of Denmark's most sightly and attractive motion picture theatres. Paramount and Artcraft pictures are exhibited there practically every week.

Hampton Picks Strong Cast for Blanche Sweet Picture

NO sooner had Joseph D. Hampton signed the contract with Blanche Sweet to appear under his management, and with Pathe Exchange, Inc. for distribution, than he selected a strong supporting cast.

Miss Sweet's initial production as already announced will be "A Woman of Pleasure," from the London melodrama by James Willard, and selected particularly on account of its tense dramatic values, unusual plot and stirring action. Wallace Worsley directs the feature under Mr. Hampton's supervision.

Wheeler Oakman, Wesley Barry, Wilfred Lucas, Walter Perry and Carmen Phillips, will be in the supporting cast.

Briggs Supervises His Comedies.

So that he will be sure the atmosphere which he has made famous in his cartoons will be preserved in his motion pictures, Clare A. Briggs, the cartoonist, supervises every one of the Paramount-Briggs Comedies, which are screen adaptations of the stories told in the Briggs cartoons.

Mr. Briggs spends part of every working day at the Ideal Studio, in Hudson Heights, N. J., where the Paramount-Briggs Comedies are produced, working in the closest co-operation with John William Kellette, director of the pictures.

Major Beith Returns to London.

Major Ian Hay Beith, noted British author and playwright, has deserted the Los Angeles film colony and is now en route to London, where he will report for military duty. During his stay in southern California, Major Beith has been a member of Cecil B. De Mille's literary staff in the production of "Male and Female (Created He Them)."

GRIFFITH'S "THE FALL OF BABYLON"

Novel Combination of Screen and Stage Forms Entertainment Which Includes Dancing and Singing and Reveals Impressive Replica of Early Civilization

By Edward Weitzel

THE production at the George M. Cohan Theatre, Monday evening, July 21, of "The Fall of Babylon," marked the second number of the D. W. Griffith repertory season in New York. The theatre was crowded by a body of spectators made up of prominent film representatives and the usual first nighters that are to be found at the principal Broadway openings. There were none of the special decorations, attractively costumed ushers and smell of incense which greeted the spectator during the engagement of "Broken Blossoms;" but the management had promised a style of entertainment that was entirely new, a combination of moving pictures, singing and dancing which should help to interpret the story shown on the screen. The program gives the synopsis of the entertainment as follows:

Act I.

ON THE STAGE
Introduction.....Betty Kaye
ON THE SCREEN
Babylon—"The glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency."
ON THE STAGE
Shawl Dance.....KYRA
ON THE SCREEN

INTERMISSION OF TEN MINUTES

Act II.

ON THE STAGE
A Hall in Babylon. Ensemble.
Song—"The Mountain Maid"..Margaret Fritts
ON THE SCREEN
Persian Army is repulsed by the Babylonians.
ON THE STAGE
Dance of Undulation.....KYRA
ON THE SCREEN
The Feast of Belshazzar is at its height when Babylon falls.

It is generally known that "The Fall of Babylon" is an amplification of the Babylonian episodes used in the Griffith spectacle, "Intolerance." The curtain rises on a totally dark stage. Out of the gloom a globe representing the earth gradually appears, the figure of a woman typifying ancient Babylon, showing among the clouds above it. Upon this globe is thrown a series of moving pictures illustrating the life of today in the greatest city of the western world. This scene—the introduction of the program—fades from view and is followed by the first screen episode of the Babylonian story.

Fidelity in Ancient Settings.

The mighty city on the Euphrates, in the year 539 B. C., with its varied activities of peace and war which has been reproduced with such marvelous fidelity, is contrasted with the civilization of the twentieth century, and is the scene of the love of the Mountain girl for Prince Belshazzar after he has saved her from being sold in the Marriage Market. The jealousy of the great High Priest of Bel because the Babylonians worship Ishtar, Goddess of Love, is also disclosed.

During a feast given by Belshazzar to his favorite, Attarea, the action is transferred from the screen to the stage by a clever arrangement of the lights, and the dance which follows seems an appropriate part of the story. It is called the shawl dance, and, as performed by Kyra, is a remarkable exhibition of grace and dexterity.

Mountain Girl Fights with Men.

The second screen episode shows the camp of Cyrus, King of the Persians, and reveals his determination to overthrow Babylon with the help of his army. Then comes a love scene between the mountain girl and a young poet, whose suit was looked upon with favor by the girl until the prince won her heart. The two are sitting by the side of the road during the scene as the action is again changed to the stage, and a duet is introduced, sung by Margaret Frittz and Samuel Critcherson, made up as the characters just shown.

This effect is not as successful as the dancing, the singing not blending properly with the feeling engendered by the shadow drama. The closing episode of the first act is full of movement and interest, as the army of Cyrus attacks the city of Belshazzar and the soldiers on both sides fight with the greatest bravery. The massive walls of Babylon are lined with troops and the enemy brings up battering-rams, towers and other engines of destruction, and hurl stones and arrows at the defenders of the city. The Mountain Girl takes her place near the Prince and fights equally with the best of his men. The act ends with the defeat of the Persians.

Kyras Dance a Big Feature.

When the curtain rises on the second act, the stage represents a hall in a Babylonian palace in which a number of handmaidens assist in a characteristic dance led by Betty Kaye. A solo is also introduced in the same surroundings. The other stage number is the "Dance of Undulation" given by Kyra. This is even more remarkable than her first exhibition, and it received the heartiest applause of the evening. It is a weirdly fascinating performance, the dancer's imitation of the movements of a pair of serpents being realistic enough to make some spectators more reconciled to the dry laws.

Rush of Army of Cyrus.

The remaining screen episodes show the Feast of Belshazzar, the sending of the poet with a message to Cyrus by the High Priest that he will open the great gate, the mad race of the Mountain Girl in a chariot after the poet, that never-to-be-forgotten onrush of the army of Cyrus (the greatest spectacular effect ever devised), the entrance of the Persians into the city, and the overthrow of the Babylonians. Contrary to the ending of the original version, the Mountain Girl is not killed, but accepts the love of the poet and goes with him to her old home in the mountains.

Romance Does Not Strongly Grip.

Separated from the other stories of "Intolerance" and the character of the Mountain Girl built up into a star part, it is now possible to get a correct line on the human interest in "The Fall of Babylon." Like most stories in which the spectacular predominates, its romance does not take a very strong grip on the spectator. Its theme is the fall of Babylon, and the fate of a nation is what fills the mind, not the outcome of a single love affair. Just how far such a combination of screen and stage in the telling of a story may be carried in the future it would be foolish to conjecture; but there is still room for improvement.

The novelty of the method will commend it, and D. W. Griffith is to be applauded for his willingness to try something new and to add to the scope of the screen. The atmospheric backgrounds he used with sub-titles and scenes in "Broken Blossoms" have been utilized in this picture, and again demonstrate their artistic value.

Constance Talmadge Delights.

Constance Talmadge, as the Mountain Girl, improves on being reintroduced. The new version gives her considerably more to do and she does it all with that delightful independence and charm of person which won her so much praise when she was first seen in the part. Tully Marshall as the High Priest, Elmer Clifton as the poet, Alfred Paget as Belshazzar, Seena Owen as Attarea, and George Stegmann as Cyrus, also benefit by better acquaintance.

It is interesting to find among the minor names of the cast those of Alma Rubens, Mildred Harris and Pauline Stark.

FAY TINCHER LEADS SEATTLE PARADE

Accompanied by Squad of Horsemen She Opens Northwest Convention with Revolver Salvos

RIDING through the main streets of Seattle on a fiery pony and accompanied by Chief of Police Warren and a squadron of his mounted officers in wild Western garb, Fay Tincher, Christie star, fired the opening gun of the convention of the Northwest Film Trade Board by her spectacular entry into the city.

Miss Tincher was met at the train by the Chief of Police and his escort; Jack Lannon, of Greater Features, Inc.; L. O. Lukan, president of the Northwest Film Board; W. J. Drummond, director-general of the convention; Teddy Hanson, son of the noted Seattle mayor, Ole Hanson, and a long parade of automobiles containing the leading exhibitors and film men of the Northwest. The Tincher parade passed through the streets of Seattle with the chief of police and Miss Tincher firing dozens of cartridges and "putting the show on wild."

Train Held Up.

On the eve of the big convention, the Christie star was entertained by Jack Lannon, J. T. Sheffield and W. W. Kofeldt, officials of Greater Features, and on July 17 by Alexander Pantages, in an impromptu party on the stage of the home office theatre of his circuit.

Miss Tincher was given a great send-off from Los Angeles on the northern trip when her train out of Southern California was held up at the Newhall Tunnel, where forty of her own cowboys, still on location completing the remaining scenes of her newest Christie Special, "Dangerous Nan McGrew," roped the star on the observation platform and presented her with a diamond horseshoe pin.

The balance of the trip north was completed under difficulties. A wreck near Ashland, Ore., was the first hold-up, followed by the quarantine of the train at Portland, when a case of smallpox was discovered on board.

Miss Tincher was featured at the closing affair of the convention when she led the grand ball with Governor Hart of the State of Washington. This signal honor came as a surprise to the star, who was completely overwhelmed by the ovation given her by the film men of the Northwest.

Before leaving the territory to return to the Christie Studio in Los Angeles, Miss Tincher will make personal appearances at the Clemmer Theatre in Seattle, and will also stop in Portland, Tacoma, San Francisco and other large cities along the Pacific Coast. Completing her tour in San Francisco, Miss Tincher will go to Sacramento, where she will be taken to Los Angeles in an airplane of the Syd Chaplin Aircraft Corporation, piloted by Lieut. Howard Wells.

Change Title of Vitagraph Film.

The title of Gladys Leslie's next Vitagraph feature has been changed from "Belinda Puts Her Hair Up" to "The Girl Woman." The play was taken from the story by A. Van Buren Powell, under the title of "Belinda Puts Her Hair Up," but Vitagraph felt that the original title, attractive as it was, did not fit the picture as it had a tendency to convey the idea of a light comedy. The play, quite the contrary, is serious drama.

Universal Sells Supply.

The entire supply department of Branch K, Universal Exchange, 118 West Second street, Oklahoma City, has been sold to the Kelley Theatre Supply Department, 7 North Dewey street, of that city.

Governors' Testimonials Aid Cleveland Tax Repeal

THE expressions given by thirty-five governors of states concerning education value of the screen on the occasion of the recent visit to America of Charles Pathe, was a big factor in defeating the proposition to tax the motion picture theatres of Cleveland.

Strong opposition, to which a number of clergymen were energetic contributors, developed to the plan to take the tax of the film theatres, but the committee representing the exhibitors went ahead with the argument and won. In repealing the tax ordinance, the Cleveland City Council went on record in recognizing the screen as a powerful instrument in the education of all classes and of all ages.

Governor Cox, of Ohio, was among the executives who gave expression of the high regard with which they held the cinema, saying: "The remarkable development of motion photography has been given no better exposition than in the portrayal of world events in the making."

In a letter of appreciation to Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, Sam Bullock, executive secretary of the exhibitors, says: "Our sole plea, prepared as above stated, and supplemented by governmental testimony regarding our screen value in educational war work was, 'You cannot legally tax an educational institution.' Regardless of the strong opposition of a number of clergymen, the Cleveland city fathers went upon record and repealed the ordinance, thus recognizing the educative value of the sometimes despised movie.

"Your roster of some thirty-five United States governors attesting the screen's value in this respect is a 'knock-out.' We should go to Washington upon this basis for a repeal of movie taxes. No other business can make such a plea."

Universal Makes Plans.

Five Universal stars will be featured in at least thirty-four special attractions within the coming year is the announcement made by Carl Laemmle, Universal's president, late last week.

The announcement states that there will be four Monroe Salisbury attractions, eight pictures in which Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa (Tsuru Aoki) will be featured, six attractions with Mary MacLaren in the leading role, eight dramas starring Harry Carey, the Western star, and selected pictures for James J. Corbett, who recently completed his first serial production.

Constance Binney to Begin Screen Work

Constance Binney will attempt to "steal" time enough from her appearances in "39 East," the current stage success now playing at the Maxine Elliot Theatre in New York, to make her first production for Realart. She will make the start by beginning work on "Erstwhile Susan," a picturization of the successful stage play of the same name which served Mrs. Fiske as a starring vehicle for a few seasons ago.

Production will be started at her New York studios on Monday, July 28, under the direction of John S. Robertson.

Neglected Opportunities Abound in Undervaluing the Press Book

By Walter K. Hill

WE find in the press books furnished to exhibitors by Famous Players-Lasky as series of "Questions Often Asked" that are so pertinent that we are reproducing some of them here and now for the benefit of picture-showmen who do not receive them direct from F. P.-L.; and because they are of sufficient importance to the general promotion of the business of exhibiting photoplays that the space occupied would seem to be well employed. Famous Players-Lasky declare their purpose to revise these lists of questions frequently.

The very question that is on your mind may be answered in some of the following paragraphs. If you have any questions to ask, send them along, and Moving Picture World will provide you with an expert answer and full explanation. Not every exhibitor of pictures possesses the proper initiative to get the most for his advertising money out of the local paper in which he announces his attractions. The newspapers are of such great importance that every picture-showman should consider the matter as of vital moment in getting the greatest possible number of people into his theatre.

Here Are Some F. P.-L. "Q's and A's."

Q.—What is the press book for? A.—To show you how to make a larger profit on the picture it exploits by means of publicity and advertising.

Q.—How can I get publicity for my theatre? A.—By going to the editor of your paper and making arrangements with him to (a) give you space in his reading columns in proportion to your advertising space, (b) by convincing him that his people want to read news about motion pictures.

Q.—How can I convince him on that? A.—Tell him that there are 40,000,000 motion picture "fans" in this country, and tell him what proportion of the 40,000,000 are yours. You can do this from your box-office records. His judgment will tell him that these people want to know what's what in moving pictures.

Q.—Will he want anything but the publicity stories? A.—Yes. He will want good cuts to illustrate them with. Ask him whether he wants them in electro or mat form.

Illustrations Are Very Important.

Judge for yourself—are you not personally attracted by the presence of illustrations in a news story or novelette that your eye strikes upon in the papers you read? So will it be with your patrons who see "stories" about the movies in the papers they read. Scene cuts, personal pictures of stars and prominent players and illustrations will first catch the eye and then center attention on the printed matter accompanying the pictures. On this point F. P.-L. press books have this to say:

Q.—What is a mat? A.—A mat is a papier mache mould from which the plates used in printing newspapers are made. It needs a special machine to make these plates and you should make sure that your paper has one before you order mats.

Q.—What is an electro? A.—An electro is a metal plate from which programs, circulars and small newspapers are printed. Order electros for your newspaper when it is a small shop that cannot use mats.

Q.—Do editors want long or short stories? A.—They want both. Take long stories to the editor when you order your advertising. Send "shorts" from the page headed "Publicity Notes For Live-Wire Exhibitors." Keep him well supplied with the "shorts" so that whenever he has a little room at the bottom of a column he can run one of them in.

Attend to Your Own Publicity.

There is every reason why the picture-showman should attend to the handling and placing of his own publicity with local papers. Some picture-distributors maintain a large and expensive system of "firing" pictures, mats, electros and stories of all sorts broadcast to the photoplay editors. This amounts to the same thing as the much vaunted "national advertising" some distributors talk so much about. The elephant hunt is conducted with bird-shot rammed into the weapon of "destruction."

Communities of only a few thousand (sometimes as limited as 2,000) have daily papers; and the semi-weekly is not unusual in smaller towns. And there are usually two or three publishers to contest for the subscriptions of their fellow-citizens. In some of these newspaper offices can be found a bright young chap with imagination and ambition who would be glad to handle the matter of advertising and publicity for the small-town showman—and give his intelligent service and produce results.

Find the Right Young Man.

The compensation this young chap might require would surely be modest, and his employment would unquestionably mean increased attendance at the theatre where he is employed. He could do your work "on the side" and interfere in no way with his main occupation as a newspaper employee.

There is no picture-showman in any town, no matter how small his community, who cannot thus afford a press agent; and there is no picture theatre that does not require a press agent. With the work of advertising removed from the responsibilities of management, the house-owner or manager can devote himself to keeping his place clean, bright and attractive. After the press agent "gets them in" the manager or owner of the theatre is responsible to himself and his public.

Soap and water; fresh paint and fresh air; courtesy and conveniences; cheerfulness and ambition—and the greatest of these is soap and water! Hire a press agent—if you can only afford a few dollars pocket-money for some bright young newspaper chap—and then make your theatre realize all that he may claim for it. The press book is wasted paper if it is not used—and used to the fullness of its possibilities.

Watch your own business. Know what the opposition is doing, but don't worry about it. If you can't keep your mind off the other fellow, sell out before the sheriff sells you out.

Your lobby is your show window whether you dress it or not, but the good merchant not only dresses his windows but makes frequent changes.

As Indicated Above, There Is Much of the Picturesque in "The Man in the Moonlight," with Monroe Salisbury.
His transition from haughtiness to abject submission is seen in its three stages from left to right. The moonlight did it, as the moonlight often does in pictures and in life.

BAY CITY NOW LOS ANGELES SUBURB

Neilan in Taxiplane Reduces Running Time to Four and a Half Hours and Saves a Lot of Money

FOLLOWING the completion of some exterior scenes for "In Old Kentucky" at Santa Cruz, Cal., which did not require the presence of Anita Stewart, Marshall Neilan received a wire telling him his sets were all ready and his star awaited the taking of some interiors at the studio. This wire was received late Sunday night and the earliest time Mr. Neilan could arrive in Lon Angeles by train was six o'clock the next day. Having read what he considered the rather boastful claims of an aviation company that it was running an aerial taxiline he decided to give it a try, so he phoned the home office of the company at Los Angeles, and said with affected nonchalance: "Send me a taxiplane to San Francisco the first thing in the morning." Not to be outdone in the matter of nonchalance the man at the other end of the wire merely said "Yes, sir."

In San Francisco the company keeps several planes for just such emergencies, and the driver, Lieutenant Pikup, pulled Mr. Neilan out of bed at 6 o'clock the next morning with the news that the taxiplane awaited without. At 6.30 the lieutenant and his fare got off, as you might say, to a flying start, and at 11 o'clock they hovered over and landed near the Anita Stewart Studios, and at 11.15 Mr. Neilan, still preserving his nonchalance, walked on the set and said "All ready, Miss Stewart. Camera!"

By the use of the taxiplane, which cost $500, it is figured by the business manager of the Stewart Company that Mr. Neilan saved several thousand dollars which would have been lost had the company remained idle during the remainder of the day.

A Prophecy About the Next President of Exhibitors

IF their friends have any influence there will be two candidates from the South for presidential honors when the Motion Picture Exhibitors meet in annual convention at Ocean View, Va., next year. These will be Jake Wells, of Richmond, Va., and Henry B. Varner, of Lexington, Ky. Neither of the men has been interviewed on the subject, and it is presumed that neither will be anxious for the office. However, it is thought that the fact of the convention being held in the South for the first time should be incentive enough to bring candidates from below the Mason and Dixon line to the front, and it is known that Varner and Wells are two of the most popular, influential and powerful showmen of the South.

Varner, who started the first exhibitor organization in North Carolina and has steadfastly fathered it for five years, has recently become somewhat discouraged by the inertia displayed by his supporters, in fact he declared against acceptance of an office in the state league at the annual convention in June. However the secretaryship was forced upon him. Varner, it is known, will not want the national presidency. His first experience in motion picture politics at the farcical convention in Chicago two years ago, embittered him against the national organization. But it is believed that his friends can persuade him to stand for a run.

Jake Wells has taken an active interest in the national organization during the past three years and was instrumental in bringing the next convention South. He is well known throughout the country, and is a powerful figure in the trade; it is therefore believed that he will be forced into the race for the presidency of the new association.

Hollander Heads Realart at Minneapolis Branch

HARRY L. HOLLANDER, who has been engaged in the selling of photoplays for the past five years, has been appointed manager of the Minneapolis exchange of Realart Pictures Corporation by J. S. Woody, general sales manager. He started in his new position on July 14.

Starting with Fox, with whom he remained three years, Mr. Hollander has been associated with some of the biggest motion picture companies. In the sales organization of Fox, he was connected with the New York exchange, later being transferred to Minneapolis. Mr. Hollander's next affiliation after his long term with Fox, was with Select, where he remained for a year as a sales representative, operating from the Minneapolis branch. Prior to joining forces with Realart, he was connected with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

H. L. Hollander
Goes to Minneapolis as exchange manager for Realart.

As Mr. Hollander has spent the major portion of the time he has been an active member of the photoplay profession in Minneapolis, the territory which he will handle for Realart is familiar ground.

Offices have been established in the Film Exchange Building at 16 North Fourth street, where Mr. Hollander will be glad to meet his many friends among exhibitors and acquaint them with the productions and plans of Realart.

Retain Original Title of "Her Kingdom of Dreams"

AFTER weeks of discussion as to the advisability of changing the title of the next Anita Stewart Production, it has been definitely decided to keep the original title of the story on which the production is founded, namely "Her Kingdom of Dreams."

Numerous other titles were suggested, but none of them seemed adequate until Mr. Mayer hit upon "The Way of the World." This title was considered not only appropriate, but also conveyed the idea of immensity which characterized the production. This title was sent to the New York office, and to say that it caused a shock is putting it mildly. A complete advertising campaign had been planned on the original title of "Her Kingdom of Dreams," Miss Stewart had already written a song to be used in connection with the exploitation of the picture, and exhibitors generally had come to expect the production under the title of "Her Kingdom of Dreams."

Mr. Mayer sent the following telegram in reply to this contention:

"You are wrong on title "Her Kingdom of Dreams." Production too big for whimsical title. It is a great tremendous story from life, and needs a tremendous title. This is not for publicity, but a fact. I'll stake everything on the production, and my opinion is shared by all who have seen it. Absolutely do not release it until the first week in September, as it is too big and expensive to take any chances."

At this point the copyright office at Washington announced that the title which Mr. Mayer wanted had been copyrighted and used. When informed of this Mr. Mayer bowed to the inevitable, and the next Stewart production will be known by its original title of "Her Kingdom of Dreams."

"The Gray Horizon" Has Mountain Cloud Effect

THE latest Sessue Hayakawa film "The Gray Horizon" is one of the most artistic photoplays ever made by Robertson-Cole and distributed by Exhibition Mutual.

The greater part of the production was made out of doors, and it has as its background the splendor of the Sierra-Nevada Mountains. The entire locale is located in the hills, and every advantage was taken of the extraordinary light and cloud formations that at times take place in these famous mountains.

To get the desired effect in some of the scenes, the entire company had to be transported by mule packs through the narrow mountain trails to an elevation of nearly 5,000 feet. It is at this height in the early hours of the morning that the cloud banks are found, and it was the good fortune of the Haworth players to get one scene that was so necessary to convey the full meaning of the name of the story. This is used as the opening scene and is followed by many that are colorful.

Letting Film Advertising Profits Slip Through Fingers Is Charity from Showmen, Says Chamberlin

EXHIBITORS of the country are going to do some "editing" of films if producers continue the practice of accepting fat advertising fees from outside interests without consideration for the medium that makes this source of revenue possible, is the opinion of Dan Chamberlain of Minneapolis, members of the ways and means committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc.

Will Act in September.

Home from the St. Louis convention of the national exhibitors, Mr. Chamberlain, together with the other members of this committee, Chairman Jake Wells of Virginia, Alfred Black of Maine, Harry Lustig of Cleveland and Marcus Loew of New York, is working on plans to see that the exhibitor gets a square deal from the producer in this advertising proposition.

According to Mr. Chamberlain, a meeting of the committee will be called in New York by President Black, probably in September, when the advertising proposition will be put squarely up to the producers.

Large Amount Involved.

"During the last year the producers netted $3,000,000 from the advertising of various products of outside interests in scenes that appeared in moving picture plays," said Mr. Chamberlain. "It was a neat graft the way it was worked and was thrust upon the exhibitor without his consent or without consulting him. Scenes were filmed so that a billboard or some other medium advertising a cereal, a brand of shoes, chewing gum or some other product would appear in the background. Many of the exhibitors did not realize what was done, but the matter was taken up at the national convention and we are now working out a campaign to see that the exhibitor gets a square deal.

Must Split Fifty-fifty.

"If the producers are to continue slipping in these advertisements, most of which are harmless enough and do not detract in any way from the value of the screen subject, they must split fifty-fifty with the exhibitor. These advertising scenes have been artfully slipped into the pictures. They are a part of every day life and perhaps lend to the atmosphere of realism at times, but the exhibitor is entitled to his share of this revenue. The only problem remaining is how this advertising money should be apportioned between the producer and exhibitor. That is what we are working on now, and we will be prepared to make more explicit demands later.

Scenes May Be Cut.

"If the producer insists on hogging it all, then the exhibitor is going to do a little editing of the films. He is going to cut out the scenes which carry these advertisements. The ways and means committee will notify the advertiser that the exhibitors have not been consulted about these advertisements and that inasmuch as no arrangements have been made to carry them the advertising scenes will be cut out of the picture. This would effectively kill the graft of the producers. Realizing that the exhibitors would no longer run these scenes, the advertisers would withdraw their advertising.

"It would be legitimate business to run these scenes if the producer would only play fair with the exhibitor, and we propose to make him do that very thing.

A Case of Free Advertising.

"Who ever heard of a newspaper running an advertisement for which an outside party received the payment for its publication? Who ever heard of a first class newspaper printing a news story with a strong advertising angle to it? The newspaper editor who knew his business would perhaps run the story with the advertising angle eliminated. And so the exhibitor will show his film, cutting out all advertising scenes unless they are paid for.

Hopes for Settlement.

"There is absolutely no reason why this practice should be allowed to continue without any renumeration for the exhibitor. It has gone along too far already and now is the time to act."

With the exhibitors of the United States back of the national association in its demands Mr. Chamberlain said he felt certain some satisfactory adjustment of the matter would be made with the producers.

WOULD SUPPRESS UNDESIRABLE FILMS

Congressman Walsh Introduces Measure in House Whereby Certain Pictures Will Be Denied Mails

CONGRESSMAN WALSH, of Massachusetts, one of the most ardent motion picture fans in the House of Representatives, has introduced a bill to amend section 245 of the penal code of the United States so as to give jurisdiction to the Government over obscene films.

In an interview with the Moving Picture World correspondent in Washington Congressman Walsh declared that the motion picture business has reached the stage where it has become necessary to prohibit unscrupulous producers and exploiters from dealing in a type of pictures that "should never be permitted to be exhibited."

Not Many Bad Pictures.

"The exploiters of obscene, indecent, filthy pictures are very much in the minority," declared Congressman Walsh. "We cannot be too careful, in view of the millions of people, including such a vast number with immature minds—children—who attend these motion pictureture exhibitions, to safeguard them from exhibitions of such films. The legislation proposed would impose a penalty upon the shipper of obscene, filthy and improper motion picture films as is now imposed upon still pictures, books and other similar matter. When the law was written, motion pictures were not thought of and my bill is to amend the law so as to include them with these other things.

Limit of Government Interference.

"I think that this is as far as the Government ought to go. In prohibiting the shipment of indecent films through the mails or by common carriers, with the law properly enforced, the Government would make unnecessary national supervision in the way of censorship. I believe that the matter of censorship should be left to the police power of the several states."

Mr. Walsh is a member of the House Committee on the Judiciary, to which his bill has been referred. This fact practically insures its adoption by the lower branch of Congress, and it probably will meet with no opposition in the Senate.

Alice Brady Will Tour and Act for Film at Same Time

FOR the first time in the history of the amusement world a star of both the stage and the screen will make photoplays while touring the country with her last season's Broadway success. This innovation will be initiated by Alice Brady, star in Realart Pictures, when she goes on the road in the early fall in "Forever After."

Miss Brady will make a number of pictures during the summer in New York. This work will be in the nature of a vacation as compared with what she will do on the road later on. When that happy time comes, she will have to travel, work at pictures by day and on Sundays, and appear in "Forever After" at night. This will mean "on the jump" from before eight in the morning until after eleven at night.

The route of "Forever After" will take Miss Brady to Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles and other large cities. There are well equipped photoplay studios in all the cities mentioned, with the exception of Boston, where exteriors can be made and special arrangements made for interiors. Miss Brady's contract calls for her appearance in eight Realart productions the coming year. Four pictures will be divided between New York and Los Angeles, and four among Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Miss Brady's entourage will include not only the players and staffs connected with the stage play, but also all the principal people associated with her motion picture productions, including her director, his assistant, supporting players, cameramen, business and technical staffs.

The appearance of Miss Brady in "Forever After" will have the effect of personal appearances for the photoplays which are being shown at the same time in the cities where the stage play is scheduled to appear.

Moore Postpones Regular Bill to Accommodate Four-Hour Return Date of "Daddy Long Legs"

SUSPENDING his regular program, Tom Moore, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C., arranged a four-hour return date for "Daddy Long Legs," starring Mary Pickford, and released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, in honor of a recent visit of Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, Mary's mother, to Washington.

Performing some lightning work, Moore arranged for the afternoon newspapers to carry his ads notifying patrons of the change in arrangements and also that the mother of Mary Pickford would be a guest at the Rialto.

Congressman Joseph Walsh.

"The regular program will be resumed tomorrow," Moore's advertisement read, "and the above arrangements meeting the desire of Mrs. Pickford to personally witness the Rialto's presentation will also afford opportunity to thousands who missed this attraction which broke all attendance records in America."

By box office figures "Daddy Long Legs" played to nearly 100,000 upon its first presentation in Washington at the Rialto.

New House for North Carolina.

A new motion picture theatre, to be one of the most modern in the state, is rapidly nearing completion at Wilson, N. C., and it is expected to open within the next few months. It is being built by interests of which H. R. Mason, of Goldsboro, and H. F. Stallings, of Kingston, are leaders, and will give this town three active theatres, although there is some local opinion that two houses are sufficient for the population. It is expected the battle for business will be keen once the new house is opened.

Pathe's Washington Head Is Assaulted by Negroes

E. R. CHAMPION, Washington City manager for Pathe, Inc., is receiving congratulations from his friends in the industry upon his narrow escape from death. After calling upon Manager Davis, of the Jewel Theatre in Southwest Washington recently, Mr. Champion, who is not very well acquainted with that section of the city, started to walk toward the capitol. He had not proceeded far when he was approached by a young negro who asked him if he wanted to buy some "likker." The film man replied in the negative and walked away. The negro was persistent and after both had gone a short distance, asked the same question again.

Mr. Champion realized that he was in a bad section of the town and so turned down another street with a view to reaching a car line. He had walked but a very short distance in this new direction when the negro put a gun in his face, commanding him to move his hands skyward and not to make an outcry, while two other huskies stepped from behind a tree and started to "frisk" him.

The film man grasped the gun in his left hand, punched one of the big fellows in the vicinity of the knock-out spot and then hit the third man over the head with a heavy cane he was carrying. In the meantime, he held on to the gun. The little negro was a bad customer and before Mr. Champion could do much to him, the gun exploded and he received the charge in his hand, mutilating two fingers. With the report of the gun, the film manager, who had put the two others hors d'combat, made a hasty getaway. One of the men recovered and started to chase him, whereupon the heavy cane was again brought into action, there came a report as wood hit flesh and bone, and Mr. Champion hurried to a drugstore for first aid and then to a hospital. He may lose one of his fingers as a result of the scrimmage.

What "Heff" Did with Picture Section Blazed Trail for Michigan Writers

AFTER two years of effort successfully applied to convincing the populace of Detroit and the editors of every newspaper in Michigan that the screen deserves the same serious consideration that is given to the legitimate stage, Harold Heffernan—known as "Heff" to every exhibitor and newspaper reader in the state—and acknowledged by his employers to be the highest salaried man in the United States for the position he has held—has resigned as motion picture editor for the Detroit News to become director of exploitation for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit exchange in that territory.

Beginning his fight for an intelligent recognition of motion pictures with a column published semi-weekly in the Detroit News, Mr. Heffernan has gradually forced the industry upward in the estimation of the men who control the publicity channels of the state by methods and tactics which established his department as one of the best in the country, until today there is not a representative newspaper in Michigan which had not been encouraged to follow the lead of the News in removing restrictions from the amount of space devoted to screen news.

Exhibitors Men of Consequence.

Convinced that exhibitors are men of public consequence, Mr. Heffernan has proven that this is an essential viewpoint for the editor of any motion picture department in a daily if that space contribution to public interest in the industry is to become valuable and influential.

Today this section of the Detroit News is composed of from four to eight pages of original material in the Sunday editions, and space without limit in the daily issues. Screen comment has become as regular and important a part of the daily contents of the News as is the stock market reports, Washington dispatches and stories about the progress of the Ford libel suit.

As in all other territories, editors of the smaller newspapers in cities and towns throughout Michigan are guided to an extent by the editorial policies and important featured departments of the biggest paper in the state. The situation in the newspaper game is identical with that in the film business, whereby exhibitors are guided largely by the bookings of the big first run accounts in the principal city in each territory.

Other Motion Picture Editors Influenced

True to the practice, the effect of Mr. Heffernan's work as motion picture editor of the Detroit News soon began to have its effect in various parts of the state. Shrewd exhibitors, who knew the rating local editors gave to the News, used Heffernan's department, with its gradual increase in size, as an argument for a local recognition of the screen. One by one Michigan editors followed the lead set by "Heff."

Then, because screen news in the smaller cities and towns was not prolific enough to warrant appreciable space, the editors turned to the Detroit News motion picture section for the additional material necessary to make up a department of respectable size. Heffernan's stories about stars, his feature articles on the trend of the industry, his practice of writing things about the business side of the screen as well as the entertainment side, were clipped bodily and reprinted, with credit given to "Heff," in scores of dailies.

Built Up a Reputation.

Mr. Heffernan purposely accomplished one thing, and unconsciously succeeded in another, by his policy of editing his department up to a standard instead of down to an ad. He won not only local recognition for the motion picture, backed by the power and influence of the Detroit News, but he won state recognition for it in ultra-conservative papers whose editors figured that whatever the News did must be in accord with public interest. The reprinting of his stories and reviews, with his name used as the credit, gave him a reputation which grew without his knowledge.

Harold Heffernan
Formerly of the Detroit News, sometimes called "The Michigan Thunderer."

Exhibitors throughout the state long since have made it plan to film salesmen and exchange managers that any production which had earned "Heff's" approval was a release they wanted to book, and that any attraction which went below the Detroit News' Standard for screen entertainment was less useful to them than a lemon in orange juice.

Will Aid Michigan Exhibitors.

Harry Scott, manager of First National's Michigan exchange, created the department of exploitation and finally induced Mr. Heffernan, whose resignation becomes effective August 4, to accept the important post.

An office already has been added to the suite which form the Detroit headquarters of the First National, which Mr. Heffernan will occupy immediately upon leaving the staff of the News. When an exhibitor books a First National attraction, Mr. Heffernan will have a detailed knowledge of the production's value in exploitation and an equal knowledge of every condition surrounding the exhibitor. Then when called upon he will offer suggestions containing the proper punch and if necessary personally direct a campaign of exploitation designed to show the real worth of the attraction.

Reader Returns to France; to Sell Vitagraph Films

DONALD A. READER, formerly at the head of the Vitagraph Company in Paris, has sailed for France, where he will open a number of sales offices for the renting of Vitagraph films in that country.

While abroad, Mr. Reader will make an exhaustive study of post-war conditions in the picture field, not only in France, but in England and other countries. He is thoroughly conversant with the European field, both as it concerns the native and the American-made product.

In addition to a general office in Paris, Mr. Reader will open offices in Marseilles, Bordeaux, Dunkirk, Havre, Lyons, Nice, Rouen, Toulon and possibly other French cities.

The foreign field for motion pictures having been made practically sterile at the outbreak of the war, Mr. Reader returned to this country after a residence in Paris of several years. He has since been business manager at Vitagraph's Brooklyn studio.

Lee Kiddies Start Second Picture.

With the completion of their first comedy playlet, Jane and Katherine Lee have started their second picture. No titles has yet been selected for the first production. Tefft Johnson will direct.

"Exhibitors will be greatly assisted by the publicity campaign which will be given to Jane and Katherine Lee," said Lou Rogers, president of the Rogers Film Corporation, "and as it will be one direct to the public, it should increase their popularity. Though the youngsters have not worked for several months prior to this, still the flood of 'fan' letters come pouring in with queries of their next picture."

Beck Signs Stuart Holmes.

Another motion picture star to be added to the list contributing to the production activities of Arthur F. Beck is announced in Stuart Holmes. The features starring Holmes will be released on the Pathe program. Mr. Holmes' contract is for two years.

Inspector Make Surprising Statement About Conditions in Salt Lake Projection Rooms

OPERATING rooms in the moving picture theatres of Salt Lake were inspected this week by J. L. Chattron, factory inspector for the state industrial commission, and Dr. T. B. Beatty, state health commissioner. In some of the houses conditions have been said not to be up to the standard requirements and the inspection was made in order to call defects to the attention of the theatre managers. Mr. Chattron reports that about 28 per cent. of motion picture operators are tubercular and that many work under such conditions that when they leave the operating rooms they are almost unable to walk for from twenty to thirty minutes.

[The report of J. L. Chattron, factory inspector for state industrial commission, Salt Lake City, Utah, that 28 per cent. of projectionists—presumably of Salt Lake City—are tubercular is quite possibly true; projection room conditions in many theatres are still such that tubercular trouble is fostered. But Mr. Chattron's statement—if he actually made it—that many projectionists work under such conditions that when they leave the projection room they are almost unable to walk is pure bunk, and absurd to the point of being ridiculous.

Projection rooms should be amply ventilated by the circulation of fresh air from out of doors. Lack of such ventilation is, as the projection department of this paper has time and again pointed out, little less than a crime. The California state board of health made an exhaustive examination of projection room conditions of that state about two years ago and reported that conditions therein were, except for the properly ventilated ones—a relatively small percentage of the whole at that time—decidedly unhealthful and that such conditions made for tubercular trouble.

Just what percentage of projectionists have such trouble I do not know. Undoubtedly the percentage is high, because until of late years projection room ventilation existed mostly in imagination. The best available statistics, published in the projection department some time since, placed the annual death rate of projectionists in this country and Canada at between 600 and 700, if I rightly remember. The report credited to Inspector Chattron contains nothing unreasonable except the last half of its last sentence.—F. H. Richardson.]

New York Strand President Books Film After Midnight

STEWART EDWARD WHITE'S "The Westerners," the first of the Benjamin B. Hampton productions for Great Authors Pictures, Inc., and distributed exclusively by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has been booked by the New York Strand and will be presented for the week beginning August 10.

Moe H. Mark, president of the Mark-Strand interests in the East, is virtually commuting between three big eastern cities, owing to the building activities of his firm which is now rushing to completion houses in Brooklyn and Albany. He arrived in New York from Buffalo, the headquarters of his organization, at midnight, held a showing of film after 1 a. m. and signed his contract as 2:15 a. m., displacing one picture entirely and setting back two others.

The following morning the print was placed in initial rehearsal with the Strand orchestra under the direction of Carl Edouard and Jack Eaton.

Cohen Is Appointed Head of Select's Denver Branch

BEN S. COHEN has been appointed to the position of manager of Select Pictures Corporation's Denver exchange. Mr. Cohen took charge July 21 and in the future will divide his time between the Denver office and the high spots in the Denver territory. Oren F. Woody, who formerly held the position of branch manager at Denver, is being retained in the Select organization.

Before the organization of Select, Mr. Cohen was affiliated with President Lewis J. Selznick when the latter organized Selznick Pictures, Incorporated. He was the first Selznick manager at Philadelphia. Later he was transferred to a traveling position and organized several of the Selznick exchanges throughout the west. He was also at one time manager of the Denver exchange for Selznick.

Weaver Writes for Goldwynner.

Jay W. Weaver, artist for the New York Strand Theatre, whose lobby decorations have been copied by theatres in every section of the country, and whose experience in theatrical display advertising covers a period of ten years, has begun a series of monthly articles devoted to the details of his craft. They will be published in the Goldwynner, the magazine which the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation supplies to its exhibitors.

The first of Mr. Weaver's articles, printed in the July 15th number of the Goldwynner, is devoted to suggestions to architects and builders of motion picture theatres.

Who Will Win It?

Bud Fisher is offering this nifty cup to the Fox salesman who puts over the greatest amount of business on the Mutt and Jeff Cartoons. They're off!

Rialto Drummer Designs Sound Effect for Cartoons

PROBABLY the queerest musical score ever devised has been prepared in conjunction with the Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoon production release by William Fox. It is really a "sound sheet," since it applies to noises rather than to music. It has been developed for Mr. Fox by Max H. Manne, trap drummer at the Rivoli Theatre, New York.

Mr. Manne virtually makes Mutt and Jeff live and talk. There is not a sound, human or otherwise, that he cannot produce from the amazing medley of traps he has invented. He has a laugh-making contraption to accompany every motion on the screen, and so interpret for the ear what the eye is registering.

In getting Mr. Manne to write the "sound sheet" for the Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons, William Fox seeks to give audiences throughout the country the same delight as those at the Rivoli experience. On his part, Mr. Manne generously agreed to reveal the secrets of his traps to other drummers, because of the enthusiasm with which his efforts have been received.

"Much, of course, will depend upon the adaptability and interest of the individual drummer," says Mr. Manne, "but if he tries conscientiously he can add much to the amusement of his audience. Personally I study the picture on Sunday and figure out what instruments must be used to fit the antics of these drawn puppets. By Monday I have my store down pat and thereafter it is a case of concentrating on the picture and taking my sound cues."

E. Roth Shows "Sahara" to California Shriners

EUGENE ROTH, who guides the destinies of the California Theatre, San Francisco, contracted to run "Sahara" for the week of August 3 and took time by the forelock by giving a special invitation showing to California Shriners on July 10, their annual day for merrymaking in their Temple auditorium.

This event was staged at midnight following the final performance at the California, thus allowing Mr. Roth the services of his forty-piece orchestra for the delectation of the Masonic organization.

Mr. Roth's special audience numbered 500, among them some of the best known men in the civic, professional and industrial life of the Golden State. Many of the Shriners were accompanied by their wives, and, though the program was not concluded until the wee hours of the morn, they kept their seats until the end, the desert scenes making a strong appeal.

"SKINNAY" ANSWERS CALL OF SCREEN

The Kid Born in Briggs Cartoons Becomes Principal in Screen Comedies That Tell Stories of Boyhood Days and Childhood "Love" with an Appeal That Reaches the Heart

By Walter K. Hill

IT may not be generally known, but it is a fact that General John J. Pershing has been indirectly responsible for millions of chuckles, thousands of miles of smiles and unending "footage" of inundations athwart the rotund midriff of our most distinguished citizens. While Pershing's soldiers have won victory over the Hun, the off-hand remark Professor J. J. Pershing made to a student in the Nebraska State University has resulted in joyous victories over the forces of General Grouch and Field Marshal Blues.

Underdone eggs and overbaked cantaloupes have failed to register their full effect at the world's breakfast-table, because "Prof" Pershing said to Clare A. Briggs, off-hand:

"Briggs, stand aside. You don't know anything."

Out of sixty students in a class of geometry, Pershing, then the teacher of mathematics in the State University at Lincoln, Neb., had picked young Briggs to give a blackboard demonstration of what he knew about signs and symbols. Briggs drew a lot of impersonations of half-moons, cheeseboxes, gables, triangles and zig-zags that meant nothing to Professor Pershing and called forth the military order to let somebody get at the blackboard who could trig, geom, fraction and figger according to the Hoyle of mathematics.

P. A. Says the Professor Was Right.

Such a deep impression did Professor Pershing's remarks make upon Briggs (who at the time was "carrying a route" for the Nebraska State Journal), that Briggs put the same scrawls, flashes and zig-zags into the screen comedy he lately turned out—decorating the blackboard in a school-room scene exactly as he had chalked up the fateful scrawls that caused "Prof" Pershing to take his mathematical measure in one sentence. Charles E. McCarthy is an expert "fractioner," and he said (after seeing the Briggs comedy—which the same McCarthy is press agenting for F. P.-L.) that Pershing was unquestionably a good judge of poor mathematics.

But all this is getting off to a bad start on what is intended to be a clarion call to the youth and maturity of our land to "stand by" for something good that is coming their way via comedies made from the Briggs cartoons—"When a Feller Needs a Friend." Newspaper readers who "take" any one of nearly a hundred and fifty dailies in which the Briggs cartoons are "syndicated," know all about Skinnay—the kid who is a real kid; hundred per cent. kid; regular kid and just all kid.

Skinnay Going Into Pictures.

Clare Briggs is "putting 'Skinnay' into pictures." Famous Players-Lasky will distribute them to exhibitors starting early in September. They will be two-reelers. They have only been shown two weeks at the New York Strand—as a "try out" on the audience.

It is recorded that "being the goat" was a happy occupation for the crowds that saw Skinnay at his tricks and watched that blissful disease, love, take the kid into thralldom when "Her"—THE girl—came into his young life and, by a process cruel to imagine, sent him to the woodshed as consort for father, who swung a strap idly at his side.

In those two weeks Briggs found encouragement to go on with his picture venture. The other day the World man sat with Briggs—and McCarthy and with Yokel—in the Paramount projection room and watched Skinnay act out upon the screen. McCarthy, as we have said, is a publicist, and Yokel, here mentioned, is the showman who led Briggs into the way he should go as a picture creator. Yokel proved that he was nothing of the sort in picking out Briggs and bringing his cartoon ideas to the screen.

For, be it remembered, these are not cartoon pictures at all. They are stories introducing Skinnay, his best girl ("Her"), his pal, Bud, and his joyously youthful and appealingly natural "goings on" in school and out. They are amplifications of the ideas Briggs has drawn in cartoon designs for newspapers—reduced to the nth degree of entertainment, with smiles, chuckles and midriff inundations carried irresistibly through the narratives. While youth remains youth, these comedies will appeal—and when youth grows up, those priceless memories of by-gone days will be recalled with all the mellow joy c reveries borrowed from the misty past.

Real Life—Kidhood—Not Acting.

Briggs and his producers have done a common sense thing in taking children as their principals and turning them loose to do natural things. Young men made up to appear as "kids" are not in the ensembles. The grown-ups are there only to enact their necessary roles—father, mother, the school-mam, doctor, "board of education," and others who simply provide the proper atmosphere.

John Stephen and Rosemary Carr are the principal "kids"—and they act the role of "kids" without any artifices. It's the naturalness of the juveniles that will make Briggs' comedies "go over"—unless human nature does a complete somersault and "flops" into a new and unheard-of poise.

The author of the ideas is a country-town product—from a place so small that he simply said "born in Wisconsin" when he was asked whence he came. "I've also lived in Illinois," Briggs added, "—and in Nebraska."

But his majority years have been spent in big-town newspaper offices drawing cartoons—in creating "Skinnay" and demonstrating the thousand and one occasions "When a Feller Needs a Friend." His fame is fixed for "movie fans"—and his comedies will come as a wholesome breath of refreshing entertainment into any program where they may land.

Exchange Board Meets.

The Detroit board of exchange managers, at its recent annual meeting, re-elected all of the old officers, which means J. E. Flynn, Goldwyn, president; J. M. Duncan, vice-president, Vitagraph; J. C. Fishman, Standard, treasurer. In re-electing these officers, the members complimented them very highly for the efficient work they performed during the past year. J. E. Flynn read his annual report reviewing the work of the association, since its organization in June, 1918.

Present Plunkett with Platinum Watch.

In appreciation of his services as managing director of the Strand Theatre, New York, Joseph L. Plunkett, resigned, was presented with a handsome platinum watch by the Mitchel H. Mark Realty Corporation.

THEFT COMMITTEE KEEPS ON THE JOB

New York Broker Is Held at Syracuse Pending Action by Grand Jury—Bail Placed at $5,000

DEVELOPMENTS in the case of Hans Frohman, New York film broker, who was held at Syracuse on July 16 for action by the Grand Jury in $5,000 bail, followed the recovery in June of $80,000 worth of films, which, it is charged were stolen in transit and received by him at greatly reduced prices. John R. Van Arnam, former Syracuse University football star and now under bail, is awaiting action by the Grand Jury, accused of acting with Frohman.

National Association Active.

Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association, was present at Frohman's hearing before Justice Benjamin J. Shove, of the Court of Special Sessions, accompanied by John J. McInerney, of Rochester, attorney. The two detectives who gave testimony, Charles P. Jordan and Irving I. Brown, will remain upstate for the moving picture interests, to follow leads furnished by statements of the men in the alleged plots.

Among the film companies' representatives present at the hearing at Syracuse, last week, were E. H. Goldstein, New York office of Universal; F. S. Hopkins, Buffalo manager Universal; Robert C. Fox, Buffalo manager Famous Players-Lasky; Charles P. Jordan, manager inventories, Famous Players-Lasky; B. M. Moran, Albany manager, Pathe; Mr. Dobson, sales department, Famous Players-Lasky; and G. M. Blackman, Syracuse representative of Universal.

Future Thievery Discouraged.

Aside from its importance as a specific deterrent of further alleged illegal activities, the film theft committee of the National Association is certain that the result of the present action, when added to previous arrests and indictments of film thieves, will advertise to such persons the determination of the National Association to stamp out this traffic entirely. The extent of thefts may be estimated from the statements made by motion picture officials that thousands of films, most of them good prints, have been stolen from July 1, 1918, to May 1, 1919. They were taken from offices, trucks, elevators, and in some cases, delivery wagons, the total value being given at over $250,000.

Syracuse has been named as "fence" office for a ring of thieves whose activities extended to other cities and states, including Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, Harrisburg and Wilkes-Barre in Pennsylvania.

The film theft committee of the National Association, composed of H. Minot Pitman, chairman (Famous Players-Lasky); Bert Adler (Inter-Ocean Film); E. L. Franconi (Pathe Exchange, Inc.); Tarkington Baker (Universal Film Manufacturing); Samuel Eckman, Jr. (Goldwyn Pictures); and William Wright (Vitagraph, Inc.), has done sterling work during its brief existence.

Those Incriminated.

In addition to the cases of Frohman and Van Arnam, just held, the committee's investigations have resulted in the following arrests: William Burns, New York, for larceny of a five-reel feature from Universal; Frank Dolan, New York, for larceny of a film belonging to Famous Players-Lasky; H. W. Fowzer, New York County, indicted on bench warrant issued for arrest; W. R. Casterline, attorney of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., arrested and held on bail for action of Grand Jury; Davis Film Exchange, Lee Park, Pa.—there were recovered from this concern one Pathe feature, three Universal features and two World features; S. A. Huffman, Syracuse, arrested for receiving stolen films in Chicago—by co-operation with the State Attorney's office and aided by four city detectives, the committee recovered from a local ring many stolen films and secured the arrest of four of the ringleaders.

The committee has assured the executive committee of the National Association that this is only a beginning. They want it understood by friends and foes alike that they are "on the job" until film thieves throughout the country realize thoroughly that the occupation is unhealthy.

Pathe Opens Exchange at Little Rock, Arkansas

FRED C. QUIMBY, director of exchanges for Pathe Exchange, Inc., now on a tour of the United States, has opened a new branch office for Pathe in Little Rock, Ark. The Little Rock territory will consist of Arkansas, the northwestern part of Mississippi and western Tennessee, and Dunklin and Pemiscot counties in the southern part of Missouri.

"We have opened this office," said Mr. Quimby, "with a view to giving better service to the exhibitors in the State of Arkansas and the surrounding territory. We have taken part of the territories away from the St. Louis, New Orleans, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City and Atlanta branches. This will now constitute the territory served by Little Rock. This office makes Pathe's thirty-first in the United States."

V. H. Hodupp will be appointed manager of the Little Rock office. He entered this organization in May, 1914, as a salesman for the Pathe News in Jersey City. Later the same year he was appointed salesman in the Syracuse office, and, after several months' service in this capacity, he was appointed branch manager of the Pathe Syracuse exchange.

In 1915, Mr. Hodupp was appointed branch manager of the Chicago exchange, remaining there over a year. He was later called to the home office and appointed special representative. Recently he has been visiting the various Pathe exchanges to promote better service for exhibitors.

Union Contract Expires Soon.

Will the Portland theatrical unions make any new demands upon the theatre owners when the contract between these parties expires about the first of September?

The reason for the speculation is that in the past at the expiration of the contract periods new demands by the unions were invariably objected to by the managers.

As far as the exhibiting end of the theatrical business is concerned, it is not believed that the unions will have much cause for complaint as to treatment received during the past year. Theatres have been classified by the unions and operators are getting as high as $55 a week in the best class of houses.

Up to date Portland picture theatres have succeeded in putting on their shows without the use of orchestras. Organists are being featured and usually receive wages far above the union scale so that the Musicians Union will have few if any claims to make on the first of September.

WATCHING FITZMAURICE IN ACTION

Methods of the Director of the Next Paramount-Artcraft Picture for Elsie Ferguson Are Studied While He Rehearses, Assembles and Edits "A Society Exile"

By Edward Weitzel

UP to the present no moving picture producer in need of a London fog has been enterprising enough to import one. But the producer hasn't gone without his fog, for the good and sufficient reason that his director is able to create a perfect imitation of the real article without leaving the studio. Sounds like a bit of magic, but after watching Director George Fitzmaurice call up a fog, a moonlight night on one of the canals of Venice, and a series of scenes that were as thoroughly English as the chimney pots of Portman Square and all within the confines of the Famous Players-Lasky studio on Fifty-sixth street, New York, I was reminded of the cigar salesman who explained his ability to undersell his rivals by remarking that he had a brother in New York who made a fine imported cigar.

The Magic Rain Storm.

A trip to New Jersey with this same wizard of the screen revealed another marvel. The objective point was a country residence of the perfect English manor type. The scenario called for such an exterior but stipulated that it should be shown at night while a storm raged and the rain beat upon the roof and drove against the latticed window-panes.

Atmospheric conditions were just the reverse. Not a cloud in the sky and not a drop of rain—until the master magician had rehearsed the actors in their part of the business. Then, at the word of command, the torrent broke and one side of the house was enveloped in storm and darkness, while the other side stood out against the moonlight and gave no hint of the sinister scene that was being enacted on its west front.

Rhearsing "A Society Exile."

It is not my intention to disclose how any of these mysteries were brought about, but to give a slight suggestion of the manifold duties which fall to the share of a moving picture director and the extent of the information he must have on any and all subjects relating to the story he is transferring from the scenario to the film.

With this object in view I haunted the Fifty-sixth street studio during the making of the Elsie Ferguson picture, "A Society Exile," and improved every chance to accompany the director when "on location" became the order of the day. The picture, which is adapted from a stage play by Sir Henry Arthur Jones, called "We Can't Be As Bad As All That," opens in Venice and then moves its scene of action to England, social life in town and country forming the background of the story. Ouida Bergere made the screen version.

The Local Color Test.

The man who is given a scenario and held responsible for its production has one test which must be applied to every character and to every object, animate and inanimate, in the story—namely, local color. Less favored mortals always have been given to understand that "the correct thing" is the first commandment in the book of laws which regulates the lives of those whose names are to be found in the English social register. The reproduction of "the correct thing" is the chief aim of a moving picture director when working on what is known on the stage as a society drama. Past experience enables George Fitzmaurice to keep all details of architecture, landscape effect and social usage belonging to the kingdom of George V. eminently proper and absolute good form.

There is one series of scenes in the home of the English nobleman who marries the American girl, played by Elsie Ferguson, that shows a reception hall adjoining a drawing-room which is entered by mounting a short flight of steps. The rooms are not only impressive in themselves, but are singularly well adapted to the action which is here the most dramatic in the picture. The method by which the action is shifted from one room to the other without slacking up the tension is admirable and illustrates the care required to spread the movement of the characters over two large spaces and keep the tempo of the situation up to the mark.

An Unwelcome Freight Train.

Arriving at a location which called for an exterior swimming pool, Director Fitzmaurice noted the elaborately carved marble work that railed it in and the fine sweep of its surface; then stepped back and surveyed the surroundings of the pool. As he did so the satisfied look left his face.

"Won't the place do, Mr. Fitzmaurice?" asked the location man anxiously.

"Not if we shoot it from this side," was the reply. "Those buildings in the background are altogether too American to belong on an English estate."

"How about the other side?"

An inspection revealed nothing to shatter the correct atmosphere if the "shot" were taken from one certain spot. But the unexpected often happens to upset a director's calculations: The top of a Jersey Central freight train showed above a cut in the distance just as the camera man started to grind, and the scene had to be taken over again.

The "Getting Ready" Process.

And so it goes constantly during the making of a picture. Eternal vigilance is the price of correct detail of every description. A stranger visiting a studio for the first time would be more than likely to come away with the impression that a director and those under him spend hours getting ready to do a minute's work. In reality "getting ready" is almost the whole thing. To watch Director Fitzmaurice go over a scene with Elsie Ferguson and a member of her support and explain certain changes he wants tried makes one feel like an eavesdropper. It is all so quiet and confidential that it seems a bit of private conversation. But when the director says, "Try it, please," and the star turns to William P. Carleton with tears in her eyes and shows that her heart is breaking at the thought of losing his love, you note how much more effective the scene is this time and you are quite sure Mr. Fitzmaurice is going to give the signal to the cameraman to take it. But he doesn't. He walks quietly over to the tall officer in the British uniform and the beautifully gowned woman at his side and resumes his confidential manner and his pleasant little chat. Later on, when he's satisfied, the thing is done.

Up in the cutting room where "A Society Exile" was assembled, George Fitzmaurice gave another exhibition of his many-sided profession. Surrounding him were the strips of film, 638 in number, which had been taken for the picture. On the winding table lay the working scenario. An assistant helped him to select the strip he wanted next. The rapidity with which this was done and the ease with which the director was able to recall the scenes that had been taken, without consulting the scenario, was a source of wonderment to the onlooker. A quick glance at a strip, its length was as quickly determined upon, the piece of film torn off, pinned in place and wound on the reel.

Inspecting the First Run.

A few days later I sat in the studio projection room in company with the director and his assistants and watched the picture run off for the first time. I had expected to find the continuity rather disjointed, but it proved to be surprisingly smooth when the circumstances are considered. Changes were ordered in the way of cuts, new titles and tinting of scenes during a running fire of comments.

"How do you like the picture?" asked Director Fitzmaurice, when the last reel came to an end.

"The interest is held all through, and it never for an instant gets out of its class," was my reply.

"It came precious near it the day that Jersey Central freight train poked herself into the background," laughed the director.

MOVIES NOT INJURIOUS TO EYESIGHT

Oculist Says Eyestrain from Viewing Films May Indicate Ocular Trouble, Not Poor Projection

By Frank H. Madison

OCULISTS are advertising "Good Eyesight—Good Movies." How recently was it that the only oculists who broke into print were those who declared the moving picture was blinding the nation!

A prominent New York firm of oculists and optometrists are emphasizing the delights of watching the screen's most famous comedian as one of the reasons why people should see if their eyes need attention.

"If your eyes become tired from constant focusing on the screen," says this firm's advertising, "or if you are inclined to have a headache after an evening at the theatre, it is a fair indication that you need glasses."

There is little doubt that in days gone by a great many persons discovered when they went to a picture show their eyes could hurt them.

Then the pictures could rightly be blamed, since projection "'n everything" was at a low standard. But now, if you go to a legitimate moving picture show and your eyes hurt you, it is better to worry about them and not about the projection.

The Eye at Fault, Not the Pictures.

In fact, George T. Hills, of Youngstown, Ohio, writing in the Optical Journal and Review of Optometry says: "With the picture shows at the standard that they are kept in most places, the care in seating, mechanism, screen and films and the science of photography in its present state, we find the eye more often at fault than the pictures."

Furthermore he says that if a picture under favorable conditions has caused "annoyance, fatigue or pain, the show has called attention to pre-existing ocular defects that have heretofore passed unnoticed." And he adds that the majority who complain of discomfort really have defective vision of which they had been unaware.

Evil in "Gripping" Pictures.

If all patrons had been in consultation with this eye specialist, exhibitors might lose business by advertising pictures as "gripping"; for he points out that focusing the eyes sharply is tiring to them. Such focusing is occasioned by viewing pictures in which interest is intense.

In discussing the effect of moving pictures on the eyes he shows that the physical, mental or nervous make-up of the person may cause a condition that will interfere with the enjoyment of a show but may be only a sign that the individual should consult an oculist or optometrist.

Comfort a Big Factor.

Among the conditions which would contribute to eye annoyance are several that could be remedied by the manager—and these conditions are seldom found in the progressive house. Comfort is a big factor—comfort as provided by proper seating which allows the spectator to relax and by ventilation that permits normal breathing and keeps the blood circulating normally. The illumination too is important—poorly placed wall or ceiling lights may contribute no little discomfort.

With the present standard of projection and films, the average theatre has few things to guard against. Poor projection machinery or scratched films are cited as really injurious. If the spectator has any defect of vision the flickering film is declared to be "distinctly harmful." And such a film is also pronounced annoying to persons with normal eyes. The proper recommendation in this case is that the individual hunt up a better picture show.

Thirty Films a Week Uninjurious.

If patrons worry as to whether seeing the new bill every night is going to result disastrously to their eyesight, exhibitors might quote this optical authority to the effect that if their vision is normal they can easily see thirty reels a week and be free of all fear of injury to eyesight.

Inasmuch as there has been in the past much publicity in regard to the injurious effect of moving pictures upon the vision, men in the picture world will welcome the counsel of Mr. Hills to his fellows that they perform a splendid duty in helping patrons to have better vision both in and out of the theatre. And they will further welcome his summary statement that "there is no report of specific harm and but few complaints of slight inconvenience from viewing motion pictures."

Huffman, Overlooker, Is Now Showing 'Em Sundays

SIDNEY A. HUFFMAN, exhibitor, used to be a Manhattanite, but he must have followed the trail of the Catskill aqueduct up to Saugerties, N. Y. Saugerties has a population of 4,000, and it overlooks the Hudson. It also overlooks Esopus Creek, from whose headwaters comes the aqua pura which Greater New York now quaffs in more abundance than ever.

But Sidney A. Huffman overlooks nothing. Looking over the matter of Sunday opening, however, Sidney A. found that the board of directors for Saugerties township was split three "for" and three "against" after the bill had gone through Albany.

So when the three "against" said: "We'll put it to a vote," Mr. Huffman, overlooking nothing, said "We Will." The polls were opened for a special election one balmy summer evening from 4 until 7, and during those 180 minutes 1,127 citizens of Saugerties, imbued with the principle of life, liberty, and the pursuit of the movies, walked into the booths and registered their right of suffrage.

Said rights, being duly and lawfully counted, showed a win by four votes for Sunday pictures. Whereupon the township board, acting like a typical Congress, flopped over, and voted against the Sabbath proposition four to two.

But Sidney A. Huffman overlooks nothing. So he didn't overlook the fact that the people of Saugerties had, by the great American ballot, registered the fact that they wanted Sunday motion pictures.

Result: Saugerties is having its motion pictures every Sunday. Mr. Huffman is not an overlooker.

ARIDITY HELPS NORTHWEST THEATRES

Twin City Exhibitors Report That Closing of Drinkeries by National Law Increases Receipts

PROHIBITION is playing into the hands of the moving picture game in the Northwest. Slowly but surely since July 1, when John Barleycorn passed out, larger audiences passed into the moving picture theatres of Minneapolis and St. Paul, exhibitors say.

But what perhaps is the most significant development of all is the passing of the father of moving picture theatres, the five cent house. Four of these theatres are out of existence as "nickelodeons," their admission price advancing to 10 cents when the larger audiences made such a step possible. Taxes and the higher cost of films in these days, of course, had something to do with the advance of price, but back of it all was prohibition.

One Nickel House Remains.

The theatres which made this change and assured the use of better pictures in the future were the Cyril, Mazda, Gem and National. Their action left only one Minneapolis house continuing the 5 cent admission charge—the Bijou Theatre.

The four theatres which have taken a step to elevate the photoplay to a higher and more dignified plane are all located in or near what is known as the Gateway district, which in days gone by abounded with saloons. It is in the Gateway district that thousands of transient laborers, harvest hands and lumberjacks congregate before "shipping out" from the Northwest's great labor market.

Soft Drinks Not Popular.

These sons of toil are adjusting themselves to the new order of life. The soft drink parlors into which many of the saloons have been converted do not seem to hold any spell over them. The atmosphere of the saloon, with its customary bar, shining footrail, polished glasses and mirrors, remains, but the harvest hand or lumberjack cannot stand more than one or two glasses of pop or buttermilk, and soon seeks new diversion. He is turning to the movies and finding it, according to the exhibitors.

Movies Are Prosperous.

The weather has been excessively hot this summer, hotter in fact than it has been in years, and consequently there has not been a great rush to the theatres since July 1, but there has been a steady, gradual increase.

All houses report a far greater business in July to date than during the same month a year ago. The coming of peace followed by the clamping of the dry lid has been responsible, they say; the real test of the effect of prohibition will come in the fall, and all predict the greatest film season ever recorded in history.

Edwards Is Optimistic.

"There has certainly been a change for the better since July 1," said H. M. Edwards, proprietor of the Gem. "There has not been a great rush, but business has picked up. I have noticed that there have been more men than usual at the showings. The raising of the price to 10 cents has not been followed by a falling off in business, which has increased, and I look for a boom season in the fall. The men who formerly spent most of their time in the saloon will now come to the movies."

Increased Prices Work Well.

"Prohibition is the greatest thing that ever could have happened to the moving picture game," said Frank Smoleski, proprietor of the Mazda. "We have raised our admission price and the audiences are larger than they were in June, despite the heat. We could not hope to have a better patronage in such weather as we have been experiencing. I have noticed an increase in the numbers of men attending the shows. It has not been a great increase, but just the same it's an increase in the face of higher prices.

"Our following consists mostly of persons of modest means, but, with the increased cost of films and taxes, we could not continue doing business on a five cent basis. Working people are making better pay now than ever before and are saving more as a result of prohibition."

Aridity Increases Business.

"I have noticed that business has become better since the town went dry," said A. H. Janson, proprietor of the New Crystal. "More workingmen are bringing their families to the theatre. I don't know, but I suppose the reason is that many of them no longer have the saloons in which to spend their time. Business is bound to be better and I predict that the fall will be a recordbreaker."

More Family Items.

Harry Billings, general manager of Ruben & Finkelstein's twenty-one moving picture houses, reports a perceptible increase in the size of audiences since July 1. "There isn't any question but that prohibition is sending more people to our theatres," he said. "Since the first of the month banks report a big increase in savings deposits. Father is paying more attention to the family than to the bartender now. He takes out the missus and the kiddies to see a good wholesome moving picture show."

Good Summer Audiences.

Billy B. Watson, manager of the V. B. Valleau's Idle Hour and Broadway theatres at Albert Lea, Minn., is another who waxes optimistic over the first evidences of the effect of prohibition on moving pictures.

"I have been noticing these summertime audiences growing gradually in size," he said. "They are not enormous; that would be unnatural in this weather. But they are unquestionably growing. It means simply that a considerable proportion of the population is adjusting itself to a new condition and is finding in the movies what it could never find in the saloon."

Nazimova Performs Decorative Rabbit Dance Before Decorative Setting in "The Brat"

NAZIMOVA'S talents as a dancer have opportunity for display in "The Brat," her own and Charles Bryant's adaptation of Maude Fulton's stage success, in which the Russian star is presented by Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger, is announced for release September 1 and will be distributed exclusively by Metro.

"The rabbit dance" is the terpsichorean number performed by Nazimova. It is described as more fantastic and fascinating than the sword dance, or "dance of death," that Nazimova did as the Bedouin girl Hassouna, in Henry Kistemaecker's drama, "Eye for Eye."

Herbert Blache, director, spent several days filming Nazimova's rabbit dance, which the star performed on the stage of the "Nazimova Theatre"—a complete theatre erected on the light stage at the Nazimova studios in Hollywood, and so named in recognition of the star, who assisted M. P. Staulcup in its design and decorative scheme.

For the rabbit dance Nazimova was clad in an ingenious rabbit costume of gray plush, with a Baby Bunting hood, huge ears and bristling feelers or whiskers. She tripped the number to the strains of "Anitra's Dance," from the "Per Gynt" suite by Grieg, with Dvorak's "Humoresque" serving as a brief introduction.

Other scenes show debutantes, dressed in inconsequential costumes of classic gossamer, doing a "Greek" dance in the approved manner. Many scenes "behind the scenes" were taken, for much clever action transpiring in the wings and the dressing rooms of the chorus girls was interpolated by June Mathis in her scenarization of the comedy drama.

Other days were devoted to the chorus rehearsal, during which "the brat's" experiences as a "pony" are disclosed. For these scenes a troupe of professionals were engaged. A feature of this part of the production is the solid glass runway, constructed in the theatre aisle. Fifty Klieg arcs, used from below, lighted up this runway.

Famous Players Announce Two More September Releases Ready for Inspection and Booking

TWO more productions are announced by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as ready for inspection at the various branch exchanges preliminary to release in September under the selective booking plan. They are Billie Burke in "The Misleading Widow" and Vivian Martin in "The Third Kiss." Both these pictures have been shown at the private projection room at the home office at 485 Fifth avenue, New York, and were enthusiastically received by the executives of the corporation and the members of the exploitation department who saw them.

"The Misleading Widow" marks the return of Billie Burke to the screen after a period of several months, and is the first production made since the arrangement with Flo Ziegfeld was consummated whereby Miss Burke, under a new contract, will continue as a Famous Players-Lasky star. It is an adaptation of the play, "Billeted," by F. Tennyson-Jesse and H. M. Harwood.

Is Not a Military Subject.

Although the word "Billeted" is a military term, it must not be inferred, Famous Players-Lasky states, that the picture or the play from which it is adapted is a war or military subject. The fact is, it is pointed out, there is not a particle of war or even military atmosphere in the entire story. That is, if an exception be made of the army uniforms which two of the leading characters wear. It is a farce comedy, pure and simple, with all the scenes laid in and about a little home in a New England village. The new title, "The Misleading Widow," it is said, fits the story perfectly.

The picture was directed by John S. Robertson and Frances Marion wrote the scenario.

Miss Burke's leading man is James L. Crane. Others prominent in the cast are Frank Mills, Madeline Clare, Fred Hearn, Mrs. Priestly Morrison and Frederic Esmelton.

Vivian Martin in "Third Kiss."

"The Third Kiss," Vivian Martin's contribution to the list of September Paramount-Artcraft releases, is, in the consensus of the Famous Players-Lasky executives, the best picture which Miss Martin has ever done.

In the past Miss Martin's work has been largely confined to the sweet and dainty type of picture pretty and sentimental, but possessing but little drama. In "The Third Kiss," it is stated, the best qualities of her previous pictures that served to gain her her present position in the world of film favorites has been retained, but added to them is a vein of absorbing drama—drama sufficient in its strength to hold the spectator every foot of the way.

The story, by Heliadore Tenno, takes the eternal triangle and squares it with still another—a fourth character.

The possibilities of the situations have been fully realized under the careful handling of Edith M. Kennedy, the scenarist, and Robert G. Vignola, the director. Harrison Ford and Robert Ellis have two of the principal supporting roles.

Exhibitors Appoint Heads for Tax Repeal Campaign

THE suggestion of the committee on legislation and tax of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., that exhibitors in each state get together at special meetings and conventions to consider the tax repeal campaign is meeting with immediate response.

A special meeting of the Exhibitors' League of Maryland was held on July 22 at Baltimore, when the repeal campaign plans for that state were outlined to the exhibitors by Thomas D. Goldberg, state director of the campaign in Maryland.

The Virginia exhibitors will convene at Ocean View, Va., on August 13-14 and one of the principal objects in calling it is to take up the tax fight. State Director Jake Wells of Richmond, Va., has invited delegations from Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and North Carolina to attend for general discussion.

Theodore L. Hays, who made a determined and successful fight in Minnesota for the exhibitors in the music tax matter, has accepted the state directorship for that State. He considers this campaign will bring exhibitors closer together than ever.

The Governor of New Hampshire, John H. Bartlett, of Portsmouth, N. H., has been appointed a district leader under State Director Charles E. Bean, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New Hampshire.

Harry Crandall, of Washington, D. C., accepted the directorship for his district.

"Mystery of '13'" Press Book To Be Ready Soon

LOUIS BURSTON, producer of "The Myster of '13," who sponsored the unique thirteen page insert in the Moving Picture World to announce that new Francis Ford serial, has strong ideas on the subject of advertising. He contends that the idea of a thirteen page insert, which was made practical only by the use of a blank page, showed the exhibitor by the force of example how by sticking to one main theme, that of "thirteen," a powerful advertisement could be created although there was but little reading matter for the size of the insert. "Thirteen," is the keynote of the serial, and on nearly every page of the announcement it was driven home not once, but several times.

In the forthcoming campaign book, which Mr. Burston has titled "The Exhibitor's Book" these facts are clearly brought out, so that the exhibitor will find not only stills and a story, but also helpful ways to advertise the serial after it is booked.

The atmosphere of the picture is vividly presented; the stock and episode paper is faithfully presented in miniature color reproductions; the ready-prepared advertisements and publicity matter for newspapers is included; various clever publicity stunts are described; slogans for program and other advertisements are provided, and the various advertising props are shown both by printed word and illustration.

Fred Stone Will Be Guest at Wyoming Frontier Day

FRED STONE, stage and screen luminary, left Los Angeles Friday morning to participate in the great annual Frontier Day celebrations at Cheyenne, Wyo., as a guest, with the best of the Western riders and ropers.

He will not leave his work, but will take it along. Having just completed "Billy Jim," his first photoplay as an independent producer, Mr. Stone will immediately begin his second into which he has interpolated scenes which are to be "shot" during the various competitive events at Cheyenne next week. He expects to enter the roping and broncho-busting championship events.

Accompanying Mr. Stone will be a company of twenty-five, including Manager Andrew Callaghan, Director Frank Borzage, Josie Sedgwick and Vola Dale, the two feminine members of the Stone company, and a number of expert horsemen.

The company will be quartered at Fort D. A. Russell, near which the ranch scenes of the picture will be made.

SEYMOUR HAS WHOLE TOWN TO HIMSELF

His Company Buys the Only Other Theatre in Saranac Lake—Relies on Moving Picture World

WAY up in the Adirondack Mountains, at Saranac Lake, N. Y., Dave Seymour is piloting the operation of the Pontiac Theatre, a handsome $99,000 picture theatre with a seating capacity of 800. He calls it "The House Beautiful" and has trademarked this title, but the theatre is business-like as well as pretty. Seymour is now the vice-president and a director of the operating company in succession to the late L. Bernstein. This company has taken over a lease of the only other theatre in the town, the Colonial Theatre, and has closed it entirely, the intention being to have the Pontiac as the only picture theatre in town.

Books on Open Market.

Manager Seymour books on the open market and refuses to sign continuous contracts as he wants to pick every picture that he presents.

"Of course, I do not get a chance to see all my pictures before I show them," he says, "but I get a good idea of the worth of a picture after I read Moving Picture World and other papers. I rely upon Moving Picture World to tell me what's what about a release and I do not go very far astray."

Keeps Close Watch on Receipts.

Seymour points out that he knows exactly how much he can pay for a picture and he keeps within the limit. He keeps close watch on his receipts and expenditures and his little note book shows exactly how each star will draw patronage. He also keeps an eye on the thermometer in the theatre and he is continually drawing attention to the comfort in which patrons can watch a performance. One of his slogans is: "The air is cool and sweet; there's a mushroom under your seat."

Changes Program Daily.

The policy of the theatre is to change programs daily and there is a continuous flow of reels to Saranac Lake for presentation at the Pontiac. Saranac Lake has a great floating population, but there are generally about 5,000 persons in and around the town, including tourists, as prospective patrons. Many of these are aristocratic visitors and Seymour caters to the best patronage by refusing to screen so-called problem features.

W. M. Gladish, Canadian representative of Moving Picture World, recently spent a brief vacation at Saranac Lake and hobnobbed with Seymour to exchange ideas.

Movie Personages Speak at Spokane Commercial Lunch

THE presence of Frank Keenan, picture actor, Olive Ann Alcorn, who is seen in the latest Chaplin release, Fred C. Quimby, director of exchanges for Pathe Exchange, Ellis Perlee, advance man for the Ellison White Chautauqua company, and Clarke Walker, gave a movie atmosphere to the noon luncheon of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce today.

Miss Alcorn, who is also the representative of a film location company, enthusiastically praised the possibilities of Spokane and the Northwest as a location for filming productions.

"Los Angeles was made by the pictures and there is no reason why Spokane shouldn't be," said Miss Alcorn. "It may be that I am a little prejudiced in the matter because my home is near here in St. Maries, Idaho, but nevertheless it is my opinion that nowhere else in the world are there locations better suited to the needs of the picture business."

Mr. Keenan deviated radically from the usual line of film star talks and epigrams on life in general, and discussed the capital and labor situation.

"If I could convey to you the seriousness of the condition and make you see as I do that an honest, uncamouflaged team work between capital and labor is the solution to the biggest problem that confronts us today, my reputation as a film star might go hang. A partnership of democracy, not of autocracy and patronization, must obtain before the friction that is hitting at the roots of all things American is eliminated."

In an interview Mr. Keenan said:

"Next year I intend to make a tour of the country, speaking not in picture theatres, but in the largest halls, giving all ideas of the screen as an art and as an industry."

Triangle to Film Sir Henry Irving's Success, "The Lyons Mail," Starring H. B. Irving

AMONG the important features to be presented by Triangle in the near future is one which promises to be a valuable addition to the list of successful stage dramas recorded by the camera. It is an elaborately staged production of the drama "The Lyons Mail," made doubly famous as Sir Henry Irving's favorite vehicle and played by him with big success on Broadway.

Few dramas of recognized greatness present the picture producer with such opportunities for thrilling situations and big spectacular scenes as this classic melodrama. Opening with a sensational robbery of the mails followed by a foul murder, the story suddenly develops an unusually absorbing plot by fixing the crimes upon a man of excellent repute who bears an uncanny likeness to the criminal.

A series of interesting incidents before and after the robbery prove beyond a doubt to the police and even to the innocent man's proud old father that he is guilty. The two characters constituting the dual role played by the star are so widely removed in reputation, character and environment and yet resemble each other so perfectly in face and figure that suspense is maintained throughout the five reels.

The clever twist to the plot which frees the hero and seals the doom of the rogue is said to be so much more effective when told by the camera than in the more limited sphere of stage craft that the drama ends with even more of a punch than was possible in its original form.

H. B. Irving appears in the dual role on the screen where by means of double-exposure photography his character drawings show to advantage.

Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa Is Newest of Universal Stars

TSURU AOKI (Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa) it is announced by Carl Laemmle, Universal's president, has signed a long term contract to appear in Universal productions.

In all probability her first production will be "The Breath of the Gods," written by Sydney McCall (Mar McNeal). She has written many books and articles on China and Japan.

Mrs. Hayakawa, who has played opposite her husband in several Japanese productions, was born in Tokio, Japan. She was educated in a convent in the United States. The diminutive actress has been with the Lasky company, Lasky-Paramount, Essanay and more recently with the Haworth Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Laemmle announced that the best of plays would be used for Mrs. Hayakawa's productions. A number of them will have Japanese atmosphere, and possibly some American themes will be selected.

Editors See "The Volcano."

At the invitation of Augustus Thomas, the author, an audience of thirty or more editors of the leading Jewish daily newspapers and periodicals in New York saw his latest Four Star screen drama, "The Volcano," starring Leah Baird, in a private projection room in New York just prior to the shipment of prints to the Hodkinson managers throughout America.

The film is a drama of radicalism in America. It was produced by Harry Raver under the direction of George Irving.

Lardner, Reeve and Grey Collaborate in New Series of Comedy-Travel Pictures

WHAT they claim to be one of the most original series of comedies they have produced in a long time will be distributed next season by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. This series, it was announced this week by Nathan H. Friend, head of the educational department of Famous Players will be called "So This Is America!" and will be the combined work of Ring W. Lardner, humorist; Arthur B. Reeve, author of the Craig Kennedy stories, and John W. Grey, screen writer and producer.

The pictures, one of which already has been completed, will be one-reel subjects and will be distributed on a one-a-month basis beginning September 1. They will be a series of comedy travel subjects in which a company of well known actors will be seen in comedies staged in various parts of the country. The first of the pictures, which has as its theme the adventures of a returned soldier, has Denver as its locale, and other subjects in the series will have other cities and well known places as background.

Jack Gardner to Play Lead.

Jack Gardner, stage and screen star, will play the lead. Arvid E. Gillstrom will direct. Mr. Gillstrom has been identified with the comedy end of the film profession for year; he directed Jane and Katherine Lee in a number of their comedies.

Ring Lardner will write the sub-titles. Mr. Lardner today ranks as one of the leading American humorists. This is the first time he has ever done anything for the screen.

Arthur B. Reeve, as the creator of Craig Kennedy, is best known as a writer of detective stories; but the facility which enables him to concoct the most intricate detective plots has enabled him to devise comedy situations.

In the writing of the scenarios, Mr. Reeve will collaborate with John W. Gray, who has been associated with Mr. Reeve for some time in the writing of photoplays. Mr. Grey collaborated with Mr. Reeve on the Houdini picture, "The Grim Game," which has just been completed at the Famous Players studio in Hollywood.

"Pass Good Word Along" Is Joe's Policy with World

NINE years in the exhibiting business have served to whet Joe Steed's appreciation of good reading matter. And when Joe finds a good thing he likes to pass it on. He is keeping, of course, his three good theatres in Birmingham, Ala.

But every week when Joe is through reading the Moving Picture World from cover to cover he takes it over to the Public Library and puts it on the magazine table. He has been doing so for years.

The magazine table would be lonesome without it. Readers would miss it. And Joe would consider himself a thief for robbing someone of substantial information if he didn't pass on the World to the library each week.

Brilliant Russian Star Commences Work on Play Derived from Wylie's "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya"

NAZIMOVA has started work before the camera in "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya," a screen version of the novel by I. A. R. Wylie. This Nazimova production will follow "The Brat" in the release schedule of Metro Pictures Corporation, exclusive distributors of the brilliant Russian's pictures.

Charles Bryant adapted this picture, and also wrote the scenario. In the capacity of players, Mr. Bryant assumes the leading male role opposite the star—that of Major Tristram. Mr. Bryant is a versatile Englishman, and as Tristram, a British major stationed in India, he has a role that should suit him well.

After selection with a view to obtaining the precise types depicted in Miss Wylie's novel, Maxwell Karger, Nazimova's director general, announces that the supporting cast for the production, in addition to Mr. Bryant includes Charles W. French, as Colonel Boucicault; Margaret McWade as Mrs. Boucicault; Herbert Prior as Barclay; Millie Davenport as Mrs. Smithers and Bhowan Singh as Ayeshi. Herbert Blache is directing.

The author of the novel is at present in the Pacific coast and has availed herself of Nazimova's personal invitation to be present at the studios during the making of the production. The star eagerly welcomed Miss Wylie's suggestions and her minute knowledge of India, the scene of the story.

Incorporations at Albany Showed Decrease Last Week

Albany, July 21

THE last few days have brought a let-up in the number of concerns which have been incorporating in New York State week after week in unusually large numbers. In fact only four concerns were incorporated during the past six days, the number including the Truart Pictures, at $36,000, and naming among its incorporators Benjamin Altman, Stanislaus Dyktor and Charles Entmacher; the Distributors' Films Syndicate, which incorporated at $50,000, and naming Bernard H. Mills, Jacob Berkowitz and Benjamin Milberg as its head. The Step-In was incorporated at $50,000 by Edwin E. Kohn, Lloyd V. Koontz and Anton Scibitz, for the purpose of entering the motion picture field. The Al St. John Comedies, incorporating at $35,000, filed its papers with Secretary of State Hugo the past week, the incorporators being Abel C. Thomas, A. M. Jacobs and Mary E. Smith.

Lewis and De Carlton Meet After Long Span of Years

THIRTY years back Samuel Lewis was manager of the Opera House, Claremont, N. H. There came to town the Great Repertoire Company and George De Carlton, popular New England actor.

Years passed on. Mr. Lewis became president of a bank in that city but still continued his interest in the theatre. He opened the Empire Theatre. Moving pictures came and one day in a Fox Production Mr. Lewis recognized Mr. De Carlton on the screen.

Still more years passed on. George De Carlton, representing the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation in New Hampshire and Vermont, called to see the manager of the Empire Theatre.

Mr. Lewis and Mr. De Carlton recognized each other immediately, although they had not met in the long span of years.

J. B. Reilly Is Appointed Realart's Cleveland Head

FOR the management of its Cleveland exchange, Realart Pictures Corporation has appointed J. B. Reilly. The appointment followed the visit to Cleveland of J. B. Woody, Realart's general sales manager.

Mr. Reilly is an "old timer" in film circles, having been identified with the profession in various capacities almost since its infancy. His first photoplay connection was with O. T. Crawford as a salesman out of the New Orleans branch. This was in 1908. Following that engagement, Mr. Reilly became manager of the Colonial Theatre at Joliet, Ill., one of fourteen houses owned by the Colonial Theatre Company. From the management of one theatre he was promoted to the post of general manager.

J. B. Reilly
Managing Cleveland exchange for Realart.

After the long experience gained from managing theatres for others, Mr. Reilly bought and managed two theatres, the Electric at Manteno, Ill., and the Princess at Kankakee, Ill. He retained his two houses until he was offered the position of sales manager of the Chicago branch of Triangle. He stayed with Triangle a year, after which he joined Metro. After a period with the Chicago forces of Metro, Mr. Reilly was sent to Cleveland as sales manager of that branch which position he has held until his present appointment.

Offices have been in operation since July 14 in the Bangor Building where Mr. Reilly can be found at Suite 200.

Schwartz Building Fifth Motion Picture Theatre

WITH his fourth picture theatre nearing completion in Brooklyn A. H. Schwartz is just starting a fifth structure in Jamaica, in the adjoining borough of Queens. In Flatbush his present activities are centered in completing a 2,500 seat house at Flatbush and Rogers avenue and Farragut road, in a section thickly peopled with amusement seekers. Since 1910 Mr. Schwartz has been supplying Brooklyn showgoers with picture theatres of modern construction and equipment.

The Linden, in Flatbush, was his first venture. In 1915, after overcoming many difficulties the Rialto Theatre was completed. Then came his greatest venture in constructing the Brevoort, at Bedford avenue and Fulton street. This theatre is considered the leading picture-palace of the borough across the East River, and its success has encouraged Mr. Schwartz to build more and larger houses in and around Broklyn.

Marcus Loew will further extend his already large holdings in the theatrical field of Greater New York through purchase of the Brevoort Theatre, a house devoted exclusively to pictures, at Bedford avenue and Brevoort place, Brooklyn. While the deal has not been definitely consummated, it is understood that the negotiations between Mr. Loew and the corporation, headed by A. A. Schwartz, which built the Brevoort and opened it last May, have led to a definite agreement.

The Brevoort is valued at half a million dollars, and it is understood that Mr. Loew will pay something in the neighborhood of that figure for the property. It is one of the finest of Brooklyn's picture theatres.

Upon the arrival of the negative in New York and its delivery to the Hodkinson organization the laboratory work will be done slowly and with the greatest care and technical supervision to attain printing perfection and proper tinting. "Desert Gold" will be shipped to the Hodkinson branches and ordered subject to pre-release when everyone connected with its final preparation is convinced that no further quality can be imparted to it.

The picture was directed by T. Hayes Hunter.

NO ARBITRATION IN CINCINNATI ROW

Striking Exchange Employes Request Mayor's Intervention, But Managers Deny Need for It

ALTHOUGH the Film Exchange Employes' Union has been formally organized under a charter from the American Federation of Labor and union officials still are hopeful of a settlement with the managers which will allow them to claim a victory, there are indications that the trouble will soon be settled along the lines of those existing before the strike. It is stated that tentative offers have been made privately by some of the former employes of the exchanges looking to their reinstatement under the conditions that obtained previous to the formation of the union, and the managers believe it is only a question of a few days before a stampede in this direction is evidenced. Just what their attitude will be under such circumstances, the managers refuse to state, although they point to the fact that at no time during the trouble have they been more than slightly inconvenienced, and that their programs invariably have been filled on schedule time.

Refuse to Deal with Union.

They refuse to have any dealings with the union, and from all appearances, will maintain that stand to the end. During the past week the Motion Picture Operators' Union held a meeting and voted to give their support to the Film Exchange Employes' Union. Edward Kirsch, business agent of the operators' union, said:

"We decided not to run any of the films for the exchanges whose employes are locked out, except those films which were contracted for by managers of theatres before the lockout."

A Passing of the Buck.

While on the face of this declaration it appears to be a whole-hearted support for the union, it is pointed out that this is merely a camouflaged attempt to "pass the buck," and affords the operators a chance to get out from under in case of trouble. The only real action taken by the operators' union was the calling out of one operator who was employed by one of the exchanges to run films for the private view of theatre managers. It is also stated that the members of the Film Employes' Union received their first weekly benefit of $12 during the past week, but no information is available as to where this money came from.

Mayor Will Not Arbitrate.

During the week, the union officials are said to have asked the intervention of the mayor, or at least his services in an effort to adjust the difficulty. His honor, however, refused to have anything to do with the matter unless the request for intervention comes from both sides, a contingency which is said to be very remote. The exchange managers called upon the mayor and informed him that they had nothing to arbitrate, and that from their point of view everything was very satisfactory.

The business agent of the operators' union informed the Exhibitors' League that he had been instructed to inform them that the members of the union would not repair any films that were sent out by the exchanges whose employes are out.

Personnel of Union.

The new union was organized as the Film Exchange Employes Local Union No. 16,701, and the following officers were elected: President, J. W. Patton; vice-president, Edward Altvater; corresponding secretary, C. Pendergast; financial secretary, Miss Beatrice Fox; guide, John Mess; guardian, W. C. Irwin; trustees, Miss N. Malloy, M. King and Miss A. Kettel. It is said that this union will be represented by five delegates in the Central Labor Council. The next move in the matter at present is shrouded in mystery. As one of the exchange managers put it, "They now have their union, but no jobs."

Famous Players-Lasky Plans Production and Distribution of Non-Theatrical Pictures

CLOSELY following the news that the Methodist Episcopal Church, at its centenary convention in Columbus, Ohio, had accepted the motion picture as a means of education, it was announced that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has completed comprehensive plans for the production and distribution of non-theatrical pictures to schools, colleges, churches, social centers and other public institutions.

The picture that will be distributed to these institutions, it is stated, will not be of the type that would put schools, social centers and such non-theatrical enterprises in competition with motion picture exhibitors. On the contrary these pictures will be strictly non-theatrical and educational and are being distributed to satisfy the growing demand for the exhibition of films of this nature to people who are interested in educational and civic affairs.

Niles in Charge of Department.

The department for the production and distribution of such pictures is in charge of David K. Niles, widely known for his work in the educational film field. For the last three years Mr. Niles has been motion picture director for the Milwaukee schools, and during the war had charge of the motion picture section of the Department of Labor. He also was chairman of the joint conference of motion picture activities of the United States Government and Allied organizations.

Assisting Mr. Niles are Carl H. Carsons, a well-known educator, who will edit the picture from the pedagogical standpoint; Edward Lipkin, formerly director of social and civic activities in several big New York charitable institutions, who will supervise the pictures from the standpoint of non-educational public institutions; Miss Rose Tapley, who will carry on motion picture work before women's clubs and kindred organizations, and Miss Margaret Brotherton.

Will Not Replace Text-Books.

The educational subjects in the non-theatrical group are being arranged along courses which have been formulated by some of the foremost educational authorities in the country. Although the pictures will be strictly educational, they will in no way, it is stated, replace the text-books, but will supplement the present teaching facilities.

The non-theatrical subjects will be handled from the regular twenty-eight Famous Players-Lasky exchanges in this country, special representatives being assigned to each exchange to care for their distribution to public institutions.

Furio Company purchased the rights on the first Hayakawa series for Argentine, Paraguay, Uraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador; Martin Johnson's "Cannibals of the South Seas" were taken over for the United Kingdom by the Ideal Film Renting Corporation, Ltd., and have created a sensation wherever shown in the Kingdom; Gihl and Company have the pictures for Scandinavia, while the British and Continental Trading Company have bought them for France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Germany and German Austria. This firm now controls "The Turn in the Road," "Better Times" and "Just Squaw" for the same territory.

In addition to the Robertson-Cole star series, Chester Beecroft has contracted for twenty-six Capital Comedies, for Continental Europe and Scandinavia exclusive of France and Switzerland, on behalf of the Scandinavian Film Agency. He has also taken over the entire second series of Jester comedies for Scandinavia and fifty-two Billie Rhodes comedies for Scandinavia and Continental Europe.

Rights to Features.

Louis Zimmerman has been accorded the United Kingdom and Continental rights to the Jesters. Forty-two Klever Comedies were sold to the Charles Urban Trading Company of London, for the United Kingdom, Continental Europe and Egypt.

All the Kerrigan features have been disposed of in the United Kingdom, Scandinavia, Canada, India, Burma, Ceylon, Egypt, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, Dutch East Indies, Argentine, Paraguay and Uraguay, and Continental Europe.

In addition to these sales, the Robertson-Cole foreign department, acting as American representative of Sir William Jury, purchased for his organization the United Kingdom rights to the Maurice Tourneur productions, "Woman" and "The White Heather."

Earl Metcalfe to Play Leading Role in "Battler"

BY reason of a severe attack of rheumatism, Montagu Love has been compelled to retire from the cast of "The Battler," a World Picture, after a number of scenes had been made. In view of the fact that this picture had been announced for release, the World Film Corporation found it necessary to secure the services of an artist to replace Mr. Love for this production. In looking over the list of actors whose work in the past has been of a character to warrant the intrusting of a role requiring unusual ability choice fell on Earl Metcalfe.

Mr. Metcalfe, or rather Lieutenant Metcalfe, was lately honorably discharged from the United States Army after having been cited by General Pershing. He began his stage career in stock and after having played seven years with a leading stock organization of this country was prominent in a number of New York Broadway productions. His screen career began with Lubin, with whom he served four years. He has not alone played in important screen productions, but has also been a director and lately produced a number of James Montgomery Flagg Comedies. His last appearance was in support of June Elvidge in "Coax Me."

Blackton Completes Cast for "Dawn."

With the signing of George Bunny, brother of the late comedian, John Bunny, George Pauncefort and Robert Milasch, J. Stuart Blackton has completed the roster of players who will interpret on the screen "Dawn," a novel from the pen of Eleanor H. Porter.

Bill Desmond Says: "Sherman Was Right."

Jackson Writes Serial for Wharton.

Fred Jackson, author of a score of Broadway successes, has come back to the fold of writers for the cinema. He is the author of "The Crooked Dagger," the serial to be produced by Theodore Wharton for the Pathe program, and in which Jack Norworth, the star of vaudeville and musical comedy stage, plays the leading role.

"The Crooked Dagger" is based on one of Mr. Jackson's magazine stories entitled "The Money Makers." It concerns the activities of his best known character, Lloyd Demarest, a notorious gentleman crook who, after proving too much for the authorities, turns his talents over to the pursuit of a gang and becomes an equally successful detective.

Universal Introduces Two New Western Actors

WITH the selection of four spectacular two-reel Western melodramas to be made at Universal City, Universal introduces Jack Perrin and Josephine Hill, two new Western stars.

The titles of the subjects are "Fighting Blood," "The Four-Bit Man," "At the Point of a Gun" and "The Jack of Hearts."

Reeves Eason is directing the productions.

Jack Perrin is particularly well known for his work with Olive Thomas in "Toton the Apache," as well as having been featured in a number of other Triangle special productions.

Josephine Hill broke into pictures from the vaudeville stage. Her first big picture was with Edgar Lewis in "The Love and the Law." She came to Universal to do comedies with Neal Burns, but showed such dramatic ability that she was chosen for the feminine star of two-reel Westerns.

In the first two of the Perrin-Hill series of Westerns, Laura Trainor, the girl who rode on horseback from Missoula, Mont., to Hollywood, Cal., is seen in support of Perrin and Miss Hill.

Gertrude Atherton Leaves to Assist with Production

GERTRUDE ATHERTON will leave New York July 24 for Culver City, Cal. in behalf of her first picture for Eminent Authors, based on her novel of Montana life entitled "Perch of the Devil." She will go to the Goldwyn studios to go over the scenario now in preparation by the regular staff under J. G. Hawks, chief scenario editor at Culver City, and will have an author's part in the selecting of the cast and the preparation of the production.

A second Gertrude Atherton picture will also be brought to the fore during her stay there, but the novelist is obliged to return to New York in August to fullfil various engagements with current periodicals. After that she plans to return for the second production, and then launch the writing of a new novel, a subject of the present day in America that is very much on her mind. This novel will also be adapted for Eminent Authors pictures.

O'Brien Assembling "Impossible Catherine."

The release date for "Impossible Catherine," the second Virginia Pearson production, will be announced in the near future. John J. O'Brien, director general of the company, under whose personal supervision the production was made, is directing the cutting and assembling of the picture at the Yonkers Studio.

Telegrams received in New York from William A. Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation of America bring the news that he is preparing to leave for New York to deliver to the Hodkinson organization the first Billie Rhodes Hodkinson production, "The Blue Bonnet," which has been in production since early in the spring.

"When Bear Cat Went Dry" Is to Be Released by World Film as a Special Feature Picture

THE World Film Corporation plucked one of the big plums of the season when it signed contracts on Saturday, July 19, for the distribution of the picturization of Charles Neville Buck's novel, "When Bear Cat Went Dry." The announcement that the World obtained the picture should be welcome news to exhibitors throughout the country who have followed the numerous stories concerning the production and completion of the picture. They can now make their plans for the showing of this interesting picture novelty in their houses.

If there be any value in advertising and publicity, then "When Bear Cat Went Dry" should have an audience waiting for it.

It will be released in the near future and a complete line of printing will be provided from twenty-four sheet stands to one sheets, including all the other accessories necessary to help the exhibitor to cash in.

"When Bear Cat Went Dry" was just off the presses when the picture rights were sold. As the work progressed in filming the novel, it was apparent that a bigger and more interesting story would be shown on the screen than appeared on the printed pages of the book. Ollie L. Sellers, the director, fully appreciating the picture worth of the scenario, gave the best that was in him to make a record for his efforts. It was also to the credit of the producers that a sense of discernment was shown in the selection of the cast to secure the proper types to give the greatest strength in presenting a virile story full of drama. The back ground of the Cumberland mountains as a setting makes the picture teem with constant action and punches.

It is the intention of World Pictures in putting this feature out as a special to give preference in the showing to those who first manifest interest. There are to be no strings tied to the release nor will it be necessary to take on other pictures or to assume other contracts to get a chance to cash in on "When Bear Cat Went Dry."

New Building Will Have Theatre with Roof Garden

MINNEAPOLIS will soon see the opening of a $400,000 building which will include a motion picture theatre with a roof garden.

Work on the project was begun recently with the breaking of ground at Fourteenth street and Nicollet avenue. The building is to be known as the Winter Garden, and will be built for use throughout the year.

The sky will serve as a canopy for the roof garden in the summer, while a glass inclosure will afford protection in the winter. The roof garden will be given over to dancing and cabaret performances.

The plans were made by Kees and Colburn, architects, and their acceptance has been announced by I. H. Ruben, of the Twin City Amusement Trust Estate, of which Finkelstein and Ruben, owners of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit franchise for Minnesota, are manager.

The building, which is to be 100 by 170 feet and four stories high, will be ready for business by December 15, according to Mr. Ruben. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,800, and a big pipe organ, an orchestra and the most up-to-date ventilation system.

Prizma Pictures Contracted for by Saenger Circuit

MANY thousands of dollars were involved in a contract that was signed this week between World Pictures and the Saenger Amusement Corporation. The contract had to do with the presentation at the theatres in the Saenger Amusement circuit for the coming year of Prizma Natural Color Pictures. This is one of the most important deals so far put through by World Pictures for Prizma. The Saenger Amusement Company, through Mr. Richards, its general manager, gave Prizma natural color pictures a thorough trial covering several months at the Strand Theatre, New Orleans.

Mr. Richards was convinced when he first saw Prizma pictures that they had a value over black and white, but he wanted to be convinced that the public appreciated the superiority before taking on the pictures for the several houses of the circuit. So pronounced was the success in New Orleans evidenced by the box office statements with Prizma Pictures featured that the Saenger Amusement Company will now show them in Pensacola, Meriden, Shreveport, Baton Rouge and other prominent cities in which this company maintains and operates theatres.

Lillian Walker Joins Ranks of Pathe Serial Players

LILLIAN WALKER, one of the best known women stars in pictures, last week became one of the long list of players who will appear in serials under the Pathe banner when she affixed her signature to a contract with H. H. Grossman, president of the Grossman Pictures, Inc.

For some time, Miss Walker has headed her own company, the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation, but following the general trend toward serials, determined to enter this field which is practically new to her. The serial in which she will be starred by Mr. Grossman and which will be released through Pathe Exchange, Inc., is entitled "One Million Dollars Reward." The authors are Arthur B. Reeve and John W. Gray.

The Grossman serial will be made at the Wharton studio at Ithaca, N. Y. Miss Walker's supporting cast is headed by Coit Albertson, Barney Randall, Joe Marba, Charles Middleton and Leo Spellman. George Lessey will direct the serial.

Manager Julius Johnson of Minneapolis New Garrick Proves Himself an Exploiter

RUBEN & FINKELSTEIN, foremost among showmen of the Northwest, have further cause to congratulate themselves on their choice of Julius Johnson, formerly musical director of the New Garrick, Minneapolis, as managing director of the biggest house in their chain of theatres in the Twin Cities.

"Sahara," J. Parker Reed, Jr.'s, production, starring Louise Glaum and distributed by W. W. Hodkinson, is responsible for the firm's newest vote of confidence in the enterprising young manager of the New Garrick. The film, which broke all Ruben & Finkelstein summer attendance records, and incidentally equalled many of their biggest winter weeks' engagements, was a success mainly because of the exploitation campaign Mr. Johnson had mapped out weeks in advance and which he put into operation ten days before presentation.

Advance Advertising Used.

In his campaign Mr. Johnson deviated somewhat from the usual Ruben & Finkelstein custom of bending all energy to the exploitation of the current production. Grasping the possibilities for window display advertising, the manager lined up scores of prominent Hennepin avenue merchants for an unprecedented window display splurge a week in advance of the opening. On one street alone three big department stores featured displays.

A Candy Store Display.

Nor were Mr. Johnson's window display operations confined to department stores alone. Perhaps the finest and most attractive display of the lot was the one in a thirty-foot window of the largest downtown confectionery store in Minneapolis. There the manager arranged a big desert scene, its chief ingredients being white bon-bons and chocolates.

Campaign Continued.

Not only on the day preceding the opening, but on every day during the run, advertising was continued, even though the New Garrick was crowded to the doors at every performance. Each advertisement was individual. It isn't the Johnson way to run big advertising spreads day after day with only a line or two to differentiate one from the other. Every New Garrick announcement had something new to tell.

Friends in the Press.

Mr. Johnson secured a ream of "readers" from newspapers, many of them running half a column. Ever since Mr. Johnson assumed the management of the New Garrick he has made it a point to keep in close touch with his newspaper friends.

Another feature of the New Garrick campaign was a specially devised herald which was mailed to 10,000 residents, 7,000 names being added to the regular mailing list.

Mr. Johnson composed a special orchestration for the production and another for the prelude he staged, consisting of a beautiful setting of Cairo, the feature of which was a skilful simulation of the Palace of the Dawn, one of the most imposing scenes in the picture.

Diaz Callahan.
His first name is good for Texas. Going to Dallas as Realart's exchange manager.

H. B. Warner Again Changes Color in Picture of Chinese Tongs Entitled "The Pagan God"

SURPASSING the standard set by "The Man Who Turned White," his first Robertson-Cole Superior Picture, H. B. Warner has achieved more laurels in "The Pagan God," second of his series of productions made under the direction of Jesse D. Hampton and distributed by Exhibitors' Mutual.

It is a story of China, its intrigue and its subtleness, and shows Warner in the role of an American diplomatic agent, who to foil an outbreak against Christians, is compelled to risk his life among the Chinese plotters.

The production is spectacular. From the evening garb of an American diplomatic representative to the flowing gowns of a Chinaman bent on taking the life of every white person in China, is the change made by Warner in this production.

Warner is supported by a cast which includes Carmen Phillips, Ed Piel, Jack Abbe, Carl Stockdale and Margurite De La Motte, the young Los Angeles girl who has proved one of the finds of the year in California film circles.

The production was accomplished on a large scale. Entire Chinese streets had to be erected on the Hampton lot for the production. Hundreds of Chinamen were engaged to appear in the big scenes.

The story was written by F. McGrew Willis, who made an exhaustive study of Chinese conditions before beginning the piece. It was whipped into form for screen production by George Elwood Jenks.

Callahan Is Selected as Realart's Dallas Manager

DIAZ CALLAHAN, who has been connected with the sales organization of several of the larger film companies, has been appointed manager of the Dallas exchange of Realart Pictures Corporation. The appointment followed the recent visit to Cleveland of J. S. Woody, general sales manager of Realart.

Mr. Callahan first entered film circles as a sales representative of the Chattanooga office of the old Famous Players organization (before the consolidation with Lasky). Following this engagement, Mr. Callahan joined the Atlanta sales staff of the General Film Company. He then joined Paramount and was sent to Dallas as salesman, after which he joined the sales forces of Metro, covering the same territory as with Paramount.

By this time, Mr. Callahan's sales record attracted the attention of Triangle officials. He was first placed in charge of the New Orleans branch and was later transferred to Dallas, where he was manager for two years. He has been away from Dallas for only the past five months, having been temporarily managing the Denver and Cleveland exchanges in that time.

Upon his arrival in Dallas, Mr. Callahan will establish offices in the film district. Until a permanent location is found, he will make the Jefferson Hotel there his temporary headquarters.

They will arrive in New York on Sunday, August 3, and starting Monday morning, August 4, they will be the guests of the Pathe home office on a continuous round of gaiety which has been planned to include every point of joy on Broadway.

BULLS-EYE DENIES WEST HAS WON SUIT

Amplifying Statement Says Issue Will Be Decided at Trial—No Witnesses Called at Chicago Hearing

THE Bulls-Eye Film Corporation, which is engaged in a suit in the Chicago Federal Courts against Billy West for the alleged breaking of a contract, has come forward with a statement to supplement those which appeared in recent issues of the Moving Picture World.

According to the Bulls-Eye statement, Billy West, who is known outside professional circles as Roy B. Weissberg, has not won the suit as some of his assertions have led the public to believe.

While it is true, Bulls-Eye says, that the injunction for which they asked, restraining West from appearing in pictures for the Emerald Motion Picture Company, was denied in the hearing at Chicago, this was by no means the final settlement of the case.

Trial Will Settle Issue.

The hearing at which the injunction was refused was only a preliminary one, based upon affidavits only, the company declares. No witnesses were called, and Judge Alschuler, in his opinion said, "In a case of this nature, where the grant of the temporary injunction would, during the time for which it is effective, be the practical enforcement of a contract for personal service, greater circumspection should be exercised in its allowance than where rights concerning physical property are alone involved."

The actual trial, at which witnesses will be called, and which will be held probably in the near future, will determine the issue finally, according to Bulls-Eye officials.

On this point of the question the Bulls-Eye statement says: "An announcement that Billy West's services had been awarded to the Emerald Motion Picture Company is erroneous, as this will be determined at the Court at the trial to be held.

Only Temporary Injunction Asked.

"The injunction that was denied was only a temporary injunction, and not a final injunction. Billy West had advertised that he is the 'magnet of the screen' and 'America's own comedian'; and yet, under oath, and in an affadavit sworn to and presented to the Court in this hearing, he swore as follows:

"'This defendant, further answering, expressly denies that he has certain, unique and peculiar characteristics as comedian, and denies that these peculiarities are well known to the motion picture trade, and to the people who attend motion picture theatres; and denies further, that a great many people go to motion pictures when they see a Billy West comedy advertised; and answering further, denies that his humor appeals to a great many audiences.'"

Mr. West had filled three months of a two-year contract with Bulls-Eye, making four pictures for them during that time. When West went with the Emerald Motion Picture Company, suit was brought by Bulls-Eye to prevent him from appearing in any other pictures. He had made three for Emerald.

Eugene Zukor Named Assistant to President of Famous Players

AFTER a schooling of every branch of the motion picture industry, extending over a period of more than three years, Eugene Zukor, son of Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been formally appointed as assistant to the president of the company. The younger Mr. Zukor will take up his duties immediately with headquarters at the home office of the corporation, 485 Fifth avenue, New York.

With the exception of last year, when Mr. Zukor was in the navy, he has been engaged in the different departments of the corporation since the Famous Players Film Company first occupied the studio in West Fifty-sixth street. At that time, having completed his schooling, he entered the publicity department and through this connection made a wide acquaintance, not only among artists, authors and directors engaged in producing the pictures, but also in outside fields among newspaper men, trade paper editors and national magazine editors.

Subsequently Mr. Zukor handled a division of the home office sales department under Al Lichtman, general manager, and learned at first hand the intricacies of distribution. He has been employed for the past year at the New York exchange under A. G. Whyte, district manager, and his work there has run the gamut of exchange activities, from shipping room to salesmen.

Eugene Zukor.

The expansion of the company's activities has brought to the president of the corporation an unprecedented amount of detail of work, making it essential that he select an assistant in his executive office. To the many friends of Eugene Zukor in the company it was a source of gratification that he should be chosen by his father for this important new work. Eugene Zukor is a member of the Board of Directors of the Corporation.

Washington Race Riots Injure Movie Business

THE motion picture business of Washington, D. C., has been hurt fully sixty per cent., according to Harry M. Crandall, because of the continued race riots. For a number of days recently there have been serious clashes between the white and black population of Washington. These fights are the outgrowth of criminal assaults upon white women made by negroes, these now numbering about a dozen. At night, swarms of soldiers, sailors and marines set forth to right these wrongs by mob violence.

The situation has become so serious that the exhibitors are considering urging the authorities to greater activities. It really looked at one time as though the police are powerless to maintain order. One of the troubles, it is declared, is that the police have been paying too much attention to illicit liquor vending and have slackened up on their other work.

As conditions stand at this time, the women patrons of the theatres who go to the neighborhood houses will not venture out alone at night; the men will not leave the women alone at home, and even couples hesitate coming downtown to the theatres when there is a possibility of becoming caught in the center of some free-for-all.

On Wednesday, July 23, the War Department assigned two thousand troops to aid the police authorities in establishing order, with the result that the day and night passed without special incident. It is believed the trouble is over.

Warners to Make Comedies for Famous Players-Lasky

Al St. John, one of the original Keystone comedians and a familiar coworker with Fatty Arbuckle, will be the featured player. The company will be known as the Al St. John Comedies, Inc., with J. L. Warner as its president and general manager in charge of production.

The first release will be ready for presentation to Famous Players-Lasky early in September.

Freshen for Fall.

EVEN though your house may seem to need no renovation, make some move in this direction the latter part of August, that you may be able to announce the fact, or hold back until later in the season for a fall reopening. You can at least touch up the bare spots with paint, recoat the screen, unless you have a patent surface, and give a more than usual cleaning. If you can get your opposition to work with you, it would be a good scheme to shut down for a week while these renovations are going on and leave the town without amusement for seven days. They will appreciate it the more when you reopen. But do not close if it is too easy to get over to a large place to see the shows. If you are in a small town close to a larger place, you cannot afford to let your patrons get into the habit of running into town for the big show. But in any event, make some few repairs and be ready to start the fall season with a clean house.

From Dallas.

Here is an odd layout from Dallas, Texas, by Mr. Renaud, of the Washington. It is a three nines which offers some good suggestions, the best being the two panels "For the He's—" and "For the She's—." These boxes give the masculine and feminine angles to the story. The panels just below the cut are not so satisfactory. We think that it would have looked better without the panels. It makes an effort to preserve the contrast of sex by showing that the author, director and star are women under the line "All women," to balance which they give "HE saved the honor of the wife he had never married." This hardly carries out the idea, but it works fairly well. It is most always a mistake to give a light panel too close to a heavy design. These two boxes detract from the portrait, where they would not have fought it had there merely been type. In the same way they would have gained display for the underline had that been left unboxed. The long panel fights the two smaller ones. Dropping the rule would have increased the prominence.

Type and Hand Lettering.

The Dayton Theatre took a full page for The Unpardonable Sin, but they did not get as much from the full space as they did from this four tens. This is far and away ahead of their old hand-lettered stuff, and it rules the page. The title is strong enough to catch and hold the attention, and the brief description and run record do the rest. For a time the Dayton used all hand drawn displays, but this straight type gives them greater prominence at smaller cost. Only a three sevens was used for Nazimova on the opening day, the rest of the space going to the next attraction, but the form of the advertisement holds it well above the drawn display for the bathing girls, even with cuts of the girls used for attractors. At first glance, the Keith space seems to be a part of a cigarette advertisement above it. But we think that with that space at command we would have cut down the "next week" to get a larger line for Nazimova. That should have been a four or five line letter and this could have been done by cutting down the underline slightly, particularly where the underline has a cross page two just below it. The Red Lantern is worth all the booming that can be given it.

Sometimes it pays to take a full page just for the moral effect of size alone, but even where the size is all that is wanted it is a good plan to make the page work as Hard as possible, because you might be able to get an effect other than that of immensity. The Rex, Vancouver, took a full page and stuffed it full of cuts, writing captions more or less to suit. For selling talk it tells that this is the first picture made by Miss Pickford in her own studio, that it is the first made for the First National, that she paid $40,000 for the rights and that it was written by Jean Webster and run in the Ladies Home Journal. There is nothing about the success of the stage play and no real argument for the screen version other than three lines of eight point just below the portrait cut. With so much to be said about this production it seems a waste of space to use mostly cuts. Taking a third of the space for talk would have brought the money back. Better work was done in some of the smaller displays, including a full length two columns, but one of these two fulls would have been better had it been run across the page instead of up and down, since the display was set to run up the column. This device is supposed to make everyone look at it because of the oddity of the placement, but it does not always work out that way. A special performance was given for school children the Saturday before the opening. This sent the kiddies out to tell everyone else how good the show was. This is a device worth much more than several full pages. Teachers were the guest of the management, but the kiddies paid their ten-cent pieces, and most of them came back and brought their parents the following week.

A Full Page Which Tells Little.

A Triple.

The Regent, Washington and Wenona, Bay City, Mich., run in a single panel, getting plenty of display for all three bills through a good choice of types. The space below the triple is given to the coming of "Daddy Long Legs" and is oddly handled in that successive displays assign the picture to two of the houses. In the sample shown it is announced that the picture is being shown in Detroit and will soon be seen at the Washington. The previous day the same space announced the coming of the picture to the Regent. The space is very well set except that in the Wenona space a better display could have been gained through the use of roman for the small lines instead of boldface. Heavy lettering is not necessary for the lesser facts and too much black hurts the main display.

A Four Sevens and a Halfs with Three Theatres and an Underline.

Claims a Record.

J. W. Sayre, of the Jensen and Von Herberg houses in Seattle, sends in a double page for "The Unpardonable Sin," and adds that he thinks that 363 inches for a single advertisement is a record. We do not know to the contrary. Double page displays have not been infrequent where the space was taken by outside firms hooking up to a play or a title, but this is all given the house display, and we do not recall a similar space taken by a theatre. The reduction might be that of a double column space for all appearance counts, for the double page was simply a good small advertisement set on a larger scale. Most good page and half page displays would look as well in smaller spaces, for the additional space does not mean carrying several thousand extra words of argument. The use of the larger space is merely to get the moral effect which comes from bigness. You cannot get the same impression from a half page that you can from a double page, but you can tell just as much in the smaller space. This seems to hold the record, and we think it will be some time before another comes with a three-page display. This does not, of course, count the special sections sometimes given the opening of a new house, where six or eight pages may be practically all one advertisement.

Improved.

better. It costs a little more to rout the cuts, but it is worth the difference in price to escape the formal oblong cuts recently offered here as horrible examples.

Pittsburgh Advertising.

Samuel Sivitz, of the Rowland and Clark theatres, Pittsburgh, sends in some samples and adds:

Pittsburgh boasts of five Sunday and four daily newspapers. The rates are extremely high, particularly for that number of publications. But it is the old story. Your newspapers bring you box-office results, and that is the main objective. The Regent and Liberty ads are two columns, although occasionally I use a four column spread. My main desire is to get sharp contrast and inject an element of the novelty, in which I believe I have succeeded when one considers my limitations as to space.

An interesting incident occurred recently which worked directly to the benefit of local newspapers. Our interests took over the Cameraphone Theatre, probably the first motion picture theatre ever erected in Pittsburgh. Houses of even greater seating capacity in the immediate vicinity, which is in the downtown district, seldom, if ever, advertised in newspapers. Immediately after taking charge I threw a fright into the others by coming out with an illustrated piece of copy, four columns by eight inches, which appeared in three morning and four afternoon papers. The following Sunday each and every one of these exhibitors who previously refrained from advertising, appeared on the photoplay page with real sized ads. I felt pleased at the result, as it gives the motion picture pages the desired dress and is bound to attract more readers to this department.

This is good work, for the more advertising the papers receive the more kindly they will feel toward the picture shows, while on the other hand the newspaper advertising, in competition with the drama houses, serves to convey the impression of solidity and dignity. The old store show neither looked nor acted like a regular theatre, and it suffered a bad reputation. The modern houses not only take larger displays, but they make better use of their space. The Pittsburgh papers take half tones nicely; at least according to the samples Mr. Sivitz sends in, and this helps a lot. It gives good displays. We do not like the hand lettering used in practically all of the cuts, but the artist seems to understand handling masses of color, and if he could be persuaded to letter more clearly the result would be better yet. The first pair of displays gives 105 lines, double column, to the Regent and a double hundred to the Liberty. The latter offers the feature for a full week, but the Regent doubles the bill, the lower half giving the attraction for the latter half. The break is indicated by the circular pimple just to the east of the Elsie, while the last three days are lettered in the curve of the J. in Kerrigan's name. Each line is about eight points high. The cut of Miss Ferguson has been very nicely treated with a solid black to bring up the outline and yet not so much black as to smear the design, with a line design on the opposite side so that the black has the greater value, and the eye turns instinctively to this. A black mass all around the panel would not have worked as well, but by working off to the line effect the value of the mass is retained. The Liberty display is not as well done and the hand lettered panel is too solid. A smaller letter and more space between the lines would have been more effective. For that matter a lighter line for the lettering would have been an improvement. Apparently the circuit has no set spaces, for the second cut shows 110 lines for the Liberty and only 85 for the Regent, but a portion of the Liberty space is taken for advance announcement of Miss Pickford. Here the cuts do not come out as well as in the first examples, but they merely serve as attractors and do well enough. There seems to be little value in the selling talk for "Boots," which merely reads, "came through the censor's hands unscathed," but possibly this is offered as a rarity, for those Pennsylvania censors keep terribly busy. The portions of the bill are better marked off in these spaces, particularly the Liberty, which offers a three-story advertisement which goes together very nicely.

Cross Page.

The Washington, Detroit, took large spaces for "Auction of Souls," and, of course, cleaned up. This example shows a cross page eight with the title on one side and the selling talk on the other. It takes up the ten dollars a seat angle, but it tells all about the story, for this is something out of the ordinary and needs to be more fully explained than the usual five-reel love story. The display is well balanced, in spite of the fact that the heavy title is not balanced by black type on the other side, but such a balancing is not necessary to get a good display. A better effect is gained from the 14 point on the left because it tells something, and the essence of good advertising is first of all to tell what you have to sell and to tell it interestingly. This is particularly true of special features.

A Cross Page Eight for "Auction of Souls."

One Way—

J. L. Johnston, of Minneapolis, in sending in some displays pencils on this, "One way to get a double smash instead of running ads half-size separately." It's one way, but we do not think it is a very good way. The current attraction gets the black ink, but the type display is so much clearer that the reader who does not know that "The New Moon" is at the Lyric will be apt to overlook the "now showing" at the bottom and regard the cut as ornamental, reading the more clearly displayed type display to the right, where the immediate undeline is made a tag to the Sunday show. We do not particularly like this layout.

More Than Half.

Annabel Davidson, of the City, Rialto and Strand, Brockton, Mass., sends in a page from the local paper in which her attractions take 94 out of about 140 column inches, which is going strong, but she is still taking any cut they send her instead of holding out for what will work or else going to type. Most of the Paramount news cuts work well in any form, but they are muddy here, which suggests that the paper is hopeless for anything but line work. Line work is not as pretty, but as between a pretty half-tone that looks like a blot of ink and a line-cut that you can see, we would prefer the line. She is writing much better copy for her spaces and getting better layouts. One space advertises the coming of a guessing contest which seems to be the familiar back view of prominent citizens. It is still as good as ever, though seldom used.

Lovett Problems.

This is about the best of the recent specimens sent in by J. Fred Lovett, of the Royal, Providence, R. I. Mr. Lovett gets so much design in most of his three fives, that there is little room for the announcement of his bill in proper sized letters. But Mr. Lovett sticks to his designs and seems to feel that he gets sufficient display from 12 to 18 point main titles. This first cut gives him a 12 point value for his lines, though it is probably a 14 point. We think we would give

Mary Pickford more prominence than this, but Mr. Lovett has practically a neighborhood to himself and he probably trusts to his other work in lobby and boards to get the people coming, and uses the newspaper space merely for a memorandum. But if this is the case, we do not see why he needs the drawn design. The second cut shows a more characteristic display in the same measure. Here he gets a flat 12 point for his titles, but by using straight roman for his small lines he gets a better display than he used to gain. If you will look at the design twice you will see that the irregular white space is the outlined map of the United States and is used to advertise Daly in "My Own United States." Mr. Lovett shows improvement along the lines he follows, but we think that he will not achieve his best display until he takes a regular frame which allows a maximum of space for his program. Each display carries with it a two column cut and from a third to a quarter of a column of announcement, which is pretty generous treatment. As he goes on the Olneyville local page he has not other spaces to fight, and this also helps, but we think that Mr. Lovett's other activities do more to bring him business than his newspaper displays. These displays alone would sell few seats, but he makes his house known through other channels.

Pipers.

Dan Connors sends in a few more specimens of his own work for his house, the historic Piper's Opera House, Virginia City, Nev. He started to set his own displays when the labor shortage drew the printers to the large cities, and now he writes that the printer cannot suit him even when he lays the work out for him. He knows so exactly what he wants that he is not satisfied even with a reasonable adherence to his layouts. He wants just what he wants, and he stands at the case and gets it himself. We think that Dan is the only manager who is not also a newspaper owner, who sets his own type, and he writes that it is getting easier all the time. Not many men can stand at the case and realize their ideas in type, but it is a wonderful way where it can be done. Often the difference of a couple of points in the spacing will make a vast difference in the appearance of a job. And Dan is getting better all the time, not alone in typography, but in copy, as well. The first two examples are two sixes, but they would make just as good full pages in proportion. That on the left, for Nazimova, is the better of the two because it displays the star and play title to greater advantage. For The Midnight Patrol a bold letter would have been better were it available, but the office does not boast of a very great assortment of faces and some of it has been in the cases for half a century and more. The chief thing is that while the spaces are pretty well crowded, every line is easily read because the lines are kept open with lead. No solid type anywhere there, and as a result, you don't skip anything, because it looks so hard to read. This does not show as clearly in the reproduction, but you can get the idea if you put the magnifying glass on the cut. The second example is a scatter advertisement run in advance of the showing. He seems to be using a lot of these lately for the better-than-usual stuff. It all helps, and as a rule, two or three scatters of an inch and a half or two inches work better than a single display of four to six inches.

A Singe Column Scatter Ad for a Coming Attraction.

Who Has the Nerve?

We clip this from an advertisement of the Washington Theatre, in some unknown town:

NOTICE:—The First Man That Brings His Mother-in-Law to See This Picture —He and His Mother-in-Law Will Be Presented With a Season Pass.

They will have to raise the bid to get some men to take their mothers-in-law to the theatre, but it makes a lot of talk. The offer was made in connection with Bessie Barriscale in Josselyn's Wife, which shows a vamping step-mother-in-law. It probably made a lot of talk.

Suns for Sunnyside.

J. L. Johnston, of Minneapolis, sends in a clever campaign on Chaplin in Sunnyside. The first was a two sixes on Tuesday preceding the Sunday opening, showing a partly risen sun with merely "Coming Sunday, see it for text. The following day another double six showed the sun higher above the horizon and Thursday had a two tens. In the cut the lower text has been eliminated. Friday gave a three tens, the chief feature of which was a typewritten portrait of the star done by Mr. Johnston free hand on the machine from a photograph. This seems to be something really new—at least we cannot recall a similar cut. It is exceptionally well done and a novelty. It has not been touched up, but where black masses were needed several letters were struck, one over the other. For the rest the X, I, O and V were the letters chiefly used. It caused more comment than any other attractor could have done. The same campaign was used for the Strand, in Minneapolis, and the New Garrick, St. Paul. In addition to the newspaper display each house used twenty 24-sheet stand, 500 window cards for street cars, 500 tack cards and 500 snipes. But that typewritten portrait easily stands the star of the stunts.

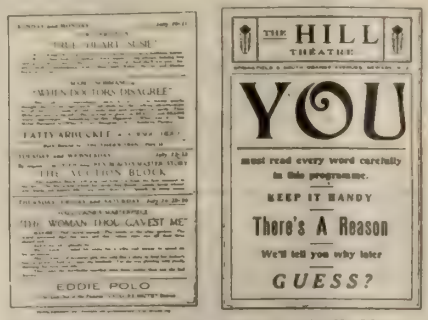
Try This.

Johnny Mack, of the Hill Theatre, Newark, recently used a striking program front. The program is a 6 by 9 and the "you" is set in a ten-line letter, probably poster type. It's worth holding on to until you can get out a similar design some time when you want to be certain your program will be read. It is not such a bad idea to use in a program some time. A huge "you" will gain attention almost anywhere. In some sections it might work better in an advertisement than on a program, for where there is only a high class trade it is better to keep the program more polite and get sensational in the advertising.



Front and Back Pages of the Hill, Newark, N. J.

From Mr. Franklin.

Harold B. Franklin, of the Hippodrome, Buffalo, is using small spaces for the summer, as are most of the Buffalo houses. His daily space is an inch and a half, single, and his Sunday announcement runs in accordance with the value of his attraction. For Daddy Long Legs, for example, he took 3¼ inches across five columns, instead of his usual three or four. After the Sunday showing he dropped to the usual space with a chance of copy daily. We show four of the six week-day runs. The Monday was a double column reproduction of the check for the play. The others were 21 lines each. He writes that in spite of the heat the engagement was a cleanup and they give six shows a day at the Hippodrome, too.

Four of Harold B. Franklin's Week-Day Advertisements for the Summer Season.

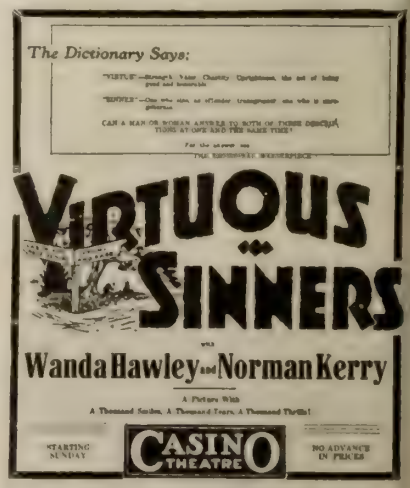
Good Work.

This four tens was the main attack of the Casino, Des Moines, Ia., and cleaned up with it. It's a nice looking display and the idea of giving the dictionary rendition of "virtue" and "sinner" and letting the reader draw his own conclusions is a good one. The curiosity aroused is worth more than the recital of the story would have been. The open composition helps much, but the advertisement would have been improved by breaking that line naming the stars. There is too much straight across the space. Instead of setting the names in a four-line letter, a two-line letter in two lines with white space in between would have been just as prominent and would have looked much better. Following this Sunday splash Mr. Helmts used two fives for the three days of the run and had twenty-five 24-sheet stands posted for ten days in advance. Although it rained right through the engagement the house records were broken.



A Four Tens from Des Moines.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Rewinding 1,000 Feet of Film

Raymond W. Fisher, Fairbury, Neb., orders lens charts and sends in data as follows:

"On page 1048, May 17 issue, under "Slow Acting Rewinder," you ask how fast does a reel have to revolve to rewind 1,000 feet of film in six minutes. My own rewinder, described to you some time ago, revolves the reel one time a second. At this rate it requires eleven minutes to rewind 1,000 feet of film. There are practically 660 layers of film on a 1.5 or 2" hub reel. With a 2,000 foot reel it requires seventeen minutes to rewind, supposing reel hub to be the same diameter as before.

"I think friend Leny can figure out from this about how fast to run his rewinder. Only an operator would punch ninety-seven stars in a film. No projectionist would be guilty of such an outrage. Any man committing such a crime should, if found out, have his license revoked and have his union card taken up also if he be a union man.

"Another thing which has bothered me for a long time is: Why cannot you have our department printed on alternate pages with advertisements pertaining to projection? This would not only help projectionists by grouping the advertisements we are interested in, but would enable us to clip out some articles we desire to preserve. As it now is, nine times in ten, when one desires to clip an article for preservation one finds another equally desirable article directly opposite it on other side of the page. To keep the whole paper is difficult, as they take up lots of room; also are too heavy to carry around if one moves from one city to another. Then, too, when one desires to look up some particular article it requires considerable work to search through perhaps dozens of papers. From many viewpoints the clipping and scrapbooking of such articles as seem desirable to preserve is best, and with pages of projection apparatus advertising alternating with department text we could do it handily. When one has five years Moving Picture Worlds saved, the manager begins to threaten dire things if they be not removed from his domain, so get busy wtih this suggestion before I am snatched bald headed! Glad to know of your recovery. Yours for advancement."

Asks for Suggestions.

What do the rest of you chaps think about the advertising suggestions? If enough favor, maybe it could be done. I don't know. But if the suggestion of friend Fisher is sufficiently well indorsed —maybe. Personally it rather appeals to me, but I am not the one who has the say in that sort of thing. As to the rewinder data we cordially think you. I am not so certain, however, that the ratio would be the same for 1,000 feet in six minutes.

Can anyone of you tell us just how the thing is figured, basing it on 660 layers of film to the thousand feet for a small-hub reel?

A Little Trouble

L. D. Lumpkin, Washington, Ga., says:

"Dear Brother Richardson: Just a little trouble for you. Have two Simplex projectors, Minusa screen, and two Ft. Wayne compensarcs running at 40 amperes. Use A. C. special carbons. Objective is 6 inch Gundlach. Distance of projection 72 feet. Use 6.5 and 7.5 condenser lenses. Distance crater to arc lens surface 2.75". From front condenser to aperture 13.5". From aperture to back surface of objective 3.25". Have tried two 6.5 and two 7.5 condenser lenses, but find the two 6.5 a little the best.

"Have tried spacing condenser lenses, moving lamphouse and everything I know, but find it imposible to get a clear picture —sharp definition. Lenses are clean and have level projection. Picture is what you may call fair. The manager is satisfied with it, but I am not. Have good fellow to work for. Will buy anything that will improve results on screen. Haven't a handbook, but intend ordering one soon."

Better Get the Handbook.

And now I'm going to roast you just a wee bit Brother Lumpkin. You say you have a good fellow to work for—one who will buy anything tending to improve results. Well, are you acting quite fair in failing to also invest in the knowledge necessary to the best results? Don't you think it would be only just right for you to have a text book on projection? Think it over, old man!

I believe your trouble is to be found in the fact that you have not sufficient distance between condenser and aperture. You should at once send $4.50 to the Moving Picture World for a handbook and lens chart, provided that if you have December 28, 1918, issue of the World you will find the lens tables therein. For 40 amperes A. C. you need either two 6.5 condenser lenses, spaced so their apexes are within 1-16" of each other, with 21" from center of condenser combination to film, or one 6.5 meniscus and one 7.5 biconvex, spaced wtih 24.25" from center of condenser combination to film.

If you canot get the required distance from condenser to film that is the fault of the projector itself—its construction. But before taking the matter up wth the manufacturer would suggest that you loosen the lamphouse and set it back to the required distance, blocking it temporarily in place for trial. If it develops that this clears up the trouble you are then in position to demand of the projector manufacturer that the fault be remedied. Kindly notify me as to results, if you will be so kind.

Increase of Amperage.

But there is a better, simpler solution, viz.: Increase of amperage. Forty amperes A. C. is, in my judgment, too low for good results. Personally I would not consider anything less than 60, and I am sure the improvement in results on the screen would more than justify the added expense by increased patronage at the box office. For 60 A. C. amperes you would need two 6.5 condensers, with 18.5" from center of condenser combination to film. Your compensarc will give 60 amperes. Suppose you try out the 60 stunt, with distances as above indicated. Maybe friend manager will aprove of it, and I think you can get pretty close to 18.5" from condenser to film with your machine. Please advise me as to results. But remember that in applying this your condenser lenses must be spaced as above indicated.

Important Notice

OWING to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Lens Charts for Framing.

The December 28 issue, containing the lens charts, was exhausted very quickly. The demand for lens charts was so great that we have had a limited number printed on heavy paper, size 11x17, for framing. Covers amperage 25 to 60 A. C. or D. C., and Plano-convex or meniscus bi-convex; also gives necessary projection lens diameter to avoid waste and distance of revolving shutter from aperture. Every progressive, up-to-date projectionist should have one. Price, 50 cents, postpaid, to any part of the world. Send U. S. 2-cent stamps or money order.

Intermittent Speed

"Think it about time the term 'intermittent speed' be better understood. Perusal of projection department of a certain trade journal of comparatively recent date prints the fact that there is considerable confusion in this regard. In the above publication we are told that a five to one movement means that the time required to change one picture for the next is just 1/5 as long as the time during which the picture is held motionless over the aperture. This is O. K. so far, and in my opinion describes a true five to one movement, but the writer continues as follows: 'It might also be explained in this way, by saying that with a five to one intermittent the film is moving one-fifth of the time and is stationary four-fifths of the time.'

It is readily seen that there is wide difference between the two statements. In the latter, the time required to change one picture for the next following is exactly one-fourth the time the picture is held motionless, because 1/5 is 1/4 of 4/5ths. The latter is what is usually considered as being a one to five movement, but is really a one to four movement. And anyhow, we think it about time to drop the ratio term as applied to the intermittent, along with the term 'operator,' adopting in its stead the number of degrees through which the cam pin revolves while engaged with the star."

I Fully Agree.

With which latter I fully agree. Griffith is right, because the 'one to five,' 'one to six,' etc., is ambiguous and easily misunderstood. But if we say the intermittent sprocket is stationary through 300 degrees, and moves through 60 degrees, we then know precisely what is meant, viz., that the picture is stationary over the aperture five periods to one of movement, which is a one to five movement. We believe a part of the confusion which undoubtedly does exist, came about through two wordings of what was supposed to be the same thing, viz.: One to Five, which is a true one to five movement, and one IN five, which is really a one to four.

What says the projectionist to brother Griffith's suggestion? Don't sit on your coat tails in silence until we make the change, and then set up a chorus squawk of objections! Let us hear from you NOW, or for ever and ever and ever hold your peace!

Can't Be Done

J. M. Devitt, Carlinville, Illinois, wants to know:

"Can the projection room be located to one side of center and a perfect picture be obtained? If it can be done, please tell me how to do it."

Can you bend the barrel of a rifle, shoot around a corner and hit what you aim at? One proposition is exactly as reasonable as the other. The instant you set your projector to one side of center of screen you set up side distortion and side keystone effect. See Figure 66 of handbook and last paragraph, page 154. The keystone effect may be corrected by filling in the aperture of the machine on one side, both top and bottom, and very carefully filing same until top and bottom of light on screen is parallel. For detailed method of doing this, see page 156 of handbook, copy of which you doubtless have. If not, then by all means get one at once. But the distortion cannot be remedied. If the projector sets to right of screen, then any given object on left side of screen will be larger than a similar object on the right of the screen, the amount of enlargement being in proportion to its distance from right side of screen, distance of machine from screen, size of picture and distance lens is out of center with screen. On a long throw, with a small picture, the machine being out of center somewhat would not be very noticeable, though the picture would not be "perfect." On a short throw, with a large picture, out of center shows very quickly, and is increasingly objectionable as throw becomes shorter or picture larger. You should have given me size of picture and distance lens to screen.

Union Projectionist

J. R. Perella, Bryan, Texas, orders a handbook and inquires:

"Please advise me as to whether all motion picture houses are forced to have union operators."

In the first place, officially, there is now no such term as "operator" as applies to motion pictures and projection, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers having officially, and by unanimous vote, declared "Projectionist" to be the correct term designating a man who projects motion pictures professionally.

Union Projectionist Not Always Required.

Replying to your question, no, only theatres in cities or towns where the union controls the situation are obliged to employ union projectionists. In most of the smaller towns and even in many small cities, the projectionists are either not organized at all, or are organized so loosely that the union really amounts to very little, insofar as compelling theatre managers and owners to respect their rights, pay decent wages and to employ union men exclusively is concerned.

Projectionist Strikes Gold Mine

A projectionist of Auckland, New Zealand, who does not want his name used, writes from the other side of the world, thusly:

"Dear Friend, for despite the lack of personal acquaintance I feel I may call you that, I have seen letters in the department from projectionists in Australia, but none from this city, so here goes. First I want to tell you of a gold mine I struck a year or so back. When taking over this job, the departing projectionist gave me a big collection of Worlds. Imagine my delight when I found the nuggets therein contained. The Projection and Advertising for Exhibitors I cut out. They have since been of great value. I was literally pitchforked into the business.

"An exhibitor friend came to me and said: 'There is a man here who wants some one to erect and run a country show. You're the one, so get busy'! And here is an exception to the rule: His fourteen year old boy was his operator, and believe me that little old man showed me enough so that I jumped in and took a chance. I made good first kick, and have gradually improved my position until I now hold a coveted Queen Street (our main thoroughfare) job. And I didn't get it by creating a reputation for shadows on the screen either! And that is enough about myself.

Twenty-six Theatres in City.

"In this city of 120,000 we have twenty-six theatres, city and suburban. Seven of them are on the main street. Most of the town houses are up-to-date structures, using first run, with good music. The seven down town houses run continuous, 11 a. m. to 10 p. m. Average program is one hour and fifty minutes. Projection is, on the whole, good. City current is 230 and 460 D. C. Motor generator sets, mostly English make, are used to supply current to arc. The old German made Erneman projector was much used here before the war, but latterly the Powers and Simplex have come into their own. Only one house has two projectors. People here do not mind waiting while we change reels.

"Just to show you how far away we are, Charlie Chaplin's 'A Dog's Life' and 'Tarzan of the Apes' have just been released (April 3. Ed.). In the matter of film service New Zeland is controlled from Australia. We have a sound union of operators. Musicians, front of house and stage hands, each have a separate organization, but a working agreement between the whole is being formulated. Our Arbitration Act compels each man, except if he is an owner, to become a member. Wages are fairly good, approximating $21 for continuous, $20 for night show and $15 for suburban. In common with other trades we intend applying for a new award, at increased rates and better working conditions.

Depended on United States for Supplies.

"During the past few years we have depended almost entirely upon the United States for supplies and film. I have never heard of anyone here using A. C. at the arc. Some houses have A. C. supply, but it is converted to D. C. Some of the trials and tribulations of the projectionists of your country are interesting. I wonder what our exchanges would say if we demanded film fit to run without inspection? But most of the programs go on circuit for lengthy periods.

"Every Maori village has its picture show. 'Jimmy the Usher' is with us here also, but in our case he spanks the cows (For goodness sake what's that?!?! Ed.) during daylight and after tea he tightens his take-up, tension shoes, etc., and with horny hands churns the butter—I mean film. Probably you know this is the land of the cow. Without her we would be millions poorer each year. (Oh, I see the point now! Ed.)

Enclose Suggestions.

"In the hope that it may benefit some of your boys I enclose a couple of suggestions. The first is an independent take-up device as installed on our own machines. Instead of driving take from machine an extra pulley or a motor belt to a countershaft, which in turn belts to takeup. For this is claimed a big saving in wear on projector, besides steadying the picture.

"Our machine has been running three and one-half years and is still good. The second is my method of scraping film for joining. I keep ends of my scissors sharp with a fine file. Straight edge gives a perfectly straight line. Haven't a handbook yet, but will have one soon. Is it necessary to add extra postage to foreign countries? Would that we had an understudy of yourself here."

Machine News Surprises.

An interesting letter truly. Was a bit surprised at the one machine news. Most likely your people do not mind waiting because they don't know the advantage of continuous projection. A stop between each reel of a feature breaks the thread of the story. Well, people, of course, don't much miss that which they know nothing of, but here we take pride in such careful framing and changeover from one machine to the other that the audience knows absolutely nothing of it. As I understand you the law compels every worker to be a member of his union. Is that correct? The employers would throw seven kinds of a fit if that were even proposed over here. Circuiting of films is practiced in a limited way in some rural sections here. It is very bad from every viewpoint.

Received No Complaints on Handbook.

As to the suggestions, they are passed along for the consideration of our projectionists. The separate takeup was used here in a limited way, some years ago, but its use has, so far as I know, been abandoned. You will find the handbook to be a good investment—or at least many thousands of users say it is. To date, of all the thousands sold there has not been, so far as we know, a single complaint. On the other hand we can show letters galore from handbook users declaring it to be worth to them many times its price. As to extra postage on the $4.00 includes postage.

To your union I take the liberty of extending, as Honorary Director General of the projectionists union of the Argentine Republic, South America, the hand of good fellowship on behalf of that excellent organization, and as a plain member of the projectionists' organization of the United States and Canada, I also take the liberty of extending, on behalf of that great body, best wishes and the handclasp of brotherhood.

A New English Carbon

Many of our readers will remember R. W. Kiewert, formerly connected with the Bio Company, which went out of business when the United States declared war on Germany. Well, Mr. Kiewert is again in the limelight by virtue of having formed the Carbon Imports Company, with home office in New York City. This organization handles an English made carbon bearing the trade name "Kinarko."

The Kinarko comes in five eighths, three quarters and seven eights inch cored twelve inches in length for positive. For negative Mr. Kiewert presents something, so far as this country is concerned at least, entirely new and untried. The negative is six inches long and comes in three diameters, viz.: five sixteenths, seven sixteenths and half inch to be used respectively with the above named sizes of positive.

The negative is copper coated on its outer diameter. This coating, Mr. Kiewert claims, causes no pitting of the condenser. This claim is, I believe, well founded. Mr. Kiewert also claims the coating to be equally effective with other metal coatings with which we are now familiar. This claim remains to be substantiated.

Peculiar Negative Carbon.

And now comes the peculiarity. In the negative is a core which is formed and then copper coated. It is then inserted in the carbon and baked in. Mr. Kiewert claims for this plan that it makes for steadiness of the arc without objectionable increase in the arc gas stream from the negative.

So far as we were able to determine from a careful examination of the carbons they are of fine grain and well baked. The positive core is remarkably small as compared with our domestic carbons.

Mr. Kiewert claims a long burning period for Kinarko. Loaded to normal capacity, which is set at 22 to 40 amperes for the five eighths, 42 to 60 for the three quarters, and 60 to 100 for the seven eighths sizes, positive, he claims a burning period of from four and one-half to five hours for the different sizes positive and from two and a quarter to two and one half for the negatives.

Following our usual custom in such matters we shall have Kinarko tested by projectionists in various parts of the country. Until reports from these tests are in, we can say no more. We shall ask the Vancouver, British Columbia, Denver, Colorado, Baltimore, Maryland, and the Duluth, Minnesota unions to make the tests, sending report to me and copy of it to the Carbon Imports Company, 113 West Forty-second street, New York.

Important.

In making these tests it is important that the projectionist use the proper carbon combination for his amperage; also that he make at least one full day run on them. Burning a single set is not sufficient.

Bull in a China Shop

The Canadian Moving Picture Digest projection department is publishing a bundle of questions on optics, with answers thereto, one a week. Projectionists will do well to watch them, as no avenue of knowledge should be overlooked. In his first announcement Mr. McMahon, editor, makes this statement, after commenting on relation of shutter blade width to speed of intermittent movement: "No doubt these things will seem strange to you, but they are true, as any thorough projectionist will admit, and if the projectionist understood more about these things it is safe to remark that the machine manufacturers would equip the mechanism with an elaborate optical system which would increase the efficiency of the projector system to at least double its present capacity, but they cannot do so because the average projectionist could not handle intelligently such an expensive (but in the long run cheaper) and delicate optical train, and it is simply a matter of building a machine that the average projectionist can handle."

Matter of Building Right Machine.

Some of Brother McMahon's statement might be open to serious question, but never did he say a truer word than "it is simply a matter of building a machine which the average projectionist can handle." That is precisely the situation. I have had that particular thing flung at me time and again in different forms by projector manufacturers. At present there is no such projector-optical system as friend McMahon speaks of, nor will there probably ever be. The situation does not, in my opinion, call for either a delicate or costly optical train, but it does call for deep study and the application of common sense. I think as good a condenser as we will ever care to use will not cost in excess of $5 a lens, and the objective ought never to go above $100 or at most $150. There is not and I think never will be anything very delicate about the projector optical train of the projector.

Hits Nail on Head.

The knowledge we need is how to work intelligently in fitting something pretty close to what we now have, with some change in the objective, to the local condition, and take it from me that calls for real knowledge, and involves many things. Of course if we want to consider the matter of intermittent speed as a part of the optical train, then possibilities of increase to a true six to one bring something which will be decidedly delicate to successfully handle. But while intermittent speed is intimately hooked up with the optics of the projector, and has a huge bearing thereon, still we would hardly exactly call it a part of the optical train. But anyhow friend McMahon hit a large nail squarely on the head in the matter of lack of skill, which discourages projector manufacturers from putting out equipment which they well know the average man cannot successfully handle.

Not long ago I jumped all over the general manager of a large manufacturer because they did not send out an adjustable shutter with their machine. Said he: "Yes, and have hell popping in two weeks, with complaints, kicks and howls enough to drive us crazy. Why, Richardson, some of the squareheads in projection rooms could no more adjust an adjustable shutter intelligently than they could put a mainspring in a watch. They haven't brains enough or don't use them. And when after their 'adjustment' was done and there was more flicker than picture our machine would get the blame. Give us knowledge and intelligence in all projection rooms as we now have it in a comparatively few and we'll send out an adjustable shutter so quick it will make your head swim!"

That isn't a verbatim quotation, but it is pretty close to it. And the man was RIGHT. And there you are. The whole industry is in appreciable measure held back through lack of expert knowledge in the projection rooms of this country, take them as a whole.

R. E. Brian, Pekin, Illinois, says:

"Am enclosing slip I sent to exchange manager with each shipment of films. Have no questions to ask, but enclose fifty cents for lens charts, just to be on the safe side. Have all three editions of handbook and have been a member of the projection department family, though a silent one, for five years. You may see by my letter head that my projection equipment is not half bad. Picture is 15 feet 8 inches, at 82 feet, using 40 Amperes D. C., and if I do say it, the screen result is good. Projection room is 12 feet by 12 feet, with 10 foot ceiling."

Letter Head Evidence Reflects Brains.

The report blank is excellent. Both it and the letter head evidence the fact that neighbor Brian is NOT paralyzed from his ears up, but is up to date and progressive. The blank reads as follows:

Takes Pride in His Work.

And you may take it from me that the man who does things this way takes pride in his work. He is one of those who, in days to come, will feel sorry for the man who has to work for the union minimum scale, because in the final settling process the exhibitor who has not learned the lesson of rewarding superior merit in the pay envelope, will automatically eliminate himself. Unions and union minimum scales will most likely always be necessary, but more and more the real projectionist will rise above the minimum scale, leaving its provisions for what it rightly is intended to take care of, viz.: the man of relatively small ability (Unions should change their attitude with regard to the scale and impress upon exhibitors the fact that it is not a "wage scale" per se), but a MINIMUM scale below which he must not go.

ZONING LAWS ARE CREATING TROUBLE

Erection of Large St. Louis Theatre May Be Prevented Unless an Amendment Is Adopted

UNLESS amendments to the zoning law in St. Louis are made, particularly in the clause providing for a rear yard space in all buildings, Director of Public Safety McKelvey announces he will have to refuse a permit for a $600,000 moving picture theatre, contemplated by the Missouri Theatre Company, at the southwest corner of Grand and Lucas avenues.

In the applications for the new building no provision was made for a rear yard space, which McKelvey says must be done to comply with the zoning ordinance.

McKelvey says that the rear yard space is required by the ordinance to provide light and air for all buildings. "It is a restriction on building in the city," McKelvey says, "and has forced me to refuse permit for $2,000,000 worth of buildings recently."

PICTURE MEN TAKE A PROMINENT PART

In the Picnic of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce and Land a Handsome Silver Trophy

AT THE picnic of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, held at Coney Island, July 16, moving picture men took a prominent part, and won for themselves many honors. The Associated Film Exchange Managers were awarded the prize offered by President E. C. Gibbs for the subsidiary organization having the largest average representation in the parade preceding the outing. The film men had an average of 98 per cent., and this week President Jack Stewart and Secretary C. V. Zimmerman are proudly displaying the beautiful silver loving cup awarded the organization.

The High Balls Got 'Em.

The versatility of the moving picture men in Cincinnati was exemplified last Sunday, when the managers and employes of the exchanges played a ball game at a local park. The managers played the salesmen, the latter winning by the score of 23 to 13. The managers claim as an alibi the fact that the opposing pitcher constantly served high balls, and that they have had little practice against that sort of delivery, since the first of July.

THEY SUGGEST A "HOSPITAL SUNDAY"

Montreal Exhibitors Want to Adopt Substitute for Present Civic Tax Upon Admission Tickets

EXHIBITORS of Montreal, Quebec, have proposed that the city institute a "Hospital Sunday" for the purpose of raising funds for the local hospitals and orphanages in place of continuing with the civic tax upon admission tickets to the theatres. The exhibitors have asked that all collections at local churches on the proposed Sunday be turned over to the hospital fund and that nurses be placed at the entrance to all theatres on the day to secure donations from all theatre patrons.

It is the opinion of the exhibitors that the local institutions would derive considerable revenue from this plan and the theatres would be relieved of one of many forms of taxation. The opinion is also expressed that the public would prefer such a plan and that it would overcome much inconvenience throughout the year now caused by the collection of a small tax on all tickets.

In connection with the suggestion, it is shown that Montreal exhibitors are subject to no less than eleven forms of taxation at the present time. They pay a property tax, business tax, vault tax, canopy tax, electric sign tax, motor tax, boiler tax, water tax, reel tax, city license fee and provincial license fee. The patrons are also compelled to pay a tax on tickets and, in some instances, this tax is borne by exhibitors who include it in the regular admission price. Many exhibitors also donate freely to charity and otherwise.

No action has yet been taken by the civic administration in the matter.

Winnipeg Exhibitors Refused Relief.

The exhibitors of Winnipeg made one last bid for a reduction of civic license fees for the forthcoming year as a relief from losses sustained because of the closing of local theatres for six weeks last fall on account of the influenza epidemic. They appeared before Mayor Gray on July 10 and subsequently interviewed the market, license and relief committee of the city.

The suggestion was made that the city could afford to make an adjustment of the annual license schedule if the city could not make a direct grant to the theatres for loss of business. The mayor passed the buck to the committee and the delegation representing the moving picture interests next appeared before that body.

The committee decided not to grant compensation, Alderman W. B. Simpson, chairman of the committee, announcing that the city's legal department had advised the city not to grant any relief.

Among those who headed the exhibitors' deputation were M. J. Williamson, National Theatre; W. P. Wilson, Lyceum Theatre, and Robert Kershaw, Osborne Theatre.

Allen Companies to Amalgamate.

An amalgamation of all joint-stock companies which are operating various Allen theatres in Toronto is hinted in a statement referring to an issue of stock for the new Allen's St. Clair Theatre, which is being erected in the North End of the city. It is intimated that most of the Allen theatres in Toronto are financed by separate joint stock companies and it is likely that all interests will be pooled this year.

An issue of $50,000 worth of seven per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the new Allen's St. Clair Theatre, Limited, is being offered locally at par with a bonus of twenty-five per cent. common stock. The St. Clair house will have a seating capacity of 1,600.

Close Theatres for Changes.

The Beach District of Toronto is getting along as well as possible without two of its moving picture theatres for the time being, both the Family and Peter Pan theatres having been closed. The Family is being remodeled and enlarged by the Paramount Theatres, Limited, which acquired the house last spring.

The Peter Pan Theatre has been wiped out to make room for the new Waverly theatre which is being constructed by Jule and J. J. Allen.

The district has two other theatres, the Coliseum and the Prince Edward, both of which have been enjoying good business.

Jennings Is Promoted.

Herb Jennings, one of the oldest exhibitors in Toronto, in point of experience, is the manager of the Allen's Danforth Theatre, Toronto, a large suburban house which is just nearing completion. Jennings was the first manager of Allen's Bloor Theatre, having been in charge of the Bloor Theatre since its opening last spring. He has made such a success of the enterprise that he is being transferred to the Danforth. The latter has almost 2,000 seats, or more than double the seating capacity of the Bloor Theatre. Jennings was previously the manager of the Strand Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario.

Displays Correct Time Table.

Manager Robson, of the Strand Theatre, Toronto, uses a printed sign each week in his lobby to show the exact minute when each picture on his program is scheduled to start during the day. The exact length of each picture is determined, after which the time-table is printed in figures which are easily readable. Duplicates of this time-table are in the manager's office, in the projection booth, at the orchestra leader's desk and at the head usher's post. Every effort is made to follow these schedules.

OIL CITY WILL HAVE $100,000 HOUSE

Columbia Amusement Company Will Remodel the Present Opera House Possibly to Open Labor Day

SEVERAL deals have been close recently which will put Oil City on the moving picture and amusement map in fine shape.

The Columbia Amusement Company, which operates theatres in Warren and Erie, has purchased property on which they will erect a $100,000 theatre, and W. A. McCartney, of the Princess, Oil City, together with A. J. Tuller, a local business man, has leased the Opera House and is already enlarging and remodeling the property.

The Columbia Company has concluded negotiations for the old P. W. Geary property on Seneca and Elm streets, and have announced its intention to proceed at once toward the erection of a modern theatre on the site, which will be completed late this fall, or not later than January 1, 1920.

This property has a frontage of 75 feet on both Elm and Seneca streets, and the length of the lot is 150 feet.

The plans for the rehabilitation of the Verbeck Amusement Company's building have been completed, and it is planned to put a corps of builders, decorators and electrical men to work shortly. As plans now stand, the theatre will be thrown open to the public on Labor Day, and when it is, it will be difficult to recognize the place as the old opera house.

With increased seating capacity, new lobbies, a roomy foyer, different aisle arrangements, remodeled balconies and lobby, redecorated and remodeled front, nothing is to be overlooked by Messrs. McCartney and Tuller in their efforts to make the house one of the most comfortable and attractive appearing in western Pennsylvania.

The house will be operated six days a week. The legitimate shows will have their innings on an average of once a week, at least, and on other days the highest-class motion pictures will be presented to patrons. The new name has not yet been definitely decided upon.

KANSAS CITY WILL HAVE NEW HOUSE

Grubel & Grubel Plan Theatre on Kansas Side of City To Be Built During Next Spring

E. J. GRUBEL and F. C. Grubel, owners of the Electric Theatre, in Kansas City, Kansas, have purchased the property at 628-30-32-34 Minnesota avenue, on which they intend to erect a new picture theatre. The consideration was $75,000. This is the largest realty transfer of business property on the Kansas side this year.

The new theatre which the Grubel brothers will erect will cost $250,000. It will have a seating capacity of 2,500 and will be absolutely fireproof and modern in every respect. The architecture and beauty will compare favorably with that of any moving picture in this part of the country. The construction will not begin until the leases on the present buildings expire in the spring.

The new theatre will be operated along with the Electric Theatre and the chain of other theatres at Joplin, Saint Joseph, and Springfield, Mo.

Big Projection Room for Garden.

When the remodeling of the old Garden Theatre, the new acquisition of Marcus Loew in Kansas City, is completed, the projection room will be the largest in the city. The new projection room is being built outside the house proper on a shelf supported by steel trusses. It will be arranged so that everything in it might burn without the patrons inside the theatre knowing that a fire had occurred.

Interior Will Be Changed.

The inside of the house will be entirely different from that of the old theatre, which had a mezzanine floor and a balcony. The balcony will be retained, but the mezzanine will be converted into a promenade and furnished with tables, reading lamps, a fireplace and lounger chairs. A row of loges will be built across the front of the balcony; the loges and the boxes will be supported by a large steel truss. Heavy green carpets will cover the entire house and the panels will be hung in blue. There will be three entrances, one for the boxes, one for the lower floor and one for the balcony. This arrangement will lessen the distance that each patron must walk to his seat and help to relieve the congestion.

The management expects to run a combination bill in the new theatre, probably five acts of vaudeville and a feature picture.

E. W. McAvoy, manager of the Mutual Film Company's offices, says that the tractor demonstration in Wichita the week of July 14 attracted business to the moving pictures houses also. The day before the picture was to be shown, he distributed free tickets to the boys, at the schools. The tickets were good between 5 and 7:30; and in that time he ran the two reels through three times, each showing being to a capacity house. The Theatrette seats 400, so that there were 1,200 boys who saw the first installment of the serial in a town of 11,000. Many of the boys persuaded their parents to attend that same evening, so that they saw the show twice. And the following episodes were shown to full houses, too.

HOW WINEGAR BACKS UP A GOOD FRONT

Buffalo Manager Not Only Keeps His Patrons Cool, but Also Impresses the Fact Upon Them

ELMER C. WINEGAR, managing director of the Central Park and Premier theatres, has completed the "summerizing" of the former house with most attractive effect. Originally the side of the Central Park presented a far from attractive appearance in summer, in fact one look at the side of the red brick wall conveyed the idea of warmth. It was an obstacle that Mr. Winegar decided to overcome, so he went to work and with lattice work, hanging ferns, flower tubs and new awnings produced the effect illustrated in the photograph. Across the entrance of the house he placed a large sign with the words, "Central Park Summer Garden." The result was unusually satisfactory, and Mr. Winegar is the recipient nightly of many favorable comments. He also extended the "summarizing" idea to the interior of the house. Japanese lanterns were placed over the incandescent bulbs, a new stage setting was put in consisting of lattice work, ferns and flowers and a small fountain in the centre. Throughout the house Japanese wind bells were hung, so that the least breeze produced a tinkling noise and showed patrons that here at least was a cool spot. Mr. Winegar believes in making his patrons think in "cool" terms, therefore they forget about the heat. Recently Mr. Winegar opened a large lot in the rear of the Central Park for the parking of cars owned by motorist patrons.

The Movie War Possible.

This was also a popular move, and this class of patronage increased automatically. Mr. Winegar has followed the film business in Buffalo for eleven years, starting as manager of the Grand and Bijou Dream theatres, later going to the local Universal Exchange and then taking the management of both the Premier and Central Park. He is active in all community doings. During the war he organized several soldiers' relief associations and was prominent in the welcome home program for the ward in which the theatre is located. Commencing August 1, he plans to augment the orchestra in the Central Park, which is now enjoying extremely good business.

Return from Motor Tour.

Al Becker, manager of the Becker Theatre Supply Company, and Henry Carr, manager of Sheas Theatre, have returned from a motor trip to Manhattan Beach, New York and Boston, covering a distance of 1,600 miles. While in New York, Mr. Becker visited the projection rooms of the big Broadway houses. Mr. Becker is agent in western New York for one of the leading makes of projecting machines. In addition to his regular duties he has charge of the projection of motion pictures in Sheas Theatre. He has secured contracts for machines in the new theatre being erected by the South Park Amusement Company in Triangle street.

Camera Man Killed.

Word has been received in Buffalo from the Community Motion Picture Bureau confirming the fear that the James Ceary mentioned in A. P. dispatches from Prague as having been killed in a hydroplane accident in Prague is James B. McCreary, Jr., son of Captain James B. McCreary, who is now with the Red Cross in Paris. The deceased who is well known in local film circles was employed by a New York motion picture company as photographer abroad. SUBURBAN HOUSES ARE BECOMING ACTIVE

And Prospects Are Looking Much Brighter in the Outlying Theatre Sections of Louisville

LOUISVILLE'S suburban theatres are beginning to become active again and prospects are for a few new suburban houses before many months. Arthur V. Sheckler and Harry Stimmel have recently reopened the old Parkland Theatre, an attractive little suburban house, which was closed during practically the entire war. During the hot weather of the past few days, when the thermometer almost touched the century mark, the airdomes handled a good volume of business, while the downtown houses suffered a slump.

A. C. Farrel, who was formerly in charge of the Louisville Universal exchange, and later resident manager after the local exchange was closed, has been transferred to the Indianapolis office, and D. C. Adams has been placed in charge of Louisville and the territory adjacent.

Plan for Negro Theatre Chain.

Louisville was somewhat interested in recent announcement in the East to the effect that E. C. Brown, of Philadelphia, was planning a negro circuit, with negro theatres in which negroes would perform. It was reported that a circuit comprising a number of towns, and including New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, Richmond, Pittsburgh, Norfolk, Louisville, Cincinnati and other large cities was being considered. However, it is hardly believed in Louisville that such a theatre will come to the city. Louisville has two colored vaudeville theatres, the Ruby and the Walnut, near Tenth, both of which have been closed for months.

Dolle Reports Good Business.

Fred Dolle, of the Alamo Theatre, Louisville, reports business as being good with the Alamo and the entire chain of Broadway theatres. Mr. Dolle reports that business as a whole is good both locally and out in the state, where from reports he is receiving, agricultural conditions have been good, and resulted in good business. The local exhibitors association has not met for some months, as there is nothing of importance to discuss, and the Kentucky branch of the Moving Picture League has not met for about three years or more.

Change Locale of "In Old Kentucky."

Announcement was made at Frankfort, Ky., on July 15, to the effect that the Anita Stewart Company will not come to Kentucky to make the film "In Old Kentucky," changes in the story having been made which results in the film being made in the West. Governor Black had invited Miss Stewart to come to the Governor's mansion and spend her time in Kentucky as his guest.

Aurora Mardiganian Collapses.

Miss Aurora Mardiganian, who recently appeared at the Mary Anderson Theatre, while her picture, "Auction of Souls," was showing at fifty cents a seat, was in such a highly nervous state that she collapsed at the corner of Fourth and Walnut streets, when an automobile ran into a young woman, who was considerably cut and bruised. The sight of blood caused Miss Mardiganian to faint outright, and prevented her from making a talk before the Optimist's Club.

Sidelights and Reflections

IT ISN'T a bad idea at times, when at a picture show, to listen to what your neighbors say about the entertainment. I was in a Broadway picture theatre not so very long ago and became interested in the frankly expressed opinions of a young chap who sat behind me. He was there with his girl and represented the average type of spectator who asks nothing of a moving picture except that it hold his attention. The feature failed to do this by reason of its slow development, so he amused himself and his companion by turning his limited critical powers loose on the plot and deriding the carefully thought out situations which had cost the author so much effort.

"That's all wrong!" was the young chap's favorite comment, "no fellow would act like that."

The lack of suspense in the story left the mind of the amateur critic free to follow its own line of thought and his impulse was to make fun of a plot that couldn't move fast enough to fix his attention where it belonged and prevent him from turning to his girl and amusing her by a display of his own insight into the picture's shortcomings.

It was to prevent this very thing that the craft of the dramatist was built up. When it was first recognized that an acted story must be so constructed that the attention of a body of spectators would be held so firmly that there would be no chance for the mind of anyone present to become critical when it should remain merely receptive the great principle of playwriting was discovered. It is this condition which makes it possible for melodrama to hold its grip on the theatre, year after year. There never has been a time when a good melodrama could not make a fortune on the stage. And there never will be a time when it will not be able to do the same thing on the screen. It is the popular form of drama for the average amusement-seeker, and just so long as it is built so that it does not permit the spectator to do any thinking for himself while the curtain is up it doesn't matter what the man who paid for his seat thinks about the show after it is over. If it has held his attention for the time he's been in the theatre its a good show, and he won't bother his head with it after that.

The screen needs dramatists who can construct their plots with equal skill. We have too many screen novels and not enough screen dramas.

By the way, the first stage plays of the coming season are melodramas. They have scored big and several more are announced for early production. Will screen producers take the hint?

"The Microbe"

Five-Reel Metro Production Features Viola Dana in Pretty Heart Interest Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is not a great deal of plot novelty about this five-reel Metro production entitled "The Microbe," but its story is one that will undoubtedly touch the hearts of the masses and will perhaps particularly please women and children. The tale is one of the pretty, sentimental type, resembling plays like "The Prince Chap" and books like "Molly-Make-Believe." It has the peculiar quality known as heart interest and gets over nicely, although it makes no pretenses whatever to drama or suspense.

Viola Dana plays the leading role, that of a girl street gamin, who sells newspapers, attired in boy's clothes, and is well able to look out for number one. Kenneth Harlan plays the role of a young novelist, who has degenerated through the use of drugs, and who takes the child home with him during a street brawl. It is not until the next morning that he learns that his charge, known as "The Microbe," is a girl, and he and his three bachelor friends determine to care for her. This leads to the obvious conclusion of a marriage between the girl and the author in due time, all of which is consistently and convincingly brought about.

The subject as a whole is attractively pictured and is one of simple, direct appeal.

The Story.

Miss Happy O'Brien, in "The Microbe," is a street gamin who sells newspapers and dresses in boy's garments. She is picked up by a young author, named De Witt Spense, in the course of a street fight, and taken to his apartments.

The author is greatly surprised, as well as his housekeeper, the next morning, to find that the supposed newsboy is really a girl. He introduces her at breakfast to some of his bachelor friends, and after a hurried conference, announces that he intends to give her a home. Mike, as the girl is called for short, blossoms out wonderfully under home training, and she and her author friend are very happy in an innocent, platonic way. He teaches the girl to read and they become greatly attached to one another.

But the time comes when Spense's friends decide that the girl is exercising a bad influence over him, as he is no longer writing fiction and seems interested in nothing but her. They put the situation plainly before the girl, and Mike leaves the apartments, with a farewell note to her friend.

Mike finds employment and is fairly happy, though she misses Spense. About this time the latter begins receiving a number of mysterious letters from one who signs herself "Bianca." The letters inspire him to write a book, and this, in the course of time, leads him back to Mike, who is, of course, the author of the letters.

It not only shows the effect of sexual disease on those who live vicious lives, but upon the innocent victims related to the men and women who break the moral law. The fake doctors who thrive upon false promises of a cure and attract patients by lying advertisements are also exposed.

On its artistic side the picture is fairly well acted and produced. The story has little merit outside of its propaganda nature and is told so that it will be understood by the most limited mentality.

"Through the Wrong Door"

A Snappy Goldwyn Comedy with Madge Kennedy Delightful in the Leading Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

LIGHT, gay and amusing in its main situation, "Through the Wrong Door" is frankly composed and produced to chase dull care away, and it is so well interpreted by Madge Kennedy and the cast in general that the effect is a very pleasant one. Miss Kennedy, however, goes beyond her opportunities in a most appealing manner during love scenes. Like many another attractive young lady of screen prominence, she is aware of her charming smile and inclined to use it to the detriment of her role, but in this brisk Goldwyn product she dispenses with it to the very decided advantage of her impersonation. She softens and beautifies by some very fine acting the role of a bright young girl who throws over her fiance and elopes with a man she scarcely knows.

In the new dignity of one who sympathizes with the man her own father has deliberately tried to ruin, whom she is assisting to achieve natural justice, she plays the part so convincingly that the sudden change of mind and heart is not only excused but approved most cordially. John Bowers, in support, is manly and effective, and the remainder of the cast is admirably typed. A gloom-chasing comedy without a dull moment, "Through the Wrong Door" was enjoyed by a crowded house at the Strand.

The Story.

Isabel Carter goes "through the wrong door" one stormy night, when the rain is falling in torrents, the accident occurring because of a mistaken address. She has dismissed her taxicab and is so blinded by the storm that she hands her wraps to the gentleman who admits her, mistaking him for a servant, and goes directly to the drawing-room fire to dry her wet satin shoes. She then discovers that she is in the house of Burt Radcliffe, a young mining engineer she met in the West, who rescued her from a tree into which she had climbed to escape a tame bear. They know each other only by their first names, but he discovers when she goes to use the telephone, that she is the daughter of wealthy Haskell Carter, who has swindled him out of valuable mining property.

This deliberate fraud, though protected by the law, has ruined the young man and broken off his engagement to a young lady who was intent on marrying him for his money. He cuts the telephone wire, shutting off communication with the outer world, but he is very gentle with his prisoner, giving her a supper and lending her his slippers and stockings

A Sage Brush Hamlet

William Desmond Feature Released by Robertson-Cole Is of Stirring Western Quality.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE William Desmond feature, "A Sage Brush Hamlet," released by Robertson-Cole through the Exhibitors Mutual, is of that stirring Western type that never fails to entertain. It is not a faultless production, by any means. It might be suggested that more expert subtitling, for instance, would be an improvement, and at times its comedy moments are a little forced. But the genuine Western atmosphere, the fine cast of characters, and the consistent and thrilling quality of the action, hold the interest of the spectator

There might be some difference of opinion with regard to the frequent appearance of the heroine in her nightclothes. But at least the scenes in which she appears thus attired are free from vulgar suggestion, and have been put over in a manner to which no objection should be raised. An unusually beautiful young actress, Marguerite de La Motte betrays considerable talent in handling the role of Dora Lawrence and it might not be amiss to predict that the future may find her a place among the feminine screen stars.

William Desmond plays a clean, heroic type in his usual good style; and Florence Gibson, Frank Lanning, Walter Perry and Edward Piel are among the noticeable members of the cast.

"Louisiana"

A Paramount Picture Adapted from the Novel of Francis H. Burnett and Starring Vivian Martin.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

INTENDED to show that the daughter of a rude mountaineer may rise out of her dull environment when accorded a chance to mix with a brighter and more cultivated circle, "Louisiana" depends chiefly for its interest on some capable picturing of the narrow life of an old mountaineer and his motherless daughter, and on Vivian Martin's sympathetic impersonation of the leading role.

The director and entire cast have done not a little to enliven this Paramount photonovel, but Miss Martin's own personality carries far more interest than the story itself. The girl of the novel does not fit into her new surroundings until taken in hand by the sister of a playwright as more or less of a joke on him, and, even then, Louisiana tries to palm off her rude old father as a stranger to her new acquaintances. The attempt at melodrama, far from exciting terror, brought forth some amused laughs at the Rialto, where the picture was shown. No particular reason is given why the girl should deeply interest a young and successful playwright other than his fancy for her based entirely upon their chance meeting under favoring circumstances. Aside from Vivian Martin's conscientious impersonation, "Louisiana" is only a fair entertainment.

The Story.

"Louisiana" is the daughter of a rude mountaineer, a widower unaware that his child has a refinement superior to his own, though he rejects a rural suitor for her hand. He is well enough off to let her enjoy a brief visit to a fashionable resort in the valley, and there she goes with an old colored woman, Aunt Cassadry, only to find that she is an outsider because of the clothes she wears. She is helped out of this difficulty by Olivia Ferol. Olivia has an object in view. She wishes to test her brother, Laurence, a playwright, who regards all mountaineers as a raw product. Laurence arrives and is introduced to Louisiana and accepts her socially as a refined girl. Because of his attentions to her, he is shot from ambuscade by the rural suitor. He is nursed back to his normal state and goes with his sister and Louisiana on a motor trip in the mountains.

A motor accident compels them to seek assistance of Louisiana's father, whom she induces to act as a stranger, but her ruse is discovered. In her shame she refuses to return to the hotel. She remains with her father, he consoling her for separation from her valley friends with some new parlor furniture. Louisiana does not hear from her new acquaintances, their letters being intercepted by the rural suitor, until they come to visit her. There is another attempt on the part of the country boy to shoot the playwright, but he is prevented from doing so by Louisiana and her father. Louisiana and Laurence Ferol have the right understanding at the finish.

"The Lyons Mail"

Triangle Screen Version of Famous Play Features H. B. Irving, Son of the Illustrious Actor.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE rapid development of screen art in America adds to the difficulty of enthusing over a foreign-made production fashioned after rather conventional English methods. "The Lyons Mail," a stage play made famous in English by the late Henry Irving and the most popular French melodrama ever written, as presented by the Triangle Distributing Corporation, with H. B. Irving, son of the illustrious actor, in the dual role formerly played by his father, suffers to a certain extent by comparison with the best American productions. The tragic situation on which the play is based, however, defies even the stagiest of the players to destroy its intensity, or the interest which the spectator is bound to feel in the plight of a man condemned to die for a crime committed by his double.

H. B. Irving is scarcely at ease in the opening scenes of the picture, and finds it difficult to keep his eyes off the camera. Later he gains confidence, and does an admirable bit of acting in the role of the villain, Dubosc. The role of Lesurques seems less suited to his talents. The characters of Dubosc's associates in crime are well portrayed, and that of the "fop" is particularly well done. The atmosphere of the play is well sustained, and the mob scenes are realistic. The production gains strength as it approaches its climax where a wealth of suspense is obtained. A cast of unusually talented actors support the star. The picture would gain by being retitled, and by the elimination of subtitles where the action explains itself.

The story of "The Lyons Mail" is set in the vicinity of the Paris of one hundred years ago. The crime of robbing of the Lyons Mail on its way to Paris, and the murdering of the courier by Dubosc and his gang, is laid to Lesurques, because a broken spur belonging to him is found near the scene. Lesurques' old father, passing at the time, is shot in the arm by Dubosc, and the similarity in appearance of the two men causes him to believe that his own son has committed the crime.

"This Hero Stuff"

William Russell Production Distributed by Pathe Strong on Muscular Action but Short on Drama.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

SOME day somebody will awaken to the fact that a star cannot make a picture without a story, that pugilistic attributes do not make a successful dramatic star, that a perfectly good cast cannot sit around and do nothing while the hero rides to glory on the shoulders of a mob or punches the "daylights" out of villains and others. William Russell is too well-tried a picture player to waste his efforts on a week-kneed story such as "This Hero Stuff," produced by the William Russell Productions and distributed by the Pathe Exchange, Inc.; and it would be a treat to see him in a picture which required mental as well as physical adroitness.

"This Hero Stuff" has one highly enjoyable character, well portrayed by Harvey Clark. This is Jonathan Pillsbury, who has a tender leaning toward his "Scotch," and who, through an exchange of suit cases, manages to temporarily damage the reputation of a respectable citizen.

The Story.

The story of "This Hero Stuff" centers about one, Captain November Jones, who arrives in this country laden with decorations for bravery, and especially famous in connection with the rescue of "The Lost Battalion."

Unwilling to submit to the publicity of heroism in his home town, he tried to evade the welcome prepared for him by disguising himself in a beard. In the act of rescuing a child from being run over by a train, the beard is torn from his face, and he is obliged to receive the plaudits of the throng.

An opportunity to reverse public opinion comes to him when he is made the tool of a couple of swindlers. In rescuing the woman of the team in a fake runaway accident, she threatens to puncture his reputation if he refuses to aid her in fighting a man who she tells him is trying to swindle her out of a certain rich mine. He jumps at the chance and straightway takes side with the supposed villain. The daughter of the mine owner takes a minor part in the affair, and considerable gun play and fist fighting comprises the remainder of the plot.

"The City of Comrades"

Goldwyn Photostory with Tom Moore and Seena Owen in the Leading Roles Is Mild Entertainment.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE screen version of Basil King's novel, "The City of Comrades," doesn't get up much steam of a dramatic sort, the author evidently caring more about his institution for reclaiming fallen humanity than in working out a good romance. There are a number of time-honored situations used, the story opening with the lady-and-burglar motive. The down-and-out hero is led by looking into the eyes of the heroine to stop drinking and to go to work at his profession. Later on, he finds he has a rival, but doesn't give up thinking about the girl. There are a few complications in the story, but they are told without any attempt to make them dramatic.

The best feature of the picture is the acting of Tom Moore, Seena Owen and Otto Hoffman. They force respect for the characters they represent by the sincerity of their work. "The City of Comrades" will be enjoyed by those who want their entertainment mildly exciting and care more for the study of character than for good love story with some kick to it.

He finds it easy to enter the house of Regina Barry and picks up a necklace from her dressing table. He overhears Regina say to her companion, Elsie, that she cannot marry Young Doctor Cantyre—she wants a man who is "different" from the ordinary run.

Melbury writes a note saying that there are such men, and puts it on the table with her necklace. She catches him in her room and questions him coolly as to his peculiar conduct, exhibiting curious interest in the shabby burglar. He leaves her in penitent mood and decides to undertake his own and Lovey's redemption at "The City of Comrades." He is assisted by others, especially by Doctor Cantyre, until he is on his feet, so changed in appearance that Regina does not recognize him when they meet socially, though her curiosity is aroused by half-remembrance. Melbury reveals his identity later, and attempts to gain her counsel to marry him, but, failing, he enlists in Canada, where he is blinded in the Halifax explosion.

"The Gamblers"

Vitagraph Has Slow Feature in Picturization of Klein Play with Harry Morey.

Reviewed by William J. Reilly.

HARRY MOREY is not to blame because his latest Vitagraph feature, "The Gamblers," drags almost from beginning to end. There are too many butlers, too much furniture, and altogether too many sub-titles. The word matter flashed on the screen during the length of "The Gamblers" would stand a lot of pruning and cutting. It is not needed and it kills suspense. And if the love interest could be given more footage the picture would hold.

The plot, picturing Charles Klein's play, revolves about a technical banking "steal." The heroine marries the wrong man because the right man was too busy making money. The heroine, played by Helen Ferguson, is given little opportunity to get the spectator's interest. Of course, she is to marry the right man in the end. Paul Scardon directed.

Darwin, jealous of his wife's respect for Wilbur, starts an investigation of Emerson's bank, finds the unlawful situation, and attempts to show Wilbur's hand by a forced confession from one of his associates.

The associate, George Cowper, delivers the incriminating notes to Darwin on the promise of security. Emerson discovers this and goes to Darwin's house for the papers. Advertising Angles: Advertise this as an adaptation from "The Gamblers" by Charles Klein. You remember his "Lion and the Mouse." The ace of spades was the fatal card dealt by Harry Morey to himself when he was gambling with his associates as to who would shoulder the blame of the banking deal. You might get out an ace-of-spades post card bearing a big question mark, the name "The Gamblers" and the name of your house, with the date of the attraction. The ace of spades idea could also be employed in a teaser campaign. Morey has a good following; use his name largely.

COMMENTS

Fox Film Corporation.

DOWNSTAIRS AND UP (Fox), July 13.—A Mutt and Jeff animated in which the two attempt to move furniture for a gum-chewing damsel. They drive their van to the wrong house and leave the furniture there. This brings the usual smiles.

A PRIZE FIGHT (Fox), June 29.—Mutt and Jeff appear in this as prize fighters, Mutt being the challenger to a certain champion and Jeff his sparring partner. Jeff finds himself caught between the two opponents, and endures some hard punishment. This furnishes the usual smiles.

Harry Morey
Standing pat in this scene from "The Gamblers."

LOOK PLEASANT, PLEASE (Fox), July 6.—A typically funny Mutt and Jeff animated in which the pair desert their jobs as bookkeepers and start a photograph gallery. The incidents are laughable in this.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

A JAZZED HONEYMOON (Rolin).—This comedy features Harold Lloyd and Bebe Daniels as a pair of newlyweds starting on a boat trip. Harold becomes separated from his wife and is thrown down into the engine room and put to work with the stokers. The situations are laughable and full of knockabout action.

COUNT YOUR CHANGE (Rolin).—One of the Harold Lloyd comedies in which the hero becomes the victim of a clever bull pup who chases him in and out of various places. There is not much plot to the comedy, which is of the rough and tumble sort, but unusually enjoyable. It is nip and tuck between Lloyd and the dog for comedy honors. The pup is a clever one.

AT THE PISTOL'S POINT (Pathe), July 20.—Chapter 14 of "The Tiger's Trail." This opens with a thrilling rescue of Belle and Jack from the "Place of Eternal Fires" by Sheriff Peter Strong. Jack is then made captive by Gordon and Hilda. Belle succeeds in getting the idol from Gordon, but the treacherous Hilda holds her up with a revolver and makes her give it up. The number is full of action and intrigue.

THE TIGER FACE (Pathe), July 27.—This final instalment of "The Tiger's Trail," No. 15, is filled with happenings of moment. One of these pictures shows the manner in which the stripes are removed from Tiger Face, who turns out to be the father of Peter Strong, Jr. The Pact of Three is recovered, and Hilda kills Randolph Gordon. Belle and Jack are reunited after many thrilling experiences, and the serial winds up with their start on a honeymoon. The production as a whole has been consistently well made and full of exciting incidents.

NEVER TOUCHED ME (Rolin-Pathe), July 27.—This number contains a wealth of laughable knockabout situations, most of which occur in the Killjoy Cafe. Harold Lloyd, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels are featured. The subject is a typical one for this clever combination and gets over nicely.

Universal Film Company.

RUN TO EARTH, July 14.—This is the eighteenth and final chapter of "The Red Glove" in two reels. It is packed with the same exciting action that has characterized this serial throughout. It sees the death of Starr Wiley and the leader of the Vultures, and pictures the way in which Billie comes into her inheritance; also her engagement to Vernon. This has been a clean-cut, entertaining serial and reflects credit upon the cast and producers.

ELMO, THE MIGHTY, June 30.—Episode No. 3, "Flames of Hate." This opens with both Bob and Lucille captured by the Mad Mountain gang. Bob is tortured, and Lucille, to save him, promises to tell where the satchel is hidden, not knowing herself that it has floated away down stream. A realistic forest fire threatens the cabin, and later Bob and Lucille escape. They take a picturesque ride down a river on a raft, followed by members of the gang. The episode is full of interest.

ELMO, THE MIGHTY, July 7.—Episode No. 4, "A Fiendish Revenge." This is one of the strongest episodes appearing in any serial for a long time. It contains one very "suspenseful" situation in which the hero climbs up the shaft of a mine to safety and then makes a gallant effort to draw the girl up after him while fighting a life and death battle with the villain with his free arm. The Phantom Menace comes to his aid in this extremity and saves the situation. This episode is one of tremendous strength.

THE BORDER TERROR (Western), Jan. 25.—This two-reel Western story is above the average in interest and capably acted. It concerns the love of a bandit named "The Cisco Kid" for a beautiful young Carmen of the border country. The sheriff also falls in love with her, and the jealous "Kid" plans a trick that results in his own death and almost costs the girl hers. Something rather indifferent.

CURRENT EVENTS NO. 25.—Convalescent soldier boys on a Maryland farm, a Chinese baby show in Portland, Ore., American women aiding homeless in France, Westchester County Horse Show, and numerous other entertaining features are included in this number.

NEW STATE RIGHT COMPANY ORGANIZED

Waldorf Photoplays Will Make and Distribute Its Own Productions—Now Building Studio in Boston

THE latest organization to enter the state right producing and distributing field is the Waldorf Photoplays, of which David G. Fischer is the director-general. The company controls a chain of Waldorf theatres, and is now constructing extensive studios in Boston which will be ready for use within three weeks.

Mr. Fischer is well known in the motion picture industry, having been a director for the American and the Essanay companies. He has to his credit a number of feature productions, his latest being "The Law of Nature."

In addition to Mr. Fischer, the following are officers of the company: William J. Reid, president; John K. Allen, vice-president; Harry S. Kelsey, treasurer; Charles F. A. Smith, secretary. All are prominent business or professional men, Mr. Reid being in charge of the Van Camp Products Company of New England, while Mr. Kelsey is president of the Waldorf Lunch System of New England; Mr. Allen is head of a prominent banking firm in Boston, and Mr. Smith is a well-known attorney there.

First Picture Based on Watson Novel.

The first production of the new company will be "Where Bonds Are Loosed," adapted from the novel of the same name by E. L. Grant Watson, the well-known English author. It is now finished and ready for the market.

Mr. Fischer announces, "We are going to give the state right buyer big productions and shall deal direct with him. Our productions will not be offered to any program or distributing company first, but will go direct from the studio to the buyers. The story, not the star, is the main essential; the public always appreciates a good, vital story, dramatically presented. This has been demonstrated in the theatrical business. When a producer puts on a play, it lives according to its entertaining value; so it will be with the motion picture producer, and the state right market is our medium."

The offices of the company which will handle only its own productions is located at 229 West Forty-second street, New York.

Bulls Eye May Move Studio

NAT H. SPITZER, studio manager of the Bulls Eye Film Corporation at Hollywood, announces that on account of the increase in production activities of the company it will be necessary to secure larger quarters before September. He will therefore leave for San Francisco in August to look over the situation there, with the possible view of moving to that point.

At the present time there are four companies working at the Hollywood plant, while a fifth is in the process of organization.

Johnny Dooley was formerly featured in "Listen Lester," a musical comedy that has enjoyed a long run on Broadway, and is now a prominent member of the cast of the Zeigfeld Follies.

Mr. Bach announces that there will be no exaggerated slapstick in the Johnny Dooley pictures, nor will there be a rush to turn out cheap comedies. The program will be limited to twelve pictures a year and a full month will be devoted to each subject.

Several Unusual Features in "Everybody's Business"

ACCORDING to a statement from the W. H. Productions Company, the six reel photoplay, "Everybody's Business," which is now in final preparation for distribution, is remarkable in many ways. The story possesses the element of a serial picture being crowded with pep, punch and power, and it also has the touch of romance and the contrasting features of intrigue, adventure and sensationalism.

Added to this there is another phase announces the producers, that predestines it success, and that is the fact that it lends itself to unusual exploitation, having extraordinary advertising possibilities and it is predicted that it will be one of the most talked of films in recent years

J. Robert Pauline
The hypnotist, who will be starred by Sidney Reynolds, of Supreme Pictures, Inc., in a serial.

Walthall; also "The Sins of the Children," with Alma Hanlon and Stuart Holmes; "The Girl from Nowhere," with Cleo Madison and Wilfred Lucas; "Virtuous Sinners," with Wanda Hawley, and Grace Davison and Conway Tearle in their new productions.

Mr. Rifkin has been in New York for several days working out the details of the sales activities. Special Pioneer representatives will tour New England, blazing the trail for Mr. Rifkin's force. He has arranged to enlarge his office at 57 Church street, Boston, also to add several salesmen to his force, and will himself take the field for a short time in order to start off the campaign under his personal supervision.

Additional Sales Reported on Frohman Short Subjects

AFTER viewing the first of the Texas Guinan two-reel Westerns and Mack Swain single-reel comedies in one of the Broadway theatres, Phil Goldstone, of the Sterling Film Exchange, Omaha, bought from the Frohman Amusement Corporation the rights to both series of productions for Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska, although it is announced that his original intention was to secure only the rights to the two latter states.

Mr. Goldstone will retain the Iowa and Nebraska rights, operating from his Omaha office, and will arrange with a Kansas City exchange for the exploitation of these subjects in Missouri and Kansas.

Announcement is also made by the Frohman Amusement Corporation of the sale of rights to these two series to the Southwestern Film Corporation for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Pioneer Signs Grace Davison for Six Productions

PREPARATIONS are being made by the Pioneer Film Corporation for the exploitation of the six features in which Grace Davison is to be the featured player. The first is nearing completion, but no definite title has been decided upon. In this picture Conway Tearle shares honors with Grace Davison as co-star.

Each picture will be based upon a well-known novel or successful story. The contract calls for a different male star to appear opposite Davison in each production.

Several well known names are under consideration, and as soon as a decision is reached as to the nature of the second picture one of the men stars will be signed up for the second picture.

To secure the best and highest type of story material a committee composed of members of Miss Davison's staff and representatives of the Pioneer are scouring the market. Up to the present the committee has reported favorably upon two of the latest novels and one play which had a highly successful run in New York during the past season.

"Virtuous Men" Is Sold for Two Southern States

FOLLOWING the record sale of thirteen states for "Virtuous Men," S-L Pictures announces the disposition of rights to this special feature which stars E. K. Lincoln, for Louisiana and Mississippi to Verret & Johnston, who are distributing four other special production, and added "Virtuous Men" to their list only after a visit to New York and thorough scanning of available state rights features.

Following the method of various other purchasers of "Virtuous Men," Verrer & Johnstone will present this attraction as a road show for several weeks on an extensive scale prior to releasing it on a straight rental basis. They have placed a large order for special exploitation supplies, including oil paintings for the lobby, electrical window novelty displays, motion picture trailers to be used in place of slides and several thousand blotters to be distributed in advance of the show. Full size orchestras, together with advance men and a working crew, have been engaged for the tour, which will open within the next month. Verrer & Johnstone contemplate sending on the road four companies with "Virtuous Men."

With the sale of Louisiana and Mississippi, "Virtuous Men" still remains unsold for New York State, eastern Pennsylvania, Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, South Carolina and Alabama.

Many Contracts Closed on Reissued Essanays

SEVERAL contracts for state rights have already been signed for the three blocks of ten each Fables in Slang, by George Ade; Broncho Billy Western dramas, and Snakeville Western comedies, produced by Essanay and reissued by Victor Kremer, and a large number of inquiries are being received at Mr. Kremer's headquarters, 1333 Argyle street, Chicago.

"The demand for these pictures proves my contention that pictures of real worth are not dead with one issuance," says Mr. K. Kremer. "Good pictures, like good books or rare paintings, have a constant value, and the public is always glad to welcome them back. These pictures stand for something distinctive in American life, and therefore strike a universal chord. The fables are of especial interest. George Ade's writings, while in the slang of the present, contain that vital human element that will make them live as long as men wish to gain relaxation with a laugh. He appears personally in one of them, 'The Fable of Napoleon and the Bumps,' and is seen on the farm, also in his studio writing fables, and in other phases of life.

"Every lover of the West knows of the Broncho Billy pictures, and as for the Snakevilles there are few pictures that equal them for laugh-provoking situations.

"I do not believe there is anyone who will not be glad to see them a second time. However, as they have not been shown for a long time, and the motion picture public has changed greatly, they will be new to a great mass of people."

M. H. Hoffman Making Tour of Central States

TO make first-hand observation with which to guide both himself and his associates in the formulation of plans for the coming season, M. H. Hoffman, Pioneer's general manager, is now touring the section east of and including Chicago. He will study at close range the possibilities of the market, so that no time may be lost in meeting new conditions.

Within a few weeks several large and notable productions now nearing completion on the Coast and in the East will be delivered to Pioneer, and then will begin what is said to be the most extensive and thorough sales campaign ever projected by any state rights house.

Mr. Hoffman will be back at his desk in time to open the fall campaign and assume command of the exploitation operations.

Bulls Eye Making Comedies Starring Charles Dorety

THE Hollywood studios of the Bulls Eye Film Corporation announce that Charles Dorety is to be featured in a new series of comedies, the first of which is already being filmed under the direction of Charles Parrott. Mr. Dorety's type of screen pantomine is said to be entirely different from the average comedian.

The stories for these comedies are being written by Jay Mulhauser, of the Cohan and Harris forces. Mr. Mulhauser will also write the subtitles.

Sidney Reynolds
President of Supreme Pictures, Inc., making serial J. Robert Pauline, the hypnotist.

Helen Holmes Serial Is Titled "The Fatal Fortune"

As the result of several weeks of effort to secure for the new Helen Holmes serial a title that would comprehensively cover the story and at the same time contain a punch, the S. L. K. Serial Corporation announces that the production will be called "The Fatal Fortune."

The story, written by Walter Richard Hall, deals with a fortune buried on Devil's Island in the South Sea. The father of the character played by Helen Holmes was double crossed by his partner. He deserted his wife and children, amassed a fortune, buried it on Devil's Island, left a map of the location and started out to find his former partner and is himself killed.

Helen Holmes, a newspaper reporter, sees the tragedy and learns the man is her father. She secures the map, but a character known as the Faceless Terror appears and takes it away. She secures half of it again. Then begins a battle of wits between the two, each seeking to secure the other half.

The situations Miss Holmes goes through are said to be the most thrilling of her career. She is supported by Lieutenant Jack Levering and a strong cast, including Frank Wunderlee as the heavy and Leslie King, the creator of "One-Lamp Louis" in the "Shielding Shadow" serial.

Bert Lubin in Hospital

BERT LUBIN, general sales manager of S-L Pictures, who returned to New York a few days ago after a successful sales trip during which he disposed of rights to twenty-five states on "Virtuous Men," is now at Stern's sanitarium for an operation on his nose and throat. This will necessitate the postponing of the trip planned for the purpose of disposing of the few states remaining open on this production. However, it is expected that Mr. Lubin will be able to travel within about two weeks.

New State Rights Company Opens Offices in Omaha

A NEWCOMER in the state rights field is the F. A. F. Enterprises, Inc., which has opened offices at 214 South Fourteenth street, Omaha, and announces as its first attraction for the states of Iowa and Nebraska, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," the Mack Sennett feature comedy.

This production will be put on as a big road show, with the bathing girls appearing in person, commencing in September, while two other road shows without the girls will play the smaller towns.

The officers of the company are Nick Abramson, president; Paul Fine, vice-president, and N. N. Frudenfeld, secretary and treasurer.

Reynolds Announces Serial Starring J. Robert Pauline

SUPREME PICTURES, INC., a new company, of which Sidney Reynolds is president, has just commenced a fifteen-episode serial starring J. Robert Pauline, the well-known hypnotist and vaudeville headliner known to audiences throughout the country as "Pauline." Each episode will be in two reels. The permanent title of the production has not yet been selected.

For the last four months Mr. Reynolds and his director, William Davis, have been working on the story, selecting the cast and putting the finishing touches on the new studio which has been erected at Flushing, L. I.

In selecting J. Robert Pauline, Mr. Reynolds feels that he has achieved a scoop from the viewpoint of advertising and exploitation advantages to the exhibitor, and at the same time has acquired an artist whose unique personality, magnetic powers and ability will establish a departure in motion picture individualities.

Possessing a weird, almost uncanny power to hypnotize, this star has appeared during the past ten years in all the large vaudeville houses of the country, and practically every representative newspaper has devoted considerable space to him and his work. He is said to have been one of the highest salaried artists in vaudeville, and to have broken the Keith Circuit record by appearing for six consecutive weeks in one theatre.

"This serial," says Mr. Reynolds, "will bring out Mr. Pauline's startling individuality and magnetic powers most forcibly, commonplace material will be avoided, mother-love, romance, adventure, mystery and love and big situations will be the outstanding features, together with terrific surprises. Logic will be a notable feature, and each episode will have the art and dramatic power usually given to a five-reel feature.

Many exclusive ideas are being worked into the production, and the public has a surprise awaiting it when it observes a genuine hypnotist of stage tradition in screen action.

Director William S. Davis has been associated with a number of stage successes, and on the screen has directed some of the most celebrated of motion picture stars.

George Ade

Whose "Fables in Slang," produced by Essanay, are now being released by Victor Kremer. Mr. Ade appears in the "Napoleon and the Mumps" fable.

"A Flirt There Was" and She Caught a Gink (Somewhat Like You and I).

The pup accompanying the lady fair remembers the bone and hank of hair. That's the reason he's lying there and patiently waiting nearby. The cause of this rhyme may seem rather misty, but it all refers to a two-reel Christie, "A Flirt There Was" with Dotty DeVore, Jay Belasco and the pup at the door.

Unusually Elaborate Sets for Helen Holmes Serial

IT is claimed by S. L. Krellberg, president and general manager of the S. L. K. Serial Corporation, that the settings for the new Helen Holmes serial are the finest ever built for a serial. In the main section alone the props are valued at $25,000, and are said to be unusually massive and beautiful. There is one oil painting valued at $3,000.

Many of the settings, including paintings and furniture, are announced as coming from New York mansions; as an instance, a dining room set valued at $12,000 consisting of a table, buffet, serving table and eight chairs is used in some of the scenes.

Bessie Love Working on a Love Story.

Bessie Love, who has been attending the convention of the motion picture exhibitors of the Pacific Northwest at Seattle, has returned to Vitagraph's West Coast studio at Hollywood to continue her new feature, "Over the Garden Wall," which is described by her director, David Smith, as a typical Love love story. "Over the Garden Wall" was written especially for Miss Love by Millicent Evison, and was picturized by Sam Taylor. Among the better known players supporting Miss Love are Myrtle Reeves, Willis Marks, James Blackwell, Edward Hearn, Truman Van Dyke, Allen Forrest, Anne Schaefer, Jay Morley and Otto Lederer.

"Sunnyside" Plays to Big Business.

Despite the hottest week of Colorado weather in the last few years, "Sunnyside," Charles Chaplin's third million dollar comedy released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, played to the biggest gross receipts in the history of the America Theatre, of Denver, recently.

Producers' and Distributors' News

Metro Prepares Paper for Mystery Play Exploitation

METRO Pictures, distributors of the Screen Classics, Inc., production, "The Man Who Stayed at Home," already has supplied its exchanges with elaborate facilities for exploiting this feature, which is listed for release in September. The exploitation and promotion material, together with accessories, is described by W. E. Atkinson, Metro's general manager, as the most voluminous and complete ever put out by the organization for any of its big releases.

In the preparation of this material the fact is hammered upon that the screen drama is taken from Lechmere Worrall and J. E. Harold Terry's stage sensation, which ran in London for four years and in New York for two.

A flashy press sheet printed in two colors and containing a wealth of suggestions for newspaper advertising and exploitation of the super-feature and for lobby displays and other stunts is among the exhibitor aids. These comprise a smashing 84-sheet, and six three-and-one sheets, which are attractive as they were made from action pictures from the production that convey a vivid idea of the mystery, suspense and dramatic quality.

Alligator Hunt Picturized Latest Prizma Release

PRIZMA pictures announces that "'Gators" is its latest release. Prizma photographers have gone to Florida to secure the material for what should be a most interesting picture and have used alligators as the subject matter of this film. They enlisted the services of an alligator hunter who before the camera leaped into a Florida stream in order to catch a full grown alligator alive.

This picture brings to light some interesting facts concerning these sirenians. Like chickens, they come from eggs which are laid in nests built of leaves and sticks. The heat of the tropical sun and the decomposition of the vegetable matter hatches the eggs. For the first two years alligators grow very slowly. Even when they are five months old it is possible to hold a number of them in your hands at one time. They live to be very old, and some have been known to be strong and active at the age of 275 years.

In this release, in addition to the capture of an alligator, equally interesting scenes of an alligator farm in Florida are reproduced in Nature's full colors by the Prizma process of color motion photography.

New Universal Westerns Going Big.

Universal's new series of Western two-reel dramas are being booked heavier than was ever expected by the producers. This is the Marie Walcamp series, which has been definitely titled "The Famous Spur and Saddle Stories." These Westerns are new material, good clean, snappy stories with action throughout. Universal's well-known group of horsemen are employed in these productions, and Marie Walcamp is cast as the heroine in each of the plots. Universal may in the near future produce more of this series, which was produced under the title of "The Tempest Cody" series.

The Direlict Meets a Friend.
Tom Moore is a veritable comrade to this down-and-out in Goldwyn's "The City of Comrades."

Derby Day Race Filmed in "Lord and Lady Algy"

IN Tom Moore's latest Goldwyn production, "Lord and Lady Algy," in which Mr. Moore's leading woman is Naomi Childers, the action of the story, which as a play furnished a starring vehicle for William Faversham, culminates in a thrilling horse race on the result of which young Lord Algy has staked his fortune.

When Lady Algy learns that her husband has bet everything he owns on the chances of his pet racehorse, she learns that a dark horse is the swiftest animal in the coming Derby. So, to offset her husband's plunging, she does a little of her own. The delightful friendship of the informally separated husband and wife breaks the bonds of reserve when Lord Algy makes a fool of himself at a brilliant masked ball which is a prelude to the great race. For this the Goldwyn Company went to the race course and secured permission to stage a race in the morning. All the principles are seen in the paddock, in the stands and on the lawns. In all, about 1,000 people are photographed watching the race.

Naomi Childers gives a portrayal of Lady Algy, and William Burress, Alec Francis, Mabel Ballin and Kate Lester work in support of the star.

Elsie Janis at Work on Selznick Picture.

The initial scenes of Elsie Janis' first Selznick production, "Everybody's Sweetheart," were taken recently at the Selznick studio in the Bronx, under the direction of James Young, and the production is now well under way. Matt Moore is Miss Janis' leading man. The story was written by Edmund Goldin.

Hart and Dorothy Gish Star in Widely Divergent Films

TWO popular favorites of the screen are starred in productions of widely divergent character which are scheduled for release July 27 by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. They are William S. Hart, who will be seen in the Thomas H. Ince production, "Wagon Tracks," an Artcraft release, and Dorothy Gish, whose Paramount vehicle is "Nugget Nell."

In "Wagon Tracks" Mr. Hart portrays a guide in the fifties leading a wagon train across the deserts and mountains toward the Golden West by way of the historic Santa Fe trail. C. Gardner Sullivan wrote the story. Lambert Hillyer directed and Joe August did the camera work. Jane Novak plays the heroine.

"Nugget Nell" was written expressly for Miss Gish by John R. Cornish. Elmer Cliffton directed. The story is a travesty on wild Western pictures and is said to be chock full of fun.

Familiar faces as well as some new ones will be seen in the cast, the list including Raymond Cannon, David Butler, Emily Chichester and Wilbur Nigeby. One of the new faces—one never before seen on any screen, in fact—is that of Regina Sarle.

Production Commenced on "The Dangerous Talent"

AFTER a week's rest in Los Angeles, following the completion of scenes for her forthcoming picture, "The Hellion," Margarita Fisher has returned to the American studios in Santa Barbara. There she is engaged on a new special feature tentatively titled "The Dangerous Talent."

The story on which this picture is based was written by Daniel F. Whitcomb, with the screen adaptation credited to Lois Zellner. The production is being directed by George L. Cox, who had the direction of Miss Fisher's July release, "The Tiger-Lily."

Miss Fisher plays the role of a stenographer—a far cry from the heroines of picturesque calling whom she has portrayed in recent plays. Harry Hilliard appears opposite her in the part of a wealthy philanthropist. Mr. Hilliard is likewise new in Miss Fisher's experience, since Emory Johnson is the leading man who has previously been her vis-a-vis.

In the supporting cast are Beatrice Van, Mary Talbot, Harvey Clark, Neil Hardin and George Periolat.

Carey Appears in "Eternal Savage."

"The Eternal Savage" and "Pay Day" are the tentative titles of the newest Harry Carey production, work on which was started recently at Universal City. This is the story which was written by the star himself. Jack Ford is directing the production.

Kathleen O'Connor is Carey's leading woman.

J. Barney Sherry, Harry Van Meter, Johnnie Cooke, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Joe Harris and Ted Brooke, have prominent parts in the production.

Charles D. Isaacson

Cartoons Are Feature of Paramount Magazine

SEVERAL strong series of popular animated cartoons will be features of the Paramount Magazine, according to the production plans of Nathan H. Friend, head of the educational department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Ten subjects of the Paramount Magazine, which will be issued weekly beginning September 1, already have been completed.

The "Farmer Al Falfa" cartoons by Paul Terry will be seen regularly as one of the features of the Paramount Magazine. These cartoons are the first public motion picture work done by Mr. Terry in more than a year, for during the war he did special motion picture work for the surgeon general's department in Washington.

Besides this series there will be a new series of animated drawings entitled "Bud and Susan," by Frank Moser. Pat Sullivan, another well known cartoonist, also will have a series in which animals will provide an unusual amount of comedy.

Besides the cartoons and the epigrams of the Smart Set Magazine and Helen Rowland, who has achieved a country-wide reputation through her writings in the New York Evening World and syndicate papers, Mr. Friend also has made affiliations which will supply the Paramount Magazine with some of the best photographic material from all parts of the world.

Madge Kennedy in a Dramatic Vehicle.

The public which chuckled at Madge Kennedy in "Daughter of Mine" and in "Leave It to Susan," her last two Goldwyn pictures, will now have an opportunity to admire the winsome star in a more dramatic story than either of those two tales. "Through the Wrong Door," her new vehicle, has, of course, the same delightful Kennedy smile which brought smiles to the box offices and in the box offices, but the major premise of the picture is dramatic rather than comical.

Poli Circuit Books "Topics of the Day."

The S. Z. Poli Vaudeville Circuit, controlling a chain of variety theatres in the eastern part of the United States, has booked "Topics of the Day," the screen presentation of editorial wit and comment selected from the press of the world by "The Literary Digest."

New Faces Appear on Universal's Acting Staff

IN the producing of Universal's new fall releases as announced some time ago, Universal has signed some new players, re-engaged others and assigned some of its directors to new fields.

Some of the newer players and new assignments are Carl Miller, who supported Mildred Harris in several of her Lois Weber Jewel productions, and who was recently seen with Anita Stewart in "Mary Regan," a First National production, will play opposite Marie Walcamp in the continuation of "The Famous Spur and Saddle Stories" series of two-reel Western dramas which are now being made under George Holt's direction.

Kathleen O'Connor, who played opposite James Corbett in his recently completed serial, "The Midnight Man," has been re-engaged to be Harry Carey's new leading woman in his newest Western drama, "The Eternal Savage."

Kenneth Harlan, who supported Mae Murray, Mary MacLaren and Carmel Myers in Universal productions before joining the army, has returned to Universal City to be featured in the production just mentioned.

Helen Eddy ,who played opposite Monroe Salisbury in "The Blinding Trail" and "Hands Down," has been engaged to play the leading role in an all-star production, "Who Knows?" which Director George Seigmann is producing from the story by Kenneth B. Clark.

J. Barney Sherry, who supported Frank Mayo and Kathryn Adams in Lynn Reynolds production, "The Little Brother of the Rich," is playing in support of Harry Carey in "The Eternal Savage."

Anna May Walthal, sister of Henry Walthal, and well known for her recent work in the Carey production, "Bare Fists," has been cast for an important part in "Who Knows?" Gertrude Astor, who was last in Universal productions in support of Priscilla Dean in "Pretty Smooth," has been given a role of prominence in the same production.

George Holt, who has been directing Pete Morrison and Magda Lane in two-reel Westerns, has been given directorial tutelage over Marie Walcamp, while Jacques Jaccard, who previously directed Miss Walcamp, has been assigned to produce a five-reel feature.

George Walsh Goes Back to College in Fox Feature

A FEW years ago at Fordham University a youth named Walsh was making name and fame on the gridiron and diamond, and also in track athletics. His burning ambition then was to be the best athlete in his school. Today George Walsh is one of the William Fox stars, and in his latest Fox picture, "The Winning Stroke," he is living over again his college days when he was a star in a different firmament.

Walsh plays the part of a college oarsman, Buck Simmons, stroke of the great Yale crew. Unscrupulous students combine with a crooked gambler in an effort to discredit and dishonor Simmons, but he outwits them and triumphs in the end.

The film is urged as a good proposition for the exhibitor because it contains so many interesting sidelights, particularly views of this year's great Yale-Harvard race at New London, Conn. The Fox Company sent a corps of experienced cameramen to New London for the big regatta, and they snapped it from every angle. The result is a number of remarkable "shots" of this great water classic.

"The Bramble Bush" Completed.

Corinne Griffith, now that she has completed her new Vitagraph feature, "The Bramble Bush," is taking a well merited vacation before beginning her next picture. Her next feature will be "The Climbers," the play by the late Clyde Fitch.

"The Bramble Bush" tells the story of an innocent Southern girl who comes to New York to make her fortune.

For her supporting company Miss Griffith has Julia Swayne Gordon, Constance Beaumar, Denton Vane, Frank Mills and Robert W. Frazer. The picture was directed by Tom Terriss.

"The Trap" Shows New York Is Safer Place Than Yukon

THE opening scenes of "The Trap" are laid in the Yukon region of Alaska, and the first half of the drama continues in this atmosphere until it changes to the scenery of New York City. The story depicts the struggle of a young New York girl who has been reared in select surroundings to escape the terribleness of a sudden marriage with a reprobate of the Northern country. The action of the drama is intense, and through the story she is brought back to the city of her childhood, where she eventually finds real happiness.

Jere Austin is cast in a role of prominence, as is Rod LaRocque. He has played opposite Mabel Normand, opposite Mae Marsh in "Hidden Fires" and opposite Madge Kennedy. In this film he is a villain, this being the first time in two years that he has not had the hero role. Joseph Burke, who has the part of the father, has appeared in many of the Flagg comedies and in some Famous Players productions with John Emerson and Anita Loos. Others who have important roles in this production are Sidney Mason, Tallulah Bankhead and Earl Schenck.

"This Hero Stuff" Nearing Release.

American announces the completion of work on "This Hero Stuff," a satirical comedy in five acts, starring William Russell, based on the story by Stephen Fox, and directed by Henry King.

The story is a post-war narrative that pictures the homecoming of the athletic hero, fresh from the big fight, covered with medals and loaded down with honorable citations.

Winifred Westover is Russell's leading woman, and Mary Thurman, J. Barney Sherry, Charles K. French, Harvey Clark and J. Farrell MacDonald are prominent in the cast.

Kiddies See "Daddy Long Legs" at the Rex.

Following an exploitation campaign featured by a strong appeal to children, the Rex Theatre, Jackson, Mich., became the rendezvouz for hundreds of children of that city during the five-day run of "Daddy Long Legs," starring Mary Pickford, produced by her and released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

The Rex Theatre previously had catered to children with reduced prices at certain matinees. However, before the management could announce a free matinee for kids the children were reserving box seats with such enthusiasm that no special prices were offered, but on the other hand the free list was entirely suspended.

Hart in Story of Logging Camp.

The William S. Hart company is now in Santa Cruz filming logging scenes for "John Petticoats," the newest Artcraft film in which the Western actor is to be starred. These scenes will include a stunt wherein the star will ride a log down a swift current, seated astride. Bill appears as a rough lumberman who is suddenly projected into a modiste's shop —which he inherits. Lambert Hillyer directed, and the story is by C. Gardner Sullivan.

Select Announces One Special and Two Star Series Attractions for Release During August

SERGEANT GUY EMPEY in his forthcoming Select Pictures special attraction, "The Undercurrent"; Olive Thomas' Selznick picture, "The Spite Bride," and Eugene O'Brien in his first Selznick picture, a Ralph Ince production, "The Perfect Lover," comprise the list of attractions which Select Picture announces for release during the month of August.

In "The Undercurrent," which is announced as a photodrama of today, Sergeant Empey will be supported by Florence Evelyn Martin. William Addison Lathrop wrote the scenario from the original story by Guy Empey, and the direction was by Wilfrid North. "The Undercurrent" is a story of the returned soldier and the conditions with which he is met upon his return to this country from over there." In the supporting cast are Marguerite Courtot, Betty Blythe, Sally Crute, William Dunn, Charles A. Stevenson, Vera Boehm, Betty Hutchinson, Eugene Strong, Frederick R. Buckley, Arthur Donaldson, Frank Norcross and Harry Lee.

"The Spite Bride," in which Olive Thomas will be seen, is a story by Louise Winter, directed by Charles Giblyn. Miss Thomas is seen as Tessa Doyle, and her leading man is Jack Ellis. Miss Thomas, as Tessa Doyle, falls prey to Billy Swain, a young man who wants to get married in order to turn the tables on his erstwhile fiancee. Miss Thomas is supported by Jack Mulhall, Claire Du Brey, Irene Rich, Dorothy Wallace, Lamar Johnston and Katherine Griffith.

Eugene O'Brien's first Selznick picture, "The Perfect Lover," finds Mr. O'Brien in the most suitable role he has ever essayed on the screen. As Brian Lazar, a healthy, handsome, small-town artist, he worships his art and one other—Eileen Hawthorne.

"The Perfect Lover" is by Leile Burton Wells, and the scenario is by Edmund Goulding. The cast includes Lucille Lee Stewart, Marguerite Courtot, Mary Boland, Martha Mansfield and Tom McRayne.

Into "Checkers" Fox Puts Many Sensational Thrills

WILLIAM FOX, in announcing to the exhibitors a motion picture production of the sensational stage success, "Checkers," emphasizes the fact that the presentation of this play in screen form is on a scale that makes it more sensational than the stage version. It is announced as a "glorified edition" of the stage play.

Tremendous scenes—scenes that could not be attempted on the stage—are crowded into the picture. For example, at one point a seaplane swoops down over the river and picks up Checkers, the heroine, from a dory and carries her skyward. There is a sensational train wreck, a big gambling scene and a wonderful race track scene.

Richard Stanton directed the production of Henry M. Blossom, Jr.'s, racing melodrama, and it was made by an all-star cast headed by Thomas J. Carrigan and Jean Acker.

Coincident with this production of "Checkers" comes publication of a song entitled "Checkers," written by Lee Edwards and Edgar Allen, and published by McCarthy & Fisher, Inc. It is dedicated to the hero of the racing melodrama.

First Truex Two-Reel Comedy Has Capable Cast.

Ernest Truex is supported by a capable cast in his first two-reel comedy directed by John Joseph Harvey for Amedee J. Van Beuren. Mrs. Sidney Drew adapted the scenario from "The Night of the Dub," a story by Albert Payson Terhune, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

David Torrence is chief in support of the star. Vallie Belasco Martin, a cousin of David Belasco, plays the screen sweetheart of the star. Charles Haskins, who is seen as the theatre manager, is well known for his screen portrayals which date back to the Lubin pictures made in Philadelphia.

Other members of the cast include Arthur Rankin, Dan Duffy, Francis Pierlot, Roger Fowler, James Loughnan, Frank Killian, Edmund Carroll and Harry English.

Receive Good Reports on "The Challenge of Chance"

THE CHALLENGE OF CHANCE," Frank G. Hall's seven-reel special starring Jess Willard and Arline Pretty in a Western drama of love, mystery and adventure, is reported to be playing to big business by exhibitors in all sections of the country. According to reports from Independent Sales Corporation's branch managers the feature is accepted by the fans as a Western drama of merit. Throughout the South where this picture has played in all the larger cities the reports indicate that the feature has given the utmost satisfaction.

Mr. Hall, who is handling the distribution of the picture, announces that 114 prints are now working. During the second week of July these prints were working solid, the territory covered comprising the entire country.

Semon Has Aid of Animals in New Comedy.

A chimpanzee, a white rat and a kitten are leading aids to Larry Semon in his new comedy, "Between the Acts," which will soon be released by Vitagraph. The finished picture has reached here from the West Coast studio, and all who have seen it agree that it is quite the cleverest comedy yet presented by the comedian.

As the title would indicate, "Between the Acts" has to do with the theatre. The action takes place during a vaudeville performance. There is a stage within a stage. Sometimes, to add additional interest, Semon is a member of the audience and works in comedy from in front of the house. His main role, however, is a combination call-boy and property man backstage.

A Moment When Fear Is Winning.
Pauline Frederick still fights, however, in her Goldwyn, "The Fear Woman."

Now Filming Part Two of "Mothers of Men"

THE first half of "Mothers of Men," the first of the Edward Jose Productions for Film Specials, Inc., featuring Claire Whitney and Lumsden Hare, has just been completed. This takes in the German episodes of the book. Part two, which is composed of the French episodes of this novel by Henry William Warner and DeWitte Kaplan, was started recently, with Martha Mansfield in the role of the French girl, "Paulette."

This is the part originally assigned to Marguerite Courtot, but Miss Courtot could not be released on time by Chester Withey, who has been loaned by the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation to the Famous Players. Gaston Glass, the French actor, will play the part of Maurice, the French officer. William Gaxton, recently seen on Broadway in A. H. Woods comedies, also has an important role.

Nolan to Give "Sunnyside" Long Run.

J. R. Nolan, manager of the Bijou Dream, one of Cleveland's downtown second-run houses, is making preparations for an extensive run of the First National attraction, "Sunnyside," starring Charles Chaplin.

"Our audiences vary greatly from day to day. Because ours is a downtown house we draw patronage from the entire population of the city. Men drop in after lunch, and women, having finished their shopping early, come in for an hour before starting home.

"However, some people make express trips to our house to see Chaplin two or three times."

Lee Kiddies Go to Oil City for Exteriors.

In order to make the picture as realistic as possible and sparing no expense, though it is a two-reel comedy playlet, Lou Rogers, president of the Rogers Film Corporation, has sent Jane and Katherine Lee and the entire company to Oil City, Pa., for exterior work to complete the remaining touches to the picture.

The first exteriors were taken at Winsocket, R. I., in conjunction with the presentation of the Sells Floto Circus, which played there that week. This is a circus picture in the main, but it has a peculiar climax which will keep spectators guessing from start to finish.

Carey's Latest Is a Strong Western.

A western picture filled with unusual thrills is "The Ace of the Saddle," Universal's newest western photodrama featuring Harry Carey.

Mountains and plains serve as a background and the plot of the story circles around a cattle owner's ranch, which is located on the line between two counties.

Peggy Pearce plays opposite Carey. Other players who have important roles are Duke R. Lee, King Fisher Jones, Joe Harris, Zoe and Howard Enstedt.

"From Now On" Is Next George Walsh.

Fox Film Corporation announces that the next George Walsh picture will be from the story "From Now On," by Frank L. Packard. R. A. Walsh will direct the production, and has already begun casting for it. He is a brother of George Walsh, so that this picture brings the combination of brothers as star and director. "From Now On" was published in the All-Story Magazine.

"Down the Hillside Twisted the Gleaming Ribbon of German Bayonets"— When suddenly a hunka scenery fell in and disclosed the hoax. Shakespeare would turn to bathing girl comedies were he to see this burlesque in "Shades of Shakespeare," a forthcoming Christie special.

Five Four-Reel Features on World List for August

WORLD PICTURES announces that its August releases include four five-reel features. The stars represented in that month's issue are June Elvidge in "Coax Me," Dorothy Green and Arthur Ashley in "The Praise Agent," Lottie Kruse in "The Girl Alaska" and John Lowell, with Corene Uzelle and Edgar Keller, in "The Man Without a Name."

"Coax Me" was adapted by Philip Lonergan and Will C. Murphey from a popular play. It was directed by Gilbert Hamilton, and Miss Elvidge, the star, is supported by a cast of unusual excellence, which includes Earl Metcalfe, lately returned from France, where he served as a first lieutenant in the American Army; Arthur Donaldson and Lillian Hall.

August 11 is the date set for the release of "The Praise Agent," in which Dorothy Green and Arthur Ashley are the stars. This marks the second of a series of pictures they are making for the World Film Corporation under their contract. The story is by Earle Mitchell, well known to Broadway not alone as an actor, but the author of several pronounced dramatic hits. It was directed by Frank Crane. Mr. Crane was fortunate in securing the services of Jack Drumier, Lucille LaVerne, J. W. Johnston, Mrs. Priestly Morrison and Lola Frink to support the stars. It is a comedy, and offers special interest to the patrons of motion picture theatres during the heated term.

Lottie Kruse in "The Girl Alaska" is the release for August 18. This is probably the first picture feature made in Alaska. Five of the principals made the trip to the land of gold and glaciers to film the story, and were assisted by native Alaskans for the smaller parts. Aside from the interesting narrative told in pictures of gold hunting views are shown of the scenics of this land.

August 25 is the release date for "The Man Without a Name," in which John Lowell is the star, and features Corene Uzelle and Edgar Keller. It is a tale of the Northern woods made during the heart of the winter. It is a virile exposition of lumber camp life, and the story, although elemental, has the tensity requisite to suspense and sustained interest.

Among the specials that will be released by the World during the month of August is a one-reel Judge Brown story, "The Demand of Dugan." It is another leaf torn from Judge Brown's book of experiences while conducting a juvenile court in Salt Lake City.

To those interested in Prizma natural color pictures an addition will be made to its rapidly increasing list of subjects when "'Gators" will be released. This is a picture of alligator hunting and alligator farms in Florida filmed in nature's colors.

"Whose Baby" Title of Lyons-Moran Comedy.

The title of the first Lyons-Moran comedy made under the new program of the year by the two side-shakers is "Whose Baby." Mildred Moore is the leading woman in the first one of the new program.

"Strictly Confidential" Shows Curse of Nobility

MADGE KENNEDY'S latest Goldwyn picture, "Strictly Confidential," is the film version of Jerome K. Jerome's humorous story, "Fanny and the Servant Problem." The story was first made into a play under the title of "The New Lady Bantock," and in this form entertained thousands of playgoers in England and America. It deals with the many dilemmas of the young actress in a touring company who marries an English lord only to find that all her servants are her relatives.

As played by Madge Kennedy and John Bowers the film is a delightful example of fine comedy so delicately played that every shade of humor in the original story is emphasized with charm and comic suspense.

In support of Miss Kennedy, Robert Bolder gives an interpretation of the manager of the traveling theatrical troupe whose fatherly interest in the young actress leads to some of the inexplicable dilemmas of his ward when she has become a noblewoman. Again Lydia Yeamans Titus scores in a small part, that of the wife of the butler who terrorizes the household of the castle with his insistence upon the observing of traditional conventions. Herbert Standing as the butler furnishes some dry screen comedy.

Desmond's Latest Is a Strong Release.

Probably the most vigorous of all the Desmond plays is his latest Robertson-Cole production, "A Sagebrush Hamlet," distributed by Exhibitors Mutual, in which all of his rollicking fun making qualities are given a chance while the current of real drama runs throughout and permits of some strong situations. Desmond is supported by a strong cast in which are Marguerite De LaMotte and Frank Lanning.

Vitagraph Soon to Release "The Gamblers"

THE finishing touches have been put on "The Gamblers," Vitagraph's picturization of the play of high finance, jealousy and political ambition by the late Charles Klein.

"The Gamblers" was peculiarly susceptible to picturization, and the adapters —Sam Taylor and Lucien Hubbard—have taken advantage of every opportunity to visualize many tense and exciting scenes which were only referred to in the stage version.

The adapters closely have followed the original play by Mr. Klein, making only such changes in the action as would improve the story for screen purposes. A somewhat radical change has also been made in the motive of the district attorney in his prosecution and almost persecution of the gamblers.

In the acted play the district attorney was instigated by political ambition; in the screen version it is jealousy of his wife, who previously had been engaged to marry one of the legally, if not morally, guilty men. Then, too, the dominant character of Wilbur Emerson has been written with fine finesse, and sympathy for him has been maintained throughout, nothwithstanding his neglect of his fiancee and his questionable financial dealings. Mr. Morey, who assumes the role of Emerson, has gotten completely into the spirit of the character and gives one of the best performances of his notable career.

Bessie Barriscale Proves Her Versatility.

Bessie Barriscale, the Robertson-Cole star, has never had a better opportunity to show her versatility than in "The Woman Michael Married," her latest Robertson - Cole production released through Exhibitors Mutual. In the role of Mira, the professional swimmer, Miss Barriscale astonished even her director with her diving and swimming.

In the story, Miss Barriscale changes with chameleon like swiftness from an unsophisticated little swindler to a charming society woman who wears beautiful gowns with grace and ease as the wife of Michael Ordsay, the rich young clubman, and then to a celebrated international opera singer.

Clever Ford Sterling and First Holmes European Travelogue on Paramount Bill

"AMONG THOSE PRESENT" is the title of the newest Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy which is listed among the short subjects released July 20 by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. In this comedy Ford Sterling and Phyllis Haver are the featured players, and there is the usual amount of Sennett rapid-fire action.

In the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelogue, "American Women in France," which also is released July 20, Burton Holmes adds his bit to the debt of gratitude owed by civilization to the American women who went to France during the last years of the war. They founded the American Fund for French wounded and administered its activities, carrying comforts to the wounded at the front.

Among the scenes shown are—Nursing the wounded at Neuilly and Auteuil at the base hospitals; the American girls on duty at the old Casino in Aix-le-Bains; scenes in the munition works around Paris, and others.

In the Paramount-Bray Pictograph released July 20, is embodied a feature which is one of a series on "Little Known New York." This number is titled "The Old Clothes Curb Market," and shows how the "Old Clo'" man gathers his stock in trade, how the used garments are sorted and how some of them find their way into small shops to be sold as new.

Alice Lake Has Third Leading Role with Lytell

ALICE LAKE'S appearance in the forthcoming Screen Classics, Inc., production of the Hattons' stage comedy, "Lombardi, Ltd.," will mark the third time that this screen actress has played leading business in support of Bert Lytell. Mr. Lytell's big new starring vehicle is to be distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation.

In "Lombardi, Ltd.," Miss Lake is cast as Norah Blake, the devoted little shop assistant to the Italian male modiste.

"Almost a Husband" Is Rogers' Latest.

A comedy drama with a really unique twist is such a rarity that the plot of "Almost a Husband," the new Goldwyn release in which Will Rogers is starred, comes as a pleasure, a double pleasure; the first for the "twist" and the second for the histrionic ability which Rogers displays. In this picture the humorist shows that he is an actor as well—an actor with an intellectual grasp of his medium and character and the personality to express his understanding with clarity and force and humor! Rogers plays the parts of the homely village school teacher who "accidentally" gets married and finds out immediately that his troubles begin.

In his depiction of the ugly yet extremely likable and humorous schoolmaster Rogers shows that he can impress his personality on the screen as when in flesh he ruled the Follies. He is supported by an excellent cast.

Harold Lloyd in "Never Touched Me."

Harold Lloyd in another Rolin Film comedy is announced by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., for release only July 27. It is titled "Never Touched Me," and presents, besides the star, Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels, two accomplices whom Llo has in the job of making an audien laugh.

The scenes are placed in the Killy Cafe, where "everything is first class e cept the food and the service."

Pathe Reports Capellani's "Oh Boy!" Going Strong All Over—Is Given Big Exploitation

THE first of the Albert Capellani productions, the film version of the country-wide musical comedy success, "Oh, Boy," is taking the big houses by storm and receiving a surpassing measure of promotion and publicity, according to information furnished by Pathe. Following its start of two weeks at the Ziegfield, Chicago, the smashing of records at the Rialto, in Denver; the Colonial, Indianapolis, and the Rialto, Des Moines, it is predicted from Omaha that it will do even greater business there, where it is booked at the Muse. Contracts have just been closed with the Liberty Theatre, of Spokane, for a showing there during August 10, 11, 12 and 13, and Director of Exchanges Quimby, who sends word to the home office, tells of the popular appeal of the Capellani special throughout the West.

Despite the warmest weather Salt Lake City has had in many years, "Oh Boy," at the American Theatre, played to capaccity business. It is reported that Messrs. Mayme and Swanson, of the house, were highly elated, declaring the "Filmusical" comedy to be the best and most wholesome comedy ever shown in that theatre, and that the audience was continually in roars of laughter.

The Capellani product will get high voltage advertising and exploitation not only in Omaha, but also in Cleveland, where it has been booked at the Opera House, which has a seating capacity of 2,500. The management readily agreed to spend in local newspaper advertising between $2,500 and $3,000. And, in addition, the Opera House having about forty 24-sheet stands at advantageous points about the city, these will be occupied by the "Oh Boy" poster.

The Muse, at Omaha, is a suburban theatre, eight blocks from the downtown district, and it is interesting to know the manner in which it is planned to put the picture over. In spite of its location, the house is in direct competition with the downtown house. The picture is to run an entire week and will inaugurate their new policy of big pictures only at advance prices.

They are posting 100 eight-sheet stands, 10 twenty-four sheets, 1,000 one-sheets and 500 window cards.

Mr. Ballentino, of the Muse, with the aid of Manager Graham, of the Pathe Omaha branch, has arranged a campaign with the department stores and music stores on "Oh Boy" music, and the principal soda fountains will soon be selling an "Oh Boy" fizz. The orchestra at the Muse is playing selections from "Oh Boy" at every performance, although the picture does not open until August 3.

Mary McIvor Has Part in "Chasing Rain-Beaux"

MARY McIVOR plays two parts in the cast which presents "Smiling Bill's" latest Capitol comedy, "Chasing Rain-Beaux," which Goldwyn distributes.

As the wife of "Smiling Bill," Mary McIvor pouts and rants with unusual vehemence when she believes her husband is untrue to her, and later when he forms a similar impression of her and goes on a rampage she is the terrified creature seeking only a way of escaping his uncontrollable wrath. As her own twin sister, she is the affectionate spouse of a big, lumbering, good-natured man whose two missions in life are to make love to his wife and to avoid the clutches of a zealous process server.

The other members of the cast, especially the "Jess Willard" giant who plays the twin sister's husband, do their share in advancing the comedy spirit. They lighten the work of "Smiling Bill" by acting as foils.

"I Sincerely Promise to Wreck the Head Waiter's Right Eye."
It takes a lot of persuasion to wring this promise from Bill Russell, but Bill is a modern superman in his American feature, "This Hero Stuff."

Maxwell Karger Chooses Next Starring Vehicles for Viola Dana, Bert Lytell and May Allison

MAXWELL KARGER, Screen Classics, Inc., director general, has selected the starring vehicles for Viola Dana, Bert Lytell and May Allison that will follow respectively "Please Get Married," "Lombardi, Ltd.," and "Fair and Warmer," in which these three stars are now working at the company's studios on the Pacific coast.

"The Willow Tree" and "Shore Acres" are to be the second and third of Miss Dana's plays produced by Screen Classics, Inc., and distributed by Metro under its "fewer, bigger and better" pictures policy. Bert Lytell is to follow "Lombardi, Ltd." with "Someone in the House," Larry Evans' mystery drama which enjoyed a Broadway run. For Miss Allison's second picture Karger has selected "The Walk-Offs," from the pens of Frederic and Fanny Hatton.

"The Willow Tree," a Japanese fantasy in three acts by J. H. Benrimo and Harrison Rhodes, was one of the sensations of the 1917-1918 theatrical season, when it played an extended engagement at the Cohan and Harris Theatre. "Shore Acres," also selected for Miss Dana, is to be an elaborate screen version of James A. Herne's success of the stage, which has had a vogue of thirty years before American audiences.

Ford Educationals Show Rockies and Canal Zone

TWO new Ford Educational Weeklies are announced for release by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. One is a story of the city where Panama hats originated; the other is a trip through the Canadian Rockies.

In "A Panama Hat," the cameraman lands in the city of Panama and reveals the native customs of this old city in the Canal Zone. The sweeping changes which the coming of the Canal have brought to this formerly disease-infected town are flashed alluringly on the screen. What was formerly a straggling town is now a flourishing city with modern schools, facilities for sanitation, beautiful public buildings, parks and modern villas. The hat-making industry is carefully followed from the gathering of the straw to the weaving, blocking and marketing of the hats that have made the little town famous.

"God's Handiwork" presents the wonders of the Canadian Rockies, where the hand of man has not disfigured the sheer mountain crags that stretch their straggling peaks heavenward. The strange and beautiful effects of the sun at various levels creates a series of lovely pictures. The lakes in the distance, the plains far below, the clouds on the mountain tops all pass in panorama before the relentless eye of the camera.

"Teeth of the Tiger" Has an All Star Cast

THE production "Teeth of the Tiger," featuring David Powell and Marguerite Courtot, is nearing completion under direction of Chet Withey at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in New York.

The production is a detective story by Maurice LeBlanc, creator of the character of Arsene Lupin. This story deals with the return of Arsene Lupin, who has supposedly met his death. The scenario was written by Roy Somerville.

David Powell plays the part of Arsene Lupin, Marguerite Courtot portrays Florence Fauville, Myrtle Stedman plays the role of Marie Fauville, Templar Saxe appears as Antoine Weber, Riley Hatch, Mazeroux, is in a part well suited to him Charles L. Macdonald, as the Chief of Detectives, is making his second venture in motion pictures; Charles Girard takes the part of Gaston Sauverand.

Al Ligouri is cameraman and M. L. Webb is assisting Mr. Withey in the directing.

To Start Work on "His Father's Wife."

June Elvidge, having completed "Love and the Woman" under the direction of Gilbert P. Hamilton, starts next Monday at the World Studio at Fort Lee in a new picture entitled "His Father's Wife" and will be directed by Frank Crane.

ESSANAY

AGAIN
AS USUAL

First Again! As Usual are the News

beats in THE BIG THREE. In International News

issued on July 23rd and exhibited on July 24th occurred the showing of news pictures of the fatal dirigible disaster. Three days later—on July 26th—our nearest "would be" "competitor" showed scenes of this big news event. This is just one instance that occurs and has occurred every week ever since the BIG THREE were organized.

If you have any doubt as to how regularly and how often we scoop them and "beat" them, just get these figures planted. In 93 news events in weekly news pictures THE BIG THREE either scooped or beat competition 32 times, while this "competition" beat THE BIG THREE just twice out of 162 subjects. Imagine that for a minute. They beat us 2 times to our beating and scooping them 32 times—AND WE HAVE THE FACTS AND FIGURES DOWN IN BLACK AND WHITE TO PROVE OUR ASSERTIONS, on—

HEARST NEWS

UNIVERSAL CURRENT EVENTS

We will publish a list or a partial list of a few of THE BIG THREE Scoops and beats in ads to come. We are going to get this thing settled once for all. We are not for one minute going to allow any competitor to get away with anything but the truth, and when you know "the truth" you'll ignore every news weekly except the Big Three if you want THE LATEST NEWS EVERY WEEK. News in papers is news ONLY WHEN IT IS NEW. When it's old, it's simply "old stuff" that millions have already seen. So we repeat it again—then once more, then again—IF YOU WANT THE LATEST AND GREATEST WEEKLY NEWS PICTURE EVERY WEEK, book the "BIG THREE."

The Biggest Motion Picture Week

THE first purpose of Paramount-Artcraft Week is to make money for the exhibitor. Its secondary purpose is to show the exhibitor and the huge motion picture public what Paramount-Artcraft really means in the field of the photoplay.

There is one way to accomplish these two purposes. That way is to make the Paramount-Artcraft Week for 1919, sure-fire in financial and artistic success, by giving the public the best entertainment in motion pictures to be had anywhere; and to show by exploitation where to get that entertainment.

BOOK THE FULL WEEK

"YOUR PICTURES ONLY"
We beg to advise that Paramount-Artcraft Week in this theatre is every week in the year. We have used nothing but Paramount-Artcraft features for years. Every week is Paramount-Artcraft Week with us. We are thoroughly in sympathy with your efforts to put over a Paramount-Artcraft Week, but can only point to the fact that we exhibit solely pictures from your company to prove what we think of your services.
J. A. PARTINGTON, Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, Cal.

"FROM FAILURE TO SUCCESS"
This house was a loser until 1917, and the owners had about decided to close up when I stepped in and booked an exclusive program of Paramount-Artcraft Pictures, with instantaneous success. I am happy to extend my best wishes to you, and I hope that you will keep the good work up by handing me some more of your great productions in the future.
SAMUEL DAVIDSON, Apollo Theatre, Nantasket, Mass.

"THE BEST CLASS"
I had great success with Paramount-Artcraft last year. Used them exclusively. Paramount-Artcraft appeals to a good class of people. The best class.
P. MAGARO, Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa.

"GOT THE BUSINESS"
We got the business last year (Paramount-Artcraft Week) and the impression it created has lasted ever since.
RUDY SCHLEUSENER, Superba Theatre, Alhambra, Cal.

"BEST ON MARKET"
I have made money with Paramount-Artcraft Pictures. In my opinion, they are the best on the market.
HARRIET ZIMMERMAN, Berwyn Theatre, Berwyn, Pa.

"PATRONS PLEASED"
Our patrons were pleased at seeing the better class of pictures.
DAN MYERS, Broadway Theatre, Muskogee, Okla.

"FULL WEEK"
Have had Paramount-Artcraft Week practically every week for several years. Will try to run full week of August 31, though it entails cancellation of other bookings.
HENRY W. GAUDING, Lincoln Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"NOTHING BUT PARAMOUNT"
Last year the Paramount-Artcraft Week was so successful at our theatre that we ran only Paramount-Artcraft Picures all year. If we are assured of such courteous treatment for the coming year, we shall repeat for next year.
ARTHUR L. MORTENSEN, Y. M. C. A., Nazareth, Pa.

"ON A BIG SCALE"
Have requested bookings for nine pictures during Paramount-Artcraft Week. We are going to use your twenty-four sheets, sixes, threes and ones all over Watertown, and will put the week over on a big scale.
JAMES P. PAPAYANAKOS, Watertown, N. Y.

"GLAD TO CO-OPERATE"
Last year there were three papers here, and we used all daily. We advertise every day. I am glad you are going to use some Paramount-Artcraft advertising here this year, and assure you we will co-operate in every way.
W. W. WATTS, Vaudette Amusement Co., Springfield, Ill.

"WENT OVER BIG"
It is needless to say that Paramount-Artcraft Week went over big, when I considered it a privilege and a pleasure to sign and return by next mail.
G. H. COOKE, Hub Theatre, Mill Valley, Cal.

"GREAT"
I think the Paramount-Artcraft Week idea is great, and I know it will help keep these pictures where they belong—at the head of all.
F. C. GILSON, Please-U Theatre, St. Johnsbury, Vt.

"EVERY WEEK"
Every week is Paramount-Artcraft Week with us, and I hope our pleasant associations may continue in the future.
G. A. RAMSDELL, Orpheum Theatre, Malden, Mass.

"A BIG WEEK"
We intend to mention it in all our newspaper ads, on the 100 special one sheets which we get printed twice a week, on all our programs, newspaper writeups, and of course on the slides. With your advertising assistance, we are looking forward to a big week.
A. C. KARSKI, Royal Theatre, San Francisco, Cal.

"GOOD SUCCESS"
I had good success last year, and expect the same this year. I hope that every brother exhibitor will have the same success with Paramount-Artcraft Pictures that I had and still have.
A. FISHER, Gray Opera House, St. Anthony, Idaho.

"EVERY WEEK"
Every week is a Paramount-Artcraft Week at the Paramount-Empress, and every week is a pretty successful week in the bargain.
GEORGE E. CARPENTER, Mgr., Paramount-Empress, Salt Lake City.

"GREAT TONIC"
My Paramount-Artcraft Week last year was a great success. I consider it a great tonic for out-of-season business. The same goes for any season, for that matter. It is really a wonderful opportunity for an exhibitor.
W. H. MILLER, Olympia Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

"SHOULD BE EVERY WEEK"
The exhibitor who knows should make every week Paramount Artcraft Week. If any exhibitor wants to make a success and swell his box-office receipts, let him tell the public that he has Paramount Artcraft Pictures. Enough said.

"SURE SUCCEEDED"
For last year's Paramount-Artcraft Week we had two billboards advertising it a month ahead, also double advertising in all the papers every day and special handbills. And we sure succeeded that week. We will do all the local advertising to put the week over this year as we did last.
SAM EPSTEIN, Besse Theatre, Omaha, Neb.

"SHOW EVERY FEATURE"
Bookings for the preceding month (August) show only one picture from other than your organization. Up to the present bookings, every feature produced or released by your organization has been shown at the Art Theatre.
F. R. FANCHER, Pavilion and Art Theatres, Redondo Beach, Cal.

"BROUGHT THE RESULTS"
Last year we advertised 100 per cent. Paramount-Artcraft, and with the publicity to the week given by your local exchange, we played to one of the biggest weeks of the year.
C. H. ROSS, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, Mass.

"WON OVER HUNDREDS"
We did extra advertising, making Paramount-Artcraft Week stand out bold. We won over hundreds of people who knew little about your pictures before. A great idea.
L. O'BRIEN, Pavilion Theatre, Peaks Island, Me.

"BEAT ALL RECEIPTS"
My people were sure hungry to see one solid week of the best pictures in the world. The box-office receipts for Paramount-Artcraft Week proved that to me. These were way in advance of any week prior to or since. This year I am not only tying up with the week but have also booked August and September solid Paramount-Artcraft.
H. S. RENTZ, San Toy Theatre, Reading, Pa.

"GOOD IDEA"
I found your Paramount-Artcraft Week last year a good idea, and I expect to do the same this year. As I use all the Paramount-Artcraft Pictures in my house I am running four and five days solid all the time.
E. H. ROYER, Franklin Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

"OVER THE TOP"
Paramount-Artcraft Week over the top. General advertising good, backed by "the goods." Every week a Paramount-Artcraft Week.
C. W. YOAKUM, Skagit Theatre, Clear Lake, Wash.

"GLAD TO DO IT AGAIN"
We are pleased to state that Paramount-Artcraft Week last year was quite successful. We shall gladly book a solid week of Paramount-Artcraft Pictures again this year, and offer our heartiest co-operation in making it a success. A Paramount-Artcraft Week pays, because it's a Paramount-Artcraft Week nationally advertised.
J. D. PHILLIPS, Art Theatre, Seymour, Conn.

HAS RUN "EVERY REEL"
Have had Paramount-Artcraft Week practically every week for several years. Have run every reel your company has produced since Famous Players was first organized. Will try to run the full week of August 31. This entails cancelling of other bookings.
HENRY W. GAUDING, Lincoln Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"HUGE SUCCESS"
Judging from the comments we received from our patrons, and also from the box-office receipts, I can truthfully say that Paramount-Artcraft Week last year was a huge success. We tied up our theatre with your nation-wide campaign, using fifteen twenty-four sheet boards and several pages of advertising in the local newspapers.
STANLEY CHAMBERS, Palace Theatre, Wichita, Kan.

"ALL THERE WAS IN IT"
We took advantage of your 1918 Paramount-Artcraft Week, and you bet we got all there was in it. We covered every barn, fence and pole, sent post cards through the mails, used one and six sheets, handbills, autos with banners, and sent up balloons.
F. C. HALL, Hall's Opera House, Belmont, N. H.

"PHENOMENAL SUCCESS"
Paramount-Artcraft Week last year was a phenomenal success for my theatre. Since then my patrons have been following up my advertisements on billboards, street cars, newspapers, etc. For the 1919 Week, I expect to work on a much larger scale, and I hope I will meet with the same success as I did in 1918.
MARCUS BENN, Benn Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

"BEST WEEK IN TEN YEARS"
I am pleased to hear you are going to have another Paramount-Artcraft Week this year. It will be great news for my patrons, who I know were very much pleased last year. This week was one of the biggest I have had in ten years, due in great measure to the advertising and the class of pictures shown. I used billboards over an area of fourteen miles, slides, newspaper ads and lobby display. As you have a wonderful advertising staff, I would be very pleased if you would put me on your list for your accessories for this year.
J. B. KINCADE, North Shore Theatre, Gloucester, Mass.

"FILLED THE HOUSE"
During Paramount-Artcraft Week we filled the house every night. Our only complaint was our small seating capacity.
IRA G. BETTS, Varsity Theatre, Palo Alto, Cal.

"BOOSTED SINCE THE FIRST"
The Garden Theatre is Paramount-Artcraft every week, and we are already arranging to make another of our theatres Paramount-Artcraft. We are one of your oldest accounts, and have boosted Paramount-Artcraft since the first five-reel picture was made.
S. E. GREENBAUM, Garden Theatre Amusement Co., Davenport, Iowa.

Mabel Normand in "Upstairs" is funnier than ever—and money-er than ever.

As a poor little slavey in the cellar of the big hotel, Mabel Normand is bound to get your sympathy.

And with her inimitable drolleries, such as shooting billiards with a mop handle and three cherries, she is bound to get your laughter.

One day the lure of the jazz band caught her, and she crept Upstairs.

The doors of the ballroom swung open to a paradise of love and life, which rounded out the greatest photo-play of the funniest lady of the screen.

You will show it as Mabel Normand in "Upstairs."

EVOLUTION

Number Three

The Trade Papers of June 28th and July 19th carried my first and second advertisement "EVOLUTION."

THE ECONOMIC TRINITY: — — — Producer — Middleman —Consumer — — are inevitable BEDFELLOWS; but the end-men are usually kicking the middleman under the blankets.

This is true of FILMS as well as of FACTORY and FARM products.

While the actual CONSUMER of films is the PUBLIC, for TRADE purposes we may consider the EXHIBITOR to be the consumer: the EXCHANGE is the middleman.

Sometimes the producer tries to ELIMINATE the middleman and deals directly with the ULTIMATE consumer, as when the Super-feature is placed in a THEATRE leased for special exploitation.

The MIDDLEMAN, however, serves an important function and CANNOT be ELIMINATED.

Being an INEVITABLE factor in the business of getting films to the public, the exchange must function EFFICIENTLY and remove the prejudice by SERVICE, to Exhibitor and Producer.

A review of film DISTRIBUTION since the birth of the NICKELODEON in 1906 shows that it has steadily IMPROVED. The dinky exchange of that period, with its LACK of SYSTEM, its endless ERRORS in bookkeeping, its INCOMPETENT handling of films—in booking, in repair and shipping rooms, its DESTRUCTIVE COMPETITION, cannot be compared with the PRESENT DAY exchange.

In spite of current fault-finding, it is vastly SUPERIOR to its predecessors. It has a BROADER and more SYMPATHETIC attitude toward the exhibitor.

With exceptions, of course, with exceptions.

I am laying a fundation for PRODUCTION and DISTRIBUTION. To be enduring it must be FLEXIBLE. I do not believe in long-time contracts in this business, except of the most general nature.

PARALLEL INTERESTS will hold business men together better than formal contracts. MUTUAL CONFIDENCE is the best cement.

Producer, Distributor and Exhibitor must be CO-ORDINATE POWERS in the industry.

The Producer, grinding out product in UNENDING footage, compelling a GROANING exchange to force it upon a RESISTING exhibitor, is FADING out of the scene.

The Exhibitor is no longer compelled to eat an eight-course dinner to get the single dish which he wants.

Let the Producer take his HEAVY HAND off the Exchange; give it reasonable FREEDOM in the SELECTION of films, and freedom in DEALING with EXHIBITORS.

EQUAL RIGHTS, no DOMINATION, FREEDOM of action, mutual RESPECT—within the Trinity—are on the horizon.

There is no ROYAL ROAD to successful production. With the beginning of every new feature, FAILURE is knocking at the door. No Producer DELIBERATELY turns out failures.

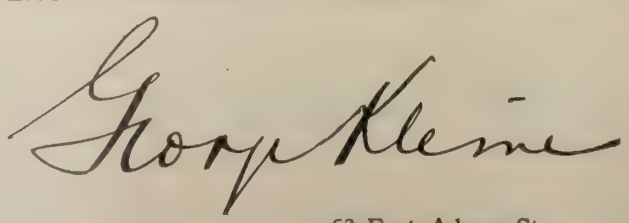
The diatribes of some critics read as if the making of a POOR PICTURE were a delight and the pastime of men who love to WASTE money. There has been waste, due to the conditions that controlled the industry, but it is being lessened as the business becomes stabilized.

The film business has ETERNITY ahead of it, but the businesses composing it may be SHORT-LIVED. Success and Failure follow each other in quick succession. Film concerns that do not yield to EVOLUTIONARY PRESSURE, die.

I am neither a REFORMER nor a RADICAL: I dislike reformers, except those who reform themselves; and radicals usually like change for changes' own sake. I try to analyze trade conditions as they affect my business, to read the barometer of the FUTURE, and having a distinct OBJECTIVE, to drive toward it; always believing in co-operation, to add momentum to the DRIVING FORCE.

My own Productions will be made LEISURELY, each department in COMPETENT hands, avoiding above all things a SET quantity within a given time; I believe in INTENSIVE work upon one theme—the BIG THEME, if it can be found, in the hands of a BIG DIRECTOR—not necessarily a SPOTLIGHT director; not caring particularly whether the product is one or twelve Superfeatures per annum; built without HASTE, but without WASTE.

They will be marketed through SYNDICATE SUPER-FEATURES, INC., and will be offered to—not forced upon—the AFFILIATED INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES OF THE WORLD.



63 East Adams St.
Chicago.

ALL HARTFORD ACCLAIMS

The Edward A. MacManus

SUPREME REPRODUCTION

Of Our Country's Most Heroic Fighters

The Lost Battalion

Now showing at the Grand Theatre (Hartford) daily to packed houses that are thrilled with the spirit of patriotism that seems to leap from the screen: with the spirit of romance that veils the tragedy of war, and with the spirit of hope that springs eternal for a world enduring, all world peace. The epitome of faith, hope charity.

Flashed to New York to the most notable of all New York's Evening Newspapers, THE EVENING JOURNAL reflashes to its MILLION READERS: "'THE LOST BATTALION' as a production excels in photography, originality and scenic effects. In fact, it is one of the most remarkable screen features ever produced; rivaling anything ever attempted before; greater both in story and romance than 'The Birth of a Nation,' and excelling the latter production in its originality, if not artistically."

THE EVER RELIABLE HARTFORD COURANT sparkles with praise as it rises to a critical penultimate: "Somehow, in some miraculous manner, the producer and director of 'THE LOST BATTALION' have caught the glorious spirit of the American doughboy, and in every scene filmed is reincarnated for history the homely, humorous and noble characteristics of the product of the 'melting pot of the nations'—the American soldier. In its mighty playing on the chord of human interest, in its appeal to the individual's patriotic pride and, lastly, in its power to produce tears of laughter and tears that spring from sight of rows on rows of tiny white crosses in a graveyard in France, 'THE LOST BATTALION' is far superior to 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

NOW READ THIS WIRE!!!

"The Lost Battalion" has smashed all box-office records for the Grand Theatre, Hartford, on Monday night, Tuesday matinee and Tuesday night performances. The Hartford Courant, Post Times and Globe proclaim it the greatest picture ever shown here. Congratulations!—Frank Quinlan, Manager.

Founded by J. P. CHALMERS 1907

Two Shows Simultaneously Run in Texas Movie House

YOU may have heard of community churches, but J. H. Judia, of Cisco, Texas, is ready to gamble that he wns the only community moving picure show in America. The Judia pened early in July, and houses under he roof of its three story building bout thirty different enterprises.

For instance, in the theatre proper here is an ice cream parlor. Movie ans can eat ice cream as the films run. A special arrangement in this section f the house turns every chair into a mall table on which refreshments may e served.

Theatre Runs Two Shows.

The Judia Theatre is perhaps the most emarkable theatre in America since t combined two theatres in one. The layhouse cost $75,000, and is divided nto two sections. It has two operating ooths and four projecting machines. One half of the house is devoted to irst run pictures at 50 cents, and one-half is for second run pictures at 25 ents. For sixty cents, on Saturday ights, the fan can get a round trip icket permitting him to see both shows.

In the middle of the week, Mr. Judia, should business be poor, will close the main theatre, which seats 450, and run the annex, which seats 275. In this way he saves lights and other items of operating expense. When business is good, as it always is at the end of the week and its beginning, both shows are going in full blast. A big organ in the theatre provides music for both shows.

The Cisco Commercial Club has offices in the Judia Theatre. So have twenty-six oil firms. There is a shoe shining stand right in the theatre, where a man can get a shine and watch the movies as the shoeblack works.

J. H. Judia has patented his theatre plans. He is an inventor of some note, the government having adopted his plans for the improvement of army air planes during the war.

Exhibitors' Organization Against Daylight Saving

IT was announced by the committee on legislation and tax of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., that an active canvass of Congress has begun to enlist the support of every member of the national law making body in repealing the daylight saving law.

That the daylight saving law, which came into being as a war measure, has had a disastrous effect upon a great number of motion picture theatres is shown by the fact that exhibitors throughout the country are continually protesting upon the further operation of this war time law.

The Northwest exhibitors, in convention at Seattle, went on record as opposed to a continuation of daylight saving and the committee on legislation and tax is in receipt of requests from exhibitors in many sections to take a stand against it.

While the canvass is under way, exhibitors are urged to communicate their opposition to the daylight saving bill to their Senators and Congressmen, especially to those who voted against its repeal.

Cincinnati Exchanges Are Moving Against Bicycling

AT A meeting of the Cincinnati Associated Film Exchange Managers of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce held during the past week, the question of devising ways and means to stamp out the practice of "bicycling."

It is stated by officers of the association that this practice has been indulged in to a large extent by some of the exhibitors. The usual procedure is to rent a film for one or two days and then to retain it for an extended period, sometimes as much as two weeks or more, and circulate it among theatres in the smaller towns, with payment being made for the original showing only. This practice has been growing to an alarming extent, the managers claim, and it has become absolutely necessary to do something to overcome it.

At the present time no drastic measures are to be inaugurated, the main reliance being put in efforts to educate the offending managers to the injustice of such procedure. Secretary C. V. Zimmerman, of the exchange association, said that he believed that when the proposition was placed in the proper light, many of those who have indulged in this practice will see the right thing and do it, without any necessity of resorting to extreme measures. However, the exchanges are prepared to go the whole distance, if necessary, to see that the imposition is discontinued.

Treasurer Linton of Utica Charges Black Theatre Fails to Co-operate

THE New York State League, of which Sydney S. Cohen is president, has declined to make any statement in reply to the letter from Alfred S. Black, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, which was printed in the Moving Picture World last week.

W. H. Linton, of the Hippodrome Theatre of Utica, and the treasurer of the New York State organization, has written a letter in which he takes exception to the statement of Mr. Black, whom he alludes to as "president of the recent St. Louis meeting" regarding the situation in Utica.

Mr. Black, it will recalled, asked what the New York organization had done to aid the theatre men in Utica to obtain Sunday opening. Mr. Linton charges that the Park Theatre has failed to co-operate with other exhibitors in that city to further the fight for Sunday opening. His letter is as follows:

MY attention has been called to the statement of Mr. Alfred S. Black, president of the recent St. Louis meeting, in which he says that he owns a large interest in and represents the Park Theatre in Utica, N. Y. Mr. Black asks what the league has done to help in opening the motion picture theatres of Utica on Sundays since the bill was passed.

As I am the owner of the Hippodrome Theatre in Utica and several other theatres in this Senatorial district, and, together with Mr. Donlon, of the Avon Theatre, am in charge of the Sunday campaign in Utica, I feel that some reply is due to Mr. Black.

Mr. Black is ill-informed when he says that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York State has done nothing for Sunday opening in Utica. On the contrary, the exhibitors of Utica have received all the help they have ever needed from the league, and I may say that the help has been most valuable.

If Sunday opening is not as yet an accomplished fact in Utica the cause is to be found in certain local circumstances with which we are now contending and which we eventually hope to control. In the meantime I will thank Mr. Black, who says he represents the Park Theatre, if he will use his influence with the management of that theatre to induce it to pay its proportionate share of the expenses incurred in the prosecution of the campaign in Utica. The Park Theatre has refused to pay it, and other exhibitors in the city have had to pay it for the Park Theatre, I personally contributing to make up for the deficiency caused by the desertion of the Park. Please publish these facts in fairness to all parties concerned.

W. H. LINTON,
Hippodrome Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

WILL ENTERTAIN ROCHESTER MEETING

Members of National Association Are To Be Guests of George Eastman During Their Visit

ADVANCE indications point to a most successful and enjoyable gathering of motion picture men when the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry meets in Rochester on Aug. 5 and 6. This will be the third annual meeting and will probably see the mingling of more members of the association than on any similar occasion since the inception of the association in June, 1916.

Elaborate plans are being made for the reception and entertainment of the members by George Eastman, whose generosity is responsible for the meeting being held at Rochester this year. The members will be Mr. Eastman's guests from the time they leave New York until their return to that city, and aside from the business of the sessions it is anticipated that the many events scheduled will cause them long to bear a pleasant memory of their trip to the Kodak City.

Charters Special Train.

Mr. Eastman has chartered a special train for the use of the members. It will leave the Grand Central station at 11.30 o'clock on Monday night, arriving in Rochester shortly after 8 o'clock on Tuesday morning. The delegates will be taken to the Seneca Hotel, which will be their headquarters during their stay and where the meetings will be held. After a review of the activities of the association during the past year, reports of committees and presentation of plans for the next year, officers will be elected.

On Tuesday afternoon the visitors will be shown the wonders of the Kodak Park plant, including an actual demonstration of the various processes of making film. A dinner in their honor will be given at the plant on Tuesday evening. The party will return to New York on a special train leaving Rochester at midnight and reaching New York at the beginning of business Wednesday.

Propose National Academy.

It is understood that while the members are here Mr. Eastman will make some important announcements in connection with the National Academy of Motion Picture Art which he proposes to found. No definite announcement has been forthcoming concerning this matter, but the proposed plans have been generally mooted for some time, and it is apparent that a lively curiosity has been aroused in Mr. Eastman's expected announcement. Samuel Rothapfel is to be one of the directing geniuses of the institution, which also will maintain a large symphony orchestra conducted by a man of national prominence as a musician.

North to Act as District Manager.

Tom North, special short subjects sales manager for Fox Film Corporation, is also to act as district manager for the Southern District. The Southern District includes the Fox exchanges in Washington, Atlanta and New Orleans.

Checks Waiting for Unicorn Employes.

John Lyttle, 31 Nassau street, New York, who was attorney for the Unicorn Film Service, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, has in his possession checks for former employes of the above named concern and is anxious to deliver same to them, but is without their addresses. The names are as follows: M. Rosenkranz, P. Walsh, F. G. Sceman, R. F. Eagan, L. Gainer, Walter Reilly.

No doubt the parties mentioned above could use the money to good advantage in these days of costly living.

Pennsylvania Association Makes Money from Slides

FRED J. HERRINGTON is now the official organizer of the American Exhibitors' Association of Pennsylvania and says the membership is growing by leaps and bounds. He is also executive secretary of the body. As an illustration of the rapid growth of membership he states that six out of seven exhibitors in McKeesport joined recently. In the same time every exhibitor in Monongahela City, three in number, became members. Two out of three in Charleroi, have joined.

There will be a meeting of western Pennsylvania and northern Ohio exhibitors in Cleveland in the near future. All exhibitors of these two sections are urged to so arrange their business in order that they may be able to attend.

Membership in the American Exhibitors' Association costs five dollars initiation fee, after which there is no charge for dues. The expenses of the organization are met by receipts from the running of advertising slides, which the exhibitor runs in lieu of payment of dues. Mr. Herrington will be pleased to explain all details of the plan to any exhibitor who is interested.

H. A. Strong, Pioneer in Film Manufacturing, Dies

HENRY ALVAH STRONG, vice-president of the Eastman Kodak Company and the original partner of George Eastman in the early days of film, died at Rochester early in the morning of July 25, aged eighty-one years. Mr. Strong had been in poor health for several years, but his condition had not been considered serious until a few days previous to his death.

Mr. Strong was born in Rochester and after serving as an assistant paymaster in the navy during the war entered the whip manufacturing business with his uncle. In 1889 he disposed of this business to enter the business of manufacturing dry plates and film with George Eastman. The two men had formed a partnership in 1880 under the name of Strong and Eastman.

Capital and Invention Combine.

In this partnership it was Mr. Strong who furnished the capital and Mr. Eastman the inventive genius. Mr. Strong's capital of $10,000 enabled Mr. Eastman's inventions to be placed on the market and has now grown to many millions. Soon after this the Eastman Dry Plate Company was formed with Mr. Strong as president and owner of a controlling interest, and Mr. Eastman as treasurer.

In later years, losses on western investments made it necessary for Mr. Strong to sell some of his stock in the Eastman Kodak Company, and thus he lost a controlling interest in the concern, although he continued to be an officer. When the Eastman Kodak Company of New Jersey was formed in 1901, Mr. Strong became its vice-president and retained the presidency of the Eastman Kodak Company of New York.

Was Philanthropist.

Mr. Strong has long been noted for his open-handed generosity to various causes in which he was interested. Among his larger gifts are: $150,000 to the Rochester Theological Seminary, for the erection of Alvah Strong Hall in memory of his father; $100,000 for the building of Brick Church Institute; $100,000 to the Young Women's Christian Association; $100,000 for the erection of a women's academic building at the University of Rochester, to be called Catherine Strong Hall, in memory of his mother; $50,000 to the Young Men's Christian Association. These gifts were all confined to Rochester, as were the bulk of his smaller gifts.

Little Known to Public.

Of a modest and unassuming disposition, Mr. Strong was little known by the public. Pleasant and frank in his contact with his associates and employes, he preferred to live quietly and almost in retirement. It is an actual fact that during the entire period of his life there never was published anything that would reflect upon him, either as a private citizen or in business. The same held true in other respects, his life being lived in such a dignified, exemplary manner that when he was spoken of it was always with a sincere feeling of respect and good-will.

Gondolfi Was Cameraman.

In last week's review of "Bringing Up Betty," a World Picture in which Evelyn Greeley is the star, credit for the photography work was given to Mr. Schneider when it should have been Mr. Gondolfi.

Precedent Among Preachers!

OF COURSE, the minister in your town doesn't run a moving picture house! And you don't hear every Sunday from the pulpit of your church the list of attractions which will occupy the screen at your minister's theatre during the coming week.

But out in Jefferson, Texas, all this happens. The Rev. W. A. Nance preaches one day in the week and runs his pictures at the Lyric the other six.

And the other ministers announce his plays each Sunday from their pulpits.

The story is from "Smiling Jimmy Kelly" on page 825. Don't miss it.

GOLDWYN CAPITAL NOW $20,000,000

Alliance with Lee Shubert and A. H. Woods Marked by $17,000,000 Investment Increase—Means Hundreds of Stage Successes Will Be Available for Filming

ONE of the most far-reaching alliances of motion picture and theatrical interests ever recorded in the industry was consummated by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation last week, when that concern announced an increase of its capitalization from three million to twenty million dollars, and the inclusion of Lee Shubert and A. H. Woods on the board of directors. The Shubert interests control many of the theatres throughout the United States.

This guarantees the active co-operation of these foremost theatrical producers in the making, exploiting and distributing of Goldwyn pictures. The hundreds of great plays presented on the stage by these theatrical interests will be picturized by Goldwyn. As a part of the vastly increased scope of the organization, headed by Samuel Goldwyn, as president, it also is announced that an extensive national newspaper, magazine, and billboard advertising campaign will be launched, and that plans are under way for Eastern studios and a laboratory, as large as those now in operation at Culver City, California.

Officers of the Company.

The new officers of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation are as follows: President, Samuel Goldwyn; chairman of the executive committee, F. J. Godsol; vice-presidents, F. J. Godsol, Moritz Hilder, Lee Shubert, Edgar Selwyn, Abraham Lehr; treasurer, P. W. Haberman; secretary, Gabriel L. Hess; directors: Samuel Goldwyn, F. J. Godsol, Moritz Hilder, Lee Shubert, A. H. Woods, Edgar Selwyn, Henry Ittleson, Jacob Hilder, Harmon August, P. W. Haberman, Gabriel L. Hess.

All of the outstanding successes of the Shuberts, A. H. Woods, and the Selwyns, are now available for the Goldwyn organization, possessing unlimited capital to back any undertaking which may be deemed advisable.

Samuel Goldwyn
As president, extends activities of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

Many Plays Acquired.

Plays that have been enjoyed by hundreds of thousands of people on the stage, the picture rights to which have been withheld, although many motion picture concerns have tried to secure them, will now be brought to the screen by Goldwyn.

"Potash and Perlmutter," a famous stage success, will probably be among the early Goldwyn productions. "The Woman in Room 13," "Maytime," "Roads of Destiny," "Friendly Enemies," "Tea for Three," "Old Lady 31," and "The Girl in the Taxi," are also likely to be numbered in the list prepared for early production, which are only a few out of the hundreds of plays that may be utilized.

Has Had Rapid Rise.

In less than three years, Samuel Goldwyn has brought his concern to a foremost place in the ranks of picture organizations. In the face of many difficulties brought about by the war, and later by the influenza epidemic, which nearly proved the ruination of many picture companies, he has succeeded in building up a producing and distributing corporation of great scope.

Stars on Roster.

At the present time, the roster of stars comprises Geraldine Farrar, Pauline Frederick, Mable Normand, Tom Moore, Madge Kennedy and Will Rogers. Not long ago, Mr. Goldwyn secured, for motion picture production, all of the works of Rex Beach, Gertrude Atherton, Rupert Hughes, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Gouverneur Morris, Basil King and Leroy Scott, known as the Eminent Authors.

Distribution facilities have been so perfected that Goldwyn pictures are shown in every country of the world. In the United States there are twenty-two exchanges, exclusive of the New York exchange, and each exchange is supplied with exploitation experts working on a system devised to aid exhibitors.

List of Plays Secured.

A. H. Woods has grouped around himself the greater part of the active playwrights of today, and has produced more successes than any other producer in America. The list of plays staged by Mr. Woods includes "The Song of Songs," "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," "His Bridal Night," "Innocent," "He Comes Up Smiling," "Why Worry," "Where Poppies Bloom," "Roads of Destiny," "The Big Chance," "Friendly Enemies," "Up in Mabel's Room," "Potash and Perlmutter," and many others.

The Shubert supply of stage successes is as varied as it is numerous, including "Maytime," "A Little Journey," "39 East," "Eyes of Youth," "Sleeping Partners," "Mary's Ankle," "Blind Youth," "Fanny's First Play," "The Fear Market," "The Family," "The Fugitive," "The Guilty Man," "The Hawk," "Old Lady 31," "Pierrot The Prodigal," "Saturday to Monday," "The Torches," and the "Wooing of Eve."

The Selwyns also have many plays that have proved their popularity, among them "The Crowded Hour," "Tea for Three," "Twin Beds," "The Money Makers," "Lilac Time," "Double Exposure," "Why Marry" and "Under Fire."

A. H. Woods
Now a director of Goldwyn Corporation.

Lee Shubert
New director of Goldwyn Corporation.

NAME FAIRBANKS' FIRST "BIG FOUR"

"His Majesty, the American," Title of His Initial United States Release—Scheduled for September 1

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS will inaugurate the releases of United Artists' Corporation on September 1 with his "His Majesty, the American." The picture has been in course of production since April. The actual filming is completed and the picture is now in the stages of final editing and titling.

Eight weeks were devoted exclusively to the preparation of the scenario. Director Joseph Henaberry, with the assistance of Elton Banks, developed the story, and it is reported that the picture is a veritable Fairbanks frolic, giving the inimitable Doug a wealth of opportunities such as no production has heretofore offered him.

Replete With Novelties.

The picture abounds in novelties. Its very beginning offers a feature that alone has cost quite a sum to produce, but that is counted on to make a season's hit in itself. It shows Doug in the agonies of a nightmare and the stunts he goes through and the dangers he courts start the story off with a rush. In these nightmare scenes many novelties in photography and set construction have been employed. Those who feel that there is nothing new under the sun are said to have a revelation awaiting them.

Has Strong Cast.

A splendid cast surrounds Doug in his first "Big Four" production. Marjory Daw plays the feminine lead. This makes the sixth picture in which she has played opposite Fairbanks. Miss Daw splendidly represents the wholesome young girl and is so throughly experienced in Doug's rather extreme heroic methods of rescuing damsels from distress that her presence is counted on as a big asset.

Frank Campeau, who has been associated with Fairbanks for over a year, plays the heavy role. He was a noteworthy member of numerous recent Fairbank's casts and has a big reputation not only as a screen artist, but likewise as a stage player.

Albert McQuarrie, who had a good part in "The Knickerbocker Buckaroo," likewise appears in "His Majesty, the American," and in addition served as an assistant to Director Henaberry.

Sam Sothern in Cast.

Much interest also attaches to the initial screen appearance of Sam Sothern, well-known New York and London actor and a younger brother of the famous E. H. Sothern.

Lillian Langdon, who appeared with Fairbanks in his first motion picture, "The Lamb," and in a number of later productions, is also prominent in the cast.

In the realization that "His Majesty, the American" was to be the first release of the "Big Four," Fairbanks is said to have spent a fortune on the production. Massive sets, both interiors and exteriors, have been provided without reckoning the cost, for Fairbanks has had in mind the longer runs to which the picture is booking, and he has put everything into the production to justify the highest hopes of United Artists' Corporation and the exhibitors who are going to run the pictures.

Advance Bookings Heavy.

Incidentally, the advance bookings on the production are said to set a record that is unequalled in screen annals. As early as last May the biggest theatres throughout the country began booking the picture for lengths of run that were actually revolutionary. A check-up of the first run bookings carries practically every big theatre and circuit throughout the country that could be accommodated for a simultaneous showing.

Bookings are now being made through all seventeen of United Artists' Corporation distributing depots in United States and Canada, and enough business has now been written to keep a big number of prints busy without let-up over a long period.

Bowers Renews Contract to Appear with Goldwyn

IN accordance with its policy of retaining actors and actresses who have proved their worth, Goldwyn Pictures renewed a contract with John Bowers whereby he will remain with the organization until November 20, 1920.

Under his present contract, his first work will be opposite Pauline Frederick in a picture directed by Frank Lloyd. The story, laid in England, will mark Mr. Bowers' initial appearance with the star. Work on this production will be started immediately.

Born in Indiana, where, according to Mr. Bowers, there are only two classes, poets and farmers, he shocked the community at the age of eighteen by deciding to become an actor, making his first appearances on the speaking stage in "The Family Cupboard" and "Things That Count." Soon, however, he was won over to the studio, and, after gaining experience with a number of companies, became a Goldwyn leading man.

Mr. Bowers revealed his versatility at Culver City by playing opposite Madge Kennedy and Mabel Normand, with equal success, and as leading man for Miss Kennedy in "Strictly Confidential."

John Bowers
Has signed big contract with Goldwyn. His latest success was with Madge Kennedy in "Through the Wrong Door."

New Basic Treatment for Vitagraph Serial Posters

A NEW idea in the use of the twenty-four sheet is being put in force by Vitagraph in advertising its new William Duncan serial, "Smashing Barriers." Its basic treatment is entirely new and it is what might be termed a "sidewalk" stand, as it has been designed for special posting in populous districts. It is the direct antithesis of the "he who runs may read" idea. In no way, however, is it planned to have the newspaper supplant the general twenty-four sheet put out on the new serial. It is rather a complement of the original and as such doubtless will be used by a large percentage of the exhibitors who have booked the new Vitagraph serial.

Vitagraph realized that a large proportion of the stands for the new serial would be posted in cities and read by prospective patrons who are passing at a reading distance of not more than a few feet. With this closeness in view the new poster will contain twelve scenes from the serial, and all forming a border. This will give the spectator an opportunity to see several of the thrills. Two of the most thrilling scenes —a big end-run in a varsity football game, which is an early episode of the serial, and a human chain rescuing the heroine from the brink of a steep cliff, are given double the space alloted to the remainder of the picture. Of course a large portrait of the star occupies a prominent position.

"The Blue Bonnet" was Six Months in Making

WHEN the executives of the National Film Corporation in Los Angeles shipped their first Billie Rhodes production for Hodkinson release, "The Blue Bonnet," to New York last week they checked up on their production records a picture that had been more than six months in the making. Taking extra time in which to produce pictures is developing into a new fashion, more especially since the producers have discerned that the old kind of pictures "do not go" with exhibitors any more.

"The Blue Bonnet," like all other productions flowing through the Hodkinson distribution mechanism, is a selective booking picture. It is not a part of a series of picture starring Billie Rhodes, although in the course of a year there will be six pictures with Miss Rhodes as the star. The production will be sold singly on merit and those exhibitors who like it can book and those that do not can leave it alone.

Release of "The Blue Bonnet" is scheduled to be around September 1. Two other productions will be released during the same month by the Hodkinson organization. There were three releases by Hodkinson in August and two in July and the outlook is that there will be three releases a month, at least, bearing the Hodkinson distribution imprint throughout the entire year ahead.

MOVIE MEN CONVENE IN SEATTLE

Co-operation Between Exhibitors and Exchangemen Results in First Annual Meeting of Allied Interests on July 16-19—Stage Screen Ball and Street Parade

THERE is a territory in the United States where exhibitors and film men are actually banded together on a practical working basis for the common good of themselves and the motion picture industry in general. This was definitely shown at the first annual convention of the Allied Motion Picture Interests of the Pacific Northwest held in Seattle July 16-19 inclusive. The purpose of the convention was to complete the organization of the associate membership of the Northwest Film Board of Trade.

Exchange and Theatre Men Unite.

This Board of Trade was organized by Northwest managers of film exchanges nearly two years ago. The idea was conceived last winter to get the exhibitors of the territory, who had never been able to form and hold together an active exhibitor organization, to join with them as associate members. They planned that questions which it was obviously the business of exhibitors to settle should be taken up by the associate members, and that whatever affected exchanges only should be handled by the exchange managers forming the Northwest Film Board of Trade; questions having any bearing on both branches of the industry in general should be considered and acted upon by the combined organization.

Meetings were held in Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Spokane, Butte, Boise, Walla Walla, and Yakima for presenting the idea to exhibitors throughout the territory. Exhibitors approved of the plan and were not slow in joining and paying dues.

Hold First Meeting on July 17.

Many of those who had not joined were present when the first meeting of the convention was called to order in the auditorium of Frederick & Nelson's department store in Seattle on Thursday, July 17. No attempt had been made to call a meeting on Wednesday, when visitors were just arriving. There were representative exhibitors from Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, and Alaska, as well as all the exchange men of the territory and district managers from California and representatives of supply houses and advertising concerns from all over the West. The Moving Picture World representative maintained headquarters on Film Row for the duration of the convention.

L. O. Lukan, president of the Northwest Film Board of Trade, opened the meeting. After the roll call Harry Sigmond, general counsel for the Board of Trade, explained the purpose and aims of the Northwest Film Board of Trade and the associate membership, outlined the plan of organization and gave a report of the progress of the organization. This report showed that there were twenty-three exchange men and one hundred exhibitor members to date. The report of the credentials committee was then read and approved. Mr. Sigmond next read the names of prominent producers, actors, distributors, directors and exhibitors who had sent letters of regret at not being able to attend the convention. The meeting was adjourned for luncheon, at which Mayor Ole Hanson and Reginald H. Parsons, president of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the delegates.

Harry Sigmond Opens Meeting.

The delegates re-convened at 2.00 p. m. Mr. Sigmond read the constitution and by-laws of the associate membership as framed by their organizations committee. Provision had been made in the constitution for the governing of the associate membership by an executive committee of five, one elected from each state and one at large, who should act as chairman. It was provided that the Film Board of Trade's executive committee of five should meet with the executive committee of the exhibitors when questions of general interest were under consideration. There was some discussion as to the number that should be on the exhibitors' executive committe, but the motion was finally passed without a dissenting vote to accept the constitution and by-laws as read. The motion was made and passed to pay any traveling expenses incurred by the members of the executive committee while attending to business for the organization.

Pass Many Resolutions.

President Lukan then asked for the report of the resolutions committee, explaining that it would be left for discussion until Friday morning. There were five resolutions read, the first urging the repeal of the daylight savings law over the president's veto; the second commending the progress of the motion picture industry; the third urging the repeal of the admission tax; the fourth urging the repeal of the film rentals tax; the fifth urging that only such films be shown as will redound to the improvement of the industry, and condemning dishonest producing companies.

Attention of the delegates was called to the beefsteak dinner to be given for the men by the Seattle exhibitors that evening, and the meeting adjournd.

Speaks for Theatre Tax.

Friday morning the delegates were so late and so irregular in putting in an appearance that the morning meeting was finally adjourned without having transacted any business. In the afternoon, however, the meeting was well attended. The resolutions were adopted as read without any discussion, and the manner of holding the election was being discussed when John Hamrick arrived late, on account of having to attend to some business with regard to the screen ball, and asked for a reconsideration of the resolution asking for the repeal of the admission tax. Mr. Hamrick declared that it was the duty of exhibitors to do their part in paying the enormous war debt that still burdens the country, that even if they did ask the repeal of the tax they would be refused and thus cheapened, and that, when the tax is removed exhibitors will be expected to reduce their admission price five cents, since most of them raised that amount to take care of the tax; and they would thus be deprived of the two or three cents extra which they are now getting. The discussion lasted some time, and it was finally moved and passed to place the resolution in the hands of the executive committee for consideration.

Officers Are Elected.

The findings of the nominating committee were then read, suggesting several names from each state for the associate membership executive committee and chairman. The plan was originally to elect by secret ballot, but the officers were finally elected by acclamation. Those elected were, chairman, Dr. Howard S. Clemmer, of the Clemmer Theatre, Spokane; member for Washington and Alaska, John Hamrick, of the Rex, Seattle; member for Oregon, K. L. Burke; member for Idaho, C. C. Spencer, of the Grand, Wallace; member for Montana, Henry Turner, of the Missoula AmusementCompany, Missoula.

Spokane Sends Invitation.

The official invitation of the city of Spokane for next year's convention was then presented by "Miss Spokane," a young woman sent from that city, who always impersonates Spokane on official occasions. She was dressed in the buckskin costume of an Indian maiden, and the text of her invitation, spoken from the platform, was in keeping with her character. At the end she presented a buckskin scroll with the written invitation from officials of the city. The motion was made and carried that Spokane should be next year's meeting place.

Silver Cup Presented.

John Hamrick in the name of the organization presented President Lukan with a silver loving cup in recognition of his work for the success of the convention, and a vote of appreciation was extended to General Counsel Harry Sigmond and to W. J. Drummond, director general of the convention.

After reminding the delegates of the screen ball to be held that night and of the boat trip and the entertainment planned in Bremerton on the following day by John Rantz and the Bremerton Chamber of Commerce, President Lukan declared the convention adjourned.

Screen Ball Was Fine Affair.

The Seattle newspapers all used a lot of ink, a goodly portion of their front pages and one or two other pages in trying to do justice to the screen ball. The stars present were Bessie Love, Wallace Reid, Frank Keenan, Fay Tincher and Beatriz Michelena. The grand march was preceded by a pony ballet driven tandem, with little pages in colonial costume attending, followed by the stars. The two biggest dancing floors in the city of Seattle were crowded to capacity and the seats on all sides filled. It is estimated by officials of the ball that there were about 9,000 people present.

Delegates Have Boat Ride.

Saturday was given over to the entertainment of the delegates by the city of Bremerton and John Rantz, manager of the Rialto Theatre of that city. On the arrival of the boat bearing delegates and their wives and the three women stars they were met by citizens of Bremerton in their automobiles and taken for a ride through the Navy Yard. They were conducted by the captain of the yard, who had obtained special permission to show the visitors through from Secretary Daniels. A meeting, with speeches of welcome and bouquets for the stars, was then held at the Rialto Theatre, and the party proceeded in the autos to the park, where a clambake was followed with more speeches and then games. The delegates returned to Seattle at 6 p. m.

Stars Receive Greeting.

Great publicity had been given the ball for weeks in advance, and when each of the stars arrived in Seattle a long line of automobiles with horns going full blast had escorted them up Second avenue between crowds of enthusiastic people on both sides of the street. The president of the Chamber of Commerce met Miss Michelena and the chief of police, dressed as Buffalo Bill and eight or ten of his subordinates dressed as cowboys and Indians, as well as little Ted Hanson, the mayor's son, all of them on horseback, met Miss Tincher. She appeared dressed as she was in "Rowdy Ann," in cowboy costume, and rode beside the chief of police up Second avenue, while the chief shot off blank cartridges and a horn blower helped to attract attention.

Who, as Miss Spokane, persuaded the Seattle convention that Spokane was the place for next year's conclave.

Besides the luncheon at the Masonic Temple, where Mayor Hanson, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, Frank Keenan, and Beatriz Michelena spoke, there was another on Friday at the Masonic Club, which was a combined affair with the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. Here Keenan, Bessie Love and Miss Spokane spoke. Miss Spokane had just been escorted into town by Mayor Hanson.

At the beefsteak dinner Thursday night, Governor Hart and Police Chief Warren spoke.

The following extract from the constitution of the Allied Motion Picture Interests shows the nature and aims of the organization:

ARTICLE XI.

Sec. 1. Associate Membership. (a) Purposes: There is hereby created an associate membership to the Northwest Film Board of Trade to co-operate with the regular membership in accomplishing the following objects:

4. To investigate transportation and traffic problems affecting the business of its members, and when necessary secure improvements in transportation service.

5. To keep its members informed on matters of general interest likely to affect their business interests.

6. To maintain a central office for the proper conduct of the affairs of the association.

7. To raise funds by dues and assessments, and to do all other acts as are necessary to carry into effect the objects set forth above.

Spokane Gets Next Convention.

Receiving Miss Spokane (Marguerite Motie) in royal fashion, the delegates to the convention being held in Seattle, unanimously accepted the invitation of Spokane extended by Miss Spokane. The convention will be held in May or early in June of 1920.

Dr. H. C. Clemmer was named chairman of the executive committee to arrange for the 1920 convention.

"Miss Spokane was royally welcomed by Seattle," said Dr. Clemmer to Dr. Lambach over the long distance telephone. "All rules were suspended and the invitation unanimously accepted. Twenty automobiles headed by Mayor Hanson met Miss Spokane and participated in the film parade."

Presents Parchment Invitation.

Not content with a formal invitation by the city council, the picture men introduced Miss Marguerite Motie (Miss Spokane) to the big convention, clad in her Indian costume, representing Spokane. Miss Motie presented the northwestern film heads with a beautifully-drawn parchment, inviting them to fix Spokane for the 1920 convention. The parchment invitation, which simulates birch bark, was prepared by A. R. Van de Loeff. It reads as follows:

Text of Invitation.

Invitation of the people of Spokane to the members of the Northwest Film Board of Trade—greeting:

The people of Spokane, designated by the Indians as "The Children of the Sun," the meaning of the word Spokane, extend this cordial invitation to their neighbors of the film world, whose business is so dependent upon the beneficent rays of sunlight, to make the City of the Sun their meeting place in 1920.

The men and women of Spokane, the center of the green summer playground of the northwest, are anxious to give due recognition to the motion picture industry. In testimony of this sentiment, I, Miss Spokane, hereby extend to you a most cordial invitation to journey to the City of the Sun for your convention next year.

Come, play with us, and be our friends.

Signed and sealed this 18th day of July, nineteen hundred and nineteen.

J. C. ARGALL,
Acting Mayor of the City of Spokane.
GEORGE A. PHILLIPS,
President of the Spokane Advertising Club.
R. S. COUPER,
President Spokane Transportation Club.
T. H. HEBERT,
President Spokane Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Spokane May Enter Movies.

An opportunity to become a motion picture star has been offered "Miss Spokane" by Wallace Reid, screen favorite. Mr. Reid offered Miss Motie a position in his company after meeting her Friday at the convention.

Miss Motie has taken the offer under consideration and will make her decision within a few days. Following a course at the Northwestern University at Chicago, she became a teacher of elocution in a Spokane high school. She also appeared in stock here with the Woodward players.

Goldwyn Cameraman Invents Soft Focus Camera Device

MARCEL LE PICARD, Will Rogers' cameraman, has perfected a special lens which produces a novel effect that may be applied to the artistic betterment of Goldwyn photoplays. Only a few of Mr. Le Picard's intimate coworkers know about the experiments which he has been making for a number of months in the mechanical department of the Goldwyn camera rooms.

Slightly out-of-focus effects, giving a soft finish to scenes or figures that lend themselves to artistic treatment of the kind, have become something of a fad of late. But only the most expert cameramen have been able to produce artistic results. Too frequently, the scene has merely appeared out of focus and therefore defective.

Mr. Le Picard explains that by means of a new receptacle with adjustable lens carriers, he can get a close-up with varying degrees of out-of-focus effects, which are both attractive and unusual. Using the new device, the image on the screen is kept in perfect focus, the features being sharply outlined, but a soft halo, giving the picture the artistic quality of a painting, is attained. This can be controlled at will while the film is being exposed, affording the cameraman every opportunity to use his own judgment.

This device was used in the latest Madge Kennedy picture, "Through the Wrong Door," produced by Goldwyn.

ROBERTSON-COLE AND MUTUAL AGREE

Judge Mack Decides Against Cancelation of Contract—Parties Now Agree to Co-operate

THE Robertson-Cole productions will be distributed as heretofore by the Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation under the terms of a decision rendered by Judge Mack in the United States District Court on July 28, enjoining the producing company from canceling its contract with the Exhibitors Mutual.

Judge Mack concluded that the Exhibitors Mutual had not committed any breaches of the contract, as alleged, which justified the Robertson-Cole Company in canceling the contract and arrived at the conclusion that practically it would be impossible at the present time for the distributing company to replace the Robertson-Cole productions with others equally attractive in order to continue its business successfully in the event that the cancelation of the contract was not enjoined by court action.

Subsidiary Concerns Involved.

The Robertson-Cole company sought to justify its cancelation of the contract on the ground that the distributing company had committed various breaches of the agreement in forming subsidiary corporations and in exploiting productions owned by these companies and that the distributing company was insolvent.

Judge Mack concluded that there was no basis for the claim that the Exhibitors Mutual is insolvent, which was based on the report of an accountant which eliminated the assets of the Exhibitors Mutual Distributing Corporation of Illinois, although the Exhibitors Mutual owns all of the capital stock of the Illinois corporation and the report considered the outstanding stock issue of the Exhibitors Mutual as a liability contrary to law and practice.

Accountant's Testimony Not Considered.

With reference to the report of this accountant Judge Mack characterized his statements as "utterly incomprehensible" and made it clear that the Court did not place any weight on his testimony, at the same time concluding from all the testimony as a matter of fact that the Exhibitors Mutual is amply solvent with a surplus of at least $350,000, disregarding contingent assets upon which the company will realize substantial amounts as a going concern.

Elsie Janis

Contracts with Stars Considered.

The contracts of the Robertson-Cole Company with producing companies for the world rights to the productions of Bessie Barriscale, Sessue Hayakawa, William Desmond, J. Warren Kerrigan, Henry B. Warner, Billy Rhodes and Alma Rubens at an expense of over three million dollars were offered in evidence during the trial.

The Exhibitors Mutual contended that practically it would be impossible to secure productions in the market to replace this galaxy of screen stars, and Tarkington Baker, general manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Felix F. Feist, of the Goldwyn Company, and Morris Fleckles, of the Screencraft Company, testified that it would require months and an enormous expense to build up an equally attractive program, assuming recognized stars were available, which they doubted.

More Stars Mentioned.

The Robertson-Cole Company had contended that the distributing company could replace its productions, and in support of that contention had asserted that the productions of a number of film stars including Alice Joyce, Emma Wehlen, Viola Dana, F. X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Katherine MacDonald and other screen favorites had recently been offered to the Robertson-Cole Company.

William Wright, of the Vitagraph Company, testified that Miss Joyce is under a long term contract with the Vitagraph Company and that "she is not a contract breaker," hence her productions are not available for distribution, as the Vitagraph Company maintains its own distributing agency.

Contestants Are Reconciled.

J. Robert Rubin, who is legal representative for a number of producing and distributing companies, testified that Emmy Wehlen and Viola Dana are under contract to the Metro Company, which also distributes its own productions, and consequently their productions are not available for distribution.

At the conclusion of the trial the representatives of the Robertson-Cole Company and the officers of the Exhibitors Mutual, who had manifested no antagonism toward each other during the controversy, expressed their determination to join hands and put their shoulders to the wheel to make the joint enterprise a success and promised to build up a producing-distributing service second to none.

MARYLAND LEAGUE INDORSES REPEAL

Abolition of Theatre Taxes Desired as Well as Adoption of Cleveland Slide Showing Scheme

THE action now being taken by the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry in an effort to have repealed the war taxes on admissions, seating capacity and film rentals, and the Cleveland method of financing the league, by having a certain number of theaters lend their screens for advertising purposes for a stipulated amount, were the important questions which were discussed at the special meeting held by the Exhibitors' League of Maryland, at their headquarters, 419 East Baltimore street, on July 22.

Indorse Tax Repeal.

The meeting was presided over by Louis Schlichter, president of the organization, who is also manager of the Bridge Theatre, and the first matter that came up was what action the Maryland body should take on the tax repeal now being urged by the National body. Walter D. Pacey, manager of the Garden Theatre in South Baltimore, moved that the league indorse the resolution as set forth by the national body on the repeal of the admission, seating capacity and film rental taxes. This was seconded by Frank A. Hornig, manager of the Horn and Royal theaters, and passed.

T. D. Goldberg Is Active.

Thomas D. Goldberg, manager of the Walbrook Theater and second vice-president of the league, who was elected director of the national body for the state of Maryland, at its last meeting held in St. Louis, to succeed J. Louis Rome, manager of the Broadway, Baltimore and Arcadia theatres, is working on the matter.. Mr. Goldberg is also on the committee on legislation for Maryland for the National body.

Mr. Goldberg has now divided the state and city into six districts and has appointed a director for each district. Those men who have been appointed will get up petitions to send to their congressmen urging the repeal of the taxes. The six assistant directors include J. E. Cahill, Centreville, Md., first district; C. E. Councilman, Grand Theater, Highlandtown, second district; W. E. Stumpf, Goodtime Theater, third district; Louis Schlichter, Bridge Theater, fourth district; Phillip Miller, Republic Theater, Annapolis, Md., fifth district; and Spates & Frey, Frostburg, Md., sixth district.

The report of the ball committee was read regarding the finances, but owing to a few minor details which are to be completed by the ball finance committee and the auditing committee, the acceptance of the report was held over until the next meeting.

Believes in Cleveland Scheme.

Thomas D. Goldberg then took the floor and made an address regarding the benefits to be derived by adopting the Cleveland method of financing the league and according to what he said he believes that the league will be greatly strengthened by this method of filling the treasury. According to Mr. Goldberg, the by-laws of the organization would be changed and the plan is to have an arrangement whereby a member may either pay his dues in advance or agree to run an advertising slide and the amount of funds derived from such advertising by slide shall be put in the treasury for the benefit of the league.

Points Out Financial Need.

He went on to say that the more finances the league has the better able it will be to fight the various battles that come up in the city council and the legislatures which are detrimental to the interests of the moving picture industry.

Those present were impressed with Mr. Goldberg's address and it was moved by W. E. Stumpf, manager of the Goodtime Theater, that the idea be accepted. Part of this motion read: "That no exhibitor or manager in the city or state can use the screen of his theater for any advertising slides of any kind or character until finally approved by the exhibitors league."

This was passed and Mr. Goldberg asked that he be appointed as chairman of the committee of three and be permitted to select the other two members to work out the method. This was granted and he apointed Frank A Hornig and William E. Stumpf as the other two members.

A. B. Price Speaks.

A. B. Price, manager of the Rialto, Blue Mouse and Aurora theaters made a short address in which he said that Myer Fox, owner of the Rialto was perfectly willing to co-operate with the league on anything that would be of benefit to the moving picture industry which was done on a co-operative policy but that he did not want this action taken by the members as though Mr. Fox was asking for help in any battles which he might personally have relative to his business concerning the Rialto, as they were able to fight their own battles.

Among those present were J. F. Ritterpush, Highland; A. B. Price, Rialto, Blue Mouse, Aurora; William Tyler, Lubins; E. B. McCurdy, Lafayette and Eureka; Charles E. Hicks, Hampden; Frank H. Durkee, Palace; W. D. Pacey, Garden, South Baltimore; C. B. Eyer, Community, Hampden; Frank A. Hornig, Horn and Royal; Louis Schlichter, Bridge; C. B. Councilman, Grand, Highlandtown; Thomas D. Goldberg, Walbrook; J. Rabinovich, Comedy; Ben Cluster, Cluster and Liberty; Harry Clucter, Crystal; Sam Flax, H. E. Kahn, Waverly; William E. Stumpf, Goodtime; W. A. Alberts, Eagle.

Realart Starts Billboard Campaign.

Realart Pictures Corporation has started its extensive outdoor exploitation campaign. Within a few days a poster advertising Mary Miles Minter will make its appearance on the billboards of New York. It will soon be seen in other cities.

The poster is a twenty-four sheet, and not only does it appeal to the eye because of its artistic beauty, but the public's attention is riveted by the manner in which the story Realart has to tell about Mary Miles Minter appears.

FRENCH COMPANY WILL IMPORT FILMS

Les Films Albert Dulac to Release Pictures Made in France—Also to Export Industrial Subjects and Show Them on French Line Steamers En Route to New York

By Charles S. Sewell

PLANS are now being rapidly completed, which will result in French motion pictures being again offered in quantities on the American market, after an almost total absence for several years, during which only a few productions have been brought into this country.

One of the most prominent firms in Paris, the Compagnie Cinematographique Albert Dulac, has opened an office at 1265 Broadway, New York, and is operating as Les Films Albert Dulac of Paris, with Rene Silz as manager in charge of the business in North and South America.

Within a short time this company will inaugurate a regular schedule and will release one feature picture in five or more reels as well as one three-reel comedy each month. This is claimed to be the first time that a French organization has offered on this market a regular schedule of long subjects that were made in France.

No Releasing Arrangements Yet.

No definite releasing arrangement as yet has been consummated. However, it is probable the productions will be released through one of the established distributing organizations. If satisfactory arrangements cannot be made, Mr. Silz announces, his company being backed by ample capital, will establish its own releasing organization.

The first feature to be offered will star Eve Francis, a well known member of the stock company of a leading French dramatic organization, the Comedie Francaise and the Odeon, of Paris. The production is in seven reels and the title literally translated into English is "The Happiness of Other People." This title, however, will not be used in the American version.

Dulac Head of Company.

Albert Dulac, whose photography accompanies this articles, recently has been released from the French army, and is again actively engaged as the head of the company. Notwithstanding the numerous difficulties surrounding the securing of players, raw stock, etc., Mr. Dulac's wife, Madame Germaine Albert-Dulac, carried on the business of the company all during the war and since 1916 has produced six pictures, Among these productions is claimed to be an entirely new type of film comedy, in which the scenery consists entirely of transparent curtains through which the action is viewed.

Arrangements have been made to enlarge the production activities, and already there is a company en route to Florence, Italy, where a number of the best known of the works of Anatole France will be filmed. In addition, in the near future, work will be started in connection with a prominent American company.

To Do Big Advertising.

Mr. Silz announces that an extensive campaign will be waged to insure the success of this venture, and that nothing will be left undone to popularize French stars and productions in this market. In view of the criticisms of the titling of some of the French films which have been shown here a prominent American title writer will be engaged, and all pictures will be entirely retitled after being brought to this country.

A point of interest, to which attention is called by Mr. Silz, is that in several of the productions there are scenes of the world-famed night life cafes of the Montmartre section of Paris, and that these scenes were actually filmed in the cafes themselves and are not studio reproductions.

Mr. Silz, though of French parentage, is an American citizen and has just been discharged from service in the United States army to which he was transferred from the French army. He is familiar with conditions in this country, and states that while he appreciates the fact that it will be an uphill job to compete with American made films he believes that because of the inherent worth of the pictures themselves, coupled with the warm sympathy and friendship existing between the two countries, these productions will be favorably received by the motion picture public.

Believes French Stars Will Be Popular.

In answer to the criticism that the American people will not take to the pictures, as the stars are unknown, Mr. Silz calls attention to the fact that in introducing American stars into other countries our manufacturers met with the same experience, but today they are well-known and popular all over the world and is confident that the same result can be achieved with the French stars and productions.

Also Export Pictures.

Mr. Silz also calls attention to the fact that in addition to importing films his company is engaged in exporting industrial motion pictures, and is in position to guarantee bookings on this class of films in about two hundred of the better class theatres in France, about twenty-five of which are in Paris, and can also secure bookings in about two hundred additional theatres in Belgium, Italy and Switzerland.

The consummation of a big deal, one which opens an entirely new avenue for the use of industrial films, is announced by Mr. Silz. The Dulac company has made arrangements by which American industrial motion pictures will be shown on all of the steamships of the French Line, sailing from Bordeaux and Havre to the United States.

Title the First Truex Comedy.

Amedee J. Van Beuren has decided to call his first two-reel comedy starring Ernest Truex "The Night of the Dub," the original title under which this Albert Payson Terhune story was published in the Saturday Evening Post.

Mrs. Sidney Drew's screen adaptation and John Joseph Harvey's direction have provided a lively comedy.

Libson Books Big Four.

Manager I. Libson, of the Libson Amusement Company, Cincinnati, announces that he has closed contracts which will bring to the company's theatres in Cincinnati, the Walnut, Strand and Family, as well as their houses in Dayton, Columbus, Louisville and Pittsburgh, United Artists' pictures.

ALLENS GIVE PLANS FOR NEW HOUSES

Detroit and Cleveland Structures Will Seat Total of 6,500—Policy Will Be to Sell Theatre and Not Individual Photoplay—Work to Start Immediately

SERVICE for the individual patron and institutions for the two cities are to be dominant policies of the new Allen Theater to be erected at once in Detroit and Cleveland.

Some details are now added to the announcement made in last week's issue of the Moving Picture World that the Allens, who now have in actual operation forty-five first class theaters in the principal cities of Canada, with a dozen more under construction, had decided to enter the United States.

Service to the patrons will follow somewhat the same lines that have made the theatres there real institutions. While there will be many innovations in the American theaters the policy will remain of making the name "Allen" a guarantee of satisfaction and of selling to the patron the theatre itself, rather than a particular picture.

This policy was adopted twelve years ago when the Allens established their first motion picture house at Brantford, Ontario, when the industry was really in its infancy.

Presentation Possibilities.

In C. Howard Crane, the eminent Detroit architect and one of the best known designers of theaters in the country, the Allens have a man they deem better able than any other to carry out their ideals. Mr. Crane has designed all the new Allen theaters in Canada, including the half million dollar houses under construction in Winnipeg and Vancouver. Therefore he is most familiar with the Allen policies in Canada and their plans in this country.

Mr. Crane is authority for the statement that these houses will represent the ultimate in motion picture theater construction and that they will afford opportunities in presentation that no other theatres in existence permit.

"Ornate" To Be Avoided.

Both houses will be exceptionally large. The Detroit house will seat 3,500 and the Cleveland theatre will care for 3,000. In both a large portion of the seats will be on the main floor, with the mezzanine providing loges in unique arrangements. But a considerable share of the space will be devoted to the rest and recreation rooms. These will be literally spacious and will be provided as luxuries rather than as mere necessities.

Everything of the "ornate" will be avoided, but there will be a remarkable richness of interior design and decoration that will form a fitting background for the presentations. Briefly the theatres will be "showy" but of the elegance that one associates with the best.

Two Big Houses.

Allen theatre, Detroit, will occupy 133 feet on Woodward avenue, running back 200 feet. Except for three small stores on either side of the huge entrance and a score of offices on the second floor front, the entire space will be devoted to the theatre. Exterior design will be of Spanish renaissance and the exterior of polychrome terra cotta. Store and office fronts will be submerged into that of the theatre.

In Cleveland there will be a six story office building facing on Euclid avenue, with 100 foot frontage. The plot runs back 400 feet, and at the rear, facing on Dodge Court, there will be a twelve-story garage.

Garage Facilities.

This will be leased and conducted entirely separate from the theatre, but it is expected that arrangements will be made whereby the patron may drive his car into the garage and leaving it there, enter the theatre by a rear entrance.

The Cleveland theatre will be built of Bedford limestone along rather simple lines, but the theatre idea will be kept dominant.

Work on both houses will start immediately, with the expectation of opening them in the early spring.

Indiana Theatre Firm Sues Musicians' Union

THE Central Amusement Company, of Indianapolis, which operates Alhambra, Lyric, Isis and English Theaters, has filed suit in the Marion county circuit court against fifteen members of the Musicians' Local Union No. 3, asking damages in the sum of $500.

The complaint alleges that on May 31 the company contracted with Harry J. O'Leary, business agent of the union, for fifteen musicians to constitute an orchestra during a three-weeks' engagement of the "Hearts of the World" at English's. Each was to receive $32 a week and the leader, Herman Arndt, $48. Two days before the engagement was to begin, O'Leary reported, the suit says that the musicians would have to have $42 a week instead of $32 and the leader $63 instead of $48.

Fearing trouble with other union employes if the demand was not met, the company says it paid the higher rate and then appealed to the musicians' local and the American Federation of Musicians for a refund. These appeals, it is alleged, were denied.

Runs "Firing Line" for Two Weeks.

So highly did Tom Moore, president of Moore's Theatres Corporation, of Washington, D. C., think of the box-office value of the Paramount-Artcraft Special, "The Firing Line," in which Irene Castle is starred, that before the picture had completed its scheduled week's run at the Rialto Theatre in that city he contracted for an extension of the run through the following week.

This was the first time in the history of the Rialto that a production had run there for two successive weeks.

Sennett Review To Be an Annual Event on Broadway

WORD has just been received through E. M. Asher, representative for Mack Sennett, that the comedy producer has given sanction and has entered into negotiations whereby he will present each year to the Broadway theatre goers a Mack Sennett Review.

Enthused beyond all expectations over the success of his present attraction, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin" and the "Sennett Bathing Beauties," which is now entering on its fifth week at the Broadway Theatre, Mr. Sennett is going to prepare a special novelty film injected with the true Sennett vein of humor and surround the attraction with a bevy of the California Mack Sennett Bathing Beauties.

The next Sennett show to be presented on Broadway will be known as the Sennett Bathing Beauties of 1920.

Negotiations are on at the present time with Bide Dudley, whereby that writer will furnish the book and lyrics for 1920 Sennett Review. The show will be opened with a picture replete with thrills, with the beaches of California as a background, and personally produced by Mr. Sennett.

Screen Letter Box Takes New Quarters.

Arrangements have just been completed whereby the Screen Letter Box and the other film intersts of Morris Kashin and Jack Harry Cohn will occupy as business offices the space formerly used by Max Marx at 1600 Broadway. Extensive alterations are now being made.

This work, it is expected, will be completed about the first of August when the Screen Letter Box will move from its temporary quarters in the Strand Theatre Building.

Name Managers for Southern Territory.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces that the two new branch exchanges at Oklahoma City, Okla., and Charlotte, N. C., will be opened for business on or about August 9.

Joseph H. Gilday has been appointed branch manager at Oklahoma City and David Prince will act in the same capacity at Charlotte. Both Mr. Gilday and Mr. Prince are installed in their new offices and are now completing the arrangements for the opening of their respective exchanges.

Conklin to Write for Christie.

After two years in the service of the French and American armies, Captain Frank R. Conklin, who has recently returned to this country, has been signed by C. H. Christie to write exclusively for the Christie organization, and has arrived in Los Angeles to take up his duties at the Christie's production headquarters. Prior to entering the service Mr. Conklin was a newspaper and magazine writer.

"Lost Battalion" Film, Hermetically Sealed, Is Placed in Archives of War Department

MAJOR GENERAL ALEXANDER was a visitor at the MacManus Proving Grounds, 2 West Forty-seventh street, New York, and had a final look at the picture of "The Lost Battalion," which is now ready for release. It was necessary to withhold the production until the film was finally passed upon by the officers and survivors of the battalion itself, who desire that the production as Mr. MacManus made it will ever be a permanent memorial to the heroism of the 308th regiment of which the lost battalion was a part.

War Department Has Print.

Hermetically sealed, a copy of the production has been sent to Washington to be placed in the archives of the War Department, the officials of which, including Secretary Baker, had a private view of the picture at the New Willard Hotel under the auspices of the National Press Club a few weeks ago. Army officers who have seen the film are quoted as saying that in their opinion it is not only the greatest picture of its kind ever made but that from a military point of view it will prove to be great recruiting propaganda with its romantic story of the draftee and his life in the training camp and in the trenches. To the untrained eye the story is a romance that leads up to a series of thrilling climaxes, bringing together all the survivors of the episode in an accurate reproduction.

General Alexander brought with him from France the original note of surrender sent by the German commanding officer to Lieutenant Colonel Whittlesey, and he presented this note to Colonel Whittlesey in Mr. MacManus's office as a souvenir.

Ince Picks Strong Cast for Special.

A strong cast has been selected by Thomas H. Ince for his new big special production by C. Gardner Sullivan, tentatively titled, "Americanism vs. Bolshevism." Among the players chosen to play the important roles are Lloyd Hughes, Barbara Castleton, Claire DuBrey, Jack Richardson, Walt Whitman, Lewis Morrison and Gordon Mullen. It is stated that work on the picture has already started, under the direction of Fred Niblo.

Return Dates for First National Films.

For the first time in the history of the New Garrick Theatre at Minneapolis and the New Garrick at St. Paul, special feature attractions which were adjudged record breakers by popular opinion, will be playing return engagements at those theatres during State Fair week in Minneapolis beginning August 31.

"Daddy Long Legs," starring Mary Pickford, released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which surpassed all records for the Minneapolis house by more than $1,000, and which also established a high record at the New Garrick in St. Paul, will be the attraction during this carnival week.

"Burglar by Proxy," starring Jack Pickford and "A Dog's Life," a million dollar Chaplin picture, both First National attractions, will be presented State Fair week at the Lyric in Minneapolis and the Strand at St. Paul respectively.

Kellette, Recovered, Is Back on Job.

Completely recovered from an attack of quinsy sore throat, John William Kellette, director of the Paramount-Briggs Comedies, has resumed his duties at the Briggs Studio in Hudson Heights, N. J.

Mr. Kellette was under treatment by a noted New York specialist, who operated for the removal of his tonsils.

Baker Elected Vice-President.

Sidney Baker, manager of the Grand Central Film Company of St. Louis, Missouri, distributors of First National attractions, has been elected vice-president of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade.

Rambles Round Filmtown

With William J. Reilly

Come Across With the Hush Money Immediately.

LAST week we announced the new Rambles policy. Well, this is the last chance we'll have on the policy question. so before the Rambler gets back from Maine, we're gonna pull a wee "we" protest on this national advertising gag.

Sumpin's gotta be done. What we want to know is: Do the Bell Telephone and Western Union pay $100 each time the 'phone rings in the movies and each time a telegram helps along the continuity?

And what does the American Bar Association pay for the publicity given it by the polished mahogany in the saloons of the Western dramas?

Does China come across handsomely for the advertising it gets in the fillims that are set in our Chinatowns?

Crane's Linen Lawn ought to pay right smart for all the letters that are written on it—and dropped in front of the heroine—in the society drawmahs. Does it?

What rope company is coming through with the checks for the slush fund to have the villain use so much rope in tying up the hero in the second and twenty-first episodes of all these serials?

It's whispered that the automatic pistol companies are at each other's throats to get the drop on each other in movie publicity.

And as for the cigarette companies! Nothing mild at all!

If you wanna keep Rambles quiet on this subject, you better get your hush money in before the regular Rambler gets back. He mightn't take it.

Kiss Me!

"Big dramatic values of 'The Third Kiss'"—runs a headline in Vitagraph press sheet. Oh, boy! What kinda values are they're gonna be when they say goodnight? This fewer and better idea doesn't register on the osculator.

"The air is cool and sweet,
"There's a mushroom under your seat."

So Dave Seymour cooly publicizes his cold wave house up'n Saranac Lake. Can't y'imagine a fight starting by some walrus sittin' down on a steno's hat while she is wrapped up in the final fade-out, and then have her state: "Sir! You're sitting on my mushroom!"

GENTLEMEN—AND PRESS AGENTS.

An account in one of the trade papers of Buffalo's indorsement of Sunday movies said that those who were most strong in their approval were "Buffalo's best citizens and chief of police Higgins." Go to 'em, Hig.

Some hook-ups on Fox's "Are Married Policemen Safe?" might go like this:

Get out a post-card to all the female cooks in town and arrange a special screening for them. Follow this with another letter to the wives of all the policemen in town. Get the wife of the chief of police to appear in person at every showing and make a speech. Then arrange a free matinee for the inmates of the county jail. Have them hand in a ballot on the safe question or on the most popular policeman as they go out. This should go big.

Intolerance? Not in Movies!

This chap, McFadden, who owns the Physical Culture Restaurants is a broad-minded man. PUBLICITY DEPARTMENTS—PLEASE WRITE!!

Below is Universal News Reel's picture of William Ballantyne, the bird who flew over the Atlantic as a stowaway on the R34. His mascot, Jazz, is fox-trotting around his shoulder.

Question is—why did Bill stowaway on the R34?

Was it to get an autographed photograph of Joe Martin?

Was it to get those films of Joe Lee's?

Was it to get a print of the first F. P.-L. open booking release?

Was it to congratulate the Empy News on its new style of commas?

Was it to see the Sennett Diving Squad?

Was it to interview Samuel L. Rothapfel?

??????????????

We offer full publicity and a super-special feature pair of suspenders to the publicity department which supplies the best answer.

Why did Bill Ballantyne and "Jazz" stowaway on the R-34? Nope. See our Suspender Prize Competition above.

Any Ice To-Day?

Speaking of cool weather hints—did you ever figure strongly on the cold shoulder, the cool glance, or the icy reply? Or on getting the orchestra to play "Hail, Hail, the Gang's Not Here" while you pull a setting with a hail storm? Mention Moving Picture World when you order your next blizzard.

Truth Crushed to Earth Never Rises in Trade Papers.

Rumor bird carols that Albert Capellani is going to make "The Right to Lie." Les'see—who'd be the best looking press agent for the leading role? Don't crowd boys. Albert's here for some time.

Keep the Home Fires Burning.

"Exhibitors Want 'The Spark Divine'" chirps Vitagraph publicity. Spark? We know nine (9) ourselves who need a whole conflagration.

Watch for It, Mabel.

No, Mabel, you got it wrong. The English Crown Prince isn't going to make his headquarters on the British cruiser in New York harbor to escape being lionized on his visit here. It's to give the movie companies better facilities to arrange special screenings. Watch the trade papers, Mabel, for the list of pictures he sees on the way over.

Our Exhibitor's Service Bureau.

Honesty in advertising! Now you're shouting. And while you're on the wire we'll just slip you a few catchlines that'd go well with that new campaign of yours. Send your salesman a carbon copy of these:

Lay off "The Mocking Bird." It's a cuckoo.

Haven't had an empty house since the war? Try "The Jungle of Love" in six parts. Guaranteed. Money back.

Don't book our newest feature, "The Cataract of Despair." It's sure suicide.

So you haven't signed up for "Hook and Ladder?" You're a wise potato. It's all "hook-um."

Get in on "The House of the Nine Cross Roads." It's all double cross.

We'd appreciate a letter from you, telling us how you favor this new Exhibitor's Service Bureau. Then we'll print two pages of the letters.

You can't teach an old Underwood new tricks. Tried to write a new brand of Rambles on the Rambler's typewriter. But the doggoned thing balked and wouldn't write a line. Talk about faithfulness! Hey, Walt, how do you do it?

A Real Story of a Real Man

A REAL MAN figures in that story from Jefferson, Texas, which comes to us in an envelope from Smiling Jimmy Kelly under an Arkansas postmark. Jimmy tipped us off he was going into Arkansas and intimated that if he could locate a typewriter he would grind out a yarn. We will go on record as saying that he did do just that thing.

The story is of the Rev. W. A. Nance, who for six days in the week conducts the Lyric Theater and on Sunday preaches two sermons from his own pulpit. In the course of the services the minister takes occasion to announce the attractions of his house for the coming week. More than that, his confreres of the other denominations do likewise. Here's one point Jimmy may have overlooked, but he does not tell us whether Mr. Nance during the week informs his patrons as to the subject of his discourses on the coming Sunday. We'll take a chance and say he does. He seems to be that sort of a man.

Mr. Nance expresses the belief that through the proper handling of his theatre and running the right kind of productions he can increase the size of his Sunday congregations and win over to a good Christian life many men and women who heretofore never have been church attendants. The minister refers to the persons he now meets with whom previously he never has had an opportunity to establish contact. The business of the theatre is reported to have doubled under the management of the Rev. Mr. Nance. That proves the minister is a good showman. Such being the case, there need be no lingering doubt as to what soon will be reported about the size of the congregation.

The Frenchmen Coming Back

FRENCH motion picture men already are coming back. Announcement is made this week that one prominent producing concern has opened offices in New York, with the accompanying statement that it will release one feature and one three-reel comedy each month. Pushing the venture into the American field there will be waged an extensive campaign; every effort will be made to popularize French stars and productions.

If history repeats itself—and why should it not?—we again will have Frenchmen and Frenchwomen whose screen appearances will be looked forward to with keen anticipation. No nation is blessed with greater actors than is France. As to writers? Every one knows the answer to that question. We await the coming of the Frenchmen—and the Frenchwomen.

Mr. Eastman to Entertain Association

EVERY indication points to a large attendance at the annual meeting of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. The sessions will be held in Rochester, whither the delegates will go as the guests of George Eastman. The journey should be a profitable one entirely apart from the accomplishments of the convention, for it will bring home to many a first-hand knowledge of the magnitude and importance of Rochester's chief industry—the making of the raw film on which many of the world's motion pictures are printed. So on its educational side alone the trip is being awaited with keen anticipation.

Hugh Ford to Teach Britishers

HUGH FORD announces the establisment of a school in England wherein the art of motion picture making as it is pursued in the United States today will be taught those who may seek instruction. The talented director styles it "the first international school of motion picture art." He says it will afford opportunity for the development of British dramatic talent, assuming that he means in its application to the screen; for the stimulating of British playwright genius, for discharged soldiers to learn the latest methods "in the most lucrative profession in the world," and for British producers to acquire American trade secrets for the development of their own motion picture industry without wasting time in experiments which already have been tried here.

There can be no question as to the competency of Mr. Ford for the direction of such an institution. Deeply grounded in the ways of the stage producers he also is well versed in the best screen practice. He knows what progressive men are doing in the way of making the most attractive of screen entertainment.

It is stated the employers of Mr. Ford have entered upon the project at the invitation of the British capitalists who backed the organization. The founding and successful administration of a school such as outlined should go far to remove asperities in England of which recently we have heard more than a little. We refer, of course, to the antagonism on the part of exhibitors in the British Isles toward the theatre building plans of the English branch of the Famous Players.

Mr. Ford is bound to be a busy man in the coming months with his combined producing and pedagogical duties. Then, again, if he should make a hit and succeed in converting raw but good material into high-class goods, it is possible he will have solved a problem for some manufacturers at home who occasionally have been known to express disappointment over the work of highly touted and incidentally highly paid directors.

Another Word About Short Stuff

TWO weeks ago we said a few words about the importance of giving heed to short stuff. Since these were printed we have seen Sydney Drew's two-reel "Squared," some of the last of the work of this splendid and lamented actor. On the same program was a somewhat pretentious five-part subject, but the longer picture suffered when compared with the short one. In the latter production there was more of comedy and of drama—of real heart interest and of the qualities that go to make the best of entertainment.

"Squared," too, gives a fine example of the art of Sydney Drew, of his naturalness and of his ability to avoid "acting."

Hulsey to Build a Regular House

PLAINLY E. H. Hulsey of Dallas is not intending to go out of the show business, as was intimated by one of the amusement journals recently. He is breaking ground in a few weeks on an office building and theatre which will cost in the aggregate in the neighborhood of two millions. The structure will be from fifteen to twenty stories in height. The lease is for ninety-nine years. The plot is 200 by 200 feet, and situated at the busiest downtown corner of Dallas. There will be accommodations for 3,000 persons. And as one feature of a cooling system there will be in the summer months ice coated ammonia pipes hanging so low that patrons may touch them as they pass through the lobby. This latter feature is a scheme worthy of a Connecticut Yankee.

Common Sense and the Social Reformer

THE hygienic drama continues to multiply. The latest example of the plain truth moving picture was given a private showing recently before a number of men and women interested in public welfare and seemed to meet with their approbation. While there always will be strongly divided opinion on the propriety of exhibiting such pictures to mixed bodies of spectators or of exhibiting such pictures at all there was one feature of this latest addition to the list which should be condemned, and supporters of the public exposure of the dangers from the so-called private diseases should be reminded that the subject is a serious one, that it is supposed to be the exclusive custom of the putrescent minded to make a joke of anything connected with it.

There are scenes and subtitles in the picture under discussion which if not intended as "comedy relief" reveal a sad lack of knowledge of human nature on the part of the producer. Certain situations and most of the remarks made by a character known as an ex-bartender will fill every theater where the picture is shown with shouts of laughter from the very persons most in need of the warning conveyed by the story. If in order to inculcate its lesson it is necessary also to enlighten the general public as to the vulgar humor of the underworld, to get the uninitiated to swallow the nasty dose by surrounding it with a coating of licentious humor that might have been taken from a comedy by Congreve or Farquhar, to insult the intelligence of decent folk by asking them to believe that a reputable physician would consent to have the nurses of his hospital enact the part of prostitutes and use his institution as the scene of the highly edifying incident, then some other method had better be devised than of employing the screen as the carrier of propaganda against venereal disease.

However much the public welfare spirit of the producer of such a picture is open to question, the attitude of the social reformer should admit of no argument. The government officials and other public-spirited persons who are said to have indorsed the picture are reminded that even the social reformer need not be devoid of common sense.

Impressive Figures

IMPRESSIVE were the figures quoted by Orrin G. Cocks of the National Board of Review in his address before the delegates attending the Methodist Centenary Celebration. They were printed in last week's issue of the Moving Picture World. Mr. Cocks said that three years ago, in its list of selected family pictures, the board included 26 per cent. of the whole output. Last year the board adjudged 48 per cent. of the total to be in the category of the finest kind of selected pictures for the family.

In these days of the Low Cost of Calumny it is well to keep such figures in mind. The fact that the number of good pictures in the expert opinion of the Board practically has been doubled in two years will not be lost on those who like to think at least moderately well of an industry the steady progress of which means so much to many millions of people.

The Pacific Northwest Convention

NO longer would it seem that the combining of exchange and exhibitor interests in the Pacific Northwest is an experiment. For several months now the latter have been connected with the organization of the former as associate members. Controversies limited to either division of the body are settled without the interference of the other, while those differences in which showmen and distributors both are concerned are solved by a joint committee.

The association known as the Allied Motion Picture Interests of the Pacific Northwest has just completed a successful convention in Seattle. Present were twenty-three exchangemen and a hundred exhibitors. According to the report printed in this issue the two groups are banded together on a practical working basis, for the good of themselves and the industry as a whole.

The body devoted considerable time to a proposal submitted by Exhibitor John Hamrick that there be a reconsideration of the action favoring a repeal of the admission tax. The resolution had been approved by the association while Mr. Hamrick was absent on committee work. The manager of Seattle's Rex contended that it was the duty of exhibitors to do their part in raising money with which to liquidate the large war debt resting on the country.

Mr. Hamrick uncovered another angle of the situation when he suggested that in case the repeal were effected many exhibitors would be expected to reduce their admissions five cents, since a large number had raised their prices that amount in order to account for the two or three cent tax. The particular resolution was sent back to the executive committee.

Frank Phelps, manager of the New Grand in Duluth and the New Palace in Superior, Minn., both vaudeville houses, has canceled his vaudeville in Superior for the summer months and booked big film attractions as a substitute. Early in August he will play "Auction of Souls," another big First National production, and he is now in the midst of a strong advertising campaign on the coming attraction.

Exhibitors' League of America Fight for the Repeal of War Time Tax

THE exhibitors of the country made their demand for relief from unjust war taxes felt in Washington this week. It was felt to such an extent that when a general debate on revenue measures was held in the House, the motion picture taxes were thrust forward as one of the tax measures which should receive preferential consideration as objects of immediatel repeal legislation.

That the motion picture taxes were mentioned at all during the debate is due to the aggressive campaign that has been waged by the committee on legislation and tax of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc. Only the inactivity of state campaign directors in some of the states which the committee has not heard from prevented the motion picture taxes from becoming part and parcel of the bill to repeal the soda water and ice cream taxes which was passed by the House, and is now in the hands of the Senate Finance Committee.

No exhibitor, regardless of how large his interests or duties may be, should decline to accept the duties assigned to him. The work outlined is a matter of routine, and any clerk in his office can handle it and succeed with proper supervision by his employer. A number of the larger exhibitors have already chosen this method and are waging a strenuous campaign through their chain of theatres.

Put Repeal Slogans on Screen.

Flashing tax repeal slogans upon the screen is an effective means employed in many of the states. This is a powerful publicity method of which the soda water interests could not avail themselves because they were not owners of screens.

The Ways and Means Committee will continue in session during the House recess of six weeks.

Efforts are being concentrated this week on the Senate Finance Committee, of which Senator Boies Penrose, of Pennsylvania, is chairman. The plan of the exhibitors' committee is to impress the Senate Committee not only with the strength of the exhibitor but with the justice of his fight and the logical arguments which should give the motion picture taxes preference over the soda water tax, or at least include them in the same repeal bill. The members of the Finance Committee are as follows, and exhibitors in those states represented on the committee should lose no time in demanding recognition of their demands: Peter J. McCumber, North Dakota; Reed Smoot, of Utah; Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin; William P. Dillingham, of Vermont; George P. McLean, of Connecticut; Charles Curtis, of Kansas; James E. Watson, of Indiana; William M. Calder, of New York; Howard Sutherland, of West Virginia; F. M. Simmons, of North Carolina; John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi; Charles S. Thomas, of Colorado; T. P. Gore, of Oklahoma; A. A. Jones, New Mexico; P. G. Gerry, of Rhode Island; and John F. Nugent, of Idaho.

Promotional Link-Up With "Westerners" Gives Strand Big Co-operation on Hampton Picture

APPLICATION of the sales method of the great bookselling organizations of the country to the promotion of the picture version of a popular novel is expected to bring great benefit to the New York Strand in conjunction with its presentation of Stewart Edward White's "The Westerners."

This first Great Authors production made under the name and sole auspices of Benjamin B. Hampton is the initial author-supervised picture to reach Broadway.

"The Westerners" is published in its moderate priced editions by Grosset and Dunlap and has had a sale up to this date of in excess of 680,000 copies. This is, of course, in addition to its large circulation in the higher or standard priced editions and in addition to the circulation the novel had when first published in serial form.

Links Showing Up With Book Stores.

During the week preceding the presentation of "The Westerners" at the Strand, where it was placed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, its sole distributors, Grosset and Dunlap linked up this premiere showing with the metropolitan book stores and the book departments of the big department stores.

Window and counter displays were arranged with Gimbel's, Wanamaker's, Stern's, Macy's, with the Womrath chain of book stores and the leading chain of drug stores with book counters in Greater New York. Grosset and Dunlap, as an organization, took one thousand one sheets of "The Westerners" from the Hodkinson organization, prepared special printed streamers linking up the book with its current presentation at the Strand and likewise made use of one thousand sets each of the eight by ten and eleven by fourteen lobby displays on this production.

Scheme Used in Towns of 5,000.

The metropolitan department stores being heavy users of newspaper advertising space granted the heads of book departments space in their daily and Sunday and the seven million population in the New York City municipal sphere was invited to "Buy 'The Westerners' Now and Then Hurry to See It as a Great Motion Picture at The Strand Theatre."

This campaign in exact duplicate is being carried out in every city and town of more than 5,000 population in the United States and S. A. Jenkins, of the Grosset and Dunlap organization, is personally directing the campaign on not only "The Westerners" but a similar camaign to come on Zane Grey's "Desert Gold," the first Eltinge F. Warner-Zane Grey picture made under the supervision of the author for Hodkinson distribution.

GERMANS SHUN FILMS FROM AMERICA

Ben Blumenthal, Returned from European Trip, Says, Because of Existing Enemy Regulations, Governmental Restriction of Film Exporting to Huns Was a Joke

BEN BLUMENTHAL, president of the Export and Import Film Company, Inc., who recently returned to New York after an extended business trip on the European continent, brought back a lot of detailed information which may disturb film export circles in the United States. A few minutes' conversation with the Export and Import president leads to the inevitable conclusion that a lot of things, which many film operators in this country had so fondly hoped would happen that they could see no other possibility, simply are not going to happen. And, since they are not going to happen, it is an easy deduction that some "short bank rolls," which have been risked on what looked like a perfectly safe bet, may be stretched to the breaking point.

Is Man of Experience.

Inasmuch as the value of an opinion depends upon the standing of the man who expresses it, it may be well to observe that Mr. Blumenthal is generally conceded to rank as a leading exporter of American-made moving pictures in their relation to conditions throughout Central Europe, which is just now an interesting spot on the world map. In his earlier days in the business, Mr. Blumenthal and his associates operated extensively on the European continent, in close personal touch with moving picture conditions there, in the days when the interchange of moving pictures in a so-called international way was largely among France, Italy, England and Germany, for the reason that American moving pictures had not then reached the point of perfection which made them of any particular commercial value outside of this country.

War Had Great Effect.

Like many of the other film exporting firms, the Export and Import Company enjoyed its most rapid rise to prosperity during the recent World War, when conditions in Europe were such that American-made pictures were greatly in demand and when Central Europe was closed to the film products of not only the United States but also of France, Italy and England, which had previously been the most important producing centers.

Possessed of fully as many, if not more, American pictures which could be sold in Central Europe under normal conditions, than any other American exporter, this concern was particularly keen to get a line on the future of the moving picture industry in Germany, Austria and the Balkans. They started with a lot of advance information, and since the signing of the armistice, Mr. Blumenthal has spent most of his time on the other side of the Atlantic, as near to the closed territory as he could, making his headquarters in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Enemy Manufactured Films.

"This country—and possibly the world in general—in planning commercial policies for Germany, Austria and the Balkan states under the control of the Central Powers," said Mr. Blumenthal, "has forgotten that, although the Central Powers suffered considerably more hardships than the Allies because of being on the losing end, business was going on, compartively, 'as usual' throughout the war period.

"In the light of conditions as I found them during my stay abroad, it is now quite apparent that, while the Central Powers had their hands more than full with the war, they still recognized the pressing necessity of paying at least some attention to all kinds of ordinary commercial pursuits. Berlin, Vienna—and even the smaller cities and communities in the area closed to the outside world—did not stagnate. Had one been permitted to journey through the country, I'll venture there would have been even fewer visible signs of the great death struggle that was being waged than might have been observed in France and England. The manufacture of necessities, not only for the actual prosecution of the war but for other purposes was undoubtedly kept up—and many and ingenious were the makeshifts which were used to keep the production up to something like that of normal times.

Had Logical Effect.

"The effect of this 'business going on as usual' policy upon the moving picture industry, in which we are interested, was a queer one—unexpected, I am sure, by many film operators in other countries, who hoped to have thrown at their heads a virgin and remarkably productive territory for their product the minute peace was declared. Yet this effect now seems perfectly logical.

"One of the earliest and most interesting discoveries which the world in general made after the outbreak of the war, was the thoroughness with which the Germans had long been using every medium of propaganda. Their 'official news bureau,' which disseminated information helpful to all German interests to every corner of the civilized world proved a revelation when their workings were uncovered.

German Films Well Backed.

"In the light of the Germans' efforts along these lines, it might long ago have been expected that the moving picture screen, within the confines of the closed countries at least, would certainly be developed for the strengthening of the Central Powers' morale. During my stay in Copenhagen, which was the clearing port for most of the information coming to the outside world from the Central Powers, I discovered very easily that the German government, important German banking interests, and the German people en masse went behind the moving picture business, as a powerful means to an end greatly to be desired from their point of view. They did this soon after the opening gun of the war had been fired.

"Prior to the war, Germany had been a reasonably important factor in the international moving picture industry. There were millions of people there capable of being entertained by photoplays and there was latent German ingenuity to provide the kind of photoplays which this tremendous population might be expected to like. However, because French and Italian pictures, possessing artistic merit, which the Germans found it hard to equal, were so easily obtainable, the business of producing moving pictures in Germany had not made the progress of which it was capable. It strikes me that the Germans had simply never 'come around to the moving picture industry.' There were theatres aplenty—and some of them the finest in the whole world—but certainly the industry was not being as intensively developed in Germany as it was being developed in this country, for instance.

War Aided Industry.

"When the Central Powers found themselves shut off from the rest of the world, they realized the value of the moving picture—and got busy. New producing companies by the scores were formed, theatres almost in the hundreds were built; and for all of these enterprises there was ready government support. Just how effective this movement proved from the German standpoint will, perhaps, never be known, but I'll venture to say that the moving picture industry in Germany, Austria and the Balkans made it possible for the Central Powers to prolong the war many months beyond the time it would have ended had the screen propaganda not been available.

Central Europe Almost Closed.

"The most important thing, then—from the standpoint of the American film exporter—that I found during my stay in Copenhagen was that, while the signing of the peace treaty has apparently opened millions of square miles of closed territory to the outside world, the same territory, for the immediate present, at least, has been more effecticely closed to the outside film world than it could ever have been had there been no war or had it been possible to do business with the Central Powers during the entire period of the conflict.

"Germany, Austria and the Balkan states are a wonderful field for American-made moving pictures. The population is there, the theatres are there, the means of transportation are there—but the market is going to be the toughest nut to crack which outside operators have ever tackled for a variety of very simple reasons.

German Market Is Full.

"In the first place, Germany has made more moving picture progress during the past four years than she made in ten years prior to the war. They are producing fully as many pictures in Germany today as the market can absorb—and the business is giving employment to so many more people than it did before the war that, whether the government were or were not interested in the industry financially, it would naturally attract great governmental attention and would be in line for all the protection which could be given it. But the government is financially interested, and every ounce of government strength may be expected to be exerted to protect this industry from the effects of foreign competition.

"As a second and almost equally important consideration, in discussing why this recently opened market is really a very tightly closed one, one must consider the manner in which American made pictures have established themselves in European markets in general. Prior to the war—and I know it from bitter experience—the European exhibitor booked American-made pictures only when he could not get anything else. I have observed the complaint of the English exhibitors who are objecting to the threatened invasion of their rights by the Famous Players-Lasky interests, and while I have full sympathy for their position it still makes me smile when they set forth that they have done so much to develop American-made pictures in the foreign market.

"At the beginning of the war they booked them as 'life-savers' to keep their theatres open, forgetting, in the stress of necessity, all the objections they had made when French, Italian and English pictures were available. Today, I am sure American-made moving pictures are booked in England and elsewhere because both exhibitors and the general public recognize their superior merit and have been educated to the kind of screen entertainment which American pictures—and American pictures only—can provide.

A Double Ban on American Wares.

"I have digressed a little to make this point which has its application to the situation in Central Europe. Europe generally took what was regarded as a bitter pill when necessity compelled it to swallow American pictures. Then came the discovery that what American exporters had been telling European exhibitors for years was the truth, and that American pictures were as good, or better, entertainment than they had previously been offering their patrons. It took a war condition to make them see the light! And while they were learning, the Central Powers were standing still—for they could not have booked American-made pictures had they so desired. And, as another humorous digression, let me observe that the governmental regulations in this country which prohibited the shipping of American-made pictures into the Central Powers' territory was the joke of the age, for the simple reason that even more pronounced were the earlier governmental regulations on the part of the Central Powers which prohibited the use of any outside pictures in the territory.

Tsuru Aoki

Or Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa, who has been signed for special Universals, the first to be "The Breath of the Gods."

Central Powers Are Prejudiced.

"Without the period of education, then, Germany, Austria and the Balkans are in identically. the same state of mind as regards American pictures in which they were four years ago. American pictures may be wonderful pictures—but they do not believe it any more than they did in the days when French and Italian pictures were the vogue in their countries. And to cap the climax, they have their own German made pictures in sufficient quantities to take care of their needs.

Germany Has New Policy.

"And, as a final point, let me say that the new German policy—born of ante-war necessities—of paying money to outsiders for nothing that is not an absolutely necessary raw product, is going to stop us in our tracks in the export picture business, as far as the Central Powers are concerned. Germany and Austria have discovered that they can make pictures of a satisfactory commercial value for their own uses. They may not be the best pictures in the world, but it has been established that a very considerable number of people within the Central Powers will accept them.

Exchange Is Solution.

"A plan affecting the picture business has already been devised, I am informed, and it works this way: The man who wants to send pictures into Germany is at perfect liberty to do it if he will take as his pay German-made pictures of equal value for distribution outside of Germany. One can readily understand what this will mean to the general exporter and importer. German pictures, it seems absolutely certain, no matter what their artistic merit may be, will be considerably discounted in any country other than Germany for a long time to come, and just how much progress the exporter with American-made pictures to sell in competition with German made pictures in any neutral territory would make can be imagined. He'd have to run a series of Hun bargain days every week.

Quick Turnover Impossible.

"In conclusion, let me say that while this statement of conditions resembles very much the weather we have been having ever since St. Swithin put over his traditional propaganda in the East here some ten days ago, I do not regard the situation as hopeless. At the Export and Import Film Company offices here we dare not take the pure indigo view of it; we have too many good and expensively purchased pictures for the territories in question. There will be a 'way out,' I am sure. Just how, I don't know. If we had to get any kind of a quick turnover for the money which we have invested in pictures for Germany, Austria and the Balkans, I'd feel pretty nervous. Thank God, moving pictures, after all, are printed celluloid and will be just as good a couple of years from now as they are today."

Great Britain Actively Staging a Moving Picture "Come-Back"

London, July 15.

NEARLY four hundred exhibitors from different parts of the United Kingdom assembled in the Scottish capital recently for the annual conference of the Exhibitors' Association. J. Bennell, "father" of the Scottish branch, presided and was supported by the Lord Prevost of the city and other civic officials at the welcome, A. E. Newsound, M. P., presided at the business and trade gatherings. The first address was by Dr. A. K. Chalmers, chief health officer for the city of Glasgow. "As an educational agency the cinema has miscarried up to the present," he argued. "It could not be said to have failed as it has not yet been adequately tried. I suggest as a scheme worthy of trial the complete detachment of films in their groups, the educational and the entertaining from each other, and their exhibition at separate and specified hours. The picture house should be a place to which any mother may take her children without fear of stimulating in them a precocious sentimentality."

Putting Each Other's Eyes Out.

R. C. Buchanan next read a paper headed "Can Competitors Co-operate?" "The old proverb answers 'No'; two of a trade can never agree," pointed out Mr. Buchanan, and he asked "What is trade co-operation?" "Let us consider what is not," he continued. "This can best be done by the narration of a fable. Once upon a time there was a man who was placed in a great dilemma by being told that he would be granted whatever he cared to ask, but that his competitor would receive double. But he was not to be outdone. He requested that one of his eyes be put out. He lost one eye. His competitor lost two. That," said Mr. Buchanan, amidst laughter, "was the antithesis of co-operation."

Deplores "Peddling" Practices.

The same speaker voiced a complaint at the conference at a trade custom extensively practiced that savors of the crude methods of the ancient slave traders of the Barbary Coast. "It certainly fosters more ill-feeling among competitors than anything else in the trade," he said in allusion to the system our exchanges have in bargaining and booking films. "The exchange traveler goes from one house to another playing one management against another and the case is not unknown of a traveler, while still offering a film, to have in his pocket a contract for it signed by a management in the same neighborhood. It amounts to auction every time and open auction would be better than secret auction.

"Exhibitors are only pawns in the game played by the renters, so there can be nothing unfair in making the renters pawns in the game the exhibitors can play with them, if only, as competitors, they really do so. It is the present method of bargaining for films that accounts for the ridiculous prices sometimes asked and paid; it is the system that tends to the increase of circuits."

Referring to recent discussions among exhibitors relative to increased admission charges to moving picture theatres Mr. Buchanan suggested a special committee of the association to consider the advisability of a general increase. "There is no one who will not admit that the admission money at the cinemas as ridiculously small—so small that it reflects still the modest method we adopted to find our way into the affections of the public," he added.

"Super" Ogre May Devour Industry.

The advent of the moving picture enterprise upon a large scale, adjectived by "super," "hyper" or "ultra," was discussed with evident qualms. The "super-films," controlled by "super-men" and "insuperably super capitalized" was indicated by the same speaker as next in the field. "This torrential movement may sweep away in its course a great number of existing institutions," he said, "among them some of the shows which today are comparatively large, but which tomorrow may be so comparatively small as to be negligible. Let the trade flourish by all means, but if for one 'super-cinema' you are going to lose two, three, or four smaller ones; if for one 'super-film' factory, you are going to lose two or three useful hard-working film factories; if for one colossal distributing agency you are going to lose some of the smaller renting houses, who served us so well in the past, where is the gain? And if the ultimate object is achieved of a huge trust controlling the trade in all its intricacies where is the gain to anybody."

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE activities of American moving picture interests in the British Isles and the great and growing importance of the export branch of the American moving picture industry, which is unavoidably in competition with the English trade, have made London a particularly interesting news center in the affairs of international cinematography during the past few weeks.

New Companies Forming to Produce in England

THE old British and Colonial Producing Company was one of the first of our London film manufacturing undertakings. Its history dates back to the Frese Green days. It has now been re-established, reorganized, and extended upon modern lines under the chairmanship of N. Black Hawkins and management of Ed Godal. Frese Green, is in charge of the printing plant. The technical staff comprises cameramen and process workers from the States. At the inaugural dinner the other evening, Mr. Moses, an American cameraman, tickled his English listeners with the witticism, "I know they make good pictures in England sometimes. I certainly know that we surely make bad ones in America frequently."

The new Regal Film Company has taken over a studio on the bank of the Thames and is shortly to build another in London in the neighborhood of Tulse Hill for the completion of productions already under way. Tom Watts is chief director of players, and the first picture, "The Autocrat," has first been shown to the trade.

Welsh Pearson & Company also have secured a site for a new modern studio and plant with an old mansion and grounds complete at Winchmore Hill, near the capital. Building has not yet started, however.

John D. Tippett, for several years principal of the Transatlantic Film Company, Ltd., agents for the Universal of America, has formed a subsidiary pro-

Will Specialize in Aerial Picture "Stunts"

THE boom in all matters aerial has led to the formation of many and divers concerns for the exploitation of flying. Two companies have been registered under the limited liabilities act for the purpose of supplying aeroplanes, airships, balloons, etc., exclusively for moving picture purposes. The first of these is named Aerofilms, Ltd., and announces it will contract for anything from a transatlantic flight as a stunt for a film to express delivery of films by air for exhibitors.

The second, the Bishop-Burke Aviation Company, has already a name, for both the principal partners, Bishop and Burke, have been awarded the Victoria Cross while on active service as pilots in the Royal Air Force. This venture is also for similar purposes. The company offers to film producers a real aerial "crash" as a thriller for a forthcoming film that would allow its insertion. Not a fake, the real thing and real machines. The modern and skilled air pilot, they assert, knows exactly how his machine will crash and what parts will be damaged and can so steer on land to avoid injury himself. Of course the fee is pretty high for such a stunt as this and you must do your own insurances.

ducing company named J. D. Tippett's Productions, Ltd. The new concern is to make and distribute British films in Europe and the East.

Trade Showing Resembled High Class Court Function

THE trade and private show of the Ideal Film Company's recently acquired series of "Adventures Among Cannibals" held last month was more like a court function than an ordinary trade show. It was held in the first place, in the evening, and it must have been an expensive undertaking to reserve the West End Kinema for an evening show. Practically the whole of the people in the "Who's Who" turned out in force—twenty-one peers, a hundred M. P.'s, thirty eminent statesment and politicians, twenty-five distinguished colonial officials, and celebrities in the world of art, science, letters, law, and music by the score.

Rowland Showing Nazimova

The first half dozen features starring Nazimova are being offered to London buyers by R. A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, who is making his headquarters temporarily at the J. Frank Brockliss offices. He is also handling for this side "Romeo and Juliet," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. No Nazimova films have been exhibited here yet.

Selig Closes London Office

The offices of the Selig Polyscope Company in the center of Wardour street have been vacated by that firm and their well-known manager and agent E. H. Montagu. It is nearly ten years since the latter started the Selig productions upon a feature footing, with "Christopher Columbus." E. H. M. says he intends remaining in touch with the industry.

English Circuits Strike Back.

The largest of existing English exhibiting circuits, Provincial Kinematograph Theatres, Ltd., has increased its working capital by the issue of over a million dollars' worth of extra stock. The registered capital of the company is £1,000,000 and the new series brings up the total capital already issued to £700,000. Since the announcement of Picture Playhouses, Ltd., two more large circuits are proposing to considerably increase their capital.

New Export and Import Firm.

A new firm of exporters and importers of moving pictures have opened offices at 153 Wardour street, by name E. Gihl & Co., of London and New York. Multireel productions are to be their specialty, which they will buy in New York for the whole of Europe and in London for North America. This firm has established agents on the Continent, but is new to the film business.

Treaty Pictures Come Out Well.

The moving picture record of the actual signing of the Peace treaty in the Palais des Glaces at Versailles has been secured by Film Booking Offices, Ltd. The Hall of Mirrors seems to have made an excellent studio according to the brilliance of the film photographically. Celebrities in the great crowd easily may be distinguished and President Wilson is much in the foreground and recognizable in most scenes. Copies are already on their way to the United States.

Pays Half Million for Educationals.

For the series of educational films, travelogues, and scenic gems, he is releasing serially under title "Marvels of the Universe," A. G. Granger, of Granger's Exclusives, paid approximately half a million dollars. A heavy speculation for educationals, think most exchangemen.

Screen to War on Rats.

The Board of Agriculture has near completion a propaganda film instructing the public in the extermination of rats. These rodents, it is estimated, are costing the country nearly fifty millions per year in the ravages on food and property. The film is intended to lead an organized campaign for their destruction.

Yankee Visitors Now in London

Will C. Smith, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, is in London on the company's business. He expects to leave for the Continent in a few days.

Herbert Brenon is still in Paris contemplating producing there or in Turin, I am informed. Marie Doro will join him shortly.

J. P. McGowan, Eddie Polo and his wife, Jean Perkins, and Miss Aarup landed in Liverpool on Monday with their staff for the production of a Universal serial on this side. Polo is now "telling the tale" to London kinema audiences on behalf of the Victory Loan.

METRO SPECIAL IS AN ISSUE IN INDIA

"Lest We Forget" in Litigation Between David P. Howells and Big Calcutta Client

By S. B. Banerjea

Calcutta Correspondent Moving Picture World, No. 11 Kasibath Boselane, Simla P. O., Calcutta.

AT the Calcutta High Court recently, before Justice Greave, a native barrister instructed by Mr. Watkins, solicitor, applied on behalf of the Bijou, Ltd., for a rule calling on the International Banking Corporation, Calcutta branch, to show cause why an injunction should not be issued against them restraining them from parting with a film called "Lest We Forget." The barrister said that the Bijou, Ltd., were exhibitors of picture films; that the defendant, David P. Howells, was an American who, on April 26, 1918, made an offer to the plaintiffs for the exclusive rights in India in all the special films released by the Metro Pictures Corporation, America; he had the exclusive right to these films in India, Burma and Ceylon; he had sent the film called "Lest We Forget" to another party; that film was with his agents, the International Banking Corporation The bank, on being asked not to par with the film, had replied that their in structions were to give it to anothe party. Unless, therefore, an injunctio were issued they could not withhold it delivery. After some discussion, th judge granted the plaintiffs leave t serve notice of motion by registere post on the defendant. Pending th hearing of the notice, His Lordshi granted an ad interim injunction. Th notice was made returnable on the firs motion day of the next term.

Business Prospers in Provinces.

I have just returned from anothe pleasant tour through several parts o the Bombay Presidency and am glad t report that I have found the severa theatres, in Bombay city and Poona es pecially, going strong. Some of th Bombay theatres have better seating ar rangements than those of Calcutta the atres, for instance. The Cinema Pre cious, the Imperial, and the new Alex andra have nice little gardens where one may enjoy the breezes during th intervals. In Calcutta there is not on theatre approaching the Cinema Pre cious, for instance. I trust our future bioscope proprietors will give us some thing like what the Cinema Precious and the Imperial people are giving their patrons.

Manufacturing in Sacred City.

Nasik is a sacred city of the Hindus. Here the natural scenery is indeed charming. Mr. Phatke, the pioneer Hindu film maker, has his quarters in this city and he has chosen an excellent site for his purposes. The road to Trimbak, where the sacred Godanery rises will delight the heart of any film maker. Nasik itself is dingy, but its natural scenery is captivating.

"Americanisms" Hurt Pictures.

The Cinema Precious people are still screening "Vengeance and the Woman." I have a word to say to the manufacturers of this film. Surely, they did not manufacture it for home consumption only. If I am right, I must complain against the free use of pure "Americanisms" in the text. Indian audiences—or non-American audiences—do not understand them and are, therefore, deprived of half their enjoyment. I trust American film manufacturers will not forget that they are producing films for the world, not for home consumption merely.

Lack of Good Comics Deplored.

At the Bijou Grand, the following films have been shown: "The Brass Check," "The House of Tears," "Broadway Bill," "Kidder & Co.," "Eye for Eye," "Her Reckoning," "The Final Judgment," "The Bridge," and several other films. At this theatre we have not seen any good comics of late. Apropos, the "Empress" of Calcutta writes: "Mr. Arnold is still showing two parts of his 'Girl Reporter' serial with each program, to meet the deficit caused by want of acceptable 'comics.' Apropos, what has become of Fatty Arbuckle, and of Max Linder, Dan Russell and a few others we see often enough at one or other of our own shows, but too little of the former."

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Mabel's a Circus in Her Circus—Crisp a Demon at the Wheel—Molly a Melting Shiv'rer

By Giebler

THIS week's Rubbernecking takes in two of the frontiers of Filmland; it stretches from the Goldwyn studios, nestling in the sage brush of Culver City, to where Fatty Arbuckle is making a comedy in the shade of the Verdugo foothills at Glendale.

Shady Stuff.

N. B. This shade stuff is just a figure of speech. When describing any place that is near a mountain you always refer to whatever it may be as in the shade of, etc. All our best authors do it. As a matter of fact, with the exception of the large, robust shadow cast by Fatty, shade is very scarce around the studio.

There is also mention of the Auto Races held for the benefit of the Actors' Fund at the Ascot track on Sunday.

Ah! that auto race—speed, thrills, stunts, breathless moments!

Goldwyn comes first, however.

The first thing I saw at Goldwyn, not counting Clarke Irvine, one of the studio "Skeletons," was Mabel Normand's circus, and after that, Mabel, who is a regular circus herself, either on or off the screen. Ask Edna Purviance—who was at the studio calling on Mabel—about this. Edna told Mabel about it.

"I didn't come here to laugh myself sick at you," she said, "I came to look around and see how you make films."

Mabel's Little Band and Elephant.

Mabel's got a great little circus, with a 10-piece Afro-American orchestra—does anybody know of any kind of band that can make sweeter music than a nigger band? I wot not—and three elephants, one of whom—I whope it's all right to refer to an elephant as whom—was running up the cost of production by putting one of its little hoofs on a nice piece of redwood plank and breaking it into splinters.

Vic Schertzinger, who was directing the circus, said he's going to take Maud with it was a lady elephant—home with him to split kindling.

John Bowers was in the circus. John plays the part of a slicker, three walnut shell stuff, and Ogden Crane, who was wearing a suit of clothes that made a loud and resonant announcement of his calling of circus manager.

Mabel, who is playing the part of a waif whose parents, once performers, have died and left her with the circus, had a costume that can best be described as a "get up." Overalls, boots, a vest that was formerly worn by the fat man, a sleeveless shirt and a hole-y hat.

Blanche Payson was also in the cast of the circus picture. Miss Payson, who is a very statuesque person, is the first woman in the United States to wear a police uniform. She is the lady who won so much fame as the policewoman at the San Francisco Exposition.

As I said before, Miss Normand is a regular circus. When she was not entertaining us with her talk and an exhibition of a temperamental star eating watermelon, she was persuading us to do stunts in the circus ring and get photographed at it.

There wasn't a dull moment at Mabel's circus set, and I had to leave sooner than I wanted to, but I had the pleasure of meeting Will Rogers immediately afterwards, which compensated somewhat.

Looks Immaterial to Will.

Mr. Rogers is an anomaly. He looks less like an actor than any man I've ever seen, but from what I know of his work, his record on Broadway, and from what I saw him do that day at the studio, I know that he is an actor of far more than ordinary ability.

Rogers is a natural wit, has a large and ready fund of the keen dry unsmiling kind of humor that hits the bulls-eye every time. He was working under the direction of Clarence Badger in a play made from Opie Read's story, "Old Ebenezer." Peggy Wood, of "Maytime" fame, was working opposite.

They did a little scene, Miss Wood begging Rogers to sign a paper of some kind, and Rogers—I think he was a country schoolteacher—could not sign the paper because the plot of the story would not allow him to.

But, great guns! how he wanted to.

Afflatus Not Inflated.

Any actor can give a simulation of wanting to do a thing, or not wanting to do it—that is acting; but one who actually wants to do the thing, lives the part. Rogers lived the part as only the man who has that little old thing the high brow writers call "the divine afflatus" concealed in his system can do.

Peggy Wood was just as fine. She cried a little when the school teacher wouldn't sign the paper, and I think some of those who stood on the side lines cried a little too.

"If You Have Tears."

Clara Horton, who was knitting some kind of a dingus out of pink yarn, saw me polishing up my specs, and said: "Oh, that's nothing, we've all been weeping with them."

Why, I've seen hundreds of heroines persecuted, chucked out of windows, robbed of papers, fortunes, babies, everything, and never blinked an eye winker, and here was nothing more than a girl with a trembly voice begging a man to sign a paper, and the man wouldn't do it.

High Class Rabbits' Feet.

I wonder if Clara thought I was weeping?

The next day was Sunday, and the auto races.

15,000 people went down to Ascot Park and watched Tom Mix win the Amateur Championship of the Pacific Coast, and Donald Crisp and Hoot Gibson flirt with death and disaster and get away with it.

After the skids and turns and flop-overs that Don and Hoot went through, they could have sold every hair on the rabbit's feet they carry for a dollar a hair.

Mix Staged a De Palma.

There were seven entries in the Coast Amateur Championship race of twenty-five miles. Tom Mix, in a Stutz special, finished first, in 24 minutes, 3 and 4-5 seconds; Lambert Hillyer, with a Hearne special, came in second; Ray Kirkwood, Maxwell, third; Donald Crisp, Mercer, fourth; Henry King, Mercer, fifth; E. L. Hayes, with a Stutz, and J. McWright, in a Wenz, did not finish.

The studio race of ten miles, was won by Earl Tiffany in an Elliott special, in nine minutes and twenty seconds. Tiffany also won the Star entry race of 15 miles in the same car in 14 minutes, 3 and 1-5 seconds. The Australian pursuit race was won by Lambert Hillyer.

The airplane versus auto race of two miles, between Cecil De Mille and Eddie Herne was won by De Mills, who made the course in one minute, one and one-half seconds. De Mille was only one hundred feet above the course at the start of the race, and the event was very fine and spectacular.

Beauty and the Judge.

The parade and beauty show was a fine part of the program. Charlie Murray was master of ceremonies, as usual. It took much hair-splitting to make the decision between Juanita Hansen in a gorgeous Packard, and Clara Kimball Young, in a Daniels, but Miss Young was given the cup.

There were a great many beautifully decorated cars in the Beauty parade. Priscilla Dean, Colleen Moore, Pauline Frederick, Marie McAllister, Lois Wilson, Earle Williams, Henry McRae, Molly Malone and others won much applause.

Donald Crisp and Hoot Gibson furnished most of the thrills, and if there had been any "good luck" medals awarded, this pair of daredevils would have won them.

Crisp Flirts with Undertaker.

In the 15-mile race Crisp left the track in what looked like an excursion to certain destruction. His car went into a vicious skid, turned around twice and headed for the safety zone backwards. There was a big shower of dust which everyone feared hid a tragedy, but when the dust settled, there was Donald, unhurt.

In the last event, the Australian pursuit, Crisp again left the track, skidded about thirty feet and "busted" a big gap in the fence, and after all this, got his car back into the race and won second place at the finish.

Hoot Gibson and his mechanician, Pete Morrison, did a merry-go-round skidding act in the 15-mile race. The car turned twice, dashed into the safety zone, took another turn and stopped, and when the ambulance dashed over to the spot, they found the remains safe and sound under the cowl of the car.

The scene changes—we are in Glendale. Snow is falling. The people in Glendale always did say it was cooler out there than in Los Angeles.

Sh! Mystery! Sh!

The scene is the representation of a theatre; in a box at one side sits a beautiful maiden. I can't tell you who it is now, it would spoil the drama and mystery of my story.

If you knew who the girl was you would know the name of the man who walked about in the snow.

Down in front were Mickey Neilan, Lew Cody, William Coogan, a singer, H. H. Van Loan, a scenario writer, Lou Anger, a movie magnate, Arthur Wenzel, a movie theatre manager, and I.

A tall person with a red nose stands against the wall. Two men in an automobile come upon the stage. They get out of the automobile and the little man leans it up against the wall. They advance to the footlights and whisper in a mysterious manner. The snow falls faster—large red, white and blue flakes. The small man shakes the snow from his shoulders. The large man looks at him with a frown.

Shiver Not a Shimmie.

"You are cold," he says. "Shiver."

The little man goes through a performance made famous by an oriental maiden on the streets of Cairo concession at the Chicago Fair way back in 1892. The big man frowns some more.

"Shiv-er-rr-rr!" he says in fierce, menacing tones, "don't shimmie!"

Having said this he turns and walks off with the usual dignified stride and graceful manner that characterizes all of his motions and emotions in the pictures.

I see that I can no longer conceal the identity of the man, gentle reader. It was Fatty Arbuckle, making a scene for his new comedy. The little man was Buster Keaton. He with the red nose was Al St. John, and the lady in the box was none other than Molly Malone, leading lady of the Arbuckle films and Mascot of the Vernon baseball team, of which Fatty is manager, owner and general factotum.

"Back to the Bench!"
Says Molly Malone, mascot of the Vernon Tigers, Fatty Arbuckle's baseball team.

Tests All Simplex Projectors.

The task of testing out every machine at the Simplex factory is one that has been taken care of for the past seven years by Sam Kaplan, who has just been re-elected for the third consecutive term as president of Local 306, Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union of New York City, previous to which he served one term as president of Auxiliary No. 35, also of New York City.

Mr. Kaplan has also represented his local at various labor conventions, the last two occasions being the International Theatrical Stage Employes' Convention, held at Columbus and Ottawa, respectively.

Since machine orders at the Simplex plant began almost tripling above normal, Mr. Kaplan has been assisted in his important work of testing mechanisms by Edward M. Cannock, who is a brother of the late Francis B. Cannock, whose activities in the projectors' engineering and designing field are well known to intimate followers of Simplex progress. All Simplex mechanisms, both new and those at the factory for repairs, pass through the hands of these two capable men.

Story of an Odd Theatre in Town of Lincoln, Ill.

LAST week I chanced to meet Steve Bennis, owner of the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Ill., who was in the city aranging booking for that pioneer house in a burgh which now boasts of a population of 11,000.

The Lincoln seats 210 persons and has an interesting history. It opened November 15, 1909, and for years no admission was charged to see the pictures shown there. During that time it was really an ice-cream and soda parlor, with tables and chairs to accomodate the customers. The pictures were thrown in to make them tarry longer and, incidentally, to increase the money in the till. The more exciting the pictures the longer the visitors stayed, so that even then care was exercised in the selection of programs.

Early in 1918 free admissions were done away with, the tables were fired out, theatre chairs took their places and the Lincoln became more like a picture theater. Even now the patrons must pass through an ice cream parlor and a confectionery store before entering the theater, which is in the rear. Posters are placed on a side of the building instead of on the front. The programs are high class and admisisons are 10 to 30 cents for adults, and 5 to 10 cents for children, with the war tax added. Makes of Pathe, Mutual, Vitagraph, etc. are now being shown.

Planning $30,000 Theater.

Mr. Bennis is at present making arrangements for building a new picture theatre—a real one. This, however, does not mean that he will close the old Lincoln. Oh, no! That will be preserved as long as the people come to it; for it is an old landmark which can boast of having had shown within its walls the first moving picture ever seen in the town of Lincoln.

The new house, which has not yet been named, will cost about $30,000 and will seat 800. It will be in readiness for opening around November 1.

Other picture theatres now running in Lincoln are the Lyric and the Star, owned by Isidore Bernstein, and seating, respectively, 300 and 500 persons.

Mr. Bennis has been a constant reader of the Moving Picture World since 1909; but it is a cause of much wonder to the writer how he had delayed so long in joining the great procession in providing a modern theater for his patrons. Better late than never, however, so we congratulate Mr. Bennis and rejoice with his following in Lincoln.

Jaecke of Herrington Laughs at Daylight Law

A. A. JAECKE, owner of the Dreamland, in Herrington, Kansas, has evolved a plan to offset the daylight law, which came near forcing him to close his house during the summer months. Herrington (I have been there) is an Arcadian spot, in the midst of a rich agricultural district, and the residents are fond of moving pictures. But the heat in the Dreamland was so excessive that quite a number had to forego the pleasure of watching the screen. The loss of this money served as a spur to Mr. Jaecke's imagination until a light dawned on him and his plan was born.

He built a roof garden right over the Dreamland, with a booth and all the other requisites of a first class picture theater. In the theater below he runs a show from 7:30 p.m. until 9 p.m., and promptly at the latter hour he opens the roof garden. By this time it is dark enough to show pictures to advantage in the open air, and all who feared to brave the heat of the theatre come out in force to his roof garden. In this way Mr. Jaecke gets the early-to-bed folks as well as the young people who don't mind the loss of an hour's sleep.

"How does it work?" someone asks.

Well, on reliable authority, I have it that, for the first year it was tried, Mr. Jaecke's books showed gratifying results. The roof garden not only paid for the building and equipment, but a snug profit besides. In addition, when big feature attractions are offered, Mr. Jaecke reaps the reward of big gatherings in both theater and roof garden.

Rosenfeld, Hopp & Company to Build Circuit of Houses

ROSENFIELD, HOPP & COMPANY, of Rock Island, Ill., proprietors of the Majestic Theatre, that city, were recently incorporated at Springfield, Ill., with a capital of $100,000 to engage in a general theatrical and moving picture business. The incorporators are Walter A. Rosenfield, Rock Island; Joseph Hopp, of Chicago, and Joseph P. Quinn, manager of the Majestic, Rock Island.

The corporation has arranged to build a large modern picture theatre in Rock Island, on a well located plot, which alone cost $60,000. The new theater will seat 2,000 and will be thoroughly modern in construction. The building alone will cost $200,000.

The architects are Cerzin & Horn, of Rock Island, who will consult with Architect Braun, of Chicago.

The corporation intends building picture theaters in other cities, in Illinois and Iowa, the intention being to have a circuit of at least six new houses.

Walter A. Rosenfield, of the corporation, is a prominent banker and manufacturer of Rock Island and Moline, who has a high financial rating. Joseph Hopp is a well known Chicago exhibitor, who owned and ran the old Standard Film Exchange for many years. He afterward was interested in banking and held the position of director in a banking institution. He is still part owner of the Ideal Theater, Chicago, which seats about 800.

Aged Parents of Aiken Visit Him in Chicago

MR. and Mrs. F. H. Aiken, of La Crosse, Wis., the parents of Fred C. Aiken, Select's Chicago manager, spent the last four weeks at their son's residence, 5728 Kenmore avenue, this city. Mr. Aiken, Sr., is 75 years old and his wife is well on in the sixties, but they spent their visit in energetic fashion. Pleasing Sunday trips by auto were made, varying from 75 to 125 miles, on which they were acompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Aiken.

The trip from La Crosse, to and from Chicago, was made in their own car. They returned by way of Milwaukee, where they stopped over for several days with their daughter, Mrs. E. P. Gleason.

It is now ten years since the writer first met these young-old people. They were then visiting their son, Fred, who at the time owned the Theatre Film Exchange, at 117-119 N. Dearborn street.

Frank Duffy Visits Chicago.

Frank Duffy, personal representative of President Paul Brunet, of Pathe, spent four days in the city last week. Mr. Duffy has spent the last four months in covering the various Pathe branches throughout the country. He stated that he found Pathe business generally very good and pronounced this summer's business the best yet recorded by his organization.

Mr. Duffy left for New York by way of Indianapolis and his itinerary called for stops at other important cities on the way.

Fairbanks Feature Booked Heavily in This Territory

C. E. SMITH, sales manager of the Chicago district for United Artists Corporation, stated last week that exhibitors in most of the large cities and important towns in his territory had already contracted for the first Douglas Fairbanks feature. The title of the picture is "His Majesty, the American," and the release date is announced for September 1.

The Riviera, Central Park, Woodlawn and Oak Park theaters will each run the picture for one week, as a pre-release, before it appears at the Castle Theatre for a run of two weeks. The Castle will be the only house in Chicago—either within the Loop or outside of it—that will present the picture during the two weeks mentioned. After the Castle run the picture will be shown in houses outside the Loop, Lubliner & Trinz having contracted for extended runs at each of their houses.

Ethel Clayton Is a Big Orchestra Hall Favorite

ORCHESTRAL HALL was a favorite retreat for crowds of moving picture patrons and lovers of good music last week. Ethel Clayton in "A Sporting Chance," was a fine attraction and the accompanying music, under the talented leadership of Rudolph Mangold, was the most enjoyable heard at this house for some time past. Violin solos by Director Mangold were masterfully rendered and enthusiastically applauded.

"Fires of Faith," founded on Salvation Army work during the Great War, with Catherine Calvert, Eugene O'Brien and Rubye de Remer, in the principal roles, is the attraction for the week beginning Sunday, July 28.

New 2,000-Seat Theatre Being Built in Oklahoma

J. H. COOPER, president of the United Theatres Company, came into the city from Oklahoma City, Okla., early during the week of July 21, and spent several busy days arranging for the equipment of a new theatre, the Oklahoma, on which construction was recently begun in the thriving southwestern city.

The United Theatres Company owns several modern theatres in the state of Kansas, including the Wichita and Star theatres, in Wichita—seating respectively 1,300 and 1,000, and the Orpheum in Topeka, seating 1,200. The company also owns the Electric, in St. Joseph, which seats 1,800 persons.

The controlling interest in the Oklahoma Theatre is held by the United Theatres Company, C. E. and A. C. Bennett, of Oklahoma City, being also largely interested. This house is being built to seat 2,000 and will be the largest picture theatre in southwestern territory. It will be of old Spanish Mission design and when completed will represent an investment of $350,000.

The architects are Carl and Robert Boller, of Kansas City, Mo., who made the plans for the Wichita house. The Oklahoma will be completed about September, 1920.

Mr. Cooper also advised the writer that he is now organizing the Cooper Amusement Company, Inc., for the purpose of building large modern picture theatres in the great southwest western section. This organization will have a capital stock of $1,000,000 and, in addition to building theatres, it will engage in the handling of state-right pictures in sections where its houses are located.

Mack Sennett's Big Comedy Opens Run at Ziegfeld

NORMA TALMADGE, in "The Way of a Woman," was very successful at the Ziegfeld during the week ending Friday, July 25.

Beginning Monday, July 28, the long looked for success, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," with Mack Sennett's bathing beauties as an added attraction, will open at this house. Considerable advance publicity has been given to the arrival of this successful Mack Sennett comedy, and no doubt the Ziegfeld will be packed to its utmost to meet the demand for seats. The run will be indefinite, and at the present writing it promises to be a long one.

Irene Castle Breaks Riviera Record.

Balaban & Katz, owners of the Riviera and Central Park Theatres, report that "The Firing Line," in which Irene Castle is featured, did a record business at the Riviera Theatre during the week of Monday, July 21. It broke all matinee records on Monday and Tuesday, the ample seating capacity of the beautiful theatre being insufficient to meet the demands of the many women admirers of the star.

At the Randolph Theatre.

The second week of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me" proved so successful at the Randolph, notwithstanding the sweltering weather, that it has been held over for a third week, and maybe longer.

Passing of Small Chicago Theatres.

About fifty small picture theatres and vaudeville houses in Chicago are likely to be closed in the near future, through failure to pay licenses. The license averages about $200 a year for each theatre and the deputy city collector, who has failed to obtain the fees, has requested Chief of Police Garrity to close the houses.

Fox Buys "The Devil's Riddle."

"The Devil's Riddle" is announced as a forthcoming picture subject for Gladys Brockwell, the William Fox star.

The story was published recently in the Argosy magazine. It is from the pen of Edwina Levin.

The selection of this story for Miss Brockwell is in line with Fox Film Corporation's plan to purchase for screen use the best production of well-known writers.

The first magazine story purchased for screen use for the coming Fox season is Frank L. Packard's "The Miracle Man," which has been assigned to George Walsh.

Garbutt, representing Adolph Zukor, to make nine film productions, the last to be completed on a certain date in 1921, for the Paramount-Artcraft program. The terms of the contract have not been made public, but it has been hinted that Hart is now the highest salaried actor in the profession.

The new pictures to be produced by Hart will be open-air stories, following the lead, in a general way, of his productions made in the past. Mr. Hart is to have the right to select his own stories and to determine the length of each film, which will not be limited by an exact footage.

The present Hart studio personnel will remain intact: E. H. Allen will continue to be manager of productions; Lambert Hillyer, director; Joe August, chief cameraman; Paul H. Conlon, publicity director; Le Roy Stone, film editor; and Thomas Brierly, technical director.

The pictures produced by these stars will be made in Los Angeles, although arrangements for a studio have not been completed as yet.

Mrs. Baker has secured the services of Brownie Vernon as leading lady for Snowy in his Australian Bush pictures. Miss Vernon was selected from a number of applicants because of her experience before the camera and because she can both swim and ride. A cameraman has also been engaged. Mrs. Baker's offer to Jack Dempsey to go to Australia was politely but firmly declined for the present by the champion.

The society has taken care of a number of destitute cases since its inception three years ago. Among the guests of the club at the present time are Marjorie Daw, Magda Lane, Violet Clark, Agnes Johnson, scenarioist, and others whose names are well known to the film colony.

Negro Film a Hit at Ray's Garden.

"In Justice," the film in which all the principal players are negroes, is making a hit with the public at Ray's Garden Theatre. Besides being a novelty in film production, it is a fund of entertainment in both plot and humor. Captain Leslie T. Peacocke wrote the story and directed the picture. The leading woman is Miss Thais Nehli, grandniece of the late Queen Liluokalani, of Hawaii. Vera Lavassor, of New Orleans, plays the part of the adventuress. Maurice Stapler, Sidney Preston Dones and Ovitt Scott, negroes, interpret the principal male roles.

Goldwyn's Three New Directors.

Three directors, Rupert Julian, Wallace Worsley and T. Hayes Hunter have been added to the directorial staff at the Goldwyn studios in Culver City within the last week. Rupert Julian will direct "Perch of the Devil," by Gertrude Atherton, for Eminent Authors; and T. Hayes Hunter has been assigned the first Rupert Hughes story, "The Cup of Fury." Wallace Worsley has not been given a play yet, but will probably have another Eminent Authors story to direct.

Metro Will Make Announcements on Rowland's Return from Europe

Following His Arrival, Work Will Be Started on Series of Films to Be Written by Some of World's Greatest Authors and Dramatists—Nazimova Will Appear in "The Brat" in September—Exploitation Department Has Newspaper Men Added to Staff

ANNOUNCEMENTS of the highest importance as bearing upon a further expansion of Metro Pictures orporation's "fewer, bigger and better" ctures policy will immediately follow e arrival home of Richard A. Rowand, president of Metro and Screen lassics, Inc., from his first-and survey of the European otion picture field.

Cable advices from Mr. owland to W. E. Atkinson, etro general manager, have en most optimistic and enuraging. They have repsented the foreign field as pe for American invasion general and, from Mr owiand's viewpoint, for etro invasion in particular.

Is Eagerly Awaited.

The organization is keenly ger for Mr. Rowland's rern. A gratifying developent from the first anuncement of "fewer, bigr and better" policy has en a recent deluge of apals from exhibitors all over e country seeking to book lid the entire production tput of Screen Classics, c., which Metro is to disibute beginning with Sepmber 1.

This has placed Mr. Atkinn in a quandary. Metro is d has been a consistent vocate of "open booking." r exhibitors to clamor for lid bookings of the Screen assics, Inc., productions uld be somewhat in conavention of this idea.

Will Meet Problem.

It is a problem that Mr. kinson is more than eager take up with Mr. Rowland. e has made it plain that etro will not abandon its slogan of pen booking." It will stand by its omises to the exhibitors. But the sition is one that calls for the wisest unsel on the part of Mr. Atkinson and e Metro president as well. Upon Mr. owland's homecoming, Mr. Atkinson ll confer with him on this subject and nouncement of Metro's solution of it ll be made.

Eagerness Is Restrained.

The air of restrained eagerness and pectancy in the Metro organization is ightened by the latest cablegram to received from Mr. Rowland. In this imparted the news that he has purased the screen rights to several big ropean stage successes, three of ich enjoyed record-breaking runs in ndon.

Announcement of the titles of these plays, together with full details as to the stars who will appear in screen versions of them is promised soon after the arrival of Mr. Rowland.

Tracing the rapid growth of Metro from its lusty beginnings it has been rapidly and invariably a process of forging ahead. Guided by forward-looking business men, Metro has reached its present commanding position by sheer hardheaded common sense and the devotion to a business ideal. This was to make clean, bright, entertaining pictures that would find an always receptive public and therefore be always sure money-makers for the exhibitor of motion pictures.

Richard A. Rowland.
President Metro Pictures Corporation.

A Commonsense Policy.

The Metro president has pursued no chimeras, and has ridden no hobbies. In deciding recently upon the "fewer, bigger and better" pictures policy he followed the plain instinct of knowing the needs of the time. He foresaw the widening scope of the silent drama; he foresaw constantly rising standards of public taste and the folly of endeavoring to "play down," rather than to "play up" to this ever bettering public taste.

Mr. Rowland recognized also the intrinsic worth, as attractions of big pulling power, of stage successes and popular novels. Metro was a pioneer in launching this idea. The company set quietly to work and by getting in on the ground floor, acquired the screen rights to thirty-six popular plays and novels.

Uses Popular Narratives.

Metro appreciated what a large asset there was in the advertising—through printed and word-of-mouth publicity—that accrues to a stage play that has run a year, or two or more, or a novel that has endured until millions of readers have given it the stamp of approval as a classic. It plans to put this accumulated advertising to work for Metro and for exhibitors of Metro pictures.

Plays on the Way.

In the field of comedy and dramatic composition, Metro is represented in its forthcoming Screen Classics, Inc., productions by that master of farce, Avery Hopwood with "Fair and Warmer"; the clever Frederic and Fanny Hatton, with "Lombardi, Ltd.," and "The Walk Offs"; James H. Herne, with "Shore Acres"; James Cullen and Lewis Allen Browne, with "Please Get Married"; Larry Evans, with "Someone in the House"; Maude Fulton, with "The Brat"; Charles A. Taylor and Asa R. Cassidy, with "Yosemite"; J. H. Benrimo and Harrison Rhodes, with "The Willow Tree"; Holman Day, with "Along Came Ruth"; Noziere and Ch. Muller, with the French drama, "La Maison Des Danses," and Jeane-Jose Frappa and Henri Dupuy Mazuel, with "L'Homme Riche" (The Rich Man).

Engage Celebrated Authors.

Well known authors whose stories will be translated into screen productions by Screen Classics, Inc., are Sir Gilbert Parker's, "The Right of Way"; Thomas Hardy's, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles"; Frank Danby (Mrs. Julia Frankau) with "The Heart of a Child"; I. A. R. Wylie, brilliant English woman novelist, "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya", "The Native Born" and "The Temple of Dawn"; George Gibbs, with "The Yellow Dove"; H. Austin Adams, with

Nazimova's Variety of Moods as Expressed in "The Brat," Metro's First "Fewer and Better."

"Wholly Innocence" and several others of prominence yet to be announced.

Increased Equipment.

Three of these plays are already under production: "Fair and Warmer," with May Allison; "Lombardi, Ltd." with Bert Lytell and "Please Get Married," with Viola Dana. Besides the Screen Classics, Inc., stars, Navimova has started work in an elaborate production of Miss Wylie's, "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya."

Metro has faith in these big stories, founded on stage successes and popular novels. But the company has no intention of neglecting the original story and states that several authors of high standing and wide reputation are engaged in writing original photodramatic themes for Metro's use at some future time.

NAZIMOVA SELECTS SEVEN VEHICLES

Production of "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya" Marks First of Series of French and Indian Plays

NEW worlds to conquer await Nazimova, is the confident belief of Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger, who present the popular Russian artiste in her own screen productions de luxe. And Mr. Karger, who is Nazimova's director general, feels that she has the material wherewith to conquer these waiting worlds, inasmuch as she has now selected her seven next vehicles to follow "The Brat," her own and Charles Bryant's adaptation of Maude Fulton's play, which was put into scenario form by June Mathis.

Will Play East Indian Role.

Nazimova has just begun work before the camera in "The Hermit Doctor of Gaya," adapted by Charles Bryant from the novel by I. A. R. Wylie. Nazimova has the role of Sigrid Ferson in this narrative of Anglo-Indian life from the pen of Miss Wylie.

Bryant Acts Opposite.

As Major Tristram, Mr. Bryant plays opposite the star. He is "the hermit doctor"—a man who day by day and hour by hour offers his life freely in the great fight against famine and disease. The story has all the pomp and splendor, all the allure and haunting mystery of the Far East, although peopled with the sons and daughters of Britania.

Miss Wylie is also the author of two other stories selected for Nazimova's use. They are respectively, "The Native Born" and "The Temple of Dawn."

French Plays Chosen.

Of the remaining four of the seven new stories that Nazimova is to do, and the completed productions of which w be distributed exclusively by Metro, o is "Wholly Innocence," by H. Aust Adams.

From French sources are "La Mais de Danses" and "L'Homme Riche" (T Rich Man), which are among Nazim va's seven new vehicles. "La Maison Danses" is by M. Noziere and M. C Muller, while "L'Homme Riche" i dramatic composition by Jean-Jo Frappa and Henri Dupuy-Mazuel.

Personally Selects Vehicle.

"The Heart of a Child," from the nov by Frank Danby (Mrs. Julia Frankau is another of the septet of new scre stories.

As is an invariable rule with Na mova, each of the seven new stories w personally selected by the star herse

After a diversion, as it were, into t realm of realistic modern comedy "The Brat," a venture that pleased Na mova greatly, inasmuch as it gave h her first opportunity to delineate purely American type of girl, Nazimo returns to roles of somewhat great complexity and subtlety, with the em tional sweep of old world drama. H fondness for French drama impelled h to the selections of the two vehicl "La Maison des Danses" and "L'Homm Riche," written in the language of M iere and Edmond Rostand.

Metro has placed the Nazimova Pr ductions in Europe, where they will still further exploited, with a view making Nazimova a recognized wo figure as an exponent of the art of t silent drama.

World's Greatest Authors Are Engaged to Provide Screen Classics Material

Metro's Achievement in Securing Services of Present-Day Writers Means an Array of Dramatists and Novelists Including Men Like Hopwood and the Hattons to Hardy and Parker

METRO points to the list of well-known authors whose works are to be converted to the silent drama in the form of Screen Classics, Inc., and Nazimova super-productions as one of the most distinguished gathered for the advancement of the motion picture art.

Acquisition of the screen rights to thirty-six plays and novels by these authors Metro regards as one of the biggest literary coups the industry has known. They were secured as a stroke of enterprise at considerable expense and after a survey by Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., of the choicest material in the market.

Aims At Literary Merit.

Mr. Rowland declares his sole aim to have been to secure vehicles of high literary merit with proved records of popularity—such material as would be fitting for the productions of superb artistry that are to be made by Nazimova and the Screen Classics, Inc., stars, May Allison, Bert Lytell and Viola Dana.

The list of contributors to these big special productions includes the names of many of the present day's most eminent writers of novels, short stories and plays; names that are familiar by-words wherever the English tongue is spoken and fiction is read or the drama is seen.

Not on America alone has Screen Classics, Inc., depended for its wealth of screen material. In the search for the best and most popular literature it has reached out to the north country, Canada, and across the seas to Great Britain and France, the homes of some of the world's most versatile and talented writers.

Screen Rights Secured.

In many cases the producers have secured the screen rights to the entire output of these authors.

First among the names of successful playwrights is Avery Hopwood, whose snappy farce works stand out prominently in the annals of the dramatic history of the American stage.

Started Success in 1906.

His ingenious humor and keen valuation of plot and incident in the theatre have not only brought him considerable fame but also a comfortable fortune in royalties, starting with the first of his efforts in 1906. It was a society drama called "Clothes" on which he collaborated with Channing Pollock, and was successfully produced in New York at the Manhattan Theatre. This was the beginning of his remarkable career, and since that time many equally notable plays and farces have come from his pen.

Among his subsequent successes were "Judy Forgot"; "Nobody's Widow," in which May Irwin was starred; "Somewhere Else"; "Our Little Wife" and "Sadie Love," starring Marjorie Rambeau.

Then came "Fair and Warmer" one of the biggest farcical sensations Broadway has known, produced by Selwyn, and breaking attendance records wherever it played. "Fair and Warmer" is one of Mr. Hopwood's plays which Screen Classics, Inc., has already under production with May Allison in the stellar role.

"Lombardi Ltd." Secured.

Two of the theatre's most prominent collaborators, Frederic and Fanny Hatton, are also in Metro's list of authors, having been the creators of that refreshing comedy of modes which made Leo Carillo famous on the stage in the title role of "Lombardi, Ltd." The screen rights to this play, which was produced by Oliver Morosco, have been secured and Bert Lytell is at present engaged in a lavish picture production.

"Lombardi, Ltd." is one of the most recent successes of the Hattons, they having also given to theatregoers such plays as "Years of Discretion," "Upstairs and Down" (already converted to the silver screen) and latterly, one of Leo Ditrichstein's greatest vehicles, "The Great Lover." This play was the result of the Hattons' collaboration with the star himself. "The Walk-Offs," another comedy success by the Hattons, represents another of the big plays which Screen Classics, Inc., has secured.

Cullen and Browne Secured.

James Cullen and Lewis Allen Browne, who leaped into theatrical fame over-night as collaborators on the recent Broadway sensation, "Please Get Married," starring Ernest Truex and Edith Taliaferro, make up another pair of notable authors whose works will be produced by Screen Classics, Inc.

"Please Get Married," in which Viola Dana is now working, was the first joint effort of these talented playwrights. They had previously distinguished themselves as writers of short stories and special articles for many of the largest newspapers and magazines in the country.

"The Brat," Suited to Nazimova.

By reason of the ingenuity which the versatile Maude Fulton, one time member of that well-known vaudeville and musical comedy team of Rock and Fulton, created and developed the plot of her first starring vehicle, "The Brat," Miss Fulton also takes rank with the foremost dramatic talent of the American stage.

It is her original stage production which Nazimova adapted herself to the pictures and in which she plays the stellar role in a production which follows her, "The Red Lantern."

A name which will recall fond memories of the beginning of the American drama and which is also among Metro's illustrious authors, is James A. Herne, one of the country's greatest exponents of humanism in the play.

"Shore Acres," Mr. Herne's greatest

"The Willow ee," as produced by Cohan & Harris, Broadway, will be remembered as the ccess which served to bring Fay Bain- r into fame With the purchase of e screen rights to this drama Viola ana has had another splendid vehicle. It was Mr. Benrimo who designed the ccessful play, "The Yellow Jacket."

Nazimova to Star in Adams Play.

"Wholly Innocence" is the second of e works of H. Austin Adams, which azimova will do for the screen, to be stributed by Metro. Mr. Adams is a velist as well as a playwright and Wholly Innocence" has been selected one of his finest books. He also rote, " 'Ception Shoals" in which Naz- ova was seen on the stage, and which as later converted to the screen under e title of "Out of the Fog," one of azimova's greatest successes.

In maintaining a well-balanced sched- e, Screen Classics, Inc., has also se- red the stage play entitled, "Yose- ite," a melodramatic story of the lo- le of which is set in the valley of the me name and with which the co- thors, Charles A. Taylor and Asa R. ssidy, are entirely familiar.

Taylor Is Successful Playright.

Mr. Taylor, as the better known of is combination of playwrights, has ntributed many successful plays to e theatre for several years, and is one the greatest writers of melodrama.

Holman Day, America's greatest iter of life in the open spaces, poet d reporter, signalized his debut as a amatist with the success, "Along me Ruth," which he adapted from the ench, "La Demoiselle de Magasin," an iginal play by Messieurs Fousen and icheler.

Mr. Day, a native of Maine, has had most successful literarty career and s to his credit many popular books d stories. His novel, "Squire Phin," s dramatized under the title of "The rcus Man," and produced in Chicago, 1909, by Klaw and Erlanger with eat success.

Among the English playwrights are chmere Worrall and J. E. Harold rry, co-authors of "The White Feather," produced in this country under the name of "The Man Who Stayed at Home."

"The Man Who Stayed at Home," is one of the big productions purchased by Screen Classics, Inc., for its new policy and will serve to introduce Messrs. Worrall and Terry at their best to American picture lovers.

From the French come two more pre-eminent writers. "Someone in the House," Larry Evans' mystery drama, has been added to the material of Screen Classics, Inc., as a vehicle for Bert Lytell.

Among the greatest novelists of the day are those under the Screen Classics, Inc., banner. From their works have been chosen the most suitable and successful material for the screen.

Hardy Novel Secured.

Foremost among these is Thomas Hardy, dean of English writers and one of the most distinguished figures in the literature of all time. Hardy is represented by his "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

"Tess of the D'Urbervilles" provided a remarkable stage vehicle for Mrs. Fiske and has been played by other noted stars. It is in Hardy's best vein. This venerable author, now in his late seventies, has long been the idol of British book lovers.

During the recent war Hardy returned to verse, and the conflict gave him many opportunities for poetry of the highest type. He was a contemporary of Dickens, and as he is still writing in his hale old age, he stands as a human link between the Victorian and the modern era of English literature. "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," to be produced for the silent drama by Screen Classics, Inc., is his greatest novel.

In Gilbert Parker is a distinguished Canadian author contributing to Screen Classics, Inc., productions.

Parker's, "The Right of Way," originally one of the six best sellers, and later dramatized with great success, is prominent among the popular books that Screen Classics will offer in pictures.

Yet another of the great authors, whose "The Heart of a Child" has been selected as one of Nazimova's vehicles, is Frank Danby (Mrs. Julia Davis Frankau). The name of Frank Danby, which is the nom de plume under which Mrs. Frankau has written all her novels, is one to conjure with. Some of her greatest works are "Baccarat," "Concert Pitch," "Joseph in Jeopardy," "Pigs in Clover," "The Sphinx's Lawyer" and "Twilight."

In fact the star is already at work on the first. Miss Wylie, has also written "Dividing Waters," "The Daughters of Brahma," "Five Years to Find Out" and "Towards Morning."

Yet another of the great authors, whose "The Heart of a Child" has been selected as one of Nazimova's vehicles, is Frank Danby (Mrs. Julia Davis Frankau). The name of Frank Danby, which is the nom de plume under which Mrs. Frankau has written all her novels, is one to conjure with. Some of her greatest works are "Baccarat," "Concert Pitch," "Joseph in Jeopardy," "Pigs in Clover," "The Sphinx's Lawyer" and "Twilight."

George Gibbs, whose "The Yellow Dove" will find its way to the screen through Screen Classics, Inc., has written many popular novels and stories among which are "Pike and Cutlass," "In Search of Madamoiselle," "The Love of Monsieur" and many others. Mr. Gibbs is also an artist who ranks with America's best.

Exchange Managers and Salesmen Are Set for Avalanche of Business in Autumn

LIKE sprinters awaiting the crack of the starter's pistol, Metro exchange men in every part of the country are, according to reports they have made recently to W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro, all set for the big fall campaign with the Screen Classics, Inc., specials.

There has been, in several of the Metro branches, some readjustment of personnel. These changes now are all accomplished, so that the managers are giving over their attention entirely to getting things in shipshape order for the rush of busines that is expected to come with the release of the new super-productions which will begin on September 1.

Exchanges Well Supplied with Paper with an unusual volume of exhibitor's aids which are novel and effective—carefully thought out and prepared. The managers of the Metro branches, with these in hand, are busy framing up stunts, adapting, of course, their exploitation schemes for exhibitors to the locality and the particular theatre.

A big factor of the Metro sales force besides the merit of the productions they are enabled to offer motion picture showmen is the "open booking" system which the company stands for so staunchly. Every Screen Classics, Inc., picture is submitted to the exhibitor solely on its qualities. No matter how successful have been other pictures by the same producing organization in the past, the Metro salesmen take their new pictures to the exhibitor as if they were the first ever to be offered.

Members of Exchanges.

As the line-up of the exchange managers now stands C. H. Kessnich has charge of the Atlanta, Ga. exchange; E. A. Golden of the Boston branch, and H. W. Kahn is at Buffalo, N. Y. At the head of the Metro branch at Chicago is J. S. Grauman; at Cincinnati, O. W. C. Bachmeyer; at Cleveland, O., C. E. Almy; at Dallas, L. Bickel; at Denver, C. Klein; at Detroit, W. N. Skirboll; at Kansas City, Mo., S. L. Haldeman; at Los Angeles, A. B. Lamb; at Milwaukee, H. L. Conway; at Minneapolis, A. Fischer; at New York City, Herman Jans and J. Klein; at New Orleans, O. Briant; at Oklahoma City, S. Brink; at Omaha, S. MacIntyre; at Philadelphia, R. Lynch; at Pittsburgh, J. Davis; at Salt Lake City, B. F. Rosenberg; at San Francisco, Fred W. Voight; at Seattle, C. Stern; at Toronto, Regal Films, Ltd., S. Aaronson; at St. Louis, C. Werner; and at Montreal, Regal Films, Ltd., is P. C. Loghlin.

KARGER SCREENS THREE STAGE HITS

"Fair and Warmer," "Lombardi, Ltd." and Recent "Please Get Married" Are Now Being Produced

IN order doubly to insure that the Screen Classics, Inc., studios in Hollywood shall more than fulfill all that is implied in the Metro slogan of "fewer, bigger and better pictures," Maxwell Karger has taken over complete control of production. The director general of Screen Classics, Inc., will in his position be more than an executive.

Mr. Karger will personally and constantly oversee the making of every Screen Classics, Inc., picture. He will select the cast. He will suggest to the art directors the nature of the settings; and pass carefully upon their work when submitted to him for approval. He will work at times with the scenario writers who are to turn into screen form the plays and novels Metro recently has bought, and the European dramatic successes Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., recently bought abroad. Mr. Karger will be in conference with the several directors engaged in the actual filming of the plays which Metro will distribute.

Menaces of the Business.

This procedure is entirely in line with Maxwell Karger's policy of upholding his ideas with untiring effort. Convinced that today overproduction and concomitant short runs are the principal menaces of the motion picture industry, the Screen Classics, Inc., director general has pitched in heart and soul to turn out motion picture productions of such quality that exhibitors cannot afford, because of their drawing power, to play them for short runs only.

Reports of Mr. Karger's assumption of entire responsibility for production in the Screen Classics, Inc., studios, coming on the heels of the news that Mr. Rowland had gone to Europe to buy at no matter what cost the best screen material available there, has enhanced the spirit of optimism and enthusiasm among Metro exchangemen. The announcement, too, that Metro stands by the open-booking system has made the task of the exchange managers decidedly easier to handle.

Rush Kills Best Results.

It has always been the contention of Mr. Karger that no man, no matter how capable or how tireless, can turn out an abnormal quantity of work and still maintain his highest standards. Under the pressure of having a heavy and rigid schedule of releases to meet, there is bound to be, he asserts, some falling off in the standards of picture making. Just as no athlete, no matter how well trained, can expect to break world's records weekly, neither can picture companies.

Shifting the conversation suddenly from the problem of the producer to the difficulty of getting for the screen original stories from the best writers of books and plays, Mr. Karger said:

"Here again, in the question of stories for pictures, the short run has injured the motion picture industry. Authors today, fortunately for them, write as a business. It is only human nature for a man to sell to the highest bidder. And in the case of stage plays or of books the author is given royalties.

Flat Price Only for Stories.

"We can offer only a flat price for stories; and though we frequently go to extraordinary cost in buying material, this reward is sometimes less than what one of the big American authors could get if he entered into agreement with a theatrical manager or book publisher on a royalty basis. Until the long run idea is in operation the entire motion picture business is under a most severe handicap."

Newspaper Men Compose Metro Publicity Staff

WITH the best interest of the exhibitors and the newspapers, trade journals and motion picture magazines in view, Metro has enlarged and reorganized its publicity and advertising departments.

"Facts and more facts—but not bunk" is the watchword so far as Metro publicity is concerned; and Metro officials are of the opinion that the quality of the productions Metro will distribute, made by Screen Classics, Inc., from popular novels and successful stage plays, makes it not only easy for Metro to ignore the old-time methods of publicity but to present only vital and interesting news facts concerning the productions, the stars and the authors.

Newspaper Men Write Press Matter.

The first step in reorganizing Metro's publicity and advertising departments was to assemble a staff composed entirely of trained newspaper men who, in addition to their journalistic experience, have been connected with the motion picture industry for several years and who know it thoroughly.

"Give them facts—give them news," was the word to the reorganized departments from Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro and Screen Classics, Inc. "Help them—the exhibitors and the newspaper editors. Co-operate with them."

And this is precisely what Metro publicity is designed to be, according to the campaign planned and now being followed. Metro officials declare that the Metro publicity and advertising departments shall, on a basis of equal importance, be a bureau of helpful information to the exhiibtor and the source of big, vital motion picture news stories replete with facts.

Solicit Aid from Exhibitors.

The Metro publicity and advertising departments, it is emphasized, solicit and welcome requests for aid from exhibitors of Metro releases, produced by Screen Classics, Inc., who seek any assistance whatever in exploiting these pictures.

Exploitation is to mean advertising aids, specially prepared and edited press material, suggestions for "stunts," lobby displays and other sales helps. Metro pledges that these will be cheerfully furnished, and furthermore, they will be particularly suited to the needs of the exhibitor in relation to the size of his theatre and the character of the community that it serves.

For the newspapers, Metro's publicity bureau is prepared to give the editors what they want, and in the form in which they want it. The news sense of the newspaper men who write and edit Metro copy is brought to bear upon every item; whether it be a brevity or a special article.

Viola Dana.

arger Assumes Control of Screen Classics Production

ROGRESS in the production of the first three of the thirty-six plays and novels which Screen Classics, c. is at present filming at its studios Hollywood, Cal., is being made to a gree for surpassing the expectations the producers. This fact became own this week from advices from axwell Karger, director general of reen Classics, Inc., received at the etro offices in New York.

Never has May Allison appeared to tter advantage than in the scenes ken to date in the internationally well own farce of Avery Hopwood's "Fair d Warmer." For sheer absurdity of uation, without the loss of probabil- or of the natural humaness of the aracters, this stage play has perhaps ver been surpassed. After making a cord run in New York the play was ken to London for a two years' en- gement.

Adapted to the screen the play has st none of its cleverness or intriguing mor. June Mathis and A. P. Younger llaborated in turning out the script. e direction is in the hands of Henry to and the photography by Arthur artinelli. A strong cast supports the ar in this piece, its personnel includ- g Pell Trenton, Eugene Pallette, ristine Mayo, William Buckley and ffie Conley.

Bert Lytell in "Lombardi Ltd."

Bert Lytell, in his special, "Lombardi, d.," has a part entirely different from ything in which he hitherto has ap- ared on the screen, that of Tito Lom- rdi, a temperamental and more than pable Italian dressmaker.

For the supporting cast in the new tell feature a bevy of beautiful girls s been gathered. This applies not ly to the principals, but also to the arm of girls taking the smaller roles, ch as those of mannequins or models. ice Lake is again Lytell's leading man. Juanita Hansen plays the character of Phyllis Manning, whom Tito thinks he loves; and Thea Talbot, Ann May and Jean Mendoza have responsible roles.

Joseph Kilgour is one of the important members of the cast. The character of Rickey, or Ricardo, has given the producers considerable difficulty. It requires an unusual type, and only this week was Jack Conway, the director of the production, able to find just the artist he sought. The scenario has been done by June Mathis. Robert Kurrle is in charge of the photographic work.

Viola Dana in "Please Get Married."

Fully as gratifying as that of "Fair and Warmer,, and "Lombardi, Ltd.," is the progress being made in Viola Dana's special Screen Classics, Inc., feature, "Please Get Married," a screen version of a recent New York theatrical hit. As the persecuted little bride of Ferdinand Oliver Walton, who one minute is sure she is married and the next is convinced she's not, Viola Dana has opportunities never before afforded her in her motion picture career.

Bert Lytell.

Playing opposite the star is Antrim Short, while Margaret Campbell has the role of the bride's mother. Her father is played by Harry Todd.

This play, from the pens of James Cullen and Lewis Allen Browne, was their first dramatic writing, although both are well known in the magazine and newspaper field. The script for the feature has been prepared by Finis Fox, of the Screen Classics, Inc., scenario staff. John E. Ince is the director of the production and John Arnold, the photographer.

Loew Books "Home" for Sixty Days.

Marcus Loew has booked the Universal-Jewel production "Home" for a run of sixty days. The contract was closed recently by Sam Zieler, manager of the New York Universal Exchange.

This booking will insure an extensive showing of the production in New York City. It was produced under the direction of Lois Weber, and features Mildred Harris Chaplin.

June Mathis Is Now Screen Classic's Chief Scenarist

JUNE MATHIS is the ace of the Screen Classics, Inc., scenario staff and upon her shoulders—or rather, upon her trusty typwriter—is to fall the major responsibility for the scenarios of the big Screen Classics, Inc., specials which, beginning September 1, are to be released through the distributing organization of Metro Pictures Corporation.

Miss Mathis already is away to a flying start. She wrote the scenario of "Lombardi, Ltd.," from the Oliver Morosco stage success by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, in which Bert Lytell is now working, and collaborated with A. P. Younger, a recent addition to her literary staff, in the scenarization of "Fair and Warmer," Avery Hopwood's record breaking farce, in which May Allison is to be starred.

Besides writing continuity, frequently working on two and sometimes three scripts at a time, Miss Mathis reads or receives reports upon the multitude of original stories, plays, and current fiction submitted or singled out for consideration as vehicles for the various stars.

Was Born in Colorado.

Born in Leadville, Colo., the daughter of a druggist who later settled in Salt Lake City, Miss Mathis is a product of the West and combines all the breezy wholesomeness of that region of great spaces, with the shrewd sophistication of a person educated by extensive travel, keen observation and exhaustive reading.

As a child she was not robust, so that when she was nine years old, her mother took her to the Pacific Coast for her health. It was in San Francisco, at the age of eleven, that little June embarked upon a stage career. She was engaged as a child mimic and dancer at Fisher's Concert Hall, a San Francisco landmark then in the heyday of favor and popularity. Fisher's Concert Hall stood next to the old Alcazar Theater and was swept away in the 'Frisco earthquake and fire.

Last Appearance on Stage.

Going east, Miss Mathis worked on the Gold and Castle Circuit a year. She was just fourteen when she was engaged by Myron B. Rice to play the ingenue lead with May Vokes in "Whose Baby Are You?" She took the part on thirty-six hours' notice, and incidentally doffed her short skirts for the first time.

Subsequently Miss Mathis played in "My Friend from India"; did the child part with Ezra Kendall in "The Vinegar Buyer"; was in vaudeville for a season; with James K. Hackett and Pauline Frederick in "The Girl in White"; played the ingenue leads in "Brewster's Millions" and "Going Some."

Her last appearance on the stage was in "The Fascinating Widow." On January 10, 1914, June bade adieu to the footlights.

How Miss Mathis Came to Metro.

Her bent was toward the screen. She had written several original short stories, but refused to submit them to magazines. She has them in her trunk now and some day they may find their way to the silent sheet. But Miss Mathis says she has been so busy fixing up other people's work, she hasn't had a chance to exploit her own.

To learn more about film technique, Miss Mathis spent several weeks in New Hampshire, "acting for the movies." But she kept up her writing and pretty soon she began getting letters from Thomas H. Ince, the Equitable, Colonial and other producing companies, demanding her screen output. She returned to New York and has started a story for Ince when fate directed her steps to Metro.

She had heard that Edwin Carewe, Metro director, had a story on his hands that needed special treatment. She went to the Metro offices and found that Carewe had the basis of a screen drama in a poem by Charles T. Dazey, of "In Old Kentucky" fame. He entrusted it to June. He told her to bring him the continuity for two reels of it in three days. She did.

The picture was "The House of Tears," starring Emily Stevens. Miss Mathis had written the subtitles in verse, and the innovation was a great success. She has been with Metro ever since.

SCREEN CLASSICS HAS FINE STUDIO

New Stage and Most Complete Lighting System in Existence Are Recent Improvements to Studio

IN order to give to Screen Classics, Inc., productions every mechanical facility possible the million dollar studio at Hollywood, now as it is, has installed improvements which make the plant one of the best of its class. Electrical equipment costing close to $90,000 has been put in. This includes not only new devices for lighting the several stages in the studio lot, but also the generators and transformers to supply them. How extensive are these improvements may be judged from the fact that a three-story building, especially for that purpose, houses them.

Furthermore an additional open stage has been erected to give directors, electrical and photographic experts sufficient time to prepare settings for the players without sacrificing working time during the actual filming of pictures.

Follow Policy From Ground Up.

The Metro slogan of "fewer, bigger and better" pictures therefore is being followed from the ground up. No item—technical or otherwise—has been omitted in order to insure exhibitors that Metro pictures will be among the best on the market.

The new system of lighting the stages does away entirely with the old system of heavy and technically portable switchboards which must be lugged across the entire floor to get a light where desired. It does away with the shouting for lights and for "killing lights" which heretofore had been considered a necessary accompaniment to motion picture direction. There is no further need for a swarm of electricians and helpers clustered about the stage with the players, director and cameraman. The danger of the bare switches to unwary bystanders has been eliminated.

The statement of David Thompson, studio manager of Screen Classics, Inc., regarding the reasons for installing the new lighting system is indicative of the hearty and enthusiastic spirit of teamwork which has been augmented by the Metro slogan of fewer and better pictures.

Explains New Lighting System.

Mr. Thompson explained that the remote control system in use was a device whereby all the switches and electrical wiring were installed overhead. A small black box, some two and a half inches wide by six inches long, with nine buttons on it, controls the entire lighting system of the stages. Switches are thrown above by electricians. The miles of cable that were attached to the old-type switchboards and which, with the boards had to be dragged about over the stages, are now entirely eliminated. The wiring is permanent and fixed, only the small control wire leading from the pocket-size board in the director's hand to the big switches above, being in evidence.

Use Direct Current.

The direct current for the floor lighting is supplied by two large motor generators, capable of 10,000 amperes. They were manufactured for Screen Classics Inc., especially by the Westinghouse Electrical Company. This, a steady lighting system, supplies all light for the foreground. Although the eye can not detect the difference between direc and alternating current as applied to lights, the camera does. Alternating current gives an apparently steady light but as a matter of fact causes the ligh to be turned off and on fifty times a second.

Twelve transformers (three-phase 110-volt and 5000 amperes) have been installed for supplying the alternating current for overhead lighting, which is not so much in evidence photographically as floor lighting. Three little buttons on the director's board control these. The two systems of lighting give the studios a combined current supply of 15,000 amperes. A special three-story building has been constructed on Screen Classics, Inc., studio lot for this equipment, the installation and maintenance of which is in the hands of the chief electrician of the organization, W. J. Grams.

Equipment Has Grown.

The lighting system is not the only evidence of mechanical advancement in the Hollywood plant. The equipment has grown while the number of productions is being cut down to conform to the fewer and better pictures idea. One recently a fourth stage was erected on the Screen Classics, Inc., studio lot. It is an open platform 90 by 150 feet.

West Coast Pre-release Scheduled for "The Brat

AXWELL KARGER, who wit Richard A. Rowland presents th Nazimova Productions, has a ranged for a special pre-release showin on the West Coast of "The Brat," th brilliant Russian star's latest and grea est screen contribution.

According to advices from Mr. Ka ger to the New York offices of Met Pictures Corporation, exclusive distrib tor of the Nazimova pictures, the Paci coast pre-release showing of the fi will be given at Miller's new million do lar California Theatre, in Los Angel

Will Have Week's Run.

It has been tentatively planned show the film at the California for week's run some time before Septemb 1, the announced release date. Und the arrangement, exhibitors east of t Rocky Mountains will be a week or behind the west in showing the Na mova feature, but it is largely for th benefit that the pre-release showing h been designed.

The new California Theatre, the ne recent addition to the many temples the cinematic art in Los Angeles, t motion picture producing center of t country, puts on and plays up its tractions in the most elaborate fashion and with the most up-to-date exploitation methods.

Pre-release Is Advantageous.

Messrs. Karger and Rowland decided upon the pre-release showing in order to secure for the exhibitor, especially the eastern exhibitor, first-hand and unbiased comment by press and public upon the merits of this extraordinary feature under actual exhibition conditions.

Careful note will be made of all advertising and exploitation stunts used in the presentation. With the experience from showing the Nazimova special before the public will be prepared a flood of exhibitor's aids, and a mass of suggestions for putting over the picture in a manner calculated to be most effective in securing box-office results.

Los Angeles Is Discriminating.

Metro is showing the picture to a most discriminating public before finally giving it out to the exchanges for general release. Upon the observations made during this exhibition in Los Angeles exploitation and promotion schemes may be formed and carried out without a possibility of a slip-up.

The interval between this work-out of the Nazimova picture under practical conditions and the day when Metro exchanges will be given the word to release the production elsewhere will not be longer than a fortnight, it is believed. This will give ample opportunity for the final touches and suggestions for the exploitation campaign.

The western press comments will be of the highest value to the exhibitor. The Los Angeles film reviewers, with the New York, are perhaps the most difficult to satisfy of any. Living in the very midst of the motion picture producing world, they have every opportunity to become entirely familiar with every phase of the industry. What they say may be taken as the diagnosis of specialists.

An Aid to Exhibitors.

This will serve two purposes: It will give to the exhibitor an impartial and highly critical report of the picture; and it will serve as a splendid advertising basis for "The Brat" in recommending it to his patrons.

This placing of the newest of Nazimova's pictures before the public and the trade on the Coast is but one evidence of the confidence and enthusiasm regarding the merits of the pictures felt by their sponsors. Not only are Mr. Rowland and Mr. Karger assured that it will prove to be one of the most magnetic box-office attractions of the year, but they wish the outside world to be convinced of it. And they are going about conviction in the most logical manner—laying before an impartial, highly discriminating house the film presentation of "The Brat."

Arthur Maud in Big "U" Film.

The English actor, Arthur Maud, who plays a prominent role in "Common Property," the new Universal feature starring Robert Anderson, was for ten years a co-star with Constance Crawley and for three years was a headliner with the Keith and Orpheum circuit of vaudeville houses. Besides creating many noteworthy roles in pictures Mr. Maude has written and directed a number of productions.

H. E. HANCOCK MADE FOX NEWS HEAD

Former Newspaper Man Will Supervise Making of Weekly Feature with Some Novel Attributes

ANNOUNCEMENT as to the preliminary arrangements for showings of Fox News has been made by Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of Fox Film Corporation. The first issue of Fox News will be released about September 15, and thereafter there will be weekly releases.

Arrangements have been made whereby news and special current event picture features from all parts of the world will be released through Fox News. There will be motion picture correspondents in London, Paris, Petrograd, Brussels, Berlin, Hamburg, Tokio, Shanghai, Buenos Aires, Bogota, Sidney, Australia, Fairbanks, Alaska, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Hawaii, Manila and throughout the United States, Canada, Mexico and the West Indies.

H. E. Hancock in Charge.

In charge of Fox News is Herbert E. Hancock, formerly a newspaper reporter, editor and special writer, and later a director of picture features. Mr.

Herbert E. Hancock
Director of Fox News.

Hancock has established headquarters on the fourth floor of the Fox building, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, and is busy completing his staff and interviewing expert cameramen.

William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, is the originator of the entertaining and instructive idea to be embodied in Fox News. He and Mr. Sheehan worked out the plan, which, while founded on the regular news reel features now being shown, is a new elaboration of that idea.

Has Had Experience.

Mr. Hancock has specialized in news features for the screen. He is to be given a free hand in running Fox News and is not limited as to expense. Already he has gathered a large staff of news feature experts and special cameramen. Born in England, he was educated at Canterbury College and began his newspaper career as a police reporter on the Evening World. Later he was with the City News Association, the Evening Telegram, the Evening Journal—where he was a feature editor—and the New York Sunday American, where he also was an editor of special features.

Enters Motion Pictures.

From newspaper work he went into motion pictures with the International Film Service as editor of the animated cartoon department. He next became news reel feature manager for International, and, while doing that work, originated and directed the "Fashion Play," a feature which, while telling a story, displayed the latest creations in gowns.

Directed Mrs. Vernon Castle.

Mr. Hancock's first big work as a director was in part of the serial, "Patria," with Mrs. Vernon Castle as the star. At the outbreak of the war he took charge of all the motion picture productions for the Y. M. C. A., and also made pictures for Government departments. After the signing of the armistice, he formed the H. & H. Productions, Inc., of which he became president. He resigned the presidency of that company to join Fox Film Corporation.

Will Have Many Cameramen.

The Fox News section of Fox Film Corporation will have one of the biggest staff of cameramen known in the picture industry. It will be divided into three departments—one for news, another for features, and the third for sales. Each department will have as its head a man well known to the trade. Mr. Hancock has with him his brother, Don, who is a former newspaper man and was business manager for H. & H. Productions, Inc.

Hancock Makes Statement.

"Fox News will be handled like a big newspaper, with the added advantages offered by motion pictures," said Mr. Hancock. "What the average man or woman of intelligence wants to know nowadays is: 'What happened, how did it happen, and who were the parties concerned?' Fox News will show those things intelligently."

Bara Buys First Certificate.

Theda Bara bought the first $1,000 United States Treasury Savings Certificate sold in New York City. The William Fox star went down to the Federal Reserve Bank, at 120 Broadway, on July 21, and was the first in line when the certificates were placed on sale at 10 a. m. She wished to purchase two $1,000 certificates, but a government regulation forbids the sale of more than one such certificate to one person.

News that Miss Bara was in the Federal Bank spread rapidly through the building, and soon the banking rooms were jammed. There was a preponderance of banking girls in the gathering, all of them eager to get a "close-up" of the world-famous vampire of the film.

SUN'S RAYS START FILM FIRE IN BOSTON

Beat Through Window of Eastern Feature Company and Ignite Holder with Picture—Loss Put at $7,000

BOSTON'S moving picture district was threatened with destruction late on the afternoon of Thursday, July 21, when fire, starting in an unusual manner in the rewinding room of the Eastern Feature Film Company, destroyed two costly films and a number of smaller one, drove a number of young women employes in the district to the street and burned up considerable advertising matter.

Steady hot rays from the sun beat down through a plate glass window in the rewinding room at 57 and 59 Church street and concentrated on a particular film holder. There was an explosion, a flash and a cloud of thick yellow smoke accompanied by stifling fumes. Young women in the Eastern company ran for the street. Smoke filled the plant of the Select Pictures Company next door and drove a score of young women there into the street.

Fire Spreads Rapidly.

When the firemen arrived in response to an alarm flames were shooting halfway across Church street and the shipping room of the eastern company and an adjoining building were in flames. Heat cracked the glass in a building 150 feet away. Water from a dozen lines of fire hose poured into the burning shipping room had little effect on the blazing celluloid. It burned until it was entirely consumed. The firemen by prompt work prevented the flames from spreading to film vaults of nearby moving picture agencies.

Aid Offered the Eastern.

Other films in the district promptly came to the rescue of the stricken Eastern company with offers to take care of the Eastern's immediate business. Several of the offers were accepted and Manager H. R. Lefebvre said the fire caused only a slight temporary delay in replacing the films destroyed. Manager Lefebvre was happy over the fact that not an employe was injured.

A ten reel film named "The Birth of a Race" and a seven reel named "Virtuous Men," about to be sent out for the first time, were destroyed, as were "Wives of Men" and several other smaller films.

Estimate Damage at $7,000.

The rewinding room was a wreck. Film containers were blackened and piles of advertising matter used in lobby display etc., were destroyed.

Damage estimated at $7,000 was done by the fire. The building is a modern fireproof structure, owned by the Conveyance Insurance Company.

Famous Players Chicago Sales Force Work Large Publicity Scheme for Educators

THE Chicago sales force of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation recently completed an important advertising campaign in the city of Milwaukee.

During the week previous to July 5, the National Educational Association held its annual convention there, and in order that the delegates might have the opportunity of judging the merit of the productions of Famous Players, which had been effectively brought to their attention through the large display announcements prepared and sent to the daily papers by the advertising department of the home office, the Chicago sales force arranged with twelve of the most prominent photoplay houses in Milwaukee for a solid week of Paramount-Artcraft pictures.

Theatres Co-operate.

At the Alhambra Theatre "Secret Service," the Paramount-Artcraft special starring Robert Warwick, held the screen throughout the entire week. At the Butterfly, Marguerite Clark was the star in "Come Out of the Kitchen," while "Oh, You Women!" played at the Toy Theatre. These three houses are all situated downtown and all ran the attractions for a full week. The other nine houses, situated in the residential sections of Milwaukee, were booked with Paramount-Artcraft productions throughout the week, some making two and some three changes during the week.

The Chicago men also made a special effort to see to it that the pictures were given more than the usual amount of advertising and that the name Paramount-Artcraft might receive as much publicity as possible. Post card reproductions of the Saturday Evening Post Paramount-Artcraft advertisements were distributed among the exhibitors, together with suggestions for their use.

Representatives Attend Convention.

The convention was well attended by Famous Players representatives, and throwaways regarding the pictures and the theatres where they might be seen were distributed.

An especially valuable means of publicity considering the nature of the convention was found in the educational pictures released by Famous Players. Special articles were prepared for the Milwaukee newspapers covering such matter as would be of interest to the delegates of the convention. One pertaining to the program of the educational department of the corporation was used, while stories regarding Burton Holmes' trip to Europe to make the new series, "Europe in the Remaking," and on the Paramount-Post Nature pictures were also sent to the newspapers where they were treated favorably.

George Fisher ,of the Alhambra Theatre, also co-operated to the extent of putting on a big aeroplane stunt in connection with the exhibition of "Secret Service." Several flights were made over the city and fifty thousand cards, several hundred of them good for season passes to the theatre were showered down on the streets.

Fay Tincher Reined in Her Fiery Steed, Put on a Smile and—
Had her picture taken as she made her wild and woolly entry into Seattle for the Northwest Film Convention. Chief of Police Warren as Buffalo Bill met her, but this view shows the Christie star with Jack Lannon, of Greater Features.

Weems Attends Managers Meeting.

O. D. "Nick" Weems, sales manager of the Variety Pictures Corporation, 412 East Baltimore street, Baltimore, went to Washington, on Sunday, July 27, to attend the meeting which was held between the Washington Managers' Association and Harry Bernstein, of the Wells interests in Richmond, Va., relative to the convention of Virginia Exhibitors, which is to be held at Ocean View, Virginia, on August 15, 16 and 17.

Mr. Weems is to arrange with the Baltimore exhibitors for those who will attend so they will go in a body. He says that as the Wells interests run a good many amusement places at Ocean View, any who attend will thoroughly enjoy themselves and will be assured of a good time.

SECURING NOVELTY IN ADVERTISING

Francis M. Kadow Tells How He Overcomes Sameness by Changing His Displays and Keeping Up to Date with New Ideas and Change of Pace—Some Examples Given

By Epes W. Sargent

FRANCIS M. KADOW, general manager of the Mikadow Theatre, Manitowoc, Wis., puts his finger on the secret of competent advertising when, in a recent letter he writes:

At first I tried to follow the big boys with newspaper space, but was handicapped because I could not get the proper cuts from the exchanges and those I did get were not made for the purpose of selling seats. The newspapers netted me fair results, and when I could no longer make a satisfactory spash without taking enormous spaces, I drifted into window card and billboard work. We used to have some pretty swell window cards made up for special occasions, but with their constant use they seemed to lose their effectiveness. A lot of our efforts fell upon good ground, but too much of it was wasted, and I started to build special displays for the house.

In other words, Mr. Kadow has found out what every thinking manager has discovered. The shepherd boy in Aesop's fables, who cried "Wolf!" got results at first, but failed to succeed when he most needed the help of his advertisement. No set and definite form of advertisement will ever bring real success. It must be suited to the subject and offer constant novelty.

Advertises a Two-Reel.

But Mr. Kadow has continued his studies into a post-graduate course and has found that if a two-reel comedy will bring better results than a five or six-reel feature, it pays to give the most publicity to the smaller subject. As an example of this line of work take the card shown here.

A Card Used July 1 to Advertise the Arbuckle Comedy

Manitowoc is not a large center, but it boasts some clubs, and on the morning of the day prohibition went into effect these cards were found posted on the bulletin boards of these clubs. They were done in black on plain white stock 14 by 7¾ inches. They were not only in the clubs, but in the business houses and stores, on the wall and pretty nearly everywhere cards could be tacked.

They were not there when the town went to bed and they created intense excitement until it was remembered that the Arbuckle comedy, "Moonshine," was one of the advertised attractions at the Mikadow. Then everyone laughed and most citizens saw the show.

A Novel Window Display.

Along the same lines was an advertisement for Paramount's Flagg comedy, "The Last Bottle." The Mikadow's inside lobby is shallow and narrow and there is practically no outside space. But the office of the theatre occupies a space at one side intended for a shop, and Mr. Kadow utilizes this space for his displays, obtaining a lobby under glass. For this two-reel subject he filled the window with empty liquor bottles. In the center was one of the iron safes used by the express companies for the transport of valuable packages, and inside, on a nest of straw, was a single full bottle. Cards hinted at the story with a view to raising curiosity.

This window is regularly employed for lobby display, but not always for a setting. A setting would become as stale as any other regular stunt, so in between these displays Mr. Kadow has a two-sheet board on which he fabricates a poster, sometimes these posters carry a cut-out figure from the lithographs and sometimes the portraits are hand drawn. Examples of both are shown.

For "The Better 'Ole" a hand-painted sketch of Bill supplied the foundation of the display, the trench over which he peers serving as the foundation for the display of some of the stills, while one sheets are set in back. For "A Romance of Happy Valley" the window was dressed as a rural parlor with a cottage organ, spinning wheel and other characteristic furnishings.

Makes Three Sheets, Too.

Mr. Kadow also fabricates three sheets, getting what he knows will sell his public, instead of what it pleases the releasing companies to send out. A general color scheme of green, brown and white is followed and the very color of the lettering suggests the Mikadow to the possible patron instead of merely suggesting something ranging from corsets to corn flakes. Mr. Kadow has had to do his own lettering since his sign painter was drafted, but he just added that to his other jobs.

When the senior Kadow built the house, some three years ago, he did not have much luck with his managers, so about ten weeks after the house opened he made his sixteen-year-old son general manager, a title covering the duties of assistant operator, electrician, doorman, head usher and advertising manager. To this he later added the job of general printer and sign writer, for he bought the press and type equipment of a bankrupt country newspaper and gets out his own programs and throwaways. And the general manager adds: "I had plenty to learn, as I still have, but I have three years' experience behind me which money could not buy."

One Big Point.

And those three years taught him the big lesson of advertising to the show-going public rather than just advertising.

He tries to get his sales talk out of the rut and to make it snappy even to the point of flippancy, at times, but he keeps away from the greatest-on-earth style of announcement and tells people what they can believe instead of uselessly lying. He gets out 3,500 programs a week and supplements these with newspaper advertising and throwaways, sometimes getting out two types of the latter where he has two talking points of almost equal value. For example, he had two for the "The Fall of the Romanoffs," one dealing with the Czar and the other with Iliodor, but for each campaign he tries some one big point of attack and hammers on this for his novelty, using the form best fitted to that particular picture. Mr. Kadow may still be only nineteen, but he is old in experience.

RAVER LEAVES FOUR-STAR COMBINATION

Disposes of Controlling Stock to Arthur F. Beck—Differences on the Star System Cause of Change

HARRY RAVER, former president of Artco Productions, Inc., producers of Four-Star Pictures, has disposed of his controlling interest in the company to Arthur F. Beck for a sum running well into five figures, it was announced by Mr. Raver's office.

Difference of opinion regarding the star question is said to be the cause of the change in ownership of the company's stock.

The original plan of Artco Productions, as formulated by Harry Raver, was to combine the four essentials, author, star, director and producer, each to share equally in the exploitation of its product. Arthur Beck was the treasurer of the company, also husband of Leah Baird, who was the star unit of the Four-Star combination. Mr. Raver's policy, as outlined, caused considerable comment in the trade, particularly as he emphasized the pre-eminence of the author.

Gets Picture Rights to Thomas Plays.

Augustus Thomas, before the formation of the Four-Star combination, granted to Harry Raver an option to purchase the picture rights to any of his old plays at the same figure offered by anyone else and also contracted to write a series of original scenarios. These rights were later transferred to the company by Mr. Raver and remained effective until the retirement of the latter when a new contract was entered into betwen Artco and Mr. Thomas, by which the rights to four of his old plays were transferred to the company, the author to receive thirty-five per cent. royalty out of the profits, a substantial advance being made in the case of each play. These plays are "The Capitol," "Alabama," "Harvest Moon" and "Indian Summer."

Outlines Future Plans.

Harry Raver, under a separate agreement with Augustus Thomas, secured the picture rights to an original play, not yet produced on the speaking stage, which was written by Mr. Thomas in collaboration with Prof. Baker's class in drama at Harvard College.

In outlining his plans for future productions, Harry Raver said:

"I have the utmost faith in original material for the production of motion pictures and I consider Augustus Thomas the greatest mind in drama or pictures in America today. Old material usually suffers in modernizing to suit prevailing conditions. I hope to be free to produce original material from Mr. Thomas, selecting a competent cast of artists according to the demands of the story."

No further plans regarding Mr. Raver's future operations were forthcoming.

Pathe Finishes Two Serials, Works on Three and Will Start Three in August

PATHE'S serial program for 1919-1920, the largest in the history of the organization, is progressing rapidly. Two serials are ready for release, three new ones are in production and three more will be started on August 1.

"The Great Gamble," the Western Photoplays serial co-starring Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison, will be released on August 3. This will be followed by "The Black Secret," Pearl White's last serial, based on stories by Robert W. Chambers and produced by George B. Seitz Productions, Inc.

At the Seitz studios, Director Seitz has just completed the first episode of "Bound and Gagged," a ten episode comedy drama serial by Frank Leon Smith, and has started work on the second. Mr. Seitz is co-starring himself in this production with Marguerite Courtot and handling the direction at the same time.

Ruth Roland Serial Under Way.

Ruth Roland has her new serial, "The Adventures of Ruth," well under way in Los Angeles. This is from a story by Miss Roland herself, and is the first production of her own company, Ruth Roland Serials, Inc. The scenario is by Gilson Willets. Supporting Miss Roland is a splendid cast headed by William Human.

"The Isle of Jewels," the Arthur F. Beck serial for the Pathe program, is in production at the Crystal studios in New York City. Co-starred are Stuart Holmes and Frankie Mann, and the supporting cast includes Wilfred Lytell, William Welch and John Webb Dillion. The story is by Charles Turner Dazey, author of "In Old Kentucky," and the director is Perry Verkoff.

On August 1, Jack Norworth, well known in vaudeville and musical comedy, will begin work in the stellar role of a ten episode serial by Fred Jackson, playwright. This is entitled "The Crooked Dagger" and will be produced and directed by Theodore Wharton at Ithaca. The supporting cast has not yet been announced.

Lillian Walker to Begin on Serial.

About the same date, Lillian Walker will begin work at Ithaca in a serial entitled "One Million Dollars Reward," by Arthur B. Reeve and John W. Gray. She will be supported by a cast headed by Coit Albertson. George Lessey will direct. The serial will be produced by H. Grossman, of Grossman Pictures, Inc.

The Louis J. Gasnier serial, "The Third Eye," co-starring Warner Oland and Eileen Percy, will be started in Los Angeles within the next few days.

This record of production sets a new mark in serial making and, when completed, will give the House of Pathe not only a huge reserve stock on which to draw, but also offers exhibitors an opportunity to supply themselves with serials for the next two years.

Killing the Censorship Fallacy

Article in Official Presbyterian Organ Strong for Motion Pictures—Shows Possibilities of Exhibitor Co-operation

IT'S a shame that the word "flat-footed" has to be used in connection with anything about the motion picture which is stepping down the highway at such a rapid pace these days. But evidence that there is something flatfooted about the photoplay has come out in a recent article in The Continent, the official organ of the Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Charles Edwin Bradt, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board and one of the big men in the church, is responsible for the bracketing of the term "flatfooted" and the moving pictures. For Dr. Bradt has come out flatfootedly in favor of the motion picture, and especially strong for it in its relation to the church.

Even Gives the Details.

Dr. Bradt even goes so far in his article as to tell pastors how they may go about obtaining a moving picture projector and all the apparatus which goes therewith. In fact, his article is titled, "If the Church Wants a Moving Picture Machine."

He says, "It always pays to be on friendly terms with the local moving picture fraternity." His article throughout is such a strong argument to exhibitors to co-operate with and not to antagonize the church element that we are printing it here in full.

Dr. Bradt's article says:

If a pastor knows nothing about moving picture processes but desires to install a moving picture equipment in his church and secure films for the same, how should he proceed? Pastors and church workers are writing inquiring letters to know the first steps to take in introducing the moving picture method into their churches. Perhaps a few suggestions from our notebook of experiences may be helpful in this connection.

Aim at getting the best equipment there is on the market. Talk with local moving picture operators and managers. Find out what kind of projecting machine each one is using, whether he likes it or not, and if he would recommend another make if he were buying the very best. Get these men to show you their entire equipment: machine, screen, electric connection and voltage, booth arrangements, and methods of advertising. Then attend some of their shows and see for yourself which equipment gives the best service. If there is something better to be had than any local establishment is using, aim at getting the best. This moving picture method is a competitive affair. One reason the "movie" is getting the crowds, and the churches are losing them, is because the attraction is stronger in the one place than in the other. The greatest attraction has the greatest compelling power. Christ says, "Compel them to come in," i. e., have a greater attraction in God's house than there is anywhere else. Nothing is too good for God's house; hence get the best.

Aim at meeting the local needs and conditions. What is best for one place may not be best for another. A small church building in a rural or village center, with no moving picture competition, may need only a small parlor type projecting machine. Such a machine can be had for about $200 with entire equipment, whereas the larger and more powerful machine with full equipment would cost from $500 to $1,000. This latter equipment, while the better for city use, might not be impracticable for many rural and village centers. The smaller type of projecting machine can be operated from the 110 voltage illuminating electric current used in the ordinary parlor or church building by simply being attached to the bulb socket. The small machine also is easily portable, and thus becomes serviceable in the home as well as in the church auditorium. But the small machine should not be secured whenever it must enter into competition with first class equipment in other churches or picture houses, or when local conditions will warrant the larger and more perfect projectors.

It may be possible to obtain an excellent moving picture equipment and helpful service from one of the local moving picture houses. Sometimes the manager desires to sell out, or make a change. Dr. A. E. Moody, pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Aledo, Illinois, was most successful in a transaction of this kind. He also secured with the equipment the good will and services of the local operator. It always pays to be on friendly terms with the local moving picture fraternity. The church can do much to improve the quality and grade of the films exhibited in the moving picture theatres as well as get many practical and helpful ideas by making the acquaintance of the local "movie" managers.

One of the local moving picture managers of Greeley, Colorado, contributed his entire moving picture equipment and services free every Sunday evening to one of the leading churches of the city, and the pastor had the good judgment to make large use of this gratuity. As a result, that church was packed to overflowing every Sunday night. It sometimes occurs that moving picture houses are "dark" one night each week, possibly Monday night. At such times I have known managers to contribute without charge to a local church the use of their house to put on films the church may have available and desire the community to see. Sometimes the management may make only a nominal charge for running expenses.

Write to the various missionary, religious and educational exchanges and boards of advice and quotation concerning suitable films for use in church programs and the way to use them. Remember that good films cost considerable money to make, and hence they can not be had without a charge that will cover both a fair financial return on their original cost and the expenses of handling. The cost of a good five or six reel film for one day's service will average about $25. This may seem prohibitive to many churches. But it is not so at all, if the moving picture spirit is utilized by the church, which is the very thing the church should seek if it is going to profit by the moving picture method. People gladly pay to attend a good picture show in the regular moving picture theatre; they will also gladly pay to attend a good moving picture exhibit in the church if the picture is properly advertised so that they know about it. If the church is so restricted in its rules that it cannot make an admission charge, let the authorities raise a fund beforehand, or take a free will offering from the audience, or change its rules so as to permit tickets to be sold.

If common sense and practical human methods are applied to church activities, the simplicity of the moving picture method of imparting truth and pleasure puts it within the reach not only of city churches but of almost every village and rural church in the country.

"If a Pastor—

WELL, never mind about the pastor. The question is: Have you ever heard anyone connected with the church say, "It always pays to be on friendly terms with the local moving picture fraternity?"

If you haven't, then those kind words are coming to you right now—in this story, which contains an article by Dr. Charles Edwin Bradt, one of the big men in the Presbyterian Church.

And H. M. Thomas, manager of the Omaha Rialto, says, "I think it is well worth while to work with rather than against these church people, because in the end we will have more boosters, less knockers and the censorship bugaboo will die a natural death." Go get a booster.

Power to Exhibit at Electrical Show.

The coming New York electrical exposition to be held at the Grand Central Palace during the ten days beginning September 24, will have several exhibits of interest to those in the motion picture industry, among them being the display of projection machines by the Nicholas Power Company. This exhibit will include the latest developments in lighting, and the incandescent lamp as a light source for motion picture projection will be demonstrated.

Electric signs for picture theatre advertising, electric vacuum cleaners and various types of lamps for scenic lighting effects will be shown by the other exhibitors.

Middle Western Merchants Want Movies In Their Towns

OLD MAN SUMMER SLUMP has had the most disastrous experience of his career with the motion picture industry of the Middle West this summer. He has the hay fever and a headache. His digestion has gone back on him and the undertaker is on his trail. Live wire exhibitors pass him on the street of business enterprise and pay no attention to him. If, perchance, he steps into a motion picture theatre, he freezes to death and suffers paralysis at the sight of the crowds he sees.

Iowa and Nebraska, ladies and gentlemen, in all their history have never seen such a profitable summer season for the motion picture game.

Merchants Want the Movies.

It used to be that scores of small theatres in small towns closed up during the hot months, or at least abbreviated their service, cutting down from six or seven-day runs to three and four-day runs. That has ceased. The business men of the small towns throughout Iowa and Nebraska positively refuse to let the motion picture theatres close. If the exhibitor closes them, the business men open one of their own. The theatre has become just as necessary to the small town as has the garage and the town pump.

Brunswick Needs Them.

A dentist and a banker appeared at the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in Omaha, Neb., last week. They told Manager Peave, of the exchange, that they represented the business men of Brunswick, Neb.; that the motion picture theatre had been closed there, and the business interests of the village could not go without a show. Other towns with motion picture theatres were attracting the farmer trade, they said, and Brunswick, by heck, had to keep in the limelight. They had the money, they got the theatre, and now they are getting the service.

Auburn, Neb., was another such place. There, the business men are boosting a big out-door motion picture show every Saturday night, with band concerts in the offing. The music and the picture may not jibe, but the farmers with money to spend and with trading to do, come to Auburn, anyway.

Farmers Are Prosperous.

The same story could be told of a score more small towns. The farmers with money to spend, too, are a reason for the bountiful prosperity of the Middle West. Crops are fine, prices are better, and, remember, the farmers of these states raise a lot of cattle and hogs. Everybody knows the price of cows and hogs—just go to a meat shop or to a restaurant and you'll learn.

C. W. Taylor, manager of the Select exchange in Omaha, recently returned from a trip through his territory. Every farmer has a series of automobiles, he says. The exhibitors could raise the admission prices every morning before breakfast, and trade wouldn't drop off. Wealth was such a common thing in the small towns—and the great bulk of business out here, as in the rest of the world, is in the small towns—that the exhibitors are becoming rich. The only thing is, "Give us just as good pictures as they're seein' on Broadway, New York, and we won't kick."

Soldier Boys Are Back.

The boys are back. Last summer the soldier boys weren't here to take their girls to the show. This summer they are here, and so are the girls—and so, too, are the shows. The boys returned with an enormous appetite for motion pictures.

Exhibitors, more and more, are becoming showmen. The garage man no no longer conducts the motion picture show on the side. The exhibitor is a definite and well-known individual in his community. He accepts back-handed stuff from none, his word is as good as his bond, and he occupies a little exalted world to which the community pays homage. He no longer books the lowest priced service he can get and leave it to luck. He chokes the small town newspaper with his overgrown ads. He doesn't scatter heralds about the hitching posts and weed patches, expecting them to blow into the hands of those he would like to get into his theatre, but he makes the telephone hum and the mail man stagger with the good word to hundreds on his telephone and mailing lists. He doesn't drag a dime into the box office and sit on it, but he dishes out the dollars and watches them come back home dragging other dollars behind them.

Films by Airplane.

Larry Longnecker, of the Sun Theatre, Sioux City, Iowa, the other day climbed into his own airplane and flew all the way to Omaha just to get the film for "Sunnyside," that he might show it to his patrons at a matinee that afternoon. There's a Middle Western exhibitor.

Officially, the story's the same. "The week of July 12 was the week of the largest collections and film rentals in the history of our office," said Manager Peave, of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in Omaha, the other day.

"Old stuff; we're making new records every week, every day," say the rest of the film exchange managers, as they turn again to the contracts on their desks.

Crowd at Indiana Hearing of Sunday Opening Suit

HUNDREDS of persons favoring and opposing the operation of picture theatres on Sundays crowded the rooms of the superior court at Marion, Ind., Saturday afternoon, July 19, to attend the hearing on the injunction suit filed by officials of the Mutual Theatre Company, of that city, to enjoin the city officials from interfering with the Sunday shows.

Following the hearing, Judge Robert Murray announced that he would take the matter under advisement and probably would be ready to give a decision in the case in about a week. Much interest is being manifested in the outcome of the case.

The suit was filed following the arrest earlier in the month of George Spurr, secretary-treasurer of the Mutual Theatre Company, which operates the Indiana, Lyric and Royal-Grand theatres, after he had attempted to open the Indiana Theatre on Sunday. That the operation of motion picture shows on Sundays is a work of necessity and therefore not a violation of the law was the contention of officials of the company at the hearing.

Only Luck Prevents Film Thefts in Minneapolis, Says Stombaugh

WHILE Minneapolis has not as yet been invaded by organized gangs of film thieves it would prove an ceptionally fertile field for their activ- es because of the carelessness prac- ed in the moving picture colony, ac- rding to members of the Minneapolis lm Board of Trade.

Charles Stombaugh, publicity chair- an of the board, has sounded a note of rning to exhibitors against the care- ss practice of leaving valuable films rewn about public places while in the y on booking trips. He is a firm be- ver in the old maxim that "an ounce prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Too Much Carelessness Exists.

"Traffic in stolen films, such as has en carried on in other parts of the untry will never reach this territory proper precautions are taken," he id. "If the organized film thieves of her cities were aware of the facts ere would probably be an exodus to is part of the country, where they uld reap a golden harvest. But the lm Board of Trade has declared war the careless handling of films and is ing to make it a hard matter for any ooks to work here in the future.

"Many of the exhibitors who come to wn to book valuable pictures are earing diamonds that cost anywhere om $400 to $600. Would they think leaving these diamonds on the curb hile they wander about town? Not on ur life. They watch their gems.

Films Left on Curb.

"And yet these same exhibitors will ave films that may be worth $1,000 each the curb, in the corridor of a build- g or any old place they happen to ink of, while they go shopping, visit- g or eating.

"The average thief passes up these ms, thinking they are just so much nk. But suppose a professional film ief, a man who makes it his business steal films and smuggle them out of e country or to a "fence," sees these ms lying around in such profusion, is he going to pass them up? No, indeed. He has a market for them. And so to keep out this gentry, carefulness, instead of carelessness, must be practiced.

Negligence Means Loss.

"We hear a big roar about stolen films from several parts of the country. But we don't hear anything about the carelessness that makes these thefts possible. It's high time that all members of the film industry were warned to be careful. There is hardly a day that passes that one could not make an inspection of some of the buildings harboring exchanges in Minneapolis and find valuable films left in hallways, on counters, by radiators, and in front of offices just like so much junk. Thousands of dollars' worth of these films are left exposed to any thieves who might want to help themselves. Minneapolis is not the only fertile field for an illicit traffic in films. There are other film centers where carelessness is just as flagrant."

"Frozen Warning" Reported Missing.

Occasionally a film is reported missing by one of the Minneapolis exchanges, but these cases are rare, and it is doubtful if there has ever been any organized attempt to steal films in the Mill City, according to the Film Board of Trade. Recently, however, the Minneapolis First National Exchange reported that a print of "Frozen Warning" was missing. How it came to disappear and whether or not it was stolen is not known.

Example Cited.

Citing an example of the carelessness in handling films, Charles Stombaugh, manager of the Minneapolis Pathe exchange, said:

"Recently a Minneapolis exhibitor came to my office and booked a valuable film, taking it along with him. From the Pathe office in the Produce exchange he went to the Film Exchange building to contract for some other moving pictures. Before taking the elevator to an upper floor he left the Pathe film at the entrance of the Film Exchange building, near a mailbox. When he came down a half an hour later the film was gone. It was traced and later found at the postoffice. It had been carried away by the mail man as parcel post matter. If the film had been addressed, some other exhibitor might have received a perfectly good show free.

Finds Film in Hallway.

"I came down to the office early one morning and saw a can by a radiator in the hall of the Produce Exchange. I looked at it and saw that it was a Universal reel. I took charge of it, reported my discovery to Universal, and the exhibitor who had lost it was found.

"On another occasion I saw six boxes of film piled on the curb in front of the Produce Exchange. The exhibitor who had left the film outside was upstairs talking with exchangemen. It would have been a neat haul for film thieves, and it might not have looked so bad in the eyes of a passing junk dealer.

Reels in Hash Establishment.

"At another time I went into a cheap little restaurant in Omaha. Six boxes of film were piled up in a corner. I asked the proprietor to whom they belonged. He said he did not know, but that some young men had left them there. I picked up the films aind brought them to the Pathe office. Later I located the exhibitor in whose charge they were and found out that the operator had left them in the restaurant.

Means Loss of Time.

"The loss of any of these films does not mean only the loss of their particular value; it means a loss to some other exhibitor who may have booked them as well.

"Because there is not a wholesale traffic in stolen films, in the territory is probably the reason for this carelessness. But it should be all the more reason why exhibitors should do everything in their power to make it hard and discouraging to carry on such "traffic."

"COME OUT OF THE KITCHEN" SAYS TITLE

"Come Into the Lobby" Says Perry of Minneapolis Strand, and Builds Free Pancakes to Draw Crowds

PACKING his theatre with pancakes as the lure is the crowning feat of showmanship which Charles C. Perry, manager of the Minneapolis Strand, has just performed.

The film attraction for the four days beginning Sunday, July 20, was Marguerite Clark in "Come Out of the Kitchen." But the lobby display, which included a modern kitchen, fully stocked, and a woman demonstrator who served piping hot pancakes right off the griddle with real maple syrup to the patrons as they left the theatre, made a change in the plans.

With audiences increasing daily as the news of the free pancakes spread, Manager Perry decided to hold the picture for the remainder of the week. He made no mistake, either, for the attraction drew the best business of the summer at his house.

The accompanying picture shows the lobby and the demonstrator at work.

Display Cost Low.

The lobby cost Manager Perry practically nothing. The demonstrator and the flour were furnished free because of the advertising possibilities by the Pillsbury Flour Mills Company.

The lobby was built into a real kitchen and furnished with groceries and provisions by the Witt Market House. Up to date kitchen equipment, including tables, refrigerator, fireless cooker and other articles, were provided by the New England Furniture & Carpet Company.

In addition to the demonstrator a colored maid assisted in serving the pancakes. The cashier, ushers and attendants were dressed in white as cooks with nifty little cook caps perched on their heads. The male attendants were garbed as chefs.

Housewives Get News.

Passersby sniffed the enticing odor emanating from the theatre and could not resist. They went in. As the news spread around town, the numbers of housewives attending the show grew daily.

Little advertising had been used to announce the coming of the attraction, but on Thursday, in the middle of the engagement, Witt's Market House and the Pillsbury Flour Mills Company donated a three-quarter page advertisement to the Marguerite Clark photoplay, at the same time advertising their own products. This advertisement was run in the Minneapolis Tribune and the Minneapolis Journal.

Had Played Elsewhere.

The same picture had played to an unexpected rush of business at the St. Paul New Garrick the preceding week. Manager Theodore Hays had also converted his lobby into a kitchen, but he did not have pancakes served. The run at the St. Paul Theatre was extended from four days to a full week on account of the demand.

Realart Contracts for Big Electric Sign on Broadway

REALART PICTURES has just closed a contract with the O. J. Gude Company, one of the subsidiaries of the Poster Advertising Company, for the rental of the huge electric sign on the roof of the twelve-story Hotel Hermitage. This is on Times Square, in the Broadway and Forty-second street district. The contract covers a term of three years. The rental is probably the largest ever paid by a film concern for a single sign in New York. It is one of the largest electric displays in the country.

This advertising medium is fifty-eight and a half feet high and ninety-five and a half feet wide. This section of New York is the "capital" of the amusement world.

In just what manner Realart Pictures will be exploited electrically has not yet been definitely decided. It is rumored something unique will be disclosed. The art department of the O. J. Gude Company is already making drawings and designs, following suggestions from Realart officials.

The big sign faces North toward the busy photoplay and theatrical centre and can be seen for blocks on Broadway. It has been used for what is known as a "talking sign" for the past three years.

A force of laborers is now busily engaged in dismantling the old sign and work will be rushed to the limit on the new one. Realart Pictures will be heralded from this sky sign in the near future.

Ethelhertz Uses Teaser Slides to Boost Martin

HARRY Ethelhertz, manager of the Hamilton Theatre, of Brooklyn used a clever idea in putting over a show recently. He had booked the two Universal-Jewel comedies, "Monkey Stuff" and "The Jazz Monkey." They had cost him big money and he had to make them go over. The problem before him was to introduce Joe Martin, the monkey comedian, to his patrons.

Mr. Ethelhertz has handled much advertising outside of the motion picture field, so he brushed up one of his old stunts—the cumulative advertising idea—and worked on it. He ran a series of slides, i. e.: 1. Who is the greatest comedian in the movies? 2. Think it over and leave a note at the box office.

The notes left at the box office included about every comedian in the world, both in and out of the movies. Chaplin received the most votes.

The next day the slides began again thus: 3. Most people think Charlie Chaplin is the greatest comedian. Do you? 4. We don't. 5. We think the greatest comedian in the movies is Joe Martin. 6. Did you ever see him? 7. Joe Martin will appear in a comedy written and directed by himself July 27. These first seven slides were all of Mr. Ethelhertz's making. For the denouement he used a stock of slides obtained from the Big U Exchange. It was the eighth and last slide and showed Joe Martin just as Joe is.

When the Knights of Columbus used the stage to make a little appeal for an athletic fund being raised in Brooklyn Mr. Ethelhertz had the speaker say at the end of his speech: "Do you know Joe Martin?"

Lockney, Otto Hoffman, Gibson Goland and James Gordon.

Minister Runs Picture Show Six Days and in Church Preaches Twice Sundays

Has Doubled Exhibiting Business and Looks for Real Increase in Numbers At His Sabbath Services

By James B. Kelly
("Smiling Jimmy")

Smiling Jimmy.

JEFFERSON, TEXAS, boasts of something that not many towns in this good old U. S. A. can do. It has a real live "Fighting Parson" who runs the only picture show in the city—the Lyric—six days in the week, and on Sunday he preaches two sermons a day in his church, announcing from the pulpit the different attractions that he will run in his show on week days. Also to make matters more "intricate," every preacher in town is backing him up in his enterprise also by announcing the many attractions at The Lyric.

The Rev. W. A. Nance is the man that is starting a precedent among the preachers of Texas, and recently bought the Lyric from M. L. Moore. By the way, this is the second theatre that Exhibitor Moore has sold to a preacher, as he sold his Lyric Theatre, at Sulphur Springs, Texas, several years ago to the Rev. J. A. Barnes. However, the Rev. Mr. Barnes did not attempt to hold his pastorate in the church and run the theatre at the same time. Mr. Barnes is now one of the most successful showmen in north Texas. Evidently it must be a hobby with friend Moore, that as soon as he gets a theatre running successfully, he goes around looking for a preacher to sell it to.

Increasing His Congregation.

But to get back to friend Nance: The writer had a long interview with him and finds him to be one of the most broad-minded and "really good men" with whom he has ever come in contact. He is up-to-date in his ideas regarding both the running of his theatre and handling his congregation. "I believe," said Mr. Nance, "that through the proper handling of my theatre and running the right kind of productions I can increase my congregation and win many men and women, who never go to church, over to a good Christian life." The minister went on further and stated that since he had been running the Lyric, he had met and made friends of many people with whom he had never come in contact at all before entering the exhibition end of this business. Brother Nance stated that he would make it his business to secure the real friendship of these people and it wouldn't be long before they would start dropping into his church on Sundays to hear what this broad-minded man had to say in his sermons.

Shakes Hands with Patrons.

The Rev. Mr. Nance is to be congratulated on his stand, and I fully believe he can do more for Christianity in his city through the medium of his picture theatre than if he were not running one. The writer stood out in front of the Lyric and talked to Mr. Nance, and he noticed that the minister had a pleasant word for every one who entered his show, shaking hands with many. It will not be long before this same minister will have the largest congregation in Jefferson, which he will be able to attribute to his broad-mindedness in reaching out to the "masses" through the medium of his picture show.

And another thing that surprised the writer was the fact that Brother Nance was not at all narrow-minded about his selection of photo-plays. In fact, he is many times more liberal than the local censors at Dallas and Houston, for there are many plays that "narrow-minded" censors see the "bad" in, whereas Brother Nance, who is strictly a clean-minded man and broad in his views, sees the "real good" behind these great picture lessons, and is in favor of showing them to his patrons.

Wants More Clergymen-Exhibitors.

In conclusion, allow the writer to make the remark that if there were a few more men like Brother Nance on the exhibiting end of this business, it would mean a great uplift to this industry in many ways, as there are still many narrow-minded individuals who cannot see the difference between the present uplifting and educational moving picture theatre and the old time variety house, where drinks were sold to the audience and the fair sex cavorted around the stage in filmy gowns, some of the filmy ones being very scant.

But the advent of a few more such men as Brother Nance will open the eyes of many and prove to them that the motion picture is good, wholesome entertainment for everyone from five years on up, and no bad can come from visiting a moving picture theatre which runs the latest plays and productions.

Allow us to take our hats off to Brother Nance and wish him every success in the world, which he is bound to secure both in his theatre and among his congregation. I learn that already he has doubled the business of his theatre, and we are sure that he has also increased his Sunday listeners.

Wommacks Building House.

A new moving picture theatre to cost in the neighborhood of $25,000 will soon be erected at Benton, Ark. Wommack Brothers are the builders. Although in the midst of their "off season" at the popular winter resort, Hot Springs, Ark., the writer finds that all of the theatres are doing capacity business with big productions. Sidney M. Nutt, proprietor of the Central Theatre, has recently been elected president of the Business Men's League, which controls the destinies of this very popular resort. This is the highest political office that can be obtained in that city.

Blumenthiel in New York.

Brother Blumenthiel, of Blumenthiel & Wolf, who run the Princess Theatre, Hot Springs, is spending the summer in New York City, leaving our old friend Jack Wolf to "hold the bag." Manager Belaski, of the Royal Theatre, is also in the East for the summer, which is proof that last season was a big one.

Daylight Law Hurts.

The Airdome business in this section is away off on account of the daylight law. It doesn't get dark until 9 o'clock, and in the smaller towns the folks are beginning to think of "downy couches" at this time. However, manager Levi, at Nashville, Ark., and S. L. McDonald, at Malvern, are at least getting one full house each night, which helps some.

Collins Doing the Business.

J. A. Collins, Grand Theatre, Hope, Ark., is the boy that is getting the "jits," even though it is hot down that way, and he is doing it by giving his patrons "bigger and better" shows for the same price of admission. While some exhibitors are kicking about the summer business being "off" and trying to secure cheaper film, Brother Collins is shooting at higher priced film and standing 'em up. This ought to be a cue for some of those "tight" birds to loosen up and quit crabbing. They'll do a whole lot more business and make a little money.

EXHIBITOR GEORGE TO VISIT GREECE

Popular Harrisburg Showman Sells His Victoria to Stanley Company—Came to United States in 1903

JAMES GEORGE, who was the predominating factor in the success of the George Brothers, who recently sold their Greater Victoria Theatre to the Stanley Company, of Philadelphia, also closed out other interests in Harrisburg in order to visit their native land in Greece. Previous to his departure Mr. George tendered a dinner to the exchange managers in Philadelphia at the Vendig Hotel, Friday, July 25, as a token of appreciation for the generous co-operation given him in the past. When B. Tolmas, manager of the Independent Sales Corporation, called the various exchange managers on the phone they all responded to a man to pay a tribute to one of the most popular exhibitors in Pennsylvania. F. V. Armato, representative of the Moving Picture World, was toastmaster.

Those present were B. Tolmas, Independent; William Heenan, manager of the First National and Peerless, with his brother Daniel; George Ames, Pathe; William Humphries, Triangle; and Joseph Pierce; J. S. Hebrew, Vitagraph; Herbert Given, United Theatres Corp.; Ben Abrams, Sherry; J. Greenberg, Fox; J. Gill, Mutual; C. Goodwin, Superior; Gabriel Michiels, Joe Singer, Harold Rodner, Charles Klang, S. Rudolph, Edgar Moss, Paramount; and David Barrist, editor of Vine Street Magazine.

Came to This Country in 1903.

The recent sale of the Greater Victoria Theatre in Harrisburg marks another step in one of the most picturesque motion picture careers in Pennsylvania during the last decade. The George brothers have established for themselves reputations as exhibitors of the better class. The development of the business in Harrisburg is largely the story of their success. They are natives of Greece and came to the United States on Christmas Day in the year 1903. For several years they worked at odd jobs and did little more than make both ends meet.

Opened Star in 1907.

In 1907 they came to Harrisburg, where they opened the Star Theatre. Those were the days of the nickel movies and the Star Theatre had exactly eighty-eight seats, but with the rapid progress of the industry the Georges soon had enlarged their little theatre to 750 seats. Shortly after the enlargement was completed, they effected a successful sale. Soon after they opened the Lyric, a vaudeville house, with a capacity of 1,850 seats. It was not long before they abandoned this house to open the New Victoria Theatre, which now stands as a memorial of their success. An opportunity soon arose for them to enlarge this house and after the Victoria was remodeled, 2,200 seating capacity being amply taken care of. It was then named the Greater Victoria Theatre. A $25,000 Hope Jones unit orchestral organ was installed.

Tribute to Advertising.

"I believe advertising to be one of the greatest factors in our success," declared James George discussing the growth of their interests. "When I had a film that cost $500 we always figured on expending another $500 for newspapers and display advertising. Regardless of the merit of the picture it is necessary to bring it to the attention of the populace, otherwise it will be just as well to play an ordinary picture and calculate upon the average amount of patronage.

"Another thing that is important in the motion picture business, as in any other line of industry, is the constant attention to details. I keep on the job every minute and personally attend to the advertising; do all the booking and meet the various exchange representatives, as they come through the town.

"Another point I want to emphasize—make friends. It was the friendliness of the people in Harrisburg toward the Victoria, after all is said and done, which was the greatest measure of our success.

Thanks His Friends.

"I want to thank personally my many friends who have made it possible for us to give Harrisburg the best brand of pictures the market affords," Mr. George continued. "We have endeavored to give the people what they wanted and what their unswerving patronage deserved and we deeply appreciate the loyal manner in which they have stood by us and made possible whatever degree of success we were able to obtain."

Spokane Receiver Wants Bids on Washington Plant

RECEIVER F. K. McBROOM, of the Washington Motion Pictures Corporation, says that he is receiving inquiries as to the sale of the plant in Minnehaha Park, Spokane, set for August 20. No bid for less than $25,000 will be considered and a certified check for $2,000 must accompany each bid. All bids are to be received not later than August 19 and opened the next day. The Spokane park board is interested in the sale to the extent of $2,000 back rent, which is made a first lien.

From the sale of the foreign rights to "Fool's Gold," the first and only film produced by the Washington Motion Picture Company, $9,800 has been realized to date, according to a report received by Mr. McBroom from his New York agent, Frederick Warde. Warde himself purchased the foreign rights and his list of sales includes the right to exhibit the film in England, India, Japan, China, South America and other countries. The picture corporation originally received $5,000 for the foreign rights and a percentage on the sales, which gives it about $7,000 to date from this source. The sale of the American rights is still under way.

Patrons Wore Out Seats.

Tom Moore, owner of the Rialto, Strand and Garden Theatres at Washington, D. C., announces the closing of those theatres within the next few weeks in order to redecorate the Garden and Rialto houses for the fall opening.

During the late summer the Strand will be remodeled, redecorated, and completely renovated. It will be enlarged in order to take a large frontage on Ninth street. The present seating arrangement will be entirely rearranged.

"It's almost necessary to adjust the Rialto," said Moore. "The steady streams of people who patronized that house during the showing of 'Daddy Long Legs,' Mary Pickford's picture from her own studios released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, almost wore out the seats."

Mayer Explains "Three Hundred Per Cent Film"

By A. H. Giebler

A FAVORITE sport of the average debutante producer is to drag "the industry" over the coals, and after damning its directors, to say scornful things about its stories, subtitles and scenery, condemn its continuity, dilate on the evils of distribution and otherwise find fault from title to tailpiece. He winds up the performance by gathering the exhibitor to his sympathetic bosom and announcing in a loud and resonant voice that he is the Moses that will lead the poor misguided movies out of the bullrushes where they have been floundering.

Long years spent in listening to starting statements of this kind has taught us that the person who has most to say about promises has least to say about performances—that the chap who comes into the game with a "cat's got my tongue" attitude is far more apt to have something to say worth listening to than has the talkative tommy.

In other words, it is not always the bull thrower that brings home the bacon.

But Mayer Does Not.

Feeling this way upon the subject, I was almost certain that Louis B. Mayer would speak words of a constructive nature, because Mr. Mayer is one of the producers that act first and articulate afterward.

"I didn't have any bran new ideas," said Mr. Mayer, "but I did have a lot of experience—fifteen years with dramatic stock companies and grand opera productions.

"That and some business rules. One of the rules is that you've got to spend money to make money; another, that no matter what you are selling to the public, it is nothing less than good common sense to give the best possible value consistent with a decent profit. Another is that a production should be complete from all sides.

Discusses Percentages.

"If you've got a hundred per cent. play, put a hundred per cent. star and a hundred per cent. director along with it, and make it a three hundred per cent. production. Consider the Barrie plays on the regular stage. A play by James M. Barrie is enough in itself to fill any theatre, because the tender sentiment, the subtle satire, the humor, the drama and the masterly construction makes it actor proof.

"Frohman could have produced Barrie's plays with almost any kind of a cast and make them successful; but he didn't—he put Maude Adams in the leading roles, and made them doubly successful.

Puts Idea Into Practice.

"I put this idea into practice with our initial production. First, I looked around for a story with an appeal and an advertising value. I selected 'Virtuous Wives,' written by Owen Johnson, a widely read author, published in the Cosmopolitan, a magazine with millions of readers.

"The story, interpreted by any kind of a cast, would have made some money, but with George Loane Tucker as director, Anita Stewart in the lead, and a company of ability to support her—we paid Edwin Arden $700 for a bit in that film—it made more money. I call it a three hundred per cent. production. 'Virtuous Wives' has already gone one hundred thousand dollars over estimated bookings.

Is Not a Philanthropist.

"I am not posing as a philanthropist. I am not trying to make the exhibitor more money because I love him any more than any business man loves the other man he does business with. The exhibitor is my business partner, and I know that he will continue to be my business partner and my friend as long as I treat him right; and the better picture I can give him, the better friend and partner he will be and the better money he will make; and the better money he makes, the better money the Louis B. Mayer productions make. It is a fifty-fifty, endless chain proposition.

"I think our experience in the past will justify our ambitious plans for the future and guarantee their success."

I asked Mr. Mayer about distribution.

Plans New Distribution Scheme.

"We are not going to distribute our films according to the usual manner," he said. "We have a plan whereby we can keep in touch with the films after they leave our hands. We will do this to protect ourselves as well as the exhibitor. We will keep a string tied to our productions so that the exhibitor cannot be exploited by third parties."

Before I left the studio Mr. Mayer told me of an incident that ocurred while "In Old Kentucky" was being cast.

Tells of Whisker Hunt.

One of the best character actors on either stage or screen was cast for the part of the Colonel. The player's work was faultless, and he was the Colonel to the manner born—all but the beard. The player offered to furnish a set of faultless whiskers if a little time was available. They could not wait.

One day Mickey Neilan went into a barber shop. A bearded stranger was being tucked in for a haircut and shave. Just as the gas was about to be administered, he looked up and said, "Hello, Mickey."

Neilan rushed forward with a wild, glad cry.

"Barber, spare that beard!" he cried in tragic tones.

The Sought-for Is Found.

The barber stayed his scissors; Mickey dragged the man from the chair. It was Charles Arling, wearing one of the best sets of Kentucky Colonel Whiskers Mickey had ever seen.

The climax of the story came soon afterward at the studio.

The actor who did not have the right kind of whiskers was taken into consultation and things explained to him. He knew he was losing a chance of adding to his laurels by doing a fine characterization, but he was an artist, and realized what whiskers meant to the part, and stepped gracefully down in favor of the other actor. Of course he was given his salary.

This is only an incident, but I thought it worth telling because it goes far to prove Mr. Mayer's assertion that the utmost care is exercised in getting each production as right and tight, as free from errors, as it is possible to.

Louis B. Mayer.

New Company Formed to Make King Cole Comedies

IN order to take advantage of the rapidly widening field for two reel comedies, the Motion Picture Producing Company of America has been formed, according to an announcement just made public.

King Cole Comedies is the general title selected for the new series, and work will begin at once at the Becker Studio, on Staten Island. The first production will be under the general direction of Sammy Burns, known for his work as director and actor in L-Ko and other comedies. Burns also will act in the productions.

The organization is laying plans for an extensive campaign of advertising and distribution which is expected to give it a place among the leading companies. While the Becker studio, an all-glass building with 37 by 70-foot stage, is sufficient for present use, the corporation has purchased property measuring 100 by 170 feet, at Thirty-seventh street and Clarkson avenue, Brooklyn, where it will erect an all-glass studio and laboratory. Walter L. Johnson, who was associated for a long time with the Triangle Film Company, and Earl H. Hopkinson are the active heads of the new corporation.

Director Burns promises innovations in the King Cole series, although the popular "pretty girl" element will be used extensively. The company has been combing New York to secure the prettiest and most talented young girls.

The new corporation has its eye on foreign fields, for distribution, as well as American markets.

Bert Adler Figures That Figures, Both Feminine and Arithmetical, Do Not Lie

NO wonder all eyes are turned on the foreign market these days! Mack Sennett's Bathing Beauties might go abroad with "Yankee Doodle in Berlin." But Inter-Ocean, through the person of Bert Adler, has puzzled its brains to figure out how these winsome figures may be brought within foreign shipping regulations.

The letter below tells the whole story and hands out the best laugh of the week:

New York, July 24, 1919.

Mr. E. M. Asher, Mack Sennett Comedies, Longacre Building, New York.
Dear Sir:

The foreign rights to any Sennett comedy should be interesting, and we would be very glad to talk further to you on the proposition. We note that you also offer the rights to the personal appearance of the Sennett Bathing Beauties.

Now how can these last be handled? Of course, you are aware of the varying shipping requirements. South American shipments, for example, must be in hermetically-sealed cases. Would the girls stand for this? Or would the gallant South American to whom we might sell these rights?

Then there are the French regulations. Metal, hermetically-sealed cases are again called for—"not to contain over 100 pounds." Some of these girls are over this limit and would have to train down. The British specifications call for a maximum height or width of 14 inches. Think of it! We have no doubt that some of your beauties with slim waists would get by on the width specification, but how many reach under 14 inches on a height measure?

Still we are interested in both the rights to the film and to the personal appearance of the beauties. We simply would be at a loss under the prevailing regulations as to how to export the latter.

Very truly yours,
INTER-OCEAN CORPORATION.

Famous Players Signs Roi Cooper Megrue and Nina Wilcox Putnam to Write Original Plays

THE signing of contracts with two of the foremost writers of the present day for original photoplays from their pens and the purchase of the screen rights to two of the most popular plays of recent years are among the week's important announcements from the production department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Roi Cooper Megrue and Nina Wilcox Putnam are the authors, and "The Round-Up" and "All of a Sudden, Peggy" are the plays which have been acquired.

This is the first time that Roi Cooper Megrue, author of some of the most successful plays seen on Broadway during recent years, has entered the motion picture field. In point of popularity the plays of Mr. Megrue have established remarkable records, and he is recognized as one of the leaders in the playwrighting profession.

Simultaneously, Nina Wilcox Putnam is about to write an orginal photoplay for Famous Players-Lasky, according to the announcement. The best national magazines for some time have been publishing the short stories of this authoress. The nature of her work is particularly adapted to the production plans of the corporation for the next season.

Calls for Western Atmosphere.

"The Round-Up," by Edward Day, which ran nearly two hundred nights on Broadway in 1907, and is one of the most famous western melodramas in the history of the American stage, will be produced in picture form on a lavish scale, it is said. It is planned to film the play with the natural backgrounds of western cliffs and blue-misted canyons called for in the scenes, in which Indians and cowboys are the conspicuous characters. A notable cast will be selected immediately, it is stated, and unique scenic effects, sensational flashes, such as the fall of dead Indians from the cliff top to the floor of the canyon hundreds of feet below and other breath-taking features, are planned.

The author, Edward Day, originally put the play in vaudeville as a one-act drama. The little sketch at once became the leading feature of the programs in which it was presented, and friends of the author pointed out the possibilities in expanding the strong plot to a full play. In the enlarged form Klaw & Erlanger produced it in 1907, and Maclyn Arbuckle, as the cowboy sheriff, added immeasurably to the laurels he had previously won in "The County Chairman." The play is known even in the smaller towns throughout the country from the numerous stock companies which presented it in later years.

Sixty Plays Now on Hand.

In "All of a Sudden, Peggy," which was written by Ernest Denny, it is announced that Marguerite Clark will appear as the star. This will be Miss Clark's fifth subject to be produced in California during her present sojourn there. Walter Edwards will be the director. After this picture is finished Miss Clark will return to the East to resume work at the New York studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

More than sixty plays are now definitely in hand in the production plans of Famous Players-Lasky for the coming year, and more than twenty of these are now in finished form. It is planned in general to release these Paramount-Artcraft pictures on an alternating schedule of two and three weekly. The carrying out of this schedule will mean a total of nearly 150 feature releases during the year.

Co-operation for "Everybody's Business."

Arrangements are being made to secure for the exhibitor the co-operation in each town of the National Security League, Board of Trade, principal and most prominent officials, the American Legion, every one of the four million soldiers that were enlisted in the war, and every leading newspaper in every city where "Everybody's Business" will be shown, will handle the exploitation for the picture in a different way than other photoplays have been in the past.

The photoplay will probably be shown in one of the important cities in the United States for a run before being released generally to the trade. This step is being taken for the purpose of putting over every phase of the exploitation campaign so as to give to each exhibitor throughout the country a tangible and practical exploitation campaign when he screens the feature in his theatre.

Theatres to Cost $100,000 and Over

THEATRE BUILDING continues to demonstrate that there is nothing dead or dying about the motion picture industry. Below are given projects costing $100,000 or over. A number of other new houses costing under the century mark in the thousands have been catalogued, but they are almost too numerous to mention. These $100,000-and-over beauties will serve, however, as a good indication of the continuance of the building boom. Here they are:

Louisville, Ky.—Majestic Amusement Company will erect moving picture theatre, capacity 3,000, and costing $300,000.

Kansas City, Mo.—Garden Theatre will be remodeled by Edelman-Fleming for Marcus Loew. Ten-thousand-dollar organ to be installed. Total improvement cost, $100,000.

Akron, O.—Francis Seiberling, president Goodyear Rubber Company, will construct brick theatre and hotel building to cost $3,000,000.

Oak City, Pa.—Columbia Amusement Company has purchased site for $100,000 motion picture house.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—W. J. Warland has plans by Charles R. Heister for one-story, $100,000 picture theatre.

Norfolk, Va.—Twin City Amusement Company will erect theatre with three galleries, costing $100,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans are completed for the new Stanley Theatre, at Nineteenth and Market streets; cost, $700,000.

Who Said You Had to Read This?

It's the Account of That "Some Outing" Held by the O'Brien Press, Host to the Moving Picture World Gang

By William J. Reilly

PIPE down! At ease! Nobody said you had to read this. And if you think it's an announcement going ut as a "foreword" (accent on the word") of the policy of some produc- ng company for the ensuing year, you're ll out of focus.

This is a strictly personal matter be- ween the Moving Picture World and the rinting company owned, controlled and anaged by Charles J. O'Brien, publica- on printer, 22 North William street.

Just Ask O'Brien's.

We print his address, not as advertis- ng, but solely for reason that if you o not believe what is here stated con- erning the outing his company gave nd to which the Moving Picture World taff was invited en masse, you can ask nyone at the O'Brien Press and get it onfirmed. And you know a printer ever lies.

And the fact that the O'Brien gang oes the printing for the Moving Pic- ure World would not prejudice it in the ast.

Anyhow, this is all about the outing hich Mr. O'Brien et al gave at Kissena ark, L.I., on July 26. We'd call this tory "Ins and Outs at the Outing," but he man on the linotype machine would hink it was a Variety wheeze. (Vari- ty's just another O'Brien account.)

There were several innings at the out- ng. But everybody was so busy having real time that when the seventh nning came along they forgot to stand p and take the great American stretch. t was a printer's outing, but there was ary a word about rules, hairline, creens, 9-em dashes, 6 point or 72 point.

Only "Rule" Was Good Time Rule.

In fact, the only point be to made is that you had to enjoy yourself, else you were possessed of a concrete disposition with ivory trimmings.

The only dash present on the occasion was a hundred yard dash with which Johnny Bell, our own "House Wrecker," romped away with more ease than Geraldine Farrar taking a high C. Of course there was a fat man's dash, which we will speak of later, only it wasn't a dash, but a Keystone comedy. And there was a girl's fifty-yard dash which wasn't a dash either, but a fashion ad. And last, but not least, as the best English novels say, there was the dash for the dining room. Casey engineered it and it made you think he was the well-known engineer, Casey Jones himself.

Hospitality Was the Star.

Speaking of the dining room brings to mind the atmosphere of hospitality of the whole occasion. Everything was wide open to the Moving Picture World. Just like a fellow who takes his best girl to a fancy ball and then is generous enough to let some other chap dance all night with her. The prizes for the races were donated by the O'Brien Press, but the Moving Picture World gang was hauled bodily into everything. And just to show that they were good sports, the M. P. W's ran away with almost everything.

For instance, Johnny Bell took the 100-yard dash, as aforesaid, and Reynolds, our little 227-pound blossom from Plainfield, N. J., ran away with the fat man's race. About a dozen blimps toed the line when the avoirdupois sprint was called. They cavorted about the barrier like a flock of nymphs until they got the word to go, and then they set sail for the tape like a formation of Yank tanks charging the enemy trenches.

Reynolds Had the Form.

Reynolds showed more form than the printers themselves who are supposed to know all about technical forms, and he tripped home like a little fairy running to greet its Cinderella godmother. They gave him a Waterman fountain pen so that he can figure out the O'Brien bill every week and see if there is anything left for Martin, the office boy.

Oh, yes—about the girl's race. May MacMahon won that, closely pushed by Marion Veronica Gerard. (Hello, Marion.) They gave May a fountain pen also. In view of the fact that Johnny Bell, the 100-yard champion, is going to get married soon, they very considerately gave him a Truly Warner hat.

Waring and Metz won a three-legged race, after a dead heat with Jake Fegter and Johnny Stelz. And by the way, if you thought Fay Bainter was cute eating cherries in "East is West," you ought to see Johnny Stelz's little girl eat lollipops. Young America was also represented in the boy's race, won by Master Vieldig.

Of course, there was a ball game. The composing room crossed words and bats with the press room. Somebody counted the score and said it was 12 to 7, "favor of the composing room."

Congratulations All Around.

The Moving Picture World was scheduled to play the winners, and the composing room was anxious to get back at the scribes for all the overtime they have put in on the "Movies." But "Look Pleasant Please. Keep Your Seats. I'm Going to Take Another After This."—Shooting the Outing.

A picture of a few of the folks at the outing of the O'Brien Press, at which C. J. O'Brien was nominated for everything from President to Good Fellow.

the M. P. W. decided not to run away with everything, so they modestly declined to lick the composers.

Whereupon Charles J. O'Brien, looking as if he had just stepped off his yacht—in his white cap and shoes, congratulated John Chalmers on the courtesy of his staff. Looked for all the world like a pair of film magnates.

Then—then—came the food. We'd print the menu, but we don't want to create any hard feeling. During the food C. J. O'Brien rose and spoke: "Glad to have you and your kiddies here. Just like before the war. Hope every outing will be like this." (Applause.)

Then came the dancing.

Who said their girl was the best dancer there? Nope, can't tell the writer that.

J. A. Quinn Sends Letter Explaining His Views on Editorial in Last Week's World

THE following letter has been received from J. A. Quinn, president of the Motion Picture and Theatrical Association of the World, Inc.:

Editor, Moving Picture World:

In your editorial in the issue of August 2, you quote me as saying: "The motion picture as it stands today is the biggest joke in the world." This is an incorrect quotation. What I said, and I am now copying the exact words as taken down by a stenographer of the State Law Reporting Co., was: "The motion picture industry has sometimes been mentioned as the fourth or fifth industry of the world, and I take the stand, and I think we all put the motion picture industry first, from the point of being the most forceful and direct medium of reaching the people. It is absolutely first and above all in the world. But the way the business is being run today it is the biggest joke in the world."

And I still maintain that a number of the producers are making the industry a huge joke.

Isn't it making a joke of the industry for producers to take their favorites who are lacking in all that goes to make real artists, and make stars out of them?

Isn't it making a joke of the industry for these producers to spend thousands and thousands of dollars on advertising and for publicity that is false and misleading in order to create a demand for the pictures in which these "fake stars" appear?

Isn't it making a joke of the industry for producers to deliberately mutilate the works of authors to suit either their own whims or those of their stars? Or, to turn and twist the stories to fit their stars, because they were unable to measure up to the standards of the characters conceived by the authors?

What other expression than "joke" can you use in speaking of the padding that is used to stretch pictures that should take not more than two or three reels to make them interesting, into five or more reels that make them tiresome?

Can it be said that the producers are making anything else but a joke of the business when they waste huge sums of money in this padding and through other extravagances and then expect exhibitors and the public to pay them for it?

If—as some of the producers have done directly or through their agents—the placing of the blame on the public for style-stealing, mismanagement, ignorance of showmanship, lack of business knowledge, etc., isn't making a joke of the industry, then for God's sake, what is it doing?

I have been criticised for making the fight public. I gave the producers an opportunity of seeing the proofs I had to offer. I sent the invitations by registered mail, so that there could be no chance of them going astray. But they did not accept, and so I have carried the fight outside the industry.

The conditions inside the industry are very bad. People outside the business as well as those inside know it. Hundreds of letters coming into the Association's headquarters show plainly what the public thinks and knows.

J. D. Neal, Assistant Community Organizer of the Columbia (So. Car.) War Community Service, in a letter under date of July 17, says: "The motion picture producing industry appears to be a corporation unregulated with almost monopolistic powers. It is criminal that a man is obliged to take a program in order to get certain productions and certain stars. As long as the manager can not select his program, but is forced to take what is presented to him, we are not going to be able to have houses where one can be certain of what he is going to see when he goes."

The fight of the Motion Picture and Theatrical Co-operative Association is only to bring about definite reforms that will strengthen the industry and obtain better pictures for the exhibitors and the patrons.

Our active campaign will be started this fall. We now have members in every State in the Union and the organization of the State Committees is now practically completed.

It is a pleasure to see that Mr. Zukor, as was announced in a recent issue of one of the trade papers, has adopted for the companies of which he is the head, our slogan, "a fight for better pictures."

Very truly yours,
J. A. QUINN,
President.

Norworth Writes Film Song.

Jack Norworth, who has written a song about almost everything under the sun, is now working on a ditty that deals with motion pictures. He appeared last week at the Keith Theatre at Atlantic City, and between performances dug out his fountain pen and went to work. In a letter to Theodore Wharton, he said he was putting the finishing touches on the song and is planning to use it in his vaudeville act. It deals in the Norworth manner with his entry into pictures . The song, as yet unnamed, will be one of the publicity and exploitation devices for "The Crooked Dagger," which is written by Fred Jackson, produced by Theodore Wharton and released by Pathe.

Cincinnati Operators Are Not on Sympathetic Strike

RUMORS of a sympathetic strike on the part of the Cincinnati Operators' Union have been quieted by statements made by officers of the latter union and exhibitors. A. Hettesheimer, president of the Cincinnati Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, in discussing the report that the operators would refuse to handle films furnished by the exchanges whose employes are out, pointed out the improbability of such a move. He said:

"We have a contract with the Motion Picture Operators' Local Union and we also have contracts with the film companies. We have deposits with the film companies and must pay for the films that we have contracted for whether we use them or not. If the operators refuse to handle the films sent to us by these exchanges it will mean a loss to the exhibitor and not to the exchanges."

A statement issued by executives of the operators' union indicated that the possibility of such a sympathetic strike was very remote. Charles M. Ring, president of the operators' union, said that at present no strike of operators, sympathetic or otherwise, was contemplated. Exchange managers state that business is going along in fine shape and that so far as they are concerned there is no real trouble. Activities of pickets and sign men have fallen off considerably as a result of the arrest and conviction of three of the pickets, and it is believed that the possibility of any serious trouble has passed.

Charles W. Hartman Dies.

Charles W. Hartman, owner of the Garrick Theatre, Dallas, died in Detroit, Mich., July 26. Burial was in Detroit, which was Mr. Hartman's home before he came to the Southwest.

Four years ago, Mr. Hartman resigned from a lucrative position with the Studebaker Company here, and bought a small theatre on a busy downtown corner. By running popular attractions and advertising them well, he turned his small play house into a veritable gold mine. He possibly made more money on the ratio of capital invested than any other Texas exhibitor. Mr. Hartman is survived by a sixteen year old son.

Dent Made Myron Selznick's Assistant.

Announcement is made this week by Myron Selznick, president and general manager of Selznick Pictures Corporation, that he has appointed James Dent to the position of assistant. For a number of years Mr. Dent has assisted some of the foremost directors in production work, and for the last four years he has been associated with Ralph Ince. He was also studio manager of the Vitagraph studio at Bayshore, and also the Biograph studio under the management of the Shuberts.

IT'S "EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS" NOW

To Stand by the Government, to Help the Soldier Get a Job, to Help Suppress Bolshevism—and the Screen Is a Proved Medium for Awakening Public Sentiment

By Walter K. Hill

IN winning the war no single medium was so effective in rousing public interest, in awakening patriotism and in strengthening the cause of the Allies as the screen. Time and again Government officials testified to these facts, and the patriotic spirit manifested by the great body of screen-showmen made victory sure and hastened its arrival. But the aftermath of war is placing a continual responsibility upon the screen, for the picture theatre will not be much of a property if the forces of revolution and terrorism make headway in this country.

Having helped win the war, why may not the screen strengthen the hands of good government in awakening the public to the evils of anarchy? Party politics is not in question—it is the safety of a united country that is at stake! And so it will come to the screen, sooner or later, to be the medium for quickening patriotism while at the same time warning the heedless theatregoer of the dangers that beset the Government under which we have progressively prospered for nearly a century and a half.

Producers and Showmen Concerned.

For the first few months of America's share in the war the screen was not called upon to serve the Government as actively as during the closing days. So it is that in the move to battle disorder there has as yet been no official move made to "hook up" the screen with the fight that seems imminent—the fight to make a "safe democracy" safe for those who wish ardently to enjoy its benefits.

However, the individual producer is likely to undertake a work that the Government itself has not ventured into as yet—the production of films that tell a story, entertain while telling it and drive home by inuendo or illustrated example the disaster that threatens. Politicians may be trusted to dally along, as they usually do, before grasping the bovine of Bolshevism by the antlers. Meanwhile the producer of pictures and the exhibitor thereof hold the means to partially, or wholly, prevent the disease of unrest that may lead to attempted revolution.

Metro has produced a feature titled "The Uplifters" that bears on the perils of Bolshevism in a warning way, depending largely upon satire to press its points. Harry Raver's "The Volcano" is another photoplay that aims to give warning of similar activities. Others, too, will come along as the need of them and the market for them becomes (as seems inevitable) more active. Speaking specifically of a picture soon to be released is the present purpose.

Enters "Everybody's Business."

"Everybody's Business" is the more or less illuminating title of a play lately completed in photo-melodrama form that was witnessed in preview at the offices of W. H. Productions the other day. It has been produced and subtitled for the purpose of awakening realizations that will inspire "100 per cent. Americanism" in the minds and hearts of those who shall witness it. For good, red-blooded, Government propaganda, for an inspiration and for evidencing a mission of splendid purpose, "Everybody's Business" rings true in every one of its multiple reels.

Without undertaking any "expert" criticism of the subject, let it be said that "Everybody's Business" looked good enough in preview to warrant time, thought and space being devoted to these references to the W. H. Productions' contemplated offering to picture-showmen.

But "It Has Never Has Been Done."

The new way of doing the same old thing is what keeps the United States Patent Office busy, and the result is adding daily to the comfort, convenience and healthfulness of the country. The showman who strikes out on new lines of promotion is the one who is "copping the coin," while the easygoers still insist "it can't be done." In advertising and promoting "Everybody's Business" there opens opportunities that will never come to the photoplay of strictly commercial possibilities.

Take, for instance, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. Here is an organization that is fundamentally, basically and eternally an AMERICAN institution. To be a member it is essential that the candidate must be an American citizen; he must swear allegiance to the Constitution and fealty to the starry flag. Elk lodges are established only on American soil.

At the national conclave of Elks, held recently in Atlantic City, resolutions were enthusiastically embodied in the proceedings of the convention pledging that great order—with hundreds upon hundreds of lodges scattered throughout the Union—pledging every Elk to combat anarchy, the I. W. W. and all kindred spirits of revolution and destruction in every way possible. The Elks will be heartily interested in "Everybody's Business."

Women May Help.

During the war there was organized by influential patriots the Council of National Defense. Branches were established in every state in the Union with the national organization the controlling head. Of this country-wide organization so much has been written that it is needless to go into details. The showman needs simply to be reminded that there are councils of women associated with the national organization, through the various state alliances, and the women furnish the backbone of the exhibiting business.

The War Camp Community Service is another national organization created by war needs. Like the Council of National Defense the War Camp organization is being perpetuated for reconstruction times. Various centers of population have local organizations such as the Mayor's Committee of National Defense here in New York—comprising organizations of both men and women. There and other combinations of public-spirited people are operating against the threatened advance of lawlessness and disorder captioned "Bolshevism."

What a Few Men Could Do.

In the weeks that intervene before "Everybody's Business" goes over the circuits and into picture theatres throughout the land several men capable of approaching newspaper editors and big men of affairs in the populous centers could prepare the market for an enthusiastic assemblage of the general public before the screens where the picture might be shown. In one week fifteen or twenty of the larger cities could be awakened to the subject—and the picture-showman would reap a double reward of profit and patriotic duty well performed.

These men could interest the local branches of various patriotic societies; could work through the chamber of commerce to interest the employers of labor in the subject; could enlist the patriotically enthusiastic Elks and could have the backing of the A. F. of L. in assembling a representative audience to see "Everybody's Business" shown upon the screen of a prominent theatre to restricted groups of people who would appreciate its value to the cause of good government. The local newspapers would surely "get behind" such a movement, sufficiently to "cover" the event in a big way as a matter of importance and interest to the public.

Benefits from Interested "Boosting."

With men working in various large cities simultaneously there would spring up an extensive and well-developed demand for the picture to be shown upon the screens of picture theatres. The market would be prepared, the demand properly developed and there would be hundreds of eye-witnesses to the merits of the photodrama (representative citizens of each community where the invitation showings had been held) to voice their approval and to urge general attendance. Men employing help would be likely to buy tickets for special "nights" with their employees in attendance.

This photoplay embodies so much that is vital just at this time—points the way to insidious dangers that beset—that it should be shown as soon as consistent and as widely as possible. It will entertain and instruct. It will benefit every community wherein it is shown upon the screen, and there should be produced other pictures of this nature that the lethargic public may be aroused to the dangers of complacency in these days of beaver-like activities on the part of the rattle-brained "Red" or the self-designing agitators.

The screen that has given so much and so freely to the cause of victory may now turn, legitimately, to reaping a cash reward while serving a further and equally vital purpose of patriotism.

Attorney for Trustee in Bankruptcy Issues Official Statement Concerning General Film

SINCE the General Film Company went into bankruptcy, the Moving Picture World has received a number of inquiries regarding the status and plans of the organization. In view of the fact that there are more than 600 known creditors and that thousands of other persons are interested in the affairs of the General Film Company, the World deemed it advisable to procure an official statement from the counsel for the trustee in bankruptcy of the company.

Accordingly, Louis Weinberger, 1457 Broadway, attorney for the trustee in bankruptcy of General Film, at the request of the Moving Picture World, issued the following statement:

The General Film Company, which formerly had its executive offices at 25 West Forty-fourth street, this city, and exchanges at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, and in twenty-five other cities throughout the United States, has been adjudicated a bankrupt on the petition of Interstate Film Company, and other creditors represented by my associate, Mr. Sheinart, and myself; the General Film Contracting Company, a subsidiary corporation of the General Film Company, which was organized for the purpose of making the contracts and arrangements with the manufacturers of film distributing through the General Film Company, was also adjudged bankrupt.

Kellogg Appointed Receiver.

Asa B. Kellogg, 115 Broadway, New York, was appointed receiver in bankruptcy of the General Film Company and of the Contracting Company by Judge A. N. Hand, of the Federal Court in New York.

Immediately steps were taken by us to return to the manufacturers and owners thereof all film in the possession of the branches of the General Film Company, resulting in a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the creditors of the General Film Company, and particularly to the owners of the film; every effort was made to administer the estate of the bankrupt corporations efficiently and energetically, and by reason of the operations of these corporations extending throughout the whole country it can readily be seen that strenuous work was essential to produce desired results.

Assets Being Collected.

The creditors of the General Film Company and of the General Film Contracting Company expressing their appreciation of the good work done by Mr. Kellogg, receiver, unanimously elected Mr. Kellogg trustee in bankruptcy of both corporations. While at the present time it is impossible to give any estimate as to the amount or rate of dividend to creditors, both my associate and myself, as attorneys for the trustee in bankruptcy and also Mr. Kellogg, are leaving no stone unturned in the process of marshalling assets of the bankrupt estate.

Weinberger Handling Correspondence.

In view of the great amount of detail work required in the administration of the affairs of the General Film Company and the General Film Contracting Company practically most of my time for the last three months has been devoted to these matters.

Pursuant to the direction of the trustee, all mail or other matter for the General Film Company or General Film Contracting Company should be addressed to Louis Weinberger, attorney, Brokaw Building, 1457 Broadway, New York City.

Semon Working on Sixth Comedy.

Larry Semon is on the third week of his sixth super-comedy. The subject, following the comedian's idea of having each comedy based on an entirely different theme, in no way resembles his former efforts.

Theda Bara Will Appear in "Kathleen Mavourneen"

KATHLEEN MAVOURNEEN" is the working title of the third Fox Theda Bara production which will be presented by William Fox in line with his policy for 1919-1920.

This play, described as "the sweetest of Irish love stories," was adapted for the screen and directed by Charles J. Brabin, from one of the works of the late Dion Boucicault. It is a production the strength of which lies in its simplicity and love element.

Miss Bara, in the title role, is seen as a colleen who is surrounded by poverty but possesses a wealth of charm and beauty. She loves a youth who is rich in character, poor in pocket. A wealthy squire in turn looks with fondness on Kathleen. Her parents, beset on all sides by misfortune, find the supreme blow in threats of eviction. And it is the squire who owns their property.

Supporting Miss Bara are Marc McDermott, Raymond McKee, Edward O'Connor, Jennie Dickerson, Marcia Harris, Henry Hallam, Harry Gripp and Morgan Thorpe. Camera work was done by George Lane.

Samuel Goldwyn Inaugurates Jury System for Deciding on Suitable Film Subtitles

SAMUEL GOLDWYN gives considerable thought to the matter of titles. To this end he has conceived what he calls "the jury system." This recently formed title jury is composed of men and women in the organization, who from experiences and temperament, see things from different viewpoints. The jury comprises those with a literary training and others without any training of the kind. An effort is made to have this body typical of the average motion picture audiences as they are found in all parts of the country.

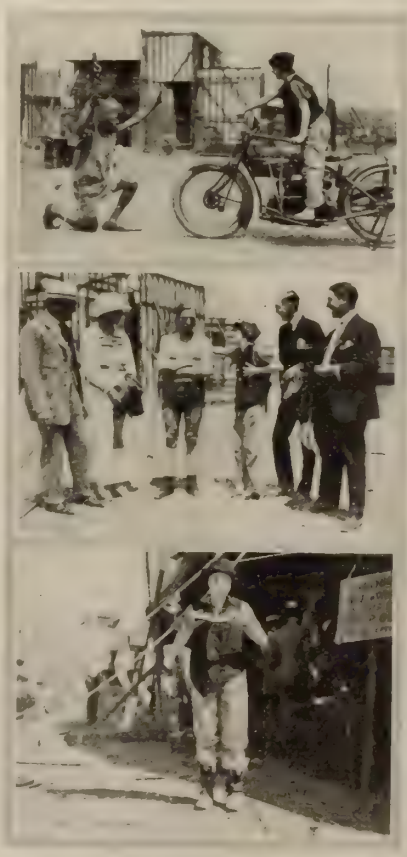
When a new production is viewed by the committee it contains titles written by the title editor, but they are subject to change and sometimes to removal entirely, if the jury finds that for one reason or another they fail to carry the desired point.

Know Story Backward.

It is obvious that the director, scenario editor and even the title writer are so close to their work that they know a story backward, and what may seem perfectly clear to them may appear vague to an audience that sees a picture without any previous knowledge as to what it concerns. Sometimes it is found that a member of the jury is doubtful about the meaning of a word, or a phrase used in a title, in which case a substitute is found. Before a title is considered satisfactory it must meet with the approval of everyone on the committee.

In striking an average that keeps a production from going over the heads of an audience unaccustomed to subtle phraseology, or the slang of Broadway, particular attention is paid to titles of a humorous nature. Experience has shown that "smart" titles, which may appeal to a particularly sophisticated sense of humor, are likely to fall flat with a large percentage of patrons.

Every effort is made to avoid trite phrases, such as "The Following Morning" or "That Night." Also, if anyone on the Goldwyn title jury feels that an expression offends good taste, or makes light of religious convictions, it is promptly removed.



Mabel Normand's in Again.

Neither the Wild Man of Borneo, top; the Tattooed Man, center, nor the Rhine, bottom, hold fears for Mabel in her circus Goldwyn, "The Empty Paradise."

Pickford Film Opens New Strand.

"Daddy Long Legs," Mary Pickford's rare success, has been selected by the M. E. Comerford Amusement Company, as the attraction for the opening days of the new Strand Theatre at Sunbury, Pa. The theatre is to open under the Comerford management July 31, and the Pickford film has been leased for that day and the remaining days of the week.

The Strand, formerly the People's Theatre, became one of the Comerford string of thirty-seven some months ago, and has since been in the process of reconstruction. Its entrance has been enlarged and beautified and the interior of the house redecorated and reseated. The theatre will reopen with a seating capacity of 1,000.

SELZNICK PICTURES TO BUILD STUDIO

Plans Call for Big Plant at Long Island City— Has Total of 54,240 Square Feet of Floor Space

TEN months hence the Selznick Pictures Corporation will collect its forces, artistic and mechanical, from a number of picture plants and bring them together in its big new studio. It will be located at Long Island City, across the Queensborough Bridge, fifteen minutes from the heart of Broadway.

Myron Selznick, president of the company, has just announced the first comprehensive details of his big enterprise. The studio is to be erected on a plot of ground, 200 feet by 600 feet. Work will begin immediately.

An idea of the size of the new Selznick studio will be gained from these figures. Twenty companies will be at work at the same time. Floor space totaling 54,240 square feet has been set apart, according to the plans, for the two stages, the lower and upper one.

To Be Four Stories High.

Four stories high will the building be, divided up into two huge studio floors and two mezzanine floors. The lower studio will have a floor space of 25,200 square feet, with a clearance space of 30 feet and the upper studio will have a floor space of 29,040 square feet with a clearance of 50 feet. To take care of the traffic there will be six passenger elevators and two freight elevators.

There will be eighty-eight dressing rooms. The stars will have three-room suites for complete privacy and comfort in preparing for their work. Women stars will have separate private showers and baths, and men stars private showers.

There will be a resturant in the studio, with the latest sanitary appliances, including mechanical peelers and electric dish-washers, capable of seating 500 persons at one time. Seven complete projection rooms of large dimension are called for in the plans. Two huge tanks and four traps also are included.

Will Have Theatre.

A theatre will be installed in the main building. The auditorium will seat 700. Nothing is to be omitted to make it modern and up-to-date to the last detail. It will be used as a set, when a script calls for a playhouse, and as well for projection and exhibition purposes.

Barber shops and hair-dressing parlors will be placed at strategic points. Green rooms for recreation and rest are to be comfortably furnished and conveniently located. Hand-ball courts for the strong and swift-armed in goodly number will be found. And on the roof, with the East River not far off to supply the cooling breezes, are to be placed several tennis courts. A Selznick police department and a fire department will be provided. The garage under the studio roof will be built to accommodate thirty-two cars.

The huge basement, with its 120,000 square feet of floor space, it may be certain, will not go to waste. Carpenter and mechanical shops of every description will be found there. Plasterers, wall paper hangers and papier mache workers will also be given lots of elbow room. Not to mention the paint shop, in all its vivid glory, would be libelous.

This shop will be so laid out that scenic drops, no matter what their size, painted there will be able to be hauled directly into either one or the other of the main studios. A battery of electric generators and transformers of large number will delight the heart of the "juice" engineers.

A printing office will be found in the heart of the studio. The art department will be in proximity with the mechanical shops, and the cutting and editing rooms will be handy to the projection chambers.

Offices on Mezzanine Floor.

On the mezzanine floors will be the executive offices, including the private offices of Myron Selznick and his principal lieutenants; also the directors' rooms and the dressing rooms. Within easy reach of the latter will be the dressmaking department and the wardrobe. The telephone exchange for inter-studio messages will be the last word for the quick transmission of orders.

The still department will take in one whole end of the building, 52 feet by 200 feet.

A technical office with a staff of draftsmen, presided over by the technical director, will be given a point of vantage, where daylight will flood the room for the maximum number of hours. Facilities will be given the technical staff to enable it to complete the most exacting sets in record-breaking time.

Space for Twenty Companies.

With twenty companies at work at one time, which is the schedule to be adhered to in the world's largest studio, at least 800 players will be housed, reckoning forty to a company. To meet the needs of these and the general business, it is estimated that no less than 700 additional persons will be required, including technical, mechanical and office staffs. This brings the total to 1,500.

Kalem Announces Reissues.

The Kalem Company, 1482 Broadway, announces a reissue at popular prices of westerns, comedies, dramas, comedy dramas and sensational dramas. The stars of these pictures are Tom Moore, Anna Q. Nilsson, Marguerite Courtot, Ruth Roland, Marshall Neilan, Marin Sais, Robert Ellis, George Larkin, Ollie Kirkby, Helen Holmes and Helen Gibson. They have been directed by Directors Robert G. Vignola, Marshall Neilan, George Melford and Harry Hillard.

Pat Coleman, ex-Service and Selig Man, Starts Producing Concern in San Antonio

DALLAS, the film distribution centre of the Southwest, is going into the producing business. The first moving picture producing company will open for business Oct. 1.

Pat Coleman, for six years with Selig and just back from overseas, where he served on the general staff as war records photographer of the French government, has organized the new concern which will probably be known as the Coleman Producing Company. Dallas business men, realizing that San Antonio has stolen a march on them in encouraging the location of film studios, have enthusiastically backed Mr. Coleman's project. They will erect a studio and go to work as soon as possible.

The first picture will be made in Dallas is to be "The Bad Lands School Marm." The next will be "The Prodigal Daughter," which will require a cast of 4,000 people. "The Mystery Millions," a live wire serial, will also be started at once.

Mr. Coleman is in Los Angeles where he will interest various actors with successful reputations in his project. He expects to secure the services of a star of nation wide repute and perhaps twenty actors for other parts. The new company will be capitalized at $800,000.

"Dallas was selected for the new home of our studios because of the perfect light," Mr. Coleman says. "I own the rights to a new three color process with which we will conduct many interesting experiments in production. Texas sunlight is the best photographic light in the world. We can keep our companies busy up to nine o'clock at night owing to a clear light and the long summer days."

Williams Working on "Black Gate."

Earle Williams has begun work on "The Black Gate," an exceptionally clever mystery story by Hilliard Booth. The new Vitagraph feature tells the story of the rejuvenation of a brilliant young lawyer through the influence of love and originally appeared in a popular magazine. The supporting cast will include Ruth Clifford, who has just joined Vitagraph, Harry Springler, Brinsley Shaw, Melbourne McDowell, Clarissa Selwyn and Park Jones.

Universal Orders 10,000,000 Posters for Its New Series

WITH its finest series of pictures nearing completion, Universal is preparing to advertise it extensively.

Universal last week signed a large contract with the Morgan Lithographing Company of Cleveland, which involves a minimum delivery of ten million poster sheets which will be used to advertise Universal products for one year.

Two million pounds of paper will be required, and for the transportation fifty freight cars will be used.

This contract represents only a part of the extensive exploitation campaign Universal has planned for the coming year. The advertising department will co-operate with the exploitation and publicity department in giving the exhibitor his greatest needs.

Barthelmess Returning to New York.

Richard Barthelmess has completed work in the leading role of the Griffith production being filmed on the west coast and is expected to arive shortly in New York.

He has been granted a vacation leave by the producer before assuming the principal part in another Griffith play, which, it is understood, will be enacted in New York. Work on this picture will probably not commence until September.

Change in Griffith Repertory.

Changes in the D. W. Griffith repertory season at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York, will bring to a close on Sunday evening, August 10, the engagement of "The Fall of Babylon," now in its third week. The next offering will be Mr. Griffith's new peace edition of "Hearts of the World," wherein the League of Nations receives its first motion picture presentation in narrative form, with the necessity for the cessation of armed strife powerfully visualized by Mr. Griffith.

The new edition of "Hearts of the World" is considerably shorter than Mr. Griffith's original production. The cast of principal characters however, remains the same, including the Misses Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Robert Harron, Master Ben Alexander, George Siegmann, Adolphe Lestina, Kate Bruce, Josephine Crowell, Robert Anderson, George Fawcett, Anna Mae Walthall and others.

Garrison on Border Means Exhibitors' Opportunity

NOW that the Mexican border is to be permanently garrisoned, $75,000 is to be spent by the United States government in providing moving picture theatres along the Rio Grande. Theatres will be erected on the Liberty Theatre plan for the troops.

The determination of the war department to keep a permanent guard along the Rio Grande frontier has been met with jubilation on the part of theatre owners on the southern edge of the United States. The government theatres will be in the center of the various camps. In the cities nearby, arrangements are being made to build moving picture theatres which will cost $500,000 or more. The exhibitors know they are sure of liberal patronage as long as the soldiers stay.

Richardson Will Lecture on Way to Maritime Convention

F. H. RICHARDSON, editor of the Projection Department, will attend the Maritime Convention in September on behalf of the Moving Picture World. He will motor up through Maine and will stop over in such cities as desire it and lecture before projectionists on the optical system of the projector. The lecture will be accompanied by stereoptican slides.

The date has not been set as yet for the convention, but those who desire to have Mr. Richardson visit them should communicate that fact to him as soon as possible.

Desmond Is Pursued Lover in "A Sagebrush Hamlet"

WILLIAM DESMOND, in his latest picture, "A Sagebrush Hamlet," released by Robertson-Cole and distributed by Exhibitors Mutual, plays the role of a pursued lover. Instead of the rough and ready westerner trying to win the heart of the eastern girl, the girl tries to win the madcap leader of a reckless crew of cow-punchers.

A Minnesota chain of theatres booked the film far in advance of its release. The manager stated that western pictures with a somewhat different angle to the story are invariably among the most popular shown in his theatres.

Marguerite De La Motte plays the part of the Eastern girl and her escapade in her "nightie" leads to no end of amusing situations. Ed Piel, Walter Perry and George Fields, a splendid trio of rugged Westerners, support William Desmond as members of the reckless Bottle Canyon gang.

FAMOUS PLAYERS MAKES EDUCATIONALS

One Series Will Be for Theatre Presentation and the Other for Use in Schools and Clubs

ACCORDING to the announcement from the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, that company, appreciating the vast possibilities that lie in the development of the educational picture, has formed two separate departments which will operate in the educational field in two ways.

One of these is the educational department, which already is producing educational subjects for exhibition in regular picture theatres. This department is under the management of Nathan H. Friend, who long has been identified with production of educational pictures. Mr. Friend explains that the pictures made in his department are primarily intended for projection in regular theatres, because, while they are instructive, at the same time are fundamentally entertaining.

Non-Theatrical Section.

The other division is the non-theatrical picture department, and is under the direction of David K. Niles, who, as a pioneer in the educational film field, has been one of the leaders in the fight to convert schools, clubs, churches and other public institutions to the educational value of films.

Mr. Niles' department, it is announced, will devote itself entirely to the production and distribution of pictures to non-theatrical organizations that are interested in better photoplays or in educational subjects.

Subjects on Friend's Program.

The subjects on Mr. Friend's program for the educational department give an indication of the nature of the work which he intends to do. One of these is the Paramount Magazine, which will be made up of a variety of subjects and which will include the work of some of the best known writers and artists. In it there will be the cleverest epigrams from the Smart Set Magazine; epigrams by Helen Rowland, whose writings in the New York Evening World and syndicated newspapers, have won for her a countrywide reputation; comic animated cartoons by a number of well-known screen cartoonists, and an animated technical drawing of some popular scientific or mechanical subject. The animated technical drawings will be done under the supervision of the editors of Popular Mechanics, and will treat of mechanical subjects that are of popular interest.

Besides the Paramount Magazine, Mr. Friend's department will distribute the "So This Is America" pictures, which will be comedy travel subjects, written by Ring W. Lardner, the well-known humorist; Arthur B. Reeve, creator of the Craig Kennedy detective stories, and John W. Grey, the well-known scenarist.

Other series already are being arranged for, it is announced.

In the non-theatrical department the educational subjects are being arranged along courses which have been formulated by some of the foremost educational authorities in the country. These pictures are for exhibition in schools; but, although they will be strictly educational, they will in no way, it is stated, replace the text-books, but will supplement the present teaching facilities, making school more interesting for pupils and allowing teachers greater time for the handling of their classes.

Exchanges to Handle School Pictures.

Other pictures already are being produced by Mr. Niles' department for exhibition both in schools and semi-educational centers. These, it is declared, will be educational in a broader sense and will be less closely related to school subjects than those produced for special school presentation.

The non-theatrical subjects will be handled from the regular twenty-eight Famous Players exchanges in this country, special representatives being assigned to each exchange to care for the distribution to public institution.

Carlyle Blackwell Forms Own Producing Company; First Production Slated for Release in October

CARLYLE BLACKWELL, long a star personality of the screen, has launched his own producing company and leaves for California this week to begin preparations for the first production which is to be a spectacular society drama photographed from a popular fiction work now reckoned as one of the best sellers.

Mr. Blackwell is busily engaged in casting the twenty-three roles. The productions will be made on a splendid and elaborate scale, with no maximum cost set.

Mr. Blackwell has been financed by a prominent banker and former Governor who base their faith on Mr. Blackwell's pulling power in pictures heretofore released with him as star, and who figure that without the limitations of cost, limits of time, and other obstacles placed in the way of a star forced to work against the clock and calendar, that there will be no limits to the appeal of high class sensational productions with Mr. Blackwell in the star roles.

Big Campaign on Each Picture.

In addition to an unlimited negative cost, $25,000 per production has been set aside for national exploitation, and for six weeks preceding each picture in the metropolitan centres of the country, intense advertising campaigns will be conducted.

The entire output of the Blackwell organization has already been disposed of to Joseph Friedberg, who in turn is to arrange distribution along a plan best conceived to enable the pictures to earn the greatest amount of money, and at the same time afford the greatest number of exhibitors opportunities to play the pictures.

Mr. Friedberg has already arranged the advertising campaign preliminary to the first production and this is to begin early in September with the first production announced for release the latter part of October.

The first production will require twelve big sets, twenty-three principals, and a great number of minor parts; will be in approximately 6,000 feet and will cost more than $100,000, if the producers are able to maintain their scheduled cost, but additional expenditures will be made necessary to achieve the results Mr. Friedberg has demanded of Mr. Blackwell.

It is understood that already a number of independent exchanges have communicated with Mr. Friedberg in an effort to secure a series of six pictures which will constitute the first sixteen months output.

ZUKOR ELECTED A STANLEY DIRECTOR

Famous Players President Is Added to Board of Philadelphia Theatre Operating Company

AT the first meeting of the Stanley Company of America, which recently was incorporated for $15,000,000, with Jules E. Mastbaum as president, Mr. Mastbaum announced that all details had been perfected for the smooth working and the resultant expansion of the enterprises contemplated.

A new member has been added to the board of directors in the election of Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Therefore his connection with the Stanley Company will bring to that organization the strength of his many affiliations.

The Stanley Company, Mr. Mastbaum said, proposes to extend its business by buying existing houses and leasing or building new ones wherever there is an unsatisfied demand for first class photoplay entertainment. Plans are being considered which assure quick service for each theatre. That is to say, that as quickly as films are released they will be shown in the theatres under the control of the new corporation. This will be an innovation in many instances, where films have not reached the location for many weeks after their original showing and insures patrons the latest and best in the motion picture field.

Mr. Mastbaum said that ground immediately will be broken for the new Stanley Theatre at Nineteenth and Market streets, Philadelphia, which, as already announced, will be one of the most imposing structures in the country with a seating capacity of 4,000 and containing every modern improvement. In addition to this house everything is in readiness for the beginning of work on a theatre at Fifty-second and Chestnut streets in the same city, and another in Logan, both of which, it is said, will be revelations in their particular sections of the city. These are not all of the new houses contemplated. As a matter of fact the company has in prospect the construction of houses in other localities, and will also rebuild and likewise improve several theatres which are now enjoying remunerative patronage.

Tour of Sennett Bathing Girls Was Unprecedented

WHEN Sol Lesser decided to undertake a transcontinental tour of Mack Sennett's famous bathing beauties, and broached his venture to the veteran motion picture powers on the Coast, they all threw up their hands in fear and said, "It can't be done."

"Yankee Doodle in Berlin," with the personal appearance of the girls has proved such a drawing card that the scheduled one-week engagement at Moss Broadway Theatre, New York, has now run into five weeks.

B. S. Moss, at whose theater the picture is being shown, co-operated with Mr. Lesser in the matter of publicity, by allowing Arthur Mac Hugh, the head of the Moss publicity staff, to handle Mr. Lesser's publicity for the New York dailies. H. C. McCourt was chosen to head the exploitation departmen that is, to handle the photos, programs, Sennett songs and the booklet, "Queens of the Sea," containing thirty-four pictures of the Sennett Bathing Beauties. The third man, who has returned to the motion picture game after an abse of a year, in which time he served with Uncle Sam, is Isador M. Stern, who is handling the "stunts" for the organization—his best bit of work being the arrest at Coney Island of the bathing girls.

"The Hall Room Boys" May Go to State Rights

JACK AND HARRY COHN, who are handling the distribution of the Hall Room Boys comedies, although they have had some tempting offers from several distribution organizations, are considering seriously the advisability of placing the productions on the state rights market.

Since the showing of the first two of the series at the Strand Theatre, New York, inquiries have come in from exhibitors anxious to show the comedies and in addition many bids from state rights buyers have been received.

One advantage accruing to the exhibitor who shows "The Hall Room Boys" series, twenty-six of which will be released during the year, lies in the fact that nearly one hundred newspapers throughout the country are daily advertising the boys.

The two featured comedians, Flanagan and Edwards, have appeared in the vaudeville houses of the Keith and Orpheum Circuits, for several years, as headliners. Their comedy is known to be clean-cut and sure fire.

Jack and Harry Cohn desire to give all state rights buyers an equal opportunity before concluding distribution arrangements.

Mayflower Sues to Recover $5,200 from Harley Knoles

THE Mayflower Photoplay Corporation has filed an action in the United States Court against Harley Knoles, who was engaged by the film company as director of "The Red Republic" adapted from "The Comrades" by Thomas Dixon, to recover $5,200 which the defendant is alleged to have extorted from the company.

The complaint filed by House, Grossman & Vorhaus, counsel for the film company, sets forth that Knoles was engaged as director in September, 1918, and commenced work on the production at the Norma Talmadge Studio on October 31, completing the interior scenes early in December when the casts was transported to Florida to take the exterior scenes.

Did Not Use Scenario.

After the interior scenes were completed at periodical intervals until the completion of the photoplay, the company charges, the defendant made demands upon the company for amounts in excess of his salary of $800 weekly under the contract which is alleged to have been paid under duress and protest.

Knoles completed the production without the aid of a scenario, making it impossible for the film company to engage another director to complete the production at the time he made his alleged demands upon the company for additional sums, and as the company had invested upward of $60,000 in the production it had no alternative it is alleged but to comply with his demands.

Through his attorneys, Lewis & Schaap, the defendant denies the allegations contained in the complaint that he extorted the sum mentioned from the company and asserts that he was entitled to the money which he received, amounting to $1,000, under the terms of the contract.

"Tiger Cub" Is Pearl White Film.

"Tiger Cub," announced as the vehicle for Miss White's debut as a William Fox star, will be the first of a group of big productions which Mr. Fox has planned for her. Scores of novels and scenarios were rejected before the choice finally fell upon the story as being peculiarly adapted to Pearl White's talents.

Although work on this film has not been started, material for other Pearl White pictures is already under consideration.

Barriscale Feature Lends Itself to Window Displays

BESSIE BARRISCALE'S recent production, "The Woman Michael Married," released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors Mutual, is an example of a modern style production. Several exhibitors have linked the advertising of the picture in the newspapers with the advertising of local merchants and have also arranged Barriscale windows. Photographs of the star in her many beautiful gowns were used as models of what might be accomplished with materials which were displayed in the windows.

It is being more generally recognized by merchants everywhere that motion pictures are a dominating influence in the creation and spread of fashions and the value of co-operation with exhibitors is daily becoming more apparent to them. In the latest Barriscale picture not alone evening gowns, but bathing costumes and street dresses of the latest mode were used. In fact, so many costumes were worn that a small window of photographs, each one of the star in a different gown, was possible.

Exhibitors everywhere have reported that women leaving the theatre after a striking society play talk about little else but the appearance and costuming of the women, and invariably stop in the lobby to closely regard the photographs

Levey Returns from Trip.

Harry Levey, general manager of the Universal Educational and Industrial Departments, returned this week from the Middle West, during which time he visited business acquaintances. Incidentally he announces that he has brought back to New York the largest contract for the distribution of educational pictures in the history of the industry.

Ford to Instruct British in Modern Picture Methods; First International School of Film Art

INSTRUCTION of British producers in American motion picture methods, developed during those years when Britishers were busy with the more important exigencies of the great war, will be a primary feature of the Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., studios in London. This announcement was made recently by Hugh Ford, special director, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The new company, he said, will organize what is to be substantially the first international school of motion picture art. Arrangements to pass on the newly developed arts and sciences of the motion pictures to Britishers who desire to enter this field were made at the request of English capitalists. Such an arrangement, according to Mr. Ford, offers the following:

1. An opportunity to discharged British soldiers to learn the latest methods in the most lucrative profession in the world.

2. An opportunity for the development of British dramatic talent that actors and actresses may make their way to international stardom without coming to America.

3. An opportunity for stimulating British playwright genius and making the playwright's market, now subject to international barriers, a single field where manifold profits may be reaped.

4. An opportunity for British producers to learn the American trade secrets for the development of their own motion picture industry without wasting time in experiments which have already been tried in the United States.

Our Duty to Teach Britishers.

"It is America's duty to stand by Great Britain during the reconstruction period," said Mr. Ford. "It is only fair that America should teach her great ally methods, both artistic and scientific, which she had the opportunity to develop while Britain was occupied with the war. Overseas, the motion picture industry is five years behind the times—not because of any lack of brains or initative, but simply because of the war.

"This is an opportunity for America to pay off her debt. We want to give British producers every opportunity to regain the lost ground. Our experts and technical men, who have the subject at their finger tips, will pass on the information overseas. We hope, that within a period of months, the motion picture field overseas will have been broadened and new activities stimulated.

"Unquestionably there is a new field for material overseas. There is undeveloped dramatic talent. There are British plays and British playwrights that would have a future in the motion pictures.

Schooling Invited.

"The Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd., have entered upon this schooling project at the invitation of the British capitalists who backed the organization. It is England's opportunity to enter the modern motion picture field on the same high artistic plane upon which she worked before the war. It is an opportunity for American motion picture men to help cement international friendships."

Mr. Ford arrived in New York recently from the West.

Special Sunday Movie Edition Surprises Dallas

SOMETHING new for the Southwest was a big moving picture edition put out Sunday, July 27, by the Dallas Times Herald. This newspaper two years ago started featuring with its Sunday issue a four to six page moving picture section. The idea proved a popular one and circulation jumped all over North Texas.

On the Sunday mentioned, fourteen pages of the paper were devoted exclusively to news of the moving picture world. For the first time attention was paid to the local film exchanges, the managers of which were written up. Photographs of several hundred employes of the fifteen Dallas film houses were printed, as well as numerous articles showing that Dallas leads the entire South in the moving picture industry.

Tom C. Gooch, managing editor of the Times Herald, sent copies of the edition to 500 moving picture exhibitors throughout the state. They are asked what they think of featuring the movies as well as being given a hint as to how to liven up the newspapers in their home towns.

Blanche Sweet Film Now Selling.

Harry Garson's second Blanche Sweet production, "The Hushed Hour," which is being state-righted, is rapidly being disposed of. The following territories have been sold in the last few days: Jones, Linnick & Schaefer, of Chicago, Illinois; Big Feature Rights Corporation, of Louisville, Kentucky and Tennessee; Pioneer Film Corporation, New York State; Josiah Pearce & Sons, of New Orleans, Louisiana and Mississippi; The First National Exhibitors' Exchange, of Cleveland, Ohio; Merit Film Company, of Denver, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico and Idaho; Charles F. Schwerin, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina, and Virginia. The United Kingdom has been sold to the Gaumont Company.

The sales were made through Herbert K. Somborn, formerly sales manager for Mr. Garson, but who is now the president of the newly formed Equity Pictures Corporation.

Bernard Comes to New York.

Clifford C. Bernard, who has been managing the Sol Lesser production, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," in conjunction with Mack Sennett's Bathing Beauties, in the states of Indiana and Pennsylvania, has been called to New York to assume the same duties for the show now appearing at B. S. Moss' Broadway, relieving Frank McClellan, who is joining the Paramount exploitation department.

Mr. Bernard, before joining Sol Lesser's orgaization, managed the Majestic Theatre in Los Angeles.

Warner Oland Goes to Los Angeles.

Warner Oland, sunburned and enthusiastic, set out for Los Angeles July 25, where he is to begin work soon on the Louis J. Gasnier serial, "The Third Eye," to be released by Pathe. Featured with him in the picture is Eileen Percy.

The role to be played by this villain of the screen is a typical Oland part, one of the kind that has made him famous wherever serials are shown. He will be the crafty, sinister, powerful master crook.

"The Third Eye" marks Mr. Oland's return to the serial field.

Ruffner Uses Lobby Display to Boost Drama of Arabia

MANY exhibitors throughout the country have taken advantage of the exploitation possibilities of "The Man Who Turned White," the first H. B. Warner picture released by Robertson-Cole through Exhibitors' Mutual, and one of the most successful of them is Manager Ralph Ruffner, of the Rialto Theatre, San Francisco. He put over a lobby display that was an effective piece of staging in itself, and put life into it with the presence of the ten young women ushers dressed in native Arab costumes.

In the play Warner appears in the role of a cashiered officer of the Foreign Legion, the victim of injustice, who goes into the desert and becomes the chief of a band of Arab raiders.

The atmosphere of the picture was carried into the lobby display. The background showed the wastes of the desert and set as if to appear actually on the sands was a life-size cut-out of the man who turned white on horseback. A few real palms set off effectively the idea of the oasis in the sands. An Arab tent of striped canvas was draped about the box office window.

Doris Kenyon, Center, Believes in Holding Hands; Not So Doris, Right.
And Doris, left, is strictly neutral, not to say very attractive in these scenes from "The Bandbox," the Deitrich-Beck production for Hodkinson.

DISTRICT ASSOCIATION CHANGES RULE

At Request of Exhibitors, Exchangemen Refuse to Allow Monopoly of Films by Large Houses

THE exchange Managers' Association, of Washington, D. C., will no longer consent to exhibitors' requiring, in the making of contracts, that their competitors and neighbors shall not be permitted to run the same pictures at any future date. Following a complaint from certain exhibitors in that territory, it became known that there were other and competing theatermen who would demand, when making a contract for films, that they have the exclusive use of those films in their neighborhood, and sometimes the demand included the entire city.

Small Houses Injured.

The matter had been carried before the grievance committee in a particular instance. The exchange was held to be at fault in canceling a contract because the theatre previously running the show had demanded that action be taken. If permitted to run to its logical end it would mean that a large house at one end of the street could prevent another, perhaps smaller, house at the other end, from getting films run by the former six months before. It would result in a few houses getting entire control of the picture output in so far as their particular city or town was concerned and the revival of the old booking agencies.

Association Adopts Rule.

Following almost unlimited discussion of this evil, the following rule was adopted: "Members of this association are hereafter prohibited from entering into any contract with any exhibitor whereby it is implied that the films so contracted for may not at any future date be shown at a competing or other theatre." This does not mean that the theater first running the films will not be given suitable protection, but it does mean that it canot dictate where or where not the films would be permitted later to be shown.

Harry Bernstein, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Virginia, was a guest of the association at the meeting in which this matter was discussed. He invited the managers present to attend the joint convention of exhibitors of Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, Delaware and the District of Columbia to be held August 13 and 14, at Ocean View, Va. Messrs. Lust, Dresner and Kaplan of the association were appointed to assist Mr. Bernstein in working up events that will make the convention a lively one. There is to be a movie ball, shore dinner, baseball game, fat men's races and some other things of a laugh provoking nature.

The requirement that on and after August 18 all exhibitors will be required to pay for their shows in advance of show date was finally agreed upon at this meeting and all exhibitors in this territory, will, at an early date, be advised of this action. It was pointed out that a majority of the exhibitors are already making such payment and Mr. Bernstein spoke on the matter from an exhibitor's standpoint. He declared himself as in favor of the proposal.

Morgan Resigns.

The managers were called upon to accept the resignation of their secretary, Oscar A. Morgan, who goes to New York to become assistant sales manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. As a token of their esteem they presented him with a leather traveling bag with his initials upon the tab. The loss of Mr. Morgan, various speakers declared, was a matter of deep regret to all. He will be succeeded by Herbert C. Wales, manager of Universal.

George Lenihan, who will represent the Big Four in Washington territory, and E. S. Lippard, manager of Realart, formerly manager for the Mutual at Pittsburgh, were recommended for membership in the association.

May Incorporate Association.

Mr. Wales was instructed to take up with the association's lawyer the matter of securing incorporation. Another measure adopted was that involving the giving of instructions to the salesmen of each exchange to make daily reports from each town visited, of the films being shown at the various houses therein. This, it was pointed out, will have the effect of showing up the bicycling of films, for the postal cards will be directed to the secretary's office and from there will be distributed to the various exchanges whose films are being shown, enabling them to check up on them.

Cleaning up Conditions.

From reports received at this meeting it would appear that the association is fast cleaning up many unbusinesslike conditions and causing both exhibitors and exchange managers to discontinue practices that are not for the betterment of the industry. In this the grievance committee has been of exceptional value. It consists of three exchange managers and three exhibitors. The minute these men get together for a conference on grievances they forget their business connections and affiliations and, as real men, hand down decisions that up to this date have been accepted and carried out with the gest of grace. It is realized that both sides to any argument are bound to get a square deal and, therefore, the mandates of the committee are being carried out to the letter.

LINZ.

Company Made Up of Veterans.

One company now producing at Universal City has a fine military record. It is that headed by Director George Eigmann, producing "Who Knows," with Kenneth Harlan and Helen Eddy as the stars.

Every male member of the company served with the Allied forces "over there." Seigmann left D. W. Griffith to accept a lieutenancy in the army and served with the Signal Corps in France for nine months. Assistant Director James O'Shea was a master engineer in the Camouflage Corps, recently returning from France, having been over there a year and a half. Kenneth Harlan was in the 143d Field Artillery that saw nine months' service in France.

Alfred Gosden, the cameraman, served in the Royal Naval Air Service of Great Britain.

Ray Starts on "A Man's Money."

Under the working title, "A Man's Money," Charles Ray has just started work on a new picture for Paramount-Artcraft release, at the Thomas H. Ince studios in Culver City. This story is by Julien Josephson. In the supporting cast are Gladys George, Charles Mailles, William Conklin and Mollie McConnell.

A Bunch of Clever Character and Location Bits from "In Mizzoura" and "Huckleberry Finn," Paramount-Artcrafts.
Guy Oliver is seen at the left outside the blacksmith shop in "In Mizzoura." Lewis Sargent is seen in the center as "Huck," while on the right Director William D. Taylor "acts" down on the river front in "Huckleberry Finn."

LOEW STARTS BUILDING OTTAWA HOUSE

Rivalry Already Evident Between the New Concern and the Existing Dominion Theatre

CONSIDERABLE rivalry has already developed between Loew's Ottawa interests and the Canadian United Theatres, Limited, the company which controls the Dominion Theater, Ottawa, although the proposed Loew theatre for the Canadian capital is not yet above street level.

Loew House Costs $400,000.

J. Albert Ewart, the Ottawa architect for the Loew Theatre, announced on July 24 that the contract for the construction of the proposed house on the selected downtown site has been awarded. Announcement was also made that the Loew house would cost $400,000, not including the cost of the site. The contract calls for the completion of the work by January 15. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,600 and will be one of the largest in Canada. Several novel features will be incorporated in the building, one of these being a spacious dancehall or convention room on the second floor, over a row of store premises.

Rebuild Dominion Theatre.

On the heels of this statement came an announcement by the Canadian United Theatres, Limited, that the Dominion Theatre would be rebuilt, for which work upward of $250,000 would be spent. The theatre will be enlarged, alterations proposed being sufficient to add 1,000 seats, making the total seating capacity 2,400. The two balconies will be rebuilt and all posts will be removed through the adoption of the steel cantilever style of construction.

House Will Have Escalator.

When rebuilt, the Dominion will have a combination policy with only two shows a day. Keith and Orpheum vaudeville will be presented in addition to moving pictures. This is also the plan used for the Princess Theatre, Montreal, and the Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, both of which are operated by the Canadian United Theatres, Limited. D. J. Spence, of Montreal, a well known theatre designer, has been making a visit in Ottawa to draw up structural plans for the remodeled house. The Dominion will have an escalator to carry patrons to the first and second balconies, similar to the one in use at the Princess Theatre, Montreal.

The Russell Theatre, which is to be taken over by James T. Moxley on September 1, will not present pictures regularly, it is stated, but will provide accomodation for dramatic and musical road shows. Moxley has been the manager of Allen's Regent Theatre, Ottawa, a prominent film house, for a number of years.

Undeterred by Summer Weather, Universal Works Industriously on Large Program

THIRTEEN directors are actively engaged in production at Universal City this week, four others are busy cutting and titling and still another is making necessary preparations to start producing at an early date.

Tod Browning is filming the Henry G. Rowland story with Mary MacLaren in the leading role. David Butler, Spottiswoode Ait en, Fred Turner, Clarissa Selwyn and Eugenie Forde are seen in her support.

"Loot," Arthur Somers Roche's mystery story, which ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post, is being made into a six-reel photoplay by William C. Dowlan with Ora Carew and Darrell Foss in the principal parts.

Harry Carey and his entire company of more than sixty persons are on location at Big Bear Lake shooting the mountain exteriors for Carey's new photodrama, "The Eternal Savage," written by the star in collaboration with Jack Ford, his director, and for which Hal Hoadley prepared the scenario.

Start Work on "Winged Trail."

Production started last week on "The Winged Trail," the five-reel serial melodrama, which Jacques Jaccard is producing with Lieutenant L. Locklear, an aviator, as the star. Francelia Billington heads the supporting cast.

"The Desert Trail" is a two-reel western drama Edward Kull is producing with Pete Morrison and Magda Lane in the principal roles.

Final scenes are being taken by Director Paul Powell on "Common Property," a drama of nationalization of women in Russia, by Elliott J. Clawson, starring Robert Andersen, Colleen Moore and Nell Craig.

"The Trembling Hour," the mystery melodrama by Kenneth B. Clark, which George Seigmann is directing, is progressing speedily with Kenneth Harlan and Hellen Eddy as featured players.

"Sundown Trail" in Cutting Stage.

Having taken the final scenes for "Sundown Trail," starting Monroe Salisbury, Rollin Sturgeon is collaborating with the editorial department on its cutting and titling.

Florence Turner has completed "Oh, It's E. Z.," a one-reel comedy, both starring in and directing the fun-fest.

"Sea Goils" is the title of a beach comedy with bathing girls which Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are producing.

Monroe Salisbury's next story, based on "The Altar on Little Thunder," is being prepared by F. McGrew Willis under the supervision of Douglas Gerrard.

Norman Dawn is meeting with much success in the production of his dog drama, "The Eternal Triangle," a play of domestic life, in which only canine actors are used.

"The Jack of Hearts" is the title of a two-reel western drama Reeves Eason is producing with Josephine Hill and Jack Perrin in the leading roles.

Crew Work is Strenuous! Here's George Walsh in "The Winning Stroke."

This particular view shows a diplomatic stroke being scored by the smiling Fox star.

Weinstein to Visit Representatives.

Samuel Weinstein, of Menger, Ring and Weinstein, 306 West Forty-second street, New York, will start on a trip August 8, visiting his concern's agencies in the various cities for the purpose of instructing their salesmen in methods of measuring theatre lobbies and estimating the display facilities offered by the picture houses in the territory covered by the sales agencies of the company.

Mr. Weinstein will visit Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis and Cincinnati and expects to be absent about a month.

Menger, Ring and Weinstein are represented in Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha and Kansas City by the U. T. E.; in Pittsburgh by Hollis-Smith-Morton Co.; in St. Louis by Erker Brothers; in Cincinnati by Dwyer Brothers, and in Los Angeles by J. Slipper and Company.

UNIVERSAL MAKES A $100,000 OFFER

Letter to Authors' League Expresses Desire to Buy Four Stories for Filming at $25,000 Each

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND dollars is offered by Universal for four stories which can be put into screen form and which will be suitable for casting Dorothy Phillips in the leading role.

The Universal asks the assistance of the Authors' League of America and following is the essence of the offer as submitted to the League and to American authors generally:

"In our effort to supply the motion picture public with the best, cleanest and most wholesome productions that enterprise, talent and money can obtain, we ask your co-operation to the extent of setting before the Authors of America the following information.

"We are especially desirous of obtaining for Miss Dorothy Phillips, one of the Universal's most eminent stars, several suitable stories in which she can appear to advantage.

"Specifically we desire four stories, to be written by America's leading authors.

"These stories should be written with Miss Phillips' personality and past achievements in mind. They may be submitted in story or in scenario form. Universal, as a matter of fact, is even willing to consider stories that have already been published and which have enjoyed wide circulation. It should be borne in mind that we are especially desirous that the basic ideas shall be both new and big.

"This proposition is in no sense in the nature of a contest. Universal offers the sum of $100,000 cash to the author or authors who provide the four stories that meet with Universal's approval—at the rate of $25,000 each when accepted.

"Your asistance and co-operation through the Authors League is sought by Universal in its effort to set this information before the writers of the country."

Arbuckle Is Not a Part Owner of Lehrman Studio

HENRY LEHRMAN, producer of Lehrman Comedies, has just issued a positive denial of a statement recently published, which declared that Roscoe Arbuckle is half owner of the new Henry Lehrman Studios now being erected at Culver City, Cal.

"The new studios are entirely my own property," said Mr. Lehrman, "and I have no partners nor associates whatever in their ownership. When I contracted with the First National Exhibitors Circuit for the distribution of future Lehrman Comedies I determined to build a production home which would in every respect meet my ideas of what a modern studio should be, and the plant which I am now bringing to completion is the result.

"Mr. Arbuckle has leased space for the making of his pictures, but his position at the studios will be solely that of a tenant. I am moved to make this point clear in justice to both Mr. Arbuckle and myself."

Paramount-Post Nature Pictures Give Showmen Chance to Enlist Aid of Schools and Clubs

A FEATURE in connection with the booking of the Paramount-Post Nature Pictures, which will be released every two weeks beginning September 1, was emphasized this week in a statement by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which will distribute the pictures.

In booking these pictures, it was asserted, exhibitors will find that they can obtain the co-operation of schools, women's clubs and nature study organizations, for, while the pictures are produced primarily for entertainment, they have a distinct educational value which will enlist the support of organizations in nature study.

The Paramount-Post Nature Pictures, it is asserted, are different from ordinary scenic pictures. These one-reel productions, however, are interpretations of nature's various moods, and frequently, to express pictorially the various phases of one of these themes, it is necessary to photograph scenes in widely separated parts of the country.

To carry out the atmosphere of the pictures, many of the subtitles are excerpts from poems that interpret the theme in question. In "The Cloud," the titles are from Shelley's poem of the same name. Because of this fact, exhibitors who show these pictures, it is pointed out, will have an additional argument in going to literary clubs, and pointing out that they can get a clearer appreciation of the meaning of the poetry by seeing the poem interpreted in the terms of beautiful scenery.

Inquiries received by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and the Post Pictures Corporation, producers of the series, show that this interest on the part of clubs and educational organizations is extremely active.

Fleet Uses Cameragraph.

While the Pacific Fleet, on its way to the west coast, was wheeling into single column formation on the evening of July 19, civilians on board the New Mexico were startled to see the Mississippi bearing down on the starboard quarter of the flagship.

Admiral Rodman, standing on the quarter deck of his flagship, showed no trace of concern and, beyond giving a quiet order or two, gazed quietly at the threatening bow of the Mississippi.

"Probably the Mississippi wants to come aboard to see our moving picture show," he remarked as the Mississippi began to fall astern again.

The Mississippi, as well as the New Mexico, is carrying Power's Cameragraphs. Eleven out of the twelve dreadnoughts carried this projector, seventeen out of nineteen being Power's Camergraph.

Niles Says Famous Players' Educational Pictures Will Convert Many to Movies

A DIRECT benefit to exhibitors is one of the results expected by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation from the plans to produce educational subjects and distribute them to non-theatrical organizations such as schools, clubs, commercial bodies and social welfare centers. This opinion was expressed by David K. Niles, head of the non-theatrical pictures department of the corporation.

"Only one section of the motion picture's field has been developed thus far," declared Mr. Niles. 'The situation in the film industry as it stands now is the same as if all the publishers in the world united and declared they would publish nothing but love stories, adventure stories and joke books. Practically the only motion pictures that have been produced are photodramas or comedies.

Many Desire Educationals.

"Now there is an immense section of the American public that would like a little more solid food with their entertainment. These people—educators, ministers, social workers, club women—attend motion picture plays in theatres, but a number of people who have not yet realized the merit of pictures—in fact, condemn pictures out of hand—is astonishingly large. These people are a dead loss to the exhibitor; he cannot reach them with the pictures which he shows for entertainment.

"The educational picture will act as a missionary which will convert millions of such persons to the motion picture. Thus the non-theatrical distribution of pictures will bring new patrons to the regular exhibitor's theatre—and these patrons will be leaders in the community.

Clergymen Were Converted.

"The truth of the statement was strikingly illustrated at the recent centenary convention of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Columbus, Ohio. There were a large number of Methodist clergymen and church dignitaries, opposed to motion pictures, who confessed that they never had seen a picture. We showed them some, and right then and there those men became picture fans. When they returned to their homes they were new patrons for their film theaters; and because of the prominence of their position they will prevail upon others to become film fans.

"We are taking elaborate precautions to insure the regular exhibitor from competition by the non-theatrical picture shows. The pictures which we shall distribute to the non-theatrical field will be of a nature that will not bring them in competition with exhibitors. In addition we shall constantly stress the importance of co-operation between the non-theatrical exhibitors and our regular exhibitors, to the mutual benefit of both."

Sennett's Beauties in Fifth Week.

Mack Sennett's battery of bathing beauties, now in their fifth week at Moss' Broadway, where they are a feature of "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," in conjunction with Bothwell Browne, continue with a popularity that augers well for a protracted run. Lovers of out-door life find much of interst and charm in the appearance of these fresh-faced and slim-figured girls, whose vim and animation reflects their aquatic attainments and active athletic life.

Rowe Cleans Up on Film Shown by Twenty-six Rivals

OLIVER ROWE, proprietor of the St. Paul Blue Mouse Theatre, a first run house, was without a show for the last half of the week. He finally booked "The Auction Block" from Goldwyn.

He later learned that the picture had played in twenty-six houses in St. Paul, including several 10 cent theatres. Alarmed over the dismal outlook, he called the Goldwyn office.

The Goldwyn office advised him to play "The Auction Block" that day, and that another subject would be sent him for use during the following two days.

The substitute show was ready and waiting for Mr. Rowe the next day, but he did not call for the film.

On the third day, Manager Davis, of the Goldwyn exchange, got the telephone call that he had long been expecting from Mr. Rowe.

"Yes, this is Rowe talking," came the voice over the wire from St. Paul. "I am standing them out and I want to hold 'The Auction Block' over for Saturday and Sunday, my two best days.

Myron Selznick announces that he has engaged Robert Edeson to play in the second Eugene O'Brien production, "Sealed Hearts," which was written by Edmund Goulding.

Ince Company Is Making "The White Rook" With Dorothy Dalton and Henry Mortimer

TO obtain the proper scenery for a part of "The White Rook," the Thomas H. Ince production starring Dorothy Dalton, the company will go this week to Marblehead, Mass., where the rocky coast is said to be much like that part of the British coast where some of the action of the piece takes place.

In one of the scenes, Richard Neil, who plays the role of Lord Wiverly, is supposed to leap to his death from a high cliff overlooking the sea. Joseph DeGrasse, who is directing the picture under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, made a thorough survey of the Atlantic coast for just such a location as that specified in the script, but the rocky headlands near Marblehead were the only ones found suitable for the needs of the story.

"The White Rook" is a mystery play, and the mystery is not solved until the final reel. The picture is from the novel of J. B. Harris-Burland, and the scenario was written by R. Cecil Smith.

Miss Dalton is supported by Henry Mortimer, who plays the role of Major Heritage. Paul Caseneuve is seen as Ling Foo, the treacherous Chinese, and others are Richard Neil, Warren Cook, Thomas Cameron, Walter Barrett and Bigelow Cooper.

Midwest Salesmen Form Educational Association

FILM salesmen out of Omaha and Des Moines exchanges are organizing an association for educational and social purposes.

The salesmen were invited as guests of the Omaha Film Board of Trade at a meeting at the Henshaw Hotel, Omaha, Saturday, July 19. Nearly 100 exchange managers and salesmen from Omaha and Des Moines attended. Harry Graham, president of the O. F. B. T., presided, and a number of the managers made talks.

In their talks the exchange managers addressed the film salesmen, telling them the word between exchanges and exhibitors in the Omaha territory is to be "co-operation." The salesmen are to make no false promises, they said; they are to carefully explain the details of all contracts which they enter into with exhibitors; they are to suggest methods of exploitation, and they are to be fair and aboveboard in all their dealings with the showmen.

Following this meeting, the salesmen met by themselves and took the first steps toward their organization by electing Phil Monsky of the Fox exchanges as president. Another meeting was called for Saturday, August 2, at the Fox exchange, when other officers will be elected. The association will meet regularly, inviting in prominent advertising managers from Omaha and elsewhere to address them on the art of salesmanship. They will also utilize their association for occasional social times, when their wives and sweethearts will be invited.

Omaha Mother's Club Fights Daylight Saving on Ground that It Injures Children's Health

A NEW angle of approach has been taken by the Mothers' Club of Omaha on the fight for the repeal of the daylight saving bill. Undaunted by the veto of President Wilson, the mothers have taken up the battle on behalf of the health of their children. The note struck in their petition is an entirely new one, and the protest, according to the Omaha World Herald, promises to become national in scope.

The foreword of the petition, which argues that the law works a hardship on people in general and on children in particular, reads as follows:

By careful investigation we have found that the children's physical health and nervous system have been seriously affected by the curtailment of their hours of sleep. For while the mothers may be able to force their children to bed earlier, we cannot force them to sleep.

And we notice a decided increase in nervousness and irritability and loss of weight which we can ascribe to no other cause. We also find that many of the teachers in our public and private schools have noticed a decrease in energy and application on the part of the students during the period of operation of this law. And as for ourselves, this added strain on the already overburdened mothers we deem unnecessary.

Doctors Agree with Mothers.

Fifty petitions are being circulated by welfare workers and members of the Mother's Club. Many doctors, including Dr. H. M. McClanahan, recognized child specialist, are among the signers.

Although the campaign is a local one, exhibitors have a number of possibilities by way of co-operation with the various Mother's Clubs and similar organizations in their cities. Copies of the Omaha petition will be sent to any one interested by Mrs. H. J. Holmes, 5102 Capitol avenue, who is heading the drive.

New Capitol Theatre Books "The Girl from Outside"

A GOLDWYN picture, Rex Beach's "The Girl from Outside," first in the series scheduled for release during the period beginning September 1, has been booked by vice president and managing director E. J. Bowes, of the Capitol Theatre, Fifty-first street and Broadway, New York. This house is conceded to be the largest theatre in the country.

The date of the opening of the theatre has not been decided upon, but it will be sometime early in the autumn. This film will be one of the first to be shown. Included in the cast are Clara Horton, in the title role, Wilton Taylor, Cullen Landis and others.

Miss Binney Aids War Relief Body.

Constance Binney, who will star for Realart Pictures, spent all of her spare time last week in the interest of the Stage Women's War Relief. This organization is presenting a series of twelve photodramatic productions in which appear the foremost stage celebrities of the present day.

The play in which Miss Binney starred was known as "Tom's Little Star." It was written by Mrs. Otis Skinner and associated with Miss Binney in the cast were Blanche Bates, William Jefferson, Wheeler Dryden, Henry Hull, Lucia Moore and John W. Cope.

After Year in Service, Hahn Is Back at Rothacker Plant

J. G. HAHN, assistant secretary of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company and Mr. Rothacker's principal assistant in charge of the factory and production work at the Chicago plant, is now back in harness again after a year in the army.

Mr. Hahn first came associated with Mr. Rothacker at the Chicago office of the Billboard, several years ago. Later on Mr. Hahn went to the Pacific Coast and established the San Francisco office of the Billboard.

In the summer of 1911, Mr. Hahn resigned from the Billboard and became identified with Universal. After a thorough schooling at Universal City, Mr. Hahn again joined his old chief who had, in the meantime, formed the Industrial Moving Picture Company. When the Rothacker Company succeeded the Industrial Moving Picture Company, Mr. Hahn became assistant secretary of the new organization. From that time on, Hahn's responsibilities grew as the organization grew and today he is one of Mr. Rothacker's most valued aids.

Atlanta Managers' Body Give Luncheon to Simpson

TO celebrate his return to Atlanta the Film Managers' Association of that city gave a luncheon in honor of Ben F. Simpson, field manager of Realart, on Saturday, July 19. Four years ago, Mr. Simpson represented George Kleine in the Southern metropolis and during his term of office there he made many friends among exhibitors. That he is not forgotten is shown by the royal reception given him.

Mr. Simpson reports that exhibitors in Atlanta have shown keen interest in Realart Pictures.

In his report, Mr. Simpson also stated that ground was broken on Wednesday, July 16, for a $500,000 picture house in Atlanta. It will seat 2,500 and the opening is planned for February 10, 1920. The new theatre will be centrally located at the junction of three prominent thoroughfares, Peachtree, Forsyth and Pryor streets. Ralph De Bruler is in charge.

Mr. Simpson has been touring the East, establishing exchanges and acquainting exhibitors with Realart's forthcoming productions and plans. After engaging a manager for Atlanta and securing offices there, he will return to the executive quarters in New York.

Beach Leaves for Coast to Supervise Production

REX BEACH left New York, July 2 to make the transcontinental trip to the Goldwyn studios at Culver City, Cal., where he will assist with the next Rex Beach picture from his novel, "The Silver Horde," and will co-operate as president of Eminent Authors' Pictures with Gertrude Atherton and Rupert Hughes, who are already on the ground co-operating in the production of "Perch of the Devil" and "The Cup of Fury."

President Beach says that Rupert Hughes took his scenario for "The Cup of Fury" with him, and that he is doing the same in the case of "The Silver Horde." The continuity of Mrs. Atherton's novel was done at the studio and, accordingly, the author went out to supervise the completed manuscript.

Both Rex Beach and Mrs. Atherton have two remarkable women in each of their novels. Under the star system it might be difficult to do justice to the other women, but the authors mean to see justice done. Betty Blythe is the only actress yet selected, and she will play in "The Silver Horde" as well as other Rex Beach Pictures.

Clara K. Young and Her Company Arrive in San Francisco for Fine Arts Film

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG and sixty-two others, who are associated with her in the production of "Eyes of Youth," the forthcoming Fine Arts photoplay feature, which is to be the initial release of the Equity Pictures Corporation, arrived in San Francisco on July 28, for the purpose of making a number of big scenes, which will be used in the picture. Miss Young is working at the Harry Garson studios in Los Angeles, but the trip by special train to San Francisco was made in order that certain special locations which are considered invaluable for the production might be used.

Will Produce Ten a Year.

The Equity will have ten pictures each year—four by Miss Young, four by another internationally known star, whose name has not yet been announced, and two special productions. Herbert Somborn, president of Equity Pictures, and Joseph I. Schnitzer, treasurer of the company, will leave New York soon on an extended trip. They will visit the territorial distributing centers in which their company will operate. Upon their return, detailed account of the arrangements which have been made will be given.

"Eyes" of Youth" Is Stage Success.

The Equity people count themselves fortunate in having for their first picture "Eyes of Youth," which Miss Young is now making. Miss Young purchased the rights to this stage success some months ago, before the formation of the Equity company, paying a price which, at that time, established a record for screen stories. The original company is still on tour, playing the important cities; a company headed by Gertrude Elliott has been playing the bill in London for months, and stock companies in important cities throughout the United States are doing business despite the opposition of the "original" company.

The producers claim that the role Miss Young will play fits her like the proverbial glove. The support she has enlisted includes Pauline Stark, Vincent Serrano, Milton Sills, and others.

Mayer Buys Many Popular Books as Film Material

IN the efforts by producers to tie up available stories, whether in magazine or book form, and even to tie up the authors themselves, Louis B. Mayer has done considerable tying up himself, with the result that he has acquired a batch of much talked of magazine stories and best selling books. Some of these will be used as vehicles for Anita Stewart, one of Mr. Mayer's stars, and the others will serve to star Mildred Harris Chaplin, who recently signed a long term contract to produce pictures under Mayer's management.

While no information was given out as to how much Mr. Mayer paid for each story and book, it was stated at the Mayer offices in New York that a considerable sum was paid for the following: "The Yellow Typhoon," by Harold Magrath; "The Fighting Shepherdess," by Caroline Lockhart; "Old Dad," by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott; "The Judgment of Men," by Mabel Keightly and Leigh Gordon Giltner; "The Lady From Longacre," by Victor Bridges; "The Bitter Cut," by Edith Sessions Tupper; "Foolish Youth," by Louise Winter; "Danger," by H. H. Van Loan; and "Watch Your Life," by E. Mason Hooper.

The names of several other stories which have been purchased will be announced later. Mr. Mayer is now angling for one of the biggest stories of the past decade.

Rippard Is Made Head of Realart's District Office

WILLIAM H. RIPPARD, well known in theatrical newspaper and photoplay circles as a result of his sixteen years' experience in these varied fields, has been appointed manager of the Washington branch of Realart Pictures Corporation. The selection of Mr. Rippard follows the recent visit to the Capital of Ben F. Simpson, Realart's field manager, who is touring the East establishing exchanges for his organization.

William H. Rippard.
Manager Realart office, Washington, D. C.

For five years, Mr. Rippard was connected with the theatre in several representative legitimate and vaudeville ventures. Following his long association with theatrical propositions, he turned his attention to newspaper work.

It was in 1912 that Mr. Rippard was initiated into the photoplay world, coming to New York and joining Universal when that corporation was organized and becoming assistant manager of the old Fourteenth street branch. He resigned from that company after about a year's service and was for a time connected with the old Eclair Company at Fort Lee, N. J. He then became manager of two Baltimore picture theatres, the Red Mill and the Fremont.

Following his experience as an exhibitor, Mr. Rippard joined forces with Mutual and he remained with that one organization for five years.

As a result of the fire and the day and night work keeping things moving, Mr. Rippard's health gave way and his resignation from Mutual followed. After a complete rest, he handled states rights productions for Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia until joining the business staff of Realart.

Jewish Daily Advertises "Sunnyside."

A distinct novelty in co-operative exploitation was accomplished recently when the Jewish Daily Forward, Chicago newspaper, discovered during the run of "Sunnyside," Charlie Chaplin's third million dollar comedy released by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, that Chaplin had selected the Forward as a Yiddish newspaper to appear in one of his scenes.

The Forward immediately made reproductions of that scene which they printed on small cards. On the other side of the cards the Forward printed the information that:

"In Reel Life as in Real Life, the Forward, a Jewish newspaper takes part in Charlie Chaplin's latest hit, "Sunnyside," of course it's the Jewish Daily Forward."

This co-operation from the newspaper publisher aroused considerable interest in the West Side section, was an ad for the newspaper and a medium that caused hundreds of Jews to suddenly take an interest in "Sunnyside."

Elsie Janis Collaborates on Script.

Elsie Janis has collaborated actively with Francis Marion and Edmund Goulding in the preparation of the script for her coming Selznick Picture, "Everybody's Sweetheart."

Miss Janis' fund of humor and her ability to "put it over" have made her one of the leading lights in the theatrical world, and she is bringing this gift actively into play, not only in the production of "Everybody's Sweetheart," but also in the preparation of the script itself. This star's knowledge of real comedy and heart interest, combined with her deep study of the possibilities of the films, already have made her an adept scenarist, and is proving valuable in preparing the script for the picture.

Robert Ellis Loaned to Tucker.

By courtesy of Myron Selznick the services of Robert Ellis, Selzinck leading man, are to be loaned to George Loane Tucker, who is making a production on the Coast. Robert Ellis is under contract with Selznick. He will have the leading role in the Tucker production and has left for California to be gone five or six weeks.

Temporary Quarters for Realart.

Owing to the difficulty of getting suitable quarters for the Pittsburgh exchange of Realart Pictures Corporation, Nat Barach, branch manager, has been temporarily located at 412 Ferry street. He will remain at the Ferry street address until the middle of August, when he will move into permanent offices at 1018-1020 Forbes street.

W. H. O'BRIEN NOW WITH ROTHACKER

President of Rothacker Company Explains How "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain" Was Produced

THE following account of the part taken by Willis H. O'Brien in the making of the one-reel novelty, "The Ghost of Slumber Mountain," was written by W. R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Manufacturing Company:

"For some time Willis H. O'Brien, the man who produced the novelty effects in 'The Ghost of Slumber Mountain,' has been in our employ, and is now engaged in producing a number of novelty pictures which we know to be very effective and attractive and far superior to anything Mr. O'Brien has previously done.

"It was at that time in San Francisco, in 1914, that I first heard of Mr. O'Brien's work. He was working on a roof making his first plastic pictures, the result being a picture seventy-five feet in length, featuring a brontosamus and a cave man.

"In the latter part of 1915 Mr. O'Brien made a reel of prehistoric animals, entitled 'The Dinasaurus' and 'The Missing Link,' and then made two novelty pictures, entitled 'Morphorus Mike' and the 'Birth of a Flivver' respectively.

With Edison in 1916.

"In 1916 Mr. O'Brien went to New York City to make pictures for Edison's Conquest Program. For this purpose the Manikin Films, Inc., was formed, of which organization Mr. O'Brien was president. At that time he used the three manikins he had made in 1915. These were made by the same general process he now utilizes, although at that time Mr. O'Brien had not consulted any authority as to the anatomy of prehistoric animals and built his manikins according to popular conception of the appearance of prehistoric animals.

"When the Conquest Program was discontinued Mr. O'Brien was asked to edit a weekly in which the educational feature was to be a series of prehistoric animals. In order to make these scientifically correct Mr. O'Brien went to the American Museum of Natural History and consulted with Dr. Brown of the museum. Much of the animal action appearing in 'The Ghost of Slumber Mountain' was at the suggestion of Dr. Brown.

Dr. Brown Helped Mr. O'Brien.

"While with the Edison company Mr. O'Brien made 'Curious Pets of Our Ancestors,' 'Rural Delivery 2,000,000 B. C.,' 'In the Villain's Power,' 'Mickey and His Goat,' 'Sam Lloyd Puzzle Picture' and 'Nippy's Nightmare.' In the last production human characters were used with the manikins, and it was this picture that convinced Mr. O'Brien that his previous pictures were lacking in human interest.

"When the Edison company sold out to Lincoln & Parker the plan to make educational pictures a chapter of the weekly was abandoned. It was about at that time that Mr. O'Brien met Herbert Dawley, who had been working along some special experimental lines and had, as a result, a small book in which he had pasted a large number of exposures of the plastic dinasaur. Mr. O'Brien entered into some arrangement with Mr. Dawley, and 'The Ghost of Slumber Mountain' was started.

"The work on this was all done by Mr. O'Brien. His manikins were used, and the entire production was made by him without any scenario, the only material being a sheet of titles. 'The Ghost of Slumber Mountain' was originally about 3,000 feet in length and was cut to present proportions for obvious reasons.

"When this picture was presented at the Strand Mr. O'Brien was given full credit for its production, but since then an attempt has been made to create the impression that the work was not done by him, which, of course, is contrary to the facts in the case.

Several Novelties Finished.

"We have already finished with Mr. O'Brien three or four novelty subjects far superior to anything he has ever produced, and are constantly improving his unique process, which we control.

"I will soon have occasion to make a definite announcement through the trade journals covering our plans for release and giving description of Mr. O'Brien's new productions, which really are extraordinary. As a matter of fact I think they are the greatest novelties I have ever seen on any screen."

World Gets Many Inquiries On "Bear Cat" Picture

THE announcement made last week in the Moving Picture World that the World Film Corporation had secured the distribution rights to "When Bear Cat Went Dry," has resulted in so many telegraphic inquiries concerning the release date and other matters incidental thereto that similar records held by other features distributed by the World company have been broken.

The advertising department of World Pictures is busy devising new ideas for exploiting this feature, and the exhibitor will be furnished with a number of business teasers that should help to make this feature a box office winner of the first magnitude. The twenty-four sheet stands are of the kind that one can read blocks away and feature the name of the picture and have the least possible amount of reading matter, so that the title is given every chance to be prominent.

Suggestions for stage settings will be illustrated in the plan book so that it will be an easy matter for the exhibitor to get an idea that will be inexpensive and yet at the same time effective.

The main idea back of the promotion of "When Bear Cat Went Dry" will be how to help the exhibitor get the maximum returns on this booking with the minimum of expense.

G. C. Duffy Joins Goldwyn.

Gerald C. Duffy, former editor of Picture Play Magazine, and a scenario writer with many successes to his credit, has joined the Goldwyn editorial staff of scenario writers and is now located at the Culver City studios, his initial work being the continuity for the new Mabel Normand production.

G. R. Meeker Gives Some Theatre Advertising Pointers

NOTWITHSTANDING the efforts put forth by distributors to provide ideas to help the exhibitors cash in on his bookings, there seems to be a lack of something in these same plan books that make them adaptable for general consumption," says George R. Meeker, general sales manager of World Pictures, and for many years an exhibitor with a chain of theatres under his management.

The greatest fault of these books of instruction I find, is that they are localized to one particular city. That city is usually New York. And what is an easy 'stunt' for Buffalo cannot be used in Akron, Ohio. But each release has in itself a score or more of original money getting schemes that are good for any town.

"Just to illustrate, let us take a recent World picture, 'Bringing Up Betty,' in which Evelyn Greeley is the star. Here is what I would do to advertise the feature if I were located in Boston, or Carbondale, Pennsylvania, or Grand Island, Nebraska.

Use the Newspaper.

"Arrange with some local newspaper, evening preferable, to run each day—providing you change your program daily,—a short synopsis of the picture in story form of about five hundred words. This can be illustrated with a matrix that is provided free by all companies. You should find it an easy matter to get a newspaper to make a feature of running these short stories of current releases because they all buy short story fiction and pay real money for it. You can give them as good if not better material free of cost. These short stories of pictures are provided by the distributors in their press sheets, and plan books.

"Movie Windows" Are Good.

"Enlist the interest of a department store in your town in getting up a 'movie window' in connection with his dress goods department. Use the stills that you buy for lobby or windows display to help the window dresser drape a piece of goods, to show the latest fashions for fall or winter dresses as shown by Evelyn Greeley in 'Bringing Up Betty.' You can make this a regular stunt with this store and it is also an easy matter to work this with a milliner. When you get a picture that has an unusual though simple scheme of room decoration, go to the same department store and have them make a display of furniture that is the counterpart of the room shown in the picture.

"The specialty shop, or in other words, the store that confines its business to one particular line of merchandise in contrast with the department store that handles everything, will be found a fruitful source of aid by the local manager. Men are as interested in style as women.

It is a very hard matter for the haberdasher to change his window dressing. He is as anxious to utilize a new idea as you are to get into. Make use of your still pictures to show him the kind of collars, neckties, hats, etc., used by the star or leading man. A little card in the window calling attention to the fact that these styles are shown in the picture that will be screened is a good advertisement and will bring results.

"Woman's Page" Is Useful.

Every newspaper conducts a woman's page and the editor of this section of a newspaper is at time driven almost to desperation to secure 'good copy.' You can be a life saver in supplying the editor with hints of fashions gleaned from these still pictures.

If you will only bear in mind that moving pictures have been the greatest educational medium for advancement and that they carry to the smallest communities matters of interest that heretofore could only be secured through travel, you can readily understand how easy it is to cash in with pictures. What is worth while is worth working for. The exhibitor who is contented to sit in his office with an electric fan playing on his and praying that the public will come into his theatre without any exertion on his part to get them there, is not the exhibitor who is classed as a successful one. The secret of successful publicity is not difficult to unravel.

Every Picture Has an Angle.

Every picture has an angle that can be easily applied to local means of exploitation. I distinctly remember a very successful stunt that I did to get the young people to come to my theatre. For every typographical error they found in a title I gave the 'successful proof reader' an order for a pair of seats. I did this at stated intervals. The superintendent of public schools in this town wrote me a letter thanking me for this, stating that it had an effect on the minds of the young people in sharpening their powers of observation. This was far more efficacious than anything that could be done in a schoolroom.

"Out of this idea grew many, many more which I used to advantage. When I took this particular theatre it had never made a dollar and in a short while I had it on a paying basis. Lobby displays are all right, but you have to get them to the theatre first before they can see your lobby. Make your theatre the institution.

Exploit Your Theatre.

"Don't exploit your star at the expense of the theatre. John Wanamaker sells hoisery, but hosiery is not featured in John Wanamaker's ads over the name of the store. Make it your business to pull off an exploitation scheme at least once a week. It will be only a question of time when every night will be capacity night. Make everybody in the town work for you, but put this work up to them in such a way that they are getting something out of it. Make it a 'you scratch my back and I will scratch yours' policy, and there is no way in the world that they can stop from cashing in."

Charles Hutchison Refused to Have Double Take Dangerous Parts in "Great Gamble"

PATHE will issue its twenty-ninth serial on Sunday, August 3, the release date of "The Great Gamble," the Western Photoplays serial featuring Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison, the screen's greatest stunt man. Although this release comes in the dog days of August, Pathe reports exceptional bookings on the serial and a great many theatres will play it that have never before booked serials.

The popularity of the film is undoubtedly due to its being an excellent "stunt" serial. Charles Hutchison, one of the featured principals, is a screen actor who absolutely does not know the meaning of the word fear. When Director Golden was planning this serial he laid out a score or more of stunts that would endanger the life of the star and he informed Mr. Hutchison that it would not be necessary for him to do them, as he would engage a double.

To Make Aerial "Beauties."
Lt. Ormer Locklear and Jacques Jaccard, star and director of Universal's "The Winged Trail," which will be filmed among the stars and clouds.

Hutchison "Hit the Ceiling."

Hutchison, to revert to a slang phrase, "hit the ceiling" at being told this and informed Director Golden that if a double was engaged he absolutely would not play the role assigned to him. He informed Mr. Golden that he had never consented to the use of a double in any of his pictures in the past, and he was not going to start fooling the picture public now. He went ahead and not only did the stunts, but actually planned and carried out many more feats than the director had counted on. Here are some of the things that this man actually does:

Placing his feet against one wall and his back against another of a four-foot gap between two buildings, he works himself to the roof of a seven-story apartment; jumps from a roof eighty feet high across a 14-foot alley to another roof twelve feet lower; swings on rope around corner of building and into open window 40 feet from the ground; dives into river from top of 125-foot grain elevator; rides horse across fallen tree lying across deep chasm; jumps to cowcatcher of fast moving locomotive as it crosses bridge.

Makes Tour of Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma and Portland Where He Dines, Talks and Parades

DURING his visit to Seattle, Frank Keenan was the guest of Mayor Ole Hanson, the man whose determined stand against Bolshevism in the United States won him nation-wide fame.

In Keenan's production, "The World Aflame," which Pathe is releasing, Seattle's historic strike finds a close parallel in the tremendous situation in which the film-world mayor personally settles a great strike by running a car throughout the route, and finally deporting the alien distributors. But, in the screen story, the mayor goes further and establishes a profit-sharing plan which would give labor a property interest.

Mayor Hanson has offered to do everything possible to further its exploitation. He has agreed to appear in Seattle and Tacoma and make a speech during the runs of the film in those cities.

Arrives in Spokane.

Mr. Keenan arrived in Spokane on July 15, where he was met at the station by ex-Mayor Flemming and a large delegation of business men. He was conducted to the Davenport Hotel, where he was received by Mr. Davenport and escorted to the presidential suite. He then went to the Chamber of Commerce Building, where a special luncheon had been prepared for him and at which time he gave a talk on labor and capital. In the afternoon he went to the Clemmer Theatre, where he appeared in conjunction with one of his recent releases, "The Gates of Brass."

That evening he left Spokane for Seattle, arriving at noon the next day. Two hundred exhibitors and exchange men, together with Mayor Ole Hanson, were at the station to greet him.

At 8.30 p. m. he took part in a ship's launching at the Duthie Shipbuilding Company's yards.

J. F. Duthie, president of Duthie Shipbuilding Company, presented Mr. Keenan with a pair of platinum cuff links studded with diamonds and emeralds.

Thursday noon Keenan addressed over a thousand people, including the Northwest Film Board of Trade, Mayor Hanson, Senator Piles and other notables of city and state at a luncheon given in the Masonic Temple.

Takes Part in Screen Ball.

Friday evening, Mr. Keenan participated in the grand march at the big screen ball, one of the high lights in the first annual convention of the Northwest Film Board of Trade. There were more than 12,000 persons present,

The next morning found Mr. Keenan none the worse for the night before, and ready to lead a big auto parade with the mayor, in which more than fifteen hundred automobile trucks took part. His afternoon was given over to the newspapers, photographers and motion picture men, who up to this time could not get near him.

Sunday afternoon, Mr. Keenan made five appearances at the Colonial Theatre, one of Seattle's prettiest picture houses.

In Portland on Wednesday and Thursday, Mr. Keenan appeared at the two leading theatres, the Liberty and the Columbia.

On Friday, July 25, Mr. Keenan and F. C. Quimby returned to Seattle and left in the evening on the S. S. Governor for San Francisco.

Vitagraph's "Daring Hearts" Booked by Loew Circuit

MARCUS LOEW has booked "Daring Hearts," the Francis X. Bushman-Beverly Bayne feature soon to be released by Vitagraph, for the entire chain of theatres he controls in New York and its environs. This means that "Daring Hearts" will be shown at the New York, American, Murray Hill, Eighty-sixth Street, One Hundred and Sixteenth Street, Avenue B, Delancey, Circle, Seventh Avenue, Burland, Victoria, Greeley Square, Boulevard, Orpheum, Lincoln Square and Nation Theatres in Manhattan and the Bronx; the Metropolitan, Warwick, Bijou, Broadway, Teller-Shubert, Palace, Royal, De Kalb and Fulton theatres in Brooklyn, as well as several theatres in adjoining towns. This, of course, is in addition to the theatres which have booked this super-feature and which are not controlled by Mr. Loew.

The Two Mayors—Frank and Ole.
Frank Keenan, a mayor in "The World Aflame," seen with Ole Hanson, the fighting executive of Seattle.

Not only has Mr. Loew secured "Daring Hearts" for his many theatres, but he has insisted that his bookings begin the same day that the feature is released to the general public.

Two of the first bookings for "Daring Hearts" to reach Vitagraph from distant points came from the Queens Theatre in San Antonio, Texas, and the Palace Theatre, Los Angeles.

"Daring Hearts" is not a war play, although the World's War is the foundation and background of the story. It is of the war and not in it. The armistice necessitated a further change in the story and a different ending—a happy one, of course.

Great Newspaper Praise for Katherine MacDonald

KATHERINE MacDONALD, who is to star in feature productions for the Attractions Distributing Corporation, has been the recipient of an unusually large amount of praise from the dramatic writers of the daily press.

The New York Evening Mail says: "When I saw Miss MacDonald in 'The Squaw Man' I said there is a photoplayer to be heard from. I am chagrined that I did not predict a remarkable success for her, as that is what she is achieving. Hers is a rare type of beauty, classical without being cold, and she possesses emotional talent of a caliber found in the work of few women of the film world."

The Tribune says: "Miss MacDonald is a flawless beauty," while the Sun says she must be credited with a triumph. The Los Angeles Herald says: "Miss MacDonald's artistry, combined with her youth, personality and beauty, should carry her far to the cinematic heights her hard work deserves. Her remarkable portrayal will be long remembered."

The Buffalo Enquirer says: "Miss MacDonald is not only beautiful, but accomplished in the histrionic art and gifted with a splendid sense of proportion." The New York Telegram says she has all the elements of stardom, while the Los Angeles Record says: "She has a beautiful face, a cinema presence rare and much to be desired and with judgment sufficient to portray with fine feelings the emotions."

The Kalamazoo Gazette says she is exquisite and gives a wonderfully stirring performance, and the Kansas City Journal says: "Miss MacDonald has youth, beauty and talent and is indutibadly one of the coming screen stars.

Trade View of Kerrigan Film Is Largely Attended

THE W. W. Hodkinson announcement that "A White Man's Chance," J. Warren Kerrigan's first Robert Brunton production is unquestionably the most powerful picture in the career of this star brought scores of the nation's prominent showmen to trade showings held the fore part of the week in Hodkinson exchange cities throughout the country.

As a result many of these big exhibitors are now engrossed arranging play dates on the Kerrigan-Brunton special.

"A White Man's Chance" is by Johnston McCulley and it first was published in Munsey's Magazine gaining international circulation. It was directed by Ernest C. Warde. Mr. Kerrigan has as his leading woman Lillian Walker, long a star in her own right.

Under the new order of things and drawing upon a supply of popular novels by recognized authors, the new Kerrigan productions are sold singly by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, exclusive world distributors.

CELLULOID SLIDE IS PUT ON MARKET

New Invention Eliminates Danger of Breakage When Shipped and Stands Heat Better Than Glass

A NEW and improved lantern slide which is expected by its makers to revolutionize this branch of the motion picture industry has been placed upon the market. The new slide is known as the Fine Art Slide. It is made by the International Lantern Slide Corporation, 229 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, a concern licensed under the patent held by Robert John, from whose laboratory have come a number of innovations in the photographic and printing arts.

The Fine Art Slide is not made of glass, but is printed on celluloid by a new photo-mechanical process which ensures all the best qualities of a photograph with all the evenness and perfection of a printing press copy. Fox Film Corporation is the first company to purchase the new slide in large quantities and has already ordered Fine Art slides for all its announced features.

Advantages of Slide.

The advantages of the slide are: The danger of breakage is entirely eliminated as the slides are printed on celluloid instead of on glass; they can be shipped more easily than the old style slides, as a two-cent stamp will carry them anywhere in the United States by first-class mail; hand coloring is not necessary to produce a colored slide; it may be tinted in any color or shade desired or in any combination of two colors. Including black and white, some thirty-four attractive color combinations have been worked out, while the possibilities of new combinations are infinite.

The Fine Art Slides are trimmed to lantern slide size and are furnished in an envelope containing complete instructions for projection. These instructions are simplicity itself. The slide may be placed in the lantern as it comes, or it may be fastened between two pieces of cover glass, the tops and bottoms of which are fastened together with the adhesive tape which is furnished with each slide.

Stands Heat for 10 Minutes.

Although Fine Art slides are made of celluloid, their composition is such that they stand up under the heat from the lamp house almost twice as well as do ordinary lantern slides. At 65 amperes these slides may be projected on the screen for two minutes or more, while they will stand up for more than a minute at 100 amperes. At 30 amperes, which is the average amperage used in motion picture projection, these slides will stand heat for ten or fifteen minutes.

The photographic beauty of slides is not the least of their advantages. The "hardness" of the old-time slide is done away with and the color combinations are many and beautiful.

The white spaces on the new slides are absolutely clear and as clean as glass, while the shadows, instead of being opaque as in the old-fashioned slides, are semi-translucent. As a result, much less light may be used in projection without lessening the attractiveness or brilliancy of the image on the screen.

The International Lantern Slide Corporation has arranged for an exclusive license under Mr. John's patents, and has equipped a large loft with the automatic machinery necessary to make these slides. The company now has a capacity of 200,000 slides a week.

Saengers Erect Shaft to Memory of Showman-Sailor

IN the cemetery of Klondike, Texas, stands now a granite shaft dedicated by the Saenger Amusement Company recently to the memory of D. L. Cornelius, young showman-sailor who died of influenza last October.

It Tells Its Own Fine Story.
The Saenger tribute to D. L. Cornelius at Klondike, Texas.

Mr. Cornelius was for a number of years connected with the Saenger interests as a showman, but gave up work under the Saenger banner for service under the flag of the U. S. N. He was attached to the naval intelligence bureau.

Many people from Shreveport, Dallas, and New Orleans were present at the dedication of the monument. Delegations from the Shriners and the Elks, of which he was a member, attended.

Bernard Randall Engaged as Heavy.

Bernard Randall, one of the best known heavies on the screen, has been engaged by Harry Grossman to support Lillian Walker in her forthcoming Grossman serial, "One Million Dollars Reward," for the Pathe program.

His screen successes have included "Within the Law," Vitagraph; "The Auction Block," "Come On In" and "Oh, You Women!" John Emerson Anita Loos Productions; "Love Wine" and "Together," with Violet Mersereau; "Song of the Soul," with Alice Joyce; "Blue-eyed Mary," with June Caprice; "The Clarion Call," an O. Henry Picture, and "Life's Greatest Problem," Blackton.

"One Million Dollars Reward" will be his first serial.

Mary Miles Minter Begins Work on Her First Realart

ALTHOUGH Mary Miles Minter has been active at her New York Studios since July 14, preparing for her Realart debut in "Anne of Green Gables," actual work on the production did not begin until Monday, July 28. The two weeks intervening were spent in selecting a cast of supporting players.

In starting production July 28 on Miss Minter's first Realart picture, her director, William Desmond Tayler, introduced an unsual innovation in photoplay technique. For the first three days not a scene was recorded by the camera. The reason for this was that Mr. Tayler broke away from the conventional method of direction by devoting all this time to rehearsing the star and members of the cast. He believes that in this way the actors will gain a much more thorough understanding of their roles than would be possible under the accepted system of production, and will consequently be able to play the parts so much better.

Miss Minter and her company are slated to leave for Dedham, Massachusetts, on Thursday, July 31. In this quaint, old New England town, where the exteriors will be filmed the "location scout" of Miss Minter's producing unit found a house that might have been patterned after the one described in the "Anne" stories.

Ellen Terry Featured on the Screen.

There comes from Triangle one of the most interesting bits of news of the week in the announcement that Ellen Terry has at last succumbed to the lure of the silver-sheet sufficiently to make one picture. The production in which Miss Terry makes her bow to the movie public is entitled "Her Greatest Performance," and is scheduled for release on August 24. The story was written especially for Miss Terry.

Ellen Terry is too well known as the greatest living emotional English actress to require an introduction to the American public, which already knows and loves her.

In this production Miss Terry's role is that of a mother whose son has been unjustly accused of murder.

Buys Rights to "Dad's Girl."

World Pictures announces that it has purchased the moving picture rights to "Dad's Girl" from the play of that title by E. H. Schwartz, and that the screen adaptation will be made by J. Clarkson Miller. "Dad's Girl" has for many years been a favorite bill for stock and repertoire companies and has had over 10,000 public performances. This in itself should give unusual interest to the screen production. It will be put into work at the World Studio at Fort Lee within the next ten days.

Robertson-Cole Records Big Business on Films Selected for Showing During Summer Period

ROBERTSON-COLE has been convinced by the volume of business recorded on its product during the past few weeks, that only the proper type of photoplays are needed to offset the costly summer time lull in the motion picture industry. In the spring Robertson-Cole laid out a schedule of releases through Exhibitors' Mutual, which was expected to bring much more than the average summer returns. The judgment of the concern has been thoroughly vindicated, for the receipts thus far this summer, while admittedly not up to the mark set in the late winter and spring, are much larger than hoped for, and give a fair indication of what might be expected by Robertson-Cole in the coming fall drive.

"Better Times" Lead Summer List.

Careful selection was made of every production offered for summer distribution. Pictures of the lighter nature, with plenty of beautiful outdoor scenery were listed. The real heavy type of drama was shunned, and the kind of picture that would appeal to any audience on the sweltering days such as here now were posted for issue.

"Better Times," a sunshine picture, relating the joys of life, led off the summer campaign. This offering, a companion attraction to "The Turn in the Road," has proved a big money maker for hundreds of exhibitors who booked it on the strength of the success they attained with "The Turn in the Road."

"A Man's Country" Next.

Then followed Sessue Hayakawa in "The Man Beneath," a mystery story which has its locale largely in the great outdoors. This attraction has been proclaimed one of Hayakawa's supreme achievements.

"A Man's Country," starring Alma Rubens, a melodrama dealing with the West of '49, was next in line and in all her long career, Miss Rubens has never appeared in a more advantageous vehicle. Exhibitors are finding it the valuable medium Robertson-Cole expected, and "A Man's Country" readily should gain a position in the list of Robertson-Cole triumphs.

"Man's Desire" a Snow Picture.

Lewis Stone in "Man's Desire," a big snow picture dealing with the lumber camps of the Northwest, has been found an ideal summer offering, and it is being booked with alacrity.

Bessie Barriscale's "The Woman Michael Married" is one of the most beautiful offerings she has ever turned out, and with its surf and swimming pool scenes makes just the kind of attraction needed for summer showing.

"A Sage Brush Hamlet," William Desmond's latest work, is another Western, with most of the action laid under the blue skies and in God's own country. It, too, was selected for summer issuance because of its peculiar appeal to the period.

All the other pictures which are carded for release between now and fall are of similar type, including H. B. Warner in his second Superior Picture, "The Pagan God," and Sessue Hayakawa in "The Gray Horizon." The latter, it is predicted, will be hailed as the supreme artistic achievement of Hayakawa's career.

Famous Players Plans Newspaper Exploitation Campaign on Artcraft Special "The Dark Star"

AN EXTENSIVE campaign of exploitation, involving the use of scores of the leading newspapers in the country, is planned for the Paramount-Artcraft Special, "The Dark Star," the first of the Cosmopolitan Productions, which is released August 3.

In co-operation with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, the International Film Service Company, Inc., producers of Cosmopolitan Productions, have mapped out a line of action for the picture which will be followed and from time to time amplified in connection with the exploitation of succeeding Cosmopolitan Productions.

On Sunday, August 10, a full-page magazine feature story about "The Dark Star" will appear in the magazine section of the New York Sunday American, Chicago Examiner, Los Angeles Examiner, San Francisco Examiner and Atlanta Journal.

Big Space on Scenes from Play.

About the same time, a half-page illustration by Nell Brinkley, on scenes from "The Dark Star," with Marion Davies, will appear in the following newspapers: New York Journal, Boston American, Chicago American, Los Angeles Examiner, Detroit Free Press, Atlanta Journal, Beaumont (Tex.) Journal, Washington Times, Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegram, Philadelphia Bulletin, Springfield (Ill.) State Register, Vancouver (B. C.) Sun, Fort Worth (Tex.) Southwestern American, Waco (Tex.) Tribune.

The International Film Service Company, Inc., has also sent representatives on the road to place a serial story of "The Dark Star," illustrated with stills from the picture, in the following cities and probable newspapers: Cleveland News, Baltimore American, Portland (Ore.) Oregonian, New Haven Reporter, Buffalo Inquirer, Minneapolis News, Kansas City Post, St. Louis Globe Democrat, Des Moines Register-Tribune, Omaha News or Bee, New Orleans Item, Dallas Times-Herald, Salt Lake Tribune, Denver Post or News, Birmingham News, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Indianapolis Star, Louisville Herald, Cincinnati Inquirer.

To Exploit All Cosmopolitan Films.

What is being done on "The Dark Star," which was written by Robert W. Chambers, furnishes an indication of the exploitation possibilities which lie in all the Cosmopolitan Productions, all of which are based upon stories which have appeared in the Cosmopolitan and other Hearst magazines, the extensive list of Hearst publications throughout the country being the foundation for a newspaper circulation of large proportions.

The Hero About to Knock the Villain Sky High in "Sky Eye."

Gertrude Atherton Arrives on Coast.

Telegrams from Los Angeles announce the arrival of Gertrude Atherton at the Goldwyn studios for her first Eminent Authors' Picture, "Perch of the Devil." She motored out to Culver City just in time to wander through bits of Petrograd, Cairo and London, and to find herself an onlooker at a magnificent victory ball with Geraldine Farrar the central figure.

Three Show First National Pictures.

This week is First National week in Cleveland. Cleveland has six downtown houses showing first run pictures: Loew's Stillman, the Standard, the Strand, the New Euclid, the Orpheum, Loew's Mall and the Gaiety. Of these, three are showing First National pictures.

Book Store Window Displays in Denver Advertise Showing of "The Westerners"

THE first run theatres of the Colorado territory are booking the first Benjamin B. Hampton Great Authors' Picture, "The Westerners," made from one of S. E. White's most popular novels.

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation's Denver manager has closed contracts for first runs with A. G. Talbot's America Theatre and for first runs with the entire Moore and Greaves circuit in Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Greeley, Cheyenne, as well as first runs in Boulder, Trinidad and at other points in the territory.

Extends Bookings in Dakota Towns.

The Denver territory extends over through the Black Hills to the edge of the Minneapolis sales zone and between these two Hodkinson offices service will be made throughout the region. Towns in the Dakotas that never before in their picture history have played any picture for more than one day, are making two and three-day bookings in the fall.

An example of bookstore co-operation with the picture through Grosset and Dunlap was shown in Denver where, under the leadership of the Denver Dry Goods Company's book department, the book stores are making window and newspaper advertising campaigns on the book to co-ordinate it with the first presentation of the picture at the America Theatre.

This company's book department removed every display and bit of promotion matter on other books from view, giving "The Westerners" the benefit of exclusive exploitation.

Film Is Billed Like Circus.

Mr. Talbot's ingenuity in advertising was shown last week when he bought every available billboard location in Cheyenne, Wyo., for the days of the annual frontier day round-up and billed the film like a circus. Frontier days in Cheyenne are the biggest days in the year in that section of the country. From every section of the West and Southwest visitors come in from the ranges and easterners make this celebration as one of the spectacular events of the year.

Moore and Greaves, who later are to present the film for first run in Cheyenne, linked up with the Talbot display made for the benefit of his Denver house by retaining the billboards for an indefinite period.

Gladys Leslie's Latest is Ready.

"The Girl Woman," made under the working title of "Belinda Puts Her Hair Up," with Gladys Leslie starring in the title role, will shortly be released by Vitagraph.

As Belinda, Miss Leslie is called upon to portray two characters, both embodied in one person—hence the Girl-Woman. In the earlier scenes she is still the child, with her dolls and dogs, knee length dresses and pinafores, and curls over her shoulders. Then, one evening, she gives a party for herself, dons long dresses and puts her hair up. She is now a woman and when the test comes in the events that follow she proves that she had really come into woman's estate.

In the supporting cast are Julia Swayne Gordon, Constance Beaumar, Denton Vane, Frank Mills, Robert Frazer, F. W. Smith, Jene Jennings and Jane King. The picture was made under the direction of Tom Terriss.

"Sahara" Books Well With Southern Picture Houses

EDWARD A. ZORN'S Temple Theatre, Toledo, is another house that will reopen for its fall season with J. Parker Read, Jr.'s production "Sahara," starring Louise Glaum, as the widely advertised chief attraction The Temple has been closed for sixty days undergoing material enlargement and complete renovation for the opening.

Another big Ohio theatre that closed a contract during the week was Max Stern's Majestic, Columbus. The film has also been sold to the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati; the Majestic Theatre, Springfield; the Rialto Theatre, Covington; the Liberty, Youngstown, and with quick playing dates in Akron and Dayton.

In one Alabama city, where the thermometer stood at above the 100 mark "Sahara," during a week's run, broke the mid-winter patronage records of the house.

In New Orleans Julius Saenger, head of the extensive Saenger circuit opens with the film at his Strand on August 9 and has made no booking of any other picture for the following week, intending to give a straight two weeks' run.

Doraldina, Actress and Dancer, Enters Independent Picture Producing Field

DORALDINA, actress and dancer, is the latest to join the independent producing field by the forming of Doraldina Pictures, Inc., for which company she will produce a series of pictures during the coming year.

Mme. Doraldina is not new to the motion picture field, as she has made a feature for Pathe, and recently completed "The Heart of Nasonia" on the coast. She is known from coast to coast and all over Europe for her original manner of interpreting the Hawaiian terpsichorean art, and she has a verdict from the Queen of Hawaii that she is the only authentic interpreter of the Hawaiian dances.

She is at present being featured in "The Red Dawn," the Thomas Dixon, Jr., show, which is due to open on Broadway in the early part of August, and which opened to an enthusiastic audience at Stamford, Connecticut, toward the end of July. She has a dramatic part in the show and in conjunction with her screen work she should establish an envious record.

Doraldina will be remembered for her connections with many Broadway cafes and roof garden. She was also the only dancer who conducted a cafe of her own which was known as the Cafe De Doraldina, located on 59th and Broadway. Later she was featured in the Paradise Room at Riesenweber's, where she played through an entire season with much success.

In productions she has been connected with Weber and Fields, and abroad in many shows. At the age of seventeen she toured Europe where she also studied under the leading Spanish dancers. Later she combined this with her Hawaiian dancing.

"The Heart of Nasonia," which Doraldina made prior to coming to New York is now being negotiated for by several distributors for the domestic and world rights.

Ruth Roland Celebrates.

Ruth Roland and the members of her company held a sort of impromptu celebration at the Brunton Studio in Los Angeles this week in honor of the completion of the first episode of "The Adventures of Ruth," the first production of her new company, Ruth Roland Serials, Inc. The star and producer is the author of the story for which Gilson Willets prepared the scenario.

During the action of the story, the star is called upon to represent thirty-five different characterizations in the quest upon which the plot is based. William Parke is directing Miss Roland.

Complete Six Episodes of Duncan Serial.

Word has reached Vitagraph from William Duncan, who is at Lake Huntington, in northern California, that the first six episodes of "Smashing Barriers" are practically completed. Mr. Duncan is filming all of the dramatic action for the first five chapters of the serial while the special sets for the big thrills are being constructed on various locations. When these are ready the thrills will be filmed and inserted in the different episodes.

"The Lost Battalion" Is Given Its First Public Showing; Survivors Attend Show

"THE LOST BATTALION," the Edward A. McManus Corporation's production which re-enacts the famous stand of a battalion of the Seventy-seventh Division in the Argonne toward the close of the war, was given its premier at the Grand Theatre, Hartford, Conn., on the evening of July 28. Governor Holcomb and Mayor Kinsella attended.

Despite the weather being the hottest of the year, the picture was shown to a capacity house. It was accompanied with music written especially for the production by Joseph Breil.

Many of the survivors of the Lost Battalion were in the audience, seeing the picture for the first time, and whenever one of these was noted on the screen the audience rose and cheered him. These veterans sometimes twitted each other on their respective appearances in the film.

Praised by Critics.

In a criticism of the production the Hartford Post said:

"Last night at the initial showing of 'The Lost Battalion' some of the pain and the suffering of those valiant men was transplanted into the hearts of the distinguished gathering. The heat was overpowering. yet cold drinks waited outdoors, just a few feet away, while on the screen were pictured those six agonizing days when the surrounded men were practically without food or water or hope of relief. What a contrast! And the audience realized and understood. The audience forgot their own discomfort for 'The Lost Battalion' picture never loses its interest."

"Somehow, in some miraculous manner," says the Hartford Courant, "the producer and director of 'The Lost Battalion' caught the glorious spirit of the American doughboy, and in every scened filmed is reincarnated for history the homely, humorous and noble characteristics of the product of the melting pot of the nations—the American soldier."

The correspondent of the New York Evening Journal telegraphed his paper, "'The Lost Battalion' film stirs Hartford."

Beaton and Hunt Witness Filming of "The Bandbox"

KENNETH C. BEATON, known as K. C. B. by millions of newspaper readers throughout the United States, witnessed the filming of every one of the exteriors taken at Lake Mohegan, N. Y., for the new Deitrich-Beck production of Louis Joseph Vance's story, "The Bandbox," starring Doris Kenyon, which will be released early in the fall by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Theodore C. Deitrich, president of the Deitrich-Beck, Inc., took the company to Lake Mohegan without knowing that his old friend and colleague, Kenneth C. Beaton, was spending the summer there.

One day there was a new arrival at the hotel. He proved to be Frazier Hunt, war correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, magazine writer, and the man who brought the first copy of the Peace Treaty to the United States.

"Spike" Hunt, who had been dodging German bullets and Bolshevikis for two years, declared that shooting motion pictures was decidedly more to his liking and with Beaton spent most of his time on the motion picture "lot."

Edward Keppler, Lorraine Harding and Greta Hartman Are Added to "Bandbox" Cast

THREE additions have been made to the cast of "The Bandbox," the first of the Louis Joseph Vance series of features to be made by Deitrich-Beck, Inc., and distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. The three latest acquisitions are Greta Hartman, Edward Keppler and Lorraine Harding.

Greta Hartman is "the girl of many names." Born a Swede, she began her stage career under her own name of Greta Hartman. Soon afterward she changed it to Gretchen Hartman, which was fine until Germany got into bad repute, by which time Miss Hartman had attained stardom. Then an enterprising producer, objecting to the German sounding name, decided to make a Russian of her, for at that time the Czar was still the Czar. So Gretchen Hartman became Sonia Markova, under which nom de theatre she starred until the advent of Bolshevism. Then back to Greta Hartman, the name she was christened, went Sonia Markova. She has a part in "The Bandbox," second to that of Doris Kenyon.

Is Girl of Thousand Faces.

The other woman addition to the cast, Lorraine Harding, is declared to be the most photographed girl on the screen. She is frequently referred to as "the girl with the thousand faces." The current issue of the National Magazine in a two-page story of Miss Harding reproduces twenty different photographs of her, each one so different that it is hard to believe they were all posed for by the same girl.

The third addition to the cast is Edward Keppler, a Belgian actor who is appearing in the French Theatre, New York. Before the war, Mr. Keppler was noted in Belgium and Austria for his interpretation of "Hamlet" and other Shakespearian roles. A decided accent alone has prevented him from making progress on the American stage.

A Beautiful Glimpse of the Arch of Triumph and American Bluejackets in Parade.
This spectacular "shot" appears in International News' pictorial account of the Bastile Day parade in Paris. Released by Universal.

Goldwyn Plans Musical Exploitation.

A musical exploitation campaign is now under way by Goldwyn's service department for the promotion of Tom Moore's forthcoming vehicle, "Heartsease," from the stage play by Charles E. Klein, directed by Harry Beaumont.

Five of the leading music publishing institutions, each having scored sales records with the various versions of the song, "Heartsease," have announced their co-operation for window displays, lobby exhibits and co-operative newspaper advertising campaigns.

Tom Mix Wins Auto Race.

Making better than sixty miles an hour, Tom Mix, the William Fox cowboy star, won the amateur automobile championship at Ascot Speedway, Cal., according to a telegram to the Fox home offices. The distance was twenty-five miles, and the race was run for the benefit of the Actors' Fund.

Mix completed the twenty-five miles in twenty-four minutes and three seconds. He was awarded the silver championship cup.

"Not Better Stories, But Better Production," Says John Lynch, Scenario Writer for Selznick Pictures

THAT it is not "better plays," but better production that is needed, is the opinion of John Lynch, for many years a prominent member of Thomas Ince's scenario staff, and who was recently made a member of the scenario force of Selznick Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Lynch is well qualified to talk on this subject. He has written many popular plays of the past few seasons. Among the list are "Extravagance," "Quicksands," "Hard Boiled," "The Homebreakers," "Market of Souls," "Green Eyes," "Tyrant Fear" and "Law of the North."

"It is not so much better plays as better production that is needed," says Mr. Lynch. "Film producers have plenty of fine material at their command, but too often the main points of the story are lost in production. I hold nothing against directors; in fact, I have the greatest respect for them, but nevertheless, I believe that the responsibility for poorness or failure of a production rests mainly with the director. That is because they do not produce a story as it is written, but wander from the facts too often into side issues.

Should Work Hand in Hand.

"I believe, of course, that the scenario writer and director should work hand in hand. They are both equal factors and there is only one efficient way to do the work. When the full continuity of a story is completed, it should be turned over to the director. He in turn should go over it thoroughly, and make in writing any objections he has to the manner in which the story is told. The scenario writer and director should then thrash it out between themselves, before the production has started. If these two can reach no agreement, the decision should rest with the man higher up."

John Lynch believes in the screen both as an art and as a business, and he thinks it is the purpose of a film production to strike the medium of the two.

Waldorf Pictures Invade New York by Astor Party

THE Waldorf Photoplays took a good means of invading New York on July 29 by holding a luncheon at the Astor and inviting a lot of folks who write moving picture matter for the trade and newspapers.

The luncheon preceded the viewing of the initial Waldorf picture, "When Bonds Are Loosed," at Wurlitzer Hall. The picture was made under the direction of David G. Fischer, and is the first of the David Fischer Productions for Waldorf.

President Read, of the Waldorf company, was present, and after telling a few stories invited the reviewers to do their worst with the picture.

Mr. Fischer announced that the company would build a studio of its own in Boston.

Church Folk Visit Simplex Factory.

Since the close of the Methodist Centenary at Columbus, Ohio, where nine Simplex projectors were in use, the Simplex factory has been the objective of the delegates to the centenary, all of whom were interested in the performances witnessed at the various centenary motion picture exhibitions.

These visitors are invariably interested in the new Simplex Mazda equipment, which is especially adaptable for church use.

Goldwyn's Latest Addition Has Youth—Just Youth

IN keeping with the Goldwyn policy of developing latent ability, the eyes of the entire Goldwyn organization are following the histrionic and other growth of the diminutive star whose photograph is herewith reproduced. Youth, which is one of the prerequisites of motion pictures, he has in abundance. Moreover, he will be a boon to directors, as his speech is limited to monosyllables. And the few words he occasionally utters are accompanied by a happy smile, for he is not afflicted with staritis. Like all unlined faces, he screens well; and as the photograph reveals, is capable of disclosing delicate shades of expression.

As the young star is a blood member of the Goldwyn organization, his name is no longer a secret. It is Simon Herold Lachenbruch.

Spectacular Expression!
Registered in two parts by Simon Herold Lachenbruch as he signs a contract to appear in Goldwyn pictures.

Williams Has Chance for Versatility.

Vitagraph's current release, "The Hornet's Nest," is a play of two extremes, society and the underworld, with Earle Williams portraying the man who lives successfully in both. The play was made from the novel of the same name by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, and while Mr. Williams, as Asche Colvin, sometimes masquerades as The Hornet, another strong character in the story, he does not have a dual role.

The production was screened under the direction of James Young at Vitagraph's Western studio. The supporting company are Brinsley Shaw, Vola Vale, Ogden Crance, Kathleen Kirkham and Edward McWade.

Has Line of Accessories for Paramount Week

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces to exhibitors that a complete line of accessories is now available, through its exchanges, to all exhibitors who may participate in the second annual national Paramount-Artcraft Week, which begins Sunday, August 31.

In addition to the usual line of accessories on the productions which exhibitors will show during the week, which may be procured at the exchanges at the regular prices, the corporation has appropriated $10,000 for special accessories advertising the week itself. These include posters, trailers, slides, calendar cuts, program cover electros, advertising cuts and mats, heralds and postcards.

Three Characterizations for Warner in Chinese Film

WITH the eyes of the world centered upon the Shantung situation in connection with the Peace Treaty, Robertson-Cole believes it has a most timely subject in "Pagan God," second of the Superior Pictures series starring H. B. Warner. Exhibitors' Mutual will distribute the production, which was made under the personal supervision of Jesse D. Hampton.

It offers Warner in three absolutely distinct characters. He is introduced as the secretary to the American Consul in Mongolia, China. Then to obtain information direly needed to prevent the slaughter of all the whites in China, he is obliged to turn a secret service operative, and align himself with the tong which threatens to exterminate the Caucasian in the Orient. In the conclusion, Warner is seen in the garb of a beggar.

New Ocean Shipping Rates on Films.

A new schedule of rates of freight on various commodities from North Atlantic ports to Liverpool, Manchester, Hull, Avonmouth, Bristol, Cardiff, Glasgow, Leith, Belfast and Dublin has just been announced by the United States Shipping Board through the Emergency Fleet Corporation. Under this schedule the ocean shipping rate on motion picture films is $1 per cubic foot or one per cent. ad valorem.

Vitagraph Engages Ruth Clifford.

Ruth Clifford, who is a picture star in her own right, has been engaged by Vitagraph to play the leading feminine role opposite Earle Williams in his next feature, "The Black Gate," which is based on the mystery story by Hilliard Booth. The picture is now being made at the West Coast studio at Hollywood.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Tell Them What.

EXHIBITORS who plan to build up a permanent patronage should be careful to play fair with their audiences. The best plan is to set on the shelf any attraction you may get on a program arrangement which you know will prove unpleasant to them. The second best plan, if you cannot afford double bookings, is to clearly indicate the type of play you have to offer. If some attraction you feel you must play strikes at any creed or belief, do not conceal this fact in the hope that those who might stay away will come and help to swell your patronage. Don't try to get them in. You may get them for this time and lose them forever after. Make it plain in your advertisements just what your plays are about so that these who will be affronted will remain away to come to other showings. It is not always possible to suit all bookings to your clientele. Do the next best thing and let those stay away whose steady patronage would be forfeited did you try to get them in by disguising the nature of the offering. Do not figure your profit on the number of persons on any one night, but on the average business which you are able to hold through playing fair with your patrons.

In Demand.

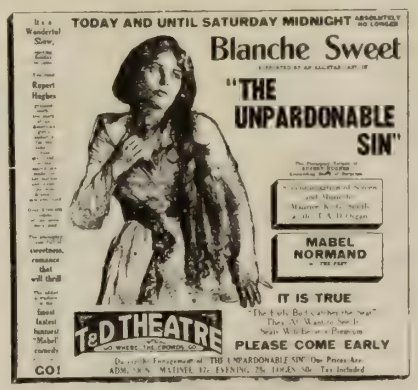
Sol Lesser, among the other novelties for the Sennett Bathing Girls issued a set of photographs taken from the individual pictures which are being largely sold for den photographs. They are about the size of the old-fashioned cigarette photographs, and wherever they have been used they have made big business. Unlike most novelties they should be gotten out early—if possible a couple of weeks before the showing, for the talk they will make will do the selling, so let them be as much talked about as possible.

Not Just That.

Harry J. Wendland, of the Turner and Dahnken house, Sacramento, sends in a batch of stuff and explains that he did not mean precisely what he said when he recently remarked that he could not put his heart into advertising old subjects What he meant was "old and poor," not merely old. He tells a good idea in explaining how he handles his ushers. He is Ruffner-trained, and he knows that the ushering staff can do much to help or hurt the house, so each week he gives them a talk calculated to rouse in them some ambition. When he has to, he does the talking himself, but he tries to get some local business man or newspaper writer to come in and jazz them up and make them realize that ushering is but a step to better things if only they make good ushers. He points out a number of theatrical men who started off as ushers or ticket takers. We don't suppose it will help any, but the first $2.50 a week we ever earned was from the old Bijou Theatre in Washington. The stunt worked so well with the ushers that he now includes all of the house people in the weekly talk. It's a good idea. It makes the house staff realize that what they are doing is something more than just a job. In putting over "The Unpardonable Sin" he worked in with the navy recruiting officer to get a street display. He had one sheets printed with the house and title in large type and in smaller letters:

> "What you will see in "The Unpardonable Sin" would have happened throughout the Allied Countries if the U. S. Navy had not put our boys across in time to stop the Huns at Chateau Thierry."

They were pasted on A boards eight to the block on each side of the main street —sixteen to the block in all. It made big business. For his newspaper work he took rather large spaces, the cut showing a five tens used in the middle of the week. Earlier he used twelves. This shows



A Five Twelves Mid-Week Announcement.

rather more type than some of the earlier displays because business had begun to sag slightly and he had to talk harder to keep them coming. Mabel Normand was an added attraction in "The Pest," which does not make a very harmonious combination. We think a shorter comedy would have left a better impression. Five reels of low comedy following a drama will hurt the effect of the latter in that it will overlay the more serious subject. It is a good plan to use a comedy to lighten the gloom before sending the patron out, but five reels makes too long a run. He used the same space for "The Brand," making a cut from a still. Not having any 24 point rule, he uses two strips of 12 point, and it is so badly locked up that it shows in the space. This 24 point rule is designed to play up the rather small title line, but we think that a 12 point rule would have worked better, giving 24 points of white space for the better display of the letters. As it is, the type comes too close to the border, and while it does not merge it is not as prominent as it would be had there been more space and had the lines below been set in a Roman instead of fullface. As it stands, both the rule and the secondary lines pull away from the main line. On the other hand the display at the right of the cut is well planned, and setting the type in double column adds much to the ease with which it may be read. Several of the displays show the title running diagonally across the space, and Mr. Wendland says he likes this style. It is not so bad if the lines are not blocked in in with other type matter, but in the display on the left is bad because the printer has stuffed the spaces with type and has even used stars where there was no copy. The eye is trained to read across the page from left to right. To offer any other arrangement to gain novelty is to reduce legibility, and where freak setting is used, the space should be kept as clear as possible. Even on that right hand display it would have been better had the name of the star been cut down to an 18 point, with a ten point bank in the upper left hand corner so as not to detract.

Novelty Counts.

We were looking over a campaign the other day. It ran several hundred inches, ranging from two threes to half pages. It was one of the most elaborate we have ever seen, and yet there was not a single individual announcement to gain interest. It was all big and it was all well stuffed with cuts and type, but somehow it did not take hold. And right alongside was a three nines from another exhibitor on the same release. You could not help looking at that because it was a clever combination of redrawn still and home cartoon work. And we would be willing to bet that three nines sold more tickets than any two of the half pages of the other campaign. It was clever. It interested. It was not merely a lot of type telling the same old story. It was something you could not avoid seeing, and seeing, being interested in. Clever planning often means much more to the box office than big spaces with nothing but conventional "greatest ever." It is this trick which makes Ralph Ruffer an advertiser above the average. As a straight copy writer he has many superiors, but he has the trick of putting in a single phrase which often sells more tickets than all the rest of the space. Once he advertised "Put the cat out and come down," and more than a hundred told him or his ticket taker that they had put the cat out. It took hold. It is not the size but the cleverness of a campaign which gives it value.

Sincere.

Here is an excellent advertisement for "Daddy Long Legs" from Saginaw, Mich. We have seen many more elaborate and many larger displays, for this is only five nines, but it rings true. Instead of a lot of gush about the production, H. W. Irons trusts to his own endorsement to get it over. The talk is addressed "To the Franklin Patrons," and starts off with: "Mary Pickford never did anything better and but few pictures can excel it in point of entertainment." That is not a statement to rouse hostility by its sweeping claims. It gains respect because it sounds as though Mr. Irons means it, as indeed he does. Those Brinkerhoff cartoon bits have helped a lot to make it easy to advertise this feature, for they are characteristic of the play and not just pictures. Another effective display was a four nine reproducing the criticism of one of the Detroit papers, which speaks more eloquently than personal talk, since it speaks of a performance seen and not of one to come.

An Unusually Good Five Nines from H. W. Irons.

Parody Contests.

John H. W. Fennyvessy, of the Family, Rochester, N. Y., seems to have found a new one. He had a "parody contest." For four weeks the amateur parodists had a chance on Wednesday nights to offer their perversions of popular songs to the night audience. The applause decided the winner for that contest, and the four winners fought it out for the applause the fifth week. Song writer's contests are apt to be either too difficult or too dull, but there are many who can write good parodies, and this can be run for a regular feature for some time if it is properly worked. You may have to write a few yourself to get them started, but it will be worth the trouble. Another way of working it would be to offer a dollar for each parody accepted for presentation. And don't forget that there is a strong press agent angle to this stunt. You can work it for a lot of space.

Needs a Formula.

Cliff A. Carroll, of the Hippodrome, Utica, N. Y., sends in some more samples of his work, and adds, "Don't be afraid to 'wallop' me, for the reaction to a wallop must always be a boost. What he means is that if he gets an adverse comment he gets mad and tries to do better next time. And he does. The two samples here are a very decided improvement over the last stuff he shot along, for that matter, for his improvement has been consistent. He seems to be taking larger spaces, for these are two sevens each. This is a decided advance over his earlier spaces, but another advertisement, not reproduced here, used to launch the Houdini serial, ran to tens. It is the only one of the series carrying a cut. We think one trouble with Mr. Carroll is that he lacks a formula for advertising. He has not reduced the matter in his own mind into a definite system of procedure. This is the difficulty under which ninety per cent. of the theatre advertisers throughout the country still labor, yet there is no reason why this should be so. They read this department, for example, perhaps for years. They read and perhaps remember, but they do not assimilate the information. They do not evolve from what they read a definite theory for their work. Just as an example, it took us more than five years to discourage managers from using Old English and Cloister faces as the last word in elegance in card announcements. They used these difficult-to-read faces because there was a theory that it made the work look like copper plate, yet there is little engraving done these days in the old forms. We kept telling and showing that Old English was hard to read; that most persons, unless intensely interested, would not take the trouble to puzzle out the text. Some alert minds got the idea the first time, but it was more than five years before copperplate Gothic. Tiffany and Typo replaced the old style. They read time and again that the face was bad, but they did not assimilate the fact. They did not make the knowledge their own, and yet the aim of this department is to teach the aim of this department is to teach general advertising methods, illustrated by examples both good and bad rather than to show you how Ralph Ruffner or S. Barret McCormick advertises a particular subject. With a copy of Picture Theatre Advertising supplemented by this weekly department, any person of intelligence can learn to do advertising and those who have the natural gift can become really expert, but it is not done merely by reading and forgetting nor even by reading and remembering. You must persuade yourself of the correctness of a statement and then understand thoroughly why the theory is correct, that you may apply the theory to your own particular problem. Getting back to Mr. Carroll's samples you will note that the display on the right stands out vastly better than that on the left. In the first place there is not so much black type. You get the message—Creaking Stairs and Mary McLaren. Mr. Carroll did not consciously write a better advertisement for this than for The Grouch. Either he was feeling better or the story appealed to him more strongly. He did not start out with the one idea of getting the best possible display for what he had to say. It just happened that the MacLaren production went into type better than the other, and this was because he did not crowd it. About all he does is get display, for his selling talk is too general. For instance Creaking Stairs is "A tense, gripping drama that'll hold you enthralled at its swift and daring action." The Grouch is "Fascinating, gripping, enthralling—A story of great interest against a background of wondrous beauty." If the printer had switched those two descriptive lines it would not have made the slightest difference. One would have sold as well as the other, for neither really tells about the play. It is just press agent talk. It gives you no special desire to see that particular production. Setting the comedies and serial in small type would have added at least five picas to The Grouch display for the main title and setting them smaller would have given better display to the black lines for Love and the title. Advertising the underline also cuts down the display by crowding the small lines against the larger and robbing them of display. Half that space, with a different choice of types, would have given the same display to Miss Pickford and her play, and would have given better display to the current announcement. In preparing an advertisement try following this routine:

Decide upon the lines to be played up.

With your space in mind, decide upon the height of those lines.

Mark off the space where these lines will run. If your layout calls for a 48 point line, draw the shape of your advertisement and then letter in those lines in the approximate size.

Decide where your lesser lines will run.

Mark their sizes to hold them away from the big display.

Take your copy to the printer and talk it over with him. He may be able to offer suggestions.

Insist upon seeing proof that you may know that your directions have been carried out.

Your chief lines are your house, show and date. The show consists of the star and title. In newspaper advertising the date may be dispensed with in favor of "Today," and in no case does it need to be as large as your other main facts. But your house signature is important. It should be characteristic and preferably a drawn design. If you cannot afford or decide upon a good design, get your printer to pick some distinctive face, or buy the type for one yourself, then set it in an individual border. In deciding on the relative value of star and title, favor the star unless the title is a self-selling one, or that of a play widely known in your own territory. Then try to give your reader a half-way decent excuse for wanting to come. Don't say a play is "gripping." Every drama is gripping. Say that it is gripping by telling the punch containing the appeal. Keep away from meaningless adjectives and use instead something about the play that will be more convincing than the adjectives. You can say that a play is gripping, strong, fascinating and all the rest of the stuff, and still be regarded as a person who is merely trying to sell a play, but if you ask if it is wise for a woman to leave her husband just because he kicked their child to death, you have aroused real interest in the play. You can't lie about that. We think that if Mr. Carroll will plan his advertising instead of merely writing it, he will get more intelligent results. And this goes for hundreds of others.

From New Zealand.

Thomas Hayward, of the Strand, Auckland, N. Z., sends in some of his house programs to show that he is still keeping up the pace, and adds that business has picked up quite a little since the armistice. He still holds to the same six-page folder style for general use, the pages being approximately 5 by 9 inches. The three inside pages are set double column with a column of general comment, sometimes and answer box and a little general stuff, but the current attraction gets about two pages. As there is but one attraction a week this permits plenty of space to be given the show and it is covered from several angles. The back pages are set for the front page and a double page display. Generally the stock is white, but the ink is varied from week to week to avoid confusion. The Picture Mirror, as it is called, is now in its third year, and has kept right up to the mark for real humor and shows a very decided improvement over the early issues which were reproduced a long time ago. Mr. Hayward not only keeps posted on the house sheet dope, but he reads this department and adapts ideas. It looks funny to see Ralph Ruffner's "Try to get in" breeze in from the antipodes, but Mr. Hayward picked that up. To show what he can do when he has more money to spend, he sends in a sixteen-page booklet souvenir showing half tones of the stars they most frequently run, each on a page by herself and with an appropriate quotation to accompany a brief comment. The printer had hard luck with the cuts, but otherwise the issue is excellent. Even with some imperfect cuts it is an issue to be taken home and preserved. Evidently they have to hustle just as hard for business "down under" as we do, and Mr. Hayward is in the lead.

It Doesn't Pay.

It doesn't pay to spend ten dollars for one big dinner and then go hungry for a week, and it doesn't pay any better to get a bunch of money for a sensational film that will keep your house half empty for months.

Small, but Hustling.

James A. Morrison, of the Star, Meaford, Ont., sends in a calendar used by him, which offers many novel angles. Meaford is a town of only 2,417 inhabitants, and he shows only Friday and Saturday of each week, but that does not prevent him from getting out a calendar and making every inch of it work. He uses a sheet 16½ by 22 inches, and on the same card the show, churches and business houses are all advertised. The Sunday space gives the time of morning and evening service and the Friday and Saturday spaces announce the offerings at the Star. The boxes for the other days are sold to fifteen other advertisers. These cards are planted in private residences as well as stores, and are in general use. Some of the proof reading has been poorly done, but the general display is good, though hardly artistic, and it evidently takes hold. Most monthly calendars are gotten out by houses with daily shows, and this is the first and perhaps the only example of a calendar issued by a two shows a week house. But it simply bears out what we have said, that in a small town you have to be a hustler to keep alive.

Different but Alike.

The Columbia, Ideal and Colonial theatres, Dallas, Texas, are all under the management of Foy's Neighborhood Theatres, and all operate with the slogan "Why go to town? Let's join the ever increasing throng." They also use the catchphrase: "A picture you've never seen is as new as a book you've never read," which is a mighty good argument for a second run house. All of the theatres use a six page folder 9½ by 12 in the full sheet. The front carries the signature and cut of the particular house it is issued for, and one of the outside pages an appeal to patrons to come to the home house. The other is the mailing face. Inside the sheet is treated as a whole with two columns of six point 20 ems wide and an eight em panel between giving the prices and announcing the cooling system. The dates and titles are set in six point bold with the serials and smaller features and the stars in all caps, while the text runs six point Roman. With this arrangement, although they offer a daily change, they can run in an entire month. The big point is that since the same bookings are used for all three houses, it is necessary to set only one job and shuffle titles to match their proper dates on the three editions. This cuts down the cost considerably, and yet it does not in the least interfere with the advertising value, since the houses are in different sections. We cannot reproduce the programs sent, because they are all on colored stock, a different color for each house, but if you are interested, we think that a request to the Columbia Theatre, accompanied by a couple of stamps, will bring you a sample, and this is one of the best monthly models we have seen in some time. It is small, but it is as clear as is possible for the size.

Special Stuff.

The New Garrick, St. Paul, Minn., gets out some very good special stuff for out of the ordinary pictures. For Mary Regan they used a folder of stiff blue paper, unprinted on the outside. Within the right hand page carries an actual photograph of Anita Stewart, with the announcement on the facing page. The announcement is printed on a white card attached to the blue to match the pasted photograph opposite. It forms a very attractive display and one which will make business if the folders are put into the right hands, for they cost too much to be wastefully distributed. For Auction of Souls they featured an advance showing the morning of the opening day, giving this special at ten o'clock. Both stunts are excellent.

Keep Her Cool.

Keep your ticket seller cool. Put in a hidden fan if necessary, but realize that a perspiring box office girl is about the worst advertisement you could possibly have in warm weather.

Adjectives.

Adjectives do you good only when used by your patrons. Then they sell tickets, but probably the patrons do not say "gripping" or "stupendous." He just says that it was a great play and worth seeing. Leave the adjectives to your patrons and use description for your own work. It sells more tickets.

Serials For Serials.

If you have never used serial tickets for the showing of serials, try it with the next serial you launch. Make a slight price concession to get them in, and you will sell out for ten or fifteen weeks to come.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Whom Is It Up To?

F. W. RINKS, Springfield, Illinois, sends sample of badly abused film and says:

"Would you like to pay thirty cents admission to see this on the screen? This film reached us in this condition. What I send is only a sample of the whole. Have found some other features in same condition. The guilty projectionist is somewhere in Chicago, and it is up to the Famous Players Company to find and punish him. Trust I am not imposing on you with this letter, but it is awful—the film I mean, not the letter."

Bad Enough.

Heaven knows the film is bad enough, but is it entirely up to the Famous Players to find and punish the guilty projectionist. What about Local Union 110. If the man works in Chicago the man is a member of 110, for that body boasts a 100% membership; also of what it calls a high wage scale, though it is only a high one when viewed as a minimum scale for their poorest men. Has the union no duty in this matter? Having secured its demands in the matter of wages and working conditions does not a union owe it to the employer, to the producer and to the motion picture industry, by and through which its members make their living, to take at least reasonable care of the films intrusted to the care of its members?

No Exemption for Exchange.

Please understand that I am not claiming exemption for the exchange which permits such abuse of its property, nor am I saying it should not hunt out the guilty party and refuse him further films.

Of course in the matter of hole punching the producer is in measure at fault in refusing to incorporate a change-over sign in the negative, and the theatre manager is often indirectly to blame, for other film damage by failure to supply proper repairs for the machinery, but none of this exonerates the projectionist unless he has reported lack of repairs to his union business agent and thus officially placed the blame for consequent damage to the films, where it belongs. The whole matter is a complicated one, but there is altogether too much passing the buck. The producer has films to sell and does not especially care how many are ruined, unless he owns the exchange. The exchange is all too often managed by one whose vision in such matters ends just three-fifths of an inch beyond his nose, and the projectionist, who all too often has no real pride in his profession (he does not even recognize it as such), goes merrily on his bungling way, happy in the thought that he can most likely pass the buck to some one else if a howl is made. And thus the game of ruin goes on.

Some Day They May Wake Up.

Well, some day maybe we will have (A) artists who really take at least some interest in how they are reproduced on the screen. (B) Producers who will take a bit of interest in the fate of their creations after they are made. (C) Exchange managers instead of exchange mis-managers. (D) Theatre managers (we have many of them now) who understand that proper projection of the fiums to their screen is a duty they owe themselves, the industry and their audiences. (E) Projectionists who take real pride in their work and understand that the projection of motion pictures is a profession—we have a large and increasing number of them now. (F) Unions which understand that they have a duty beyond the mere securing of just conditions for their members, and that they suffer disgrace in the minds of all right thinking men every time one of their members abuses film intrusted to his care, and every time the screen result suffers through their ignorance or carelessness. But until that day comes we must suffer—though we cannot agree to do it in silence.

Important Notice

OWING to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two or three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Lens Charts for Framing.

The December 28 issue, containing the lens charts, was exhausted very quickly. The demand for lens charts was so great that we have had a limited number printed on heavy paper, size 11x17, for framing. Covers amperage 25 to 60 A. C. or D. C., and Plano-convex or meniscus bi-convex; also gives necessary projection lens diameter to avoid waste and distance of revolving shutter from aperture. Every progressive, up-to-date projectionist should have one. Price, 50 cents, postpaid, to any part of the world. Send U. S. 2-cent stamps or money order.

A Lucky Dog

A. O. Tapp, Blue Diamond, Kentucky, arises to remark:

"Received handbook O K, and was sure glad to get it. I do not claim to be a projectionist yet, but some of these days, by hard work and study, I hope to be. At present have just begun to cut my projectional eye teeth. But I am a lucky dog as I had a brand new Powers Six B to start with here, and O boy it is some machine. No trouble at all to put on a decent picture if you know how, and I propose to know how if I have to sit up all of some nights to study. I don't see how any projectionists, or any one who aspires to be one, can get along without the handbook. I want the "whole hog" so enclosed find fifty cents for lens charts."

The Spirit That Wins.

That is the spirit that wins. Here is a beginner who, instead of having either an outright contempt, or a rather low opinion of the business he purposes to adopt, starts out by believing it is worthy of deep study, and that it will take both that and hard work to perfect himself in it. I venture the assertion that if he persists he will succeed, and finally reach one of the best positions in the profession. It is the confirmed squarehead who thinks his profession (he never dignifies it by calling it such) amounts to no more than ability to thread a machine, patch a film and get a good light on the screen, who never gets anywhere, but who is usually found complaining of the low wage he is paid. He never realizes that it would be true economy for the motion picture industry to pay him that wage, if necessary, to keep him out of projection rooms entirely.

Lucas Features Boylan Reel

We are just in receipt of the new price list being put out by Harry Lucas, the Atlanta live wire supply dealer, and note that therein he features the Boylan Even Tension Reel. This is good, because this reel will, if generally adopted, not only relieve the projectionist from much annoyance due to take-up tension trouble, but will make impossible any damage to the films from too tight or too loose take-up tension. Incidentally southern projectionists, or at least those in the Atlanta section, will do well to write Lucas for the new list. Lucas also publishes a monthly combined price list and house booster which will be sent, he says, to any theatre, exchange or supply house at the following rates: Monthly rates, "Gratis." Yearly, twice as much.

Examinations To Be Stiffened

Recently the editor, thoroughly discouraged with the inadequacy of New York City projectionist examinations, took the matter up with Commissioner Hayes by mail, suggesting that the interest of the public, as well as that of the industry demanded upon a more competent examination; also that a competent projectionist ought to be appointed to the Board of Examiners. The Commissioner, through his secretary, made the stereotyped reply that "the matters contained in my communication would have attention," which, as we all know, means just nothing at all. This got the editorial temper and we indicted a letter to Mayor Hylan, which was so torrid that His Honor instructed the Commissioner of Accounts, who is otherwise known as "the Mayor's Eye," to make an investigation of the things complained of in my letter.

Had Two-Hour Conference.

Almost by the same mail I then received a letter from the Commissioner of Accounts asking for an interview, and one from Commissioner Hayes of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, informing me that he would be glad to have me call on him in relation to the examination matters. I called first on the Commissioner of Accounts, a most

MORGAN IS TENDERED FAREWELL PARTY

Retiring Famous Players' Washington Manager Is Entertained Before Leaving for New York

ONE of the most enjoyable events in social filmdom of Washington was the "farewell party" tendered Oscar A. Morgan, manager of the local Famous Players' exchange prior to his leaving for New York to become assistant sales manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation under Sales Manager Kent. When he left the office Saturday evening, the local sales manager, Lester Rosenthal, asked him to return at eight o'clock to talk things over before leaving for New York.

When Mr. Morgan returned, he found all of the employees of the exchange decked out in their Sunday best, hanging around as if they were "all dressed up and no where to go." They thought they would like to have a movie show of their own, and Mr. Rosenthal arranged for a showing of "The Desert Hero" and "The Love Thief." The surprise of the evening came when, with a brief speech voicing the sentiments of his fellow employes, on their behalf, he presented Mr. Morgan with a handsome sterling silver cigarette box. A bouquet of flowers from the Washington office of the Moving Picture World also found its way to his desk. Refreshments were served during the evening by an attractive bevy of young ladies.

One of the Few.

Oscar Morgan is one of the few employes who started with the organization at the time of its inception. His first position was that of manager of the Paramount Theatre in Newark, New Jersey, about five years ago. He held that position for about a year, when he went to Philadelphia to become advertising and publicity man, and later he held the position of assistant manager. He came to Washington in April, 1918, to take over the local exchange. Since his arrival here he has been very active in strengthening the Washington Exchange Managers' Association. He has been its secretary and has held a similar position on the Grievance Committee of exchange managers and exhibitors.

Hurrah for Crandall's Cumberland House.

The new motion picture theatre in Cumberland, Md., ground for which was broken on July 21, promises to be one of the best looking and best equipped houses in the State. The project is backed by Harry M. Crandall and is the second of a string of theatres he contemplates operating in nearby states.

The new house is to be located at the corner of Pershing and Liberty streets. No name has yet been selected for it. It is estimated that the cost of the project will run in the neighborhood of $250,000. The front elevation will be of Colonial brick, trimmed with limestone and marble, the whole being typical of the Adam period. Entrance to the theatre will be gained through a large lobby, perfectly ventilated and brilliantly illuminated by the latest designed indirect flood system. The lighting throughout the house will be a distinctive feature and the latest innovations will be employed in the ventilating and heating systems. There will be a spacious balcony and the house will comfortably accommodate (seated) 2,000 patrons.

Will Have Fifty Foot Stage.

This theatre will be so constructed as to provide for the accommodation of even the most elaborate stage productions sent on tour. It will be equipped with a stage that will extend the entire width of the building and to a depth of 50 feet.

Mr. Crandall some time ago took over the Colonial Theatre, in Connellsville, Pa. He now has under construction in Washington the York Theatre. This, by the way, despite reports to the contrary, is the only motion picture theatre being built here at the present time. His other Washington houses are the Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Crandall's, Savoy, Avenue Grand, Apollo and Meader's.

Crandall Sets Up a Gym.

Harry M. Crandall, owner and operator of a string of theatres here, is establishing, at his own expense, in the large basement area of the Metropolitan Theatre, his main downtown house, a complete gymnasium, fully outfitted and equipped with six needle shower baths, for the benefit of the employees of all of the houses.

In discussing this rather unique plan with the World correspondent, Mr. Crandall declared that the gymnasium would be well patronized by the employes and that great benefits would be derived from it.

When the Light Went Out.

A considerable loss of business to both motion picture and vaudeville theatres occurred here last week when one of the cable leads of the local electric light company went out of commission and plunged them into darkness. For more than two hours a whole section of the city was without light or power. Manager Klein, of the Columbia Theatre, believing that the trouble was only of a temporary nature, suggesting that his patrons remain in their seats. However, after fifteen minutes of waiting it looked as though he had not guessed right. He then got in touch with the Cosmos Theatre, which had ceased to furnish entertainment for the same reason, and secured some of the acts. He was able, because of daylight lighting, to put these on and turn the movie show into a vaudeville entertainment.

BUFFALO'S BIG THEATRE IS COMING

Shea Amusement Company Acquires the Root Property for Erection of a Mammoth House

THE actual beginning of the work on one of the country's greatest amusement structure has begun this week with the purchase by the Shea Amusement Company of the Root property, running from 622 to 634 Main street, on which will be erected the Shea Metropolitan, a lavishly constructed motion picture house, which, when completed will have involved a sum in excess of $1,500,000. The theatre will have a Main street frontage of 133 feet and a depth of 232 feet, extending through to Pearl street. An entirely new seating plan will provide for the comfort of 3,500 persons.

The theatre proper will be built in the rear of the two story building now fronting on Main street. The present structure will be modernized, and it is possible that another floor will be erected, if architects decide that the present build-foundations are strong enough. In the center of this block provision will be made for a lobby 28 by 60 feet, and the plans for the entrance to the Metropolitan will call for an elaborate hanging marque and the largest electrical display in Buffalo. The beautiful terra cotta front of the present property will be modernized and six up-to-date stories provided.

No Expense Will Be Spared.

The architecture and decorations of this new Shea Amusement Company enterprise will indicate the great strides made in theatrical construction during the past five years. No expense will be spared to make the Metropolitan the most gorgeous and most complete institution of its kind in the country. The installation of every known device and convenience, including several innovations will be included in the plans. The auditorium will be broad rather than deep, bringing even the rear most seats at a comparatively short distance from the stage. The lighting will be the indirect system in four colors which can be used in any combination. The ventilation will be thoroughly modern, tempered air being brought in from under the seats of the orchestra and the balcony and expelled from the great dome.

A grand promenade will be provided, fitted with a magnificent lounge and refreshment rooms, along the London tea room idea. This latter innovation will have an especial appeal for the feminine patrons of the theatre, who, after shopping, can enjoy a delightful repast and then attend the show.

The stage of the Metropolitan will contain many new ideas which will make possible the presentation of effects never shown before. The policy of the new house will be the presentation of the highest type of motion pictures, accompanied by a mammoth symphony orchestra and famous soloists. It will be a further development of the present Shea Hippodrome idea. It is expected that the policy of the Hippodrome upon the completion of the new house will be changed to high class vaudeville and motion pictures at popular prices. The Shea Court street vaudeville house will not be disturbed in any way.

Roof Garden a Feature.

Something entirely new to Buffalo will be the roof garden atop the Metropolitan, which will be patterned after the famous roofs in New York City. Here complete theatrical performances will be given, including motion pictures. The roof will have a seating capacity of approximately 2,000 persons, making the total seating figures for the house over 5,500. Elevators and escalators will bring the patrons to the various landings.

Actual construction will commence immediately upon the completion of the plans. Prominent architects are now looking over the site and are in consultation with Shea officials. Representatives are touring the country, visiting the newest theatres in search of every possible innovation that might be provided for the pleasure and comfort of Buffalonians. In all likelihood the new theatre will be under the direct management of Harold B. Franklin, who has, in a great measure, been responsible for the big success of Shea's Hippodrome.

And Still Another.

Still they come! The latest new motion picture house to be announced is that to be built by W. F. McDonald, prominently identified with the North Buffalo development, especially along Hertel avenue. According to Mr. McDonald, one of the most elaborate theatres in Buffalo will be opened in September, on Hertel avenue between North Park and Norwalk avenue. The cost of the structure will represent an investment of close to $200,000, and will provide entertainment for the 30,000 residents of this rapidly growing district. Workmen and machinery are now engaged in excavating and laying foundations for the new theatre, which will have a frontage of 310 feet on Hertel avenue, occupying the entire block between North Park and Norwalk avenue.

Plans for the structure indicate that the style and arrangement will be the same as employed in Shea's Hippodrome, the entrance and long spacious lobby being graced on either side by stores and the theatre proper occupying the central portion of the block.

Edifice Will Be Welcome.

That this part of Buffalo will welcome the addition of the amusement edifice, was evidenced recently in the city council chambers when application was made for the building permit. Contrary to expectations of the councilmen, an assemblage was present to indorse the application for the permit. More than one hundred women residing in the vicinity of the site of the new house were present at the meeting and enthusiastically urged the granting of the permit. Encouraged by this demonstration of approval of his plans, Mr. McDonald states that while no effort will be spared to rush the work of completing the building, no haste will be permitted to interfere with the installation of a variety of features that will insure the comfort, safety and convenience of the patrons.

PROPERTY owners along Victoria street, Toronto, have protested to Mayor Church and the City Council against the plan of the architect for the mammoth new moving picture theatre there to have a blank wall of the theatre extending along the Victoria street frontage. The declaration is made that the barren wall destroys the business continuity of the thoroughfare, and the petitioners have asked for a change in the plans so that the theatre structure will have a row of stores along the street. They point out that the theatre interests will have no other frontage for stores, because the "front" of the theatre on Yonge street will consist of an entrance only.

Among Independent Producers

Conducted by C. S. SEWELL

Steiner Offers "Sky Eye," a Big Aviation Picture

FROM the offices of William Steiner, independent producer of motion pictures, comes the announcement through D. J. Mountan, special representative, of the completion of the seven-part feature, "Sky Eye," upon which the Steiner Company has been actively engaged for the past four months.

Mr. Steiner's latest feature carries the embodiment of two subjects which stand prominent in the eyes of the world; namely, the vast Texas oil fields and the subject of daring aviation. The authors of "Sky Eye" are said to have skillfully interwoven from these two subjects a "thrilling romantic drama of the oil fields and the air," as the producer has styled his offering.

Under the direction of Aubrey M. Kennedy and Louis Lewyn, Mr. Steiner has, through the co-operation and sanction of Lieut.-Col. Lawrence W. McIntosh, commanding officer of Ellington Field, been permitted a wide scope in taking of startling aeroplane thrills and hitherto unphotographed stunts.

"Sky Eye" boasts of being the first motion picture feature to record a wedding in the air. There is also a daring transfer from one aeroplane to another in flight and a leap from aeroplane to speeding train, as well as innumerable tail spins, nose dives and other feats of air daring.

Big Exploitation Plans for New Supreme Serial

SIDNEY REYNOLDS, president of Supreme Pictures, announces that J. Robert Pauline, the hypnotist and vaudeville headliner, who has just commenced work in a serial for his company, will be given a great publicity campaign.

For cities of 25,000 or over a big billposting campaign in which twenty-four sheets will be utilized is being worked out. In addition, a special series of feature articles on hynotism and kindred subjects for use in magazines and Sunday newspaper supplements. One of these series has already been accepted by a syndicate representing a large number of newspapers, the article going to only one newspaper in each city.

Mr. Reynolds further announced that J. Robert Pauline is now at work on a series of new hypnotic feats and experiments which he plans to make even more sensational than any of his previous stunts.

Helen Holmes to Perform a Daring Aviation Stunt

IT is announced that Helen Holmes is to perform a feat which is to be shown in one of the later episodes of "The Fatal Fortune," produced by S. S. Krellberg, which is claimed to have never before been attempted by any moving picture actress, and which will establish her as an "ace" among serial stars.

Arrangements are being made to have Miss Holmes loop the loop in an aeroplane over Forty-second street and Broadway, New York, in which feat she will be assisted by a famous "ace" who has just returned from the European front.

It is the intention of Mr. Krellberg to incorporate in the various episodes of "The Fatal Fortune" something entirely out of the ordinary that will hold the interest of the serial at all times. That is, each and every episode is expected to be more startling than the other, the final episode winding up in a grand climax.

Grace Davison Finishes "Atonement" for Pioneer

FILMING of the first Grace Davison production to be exploited by the Pioneer Film Corporation is now complete. The new feature is in five reels, and will be known as "Atonement." The scenario was written by Charles Edwards Hall, and the production directed by William Humphrey. Conway Tearle appears with Miss Davison as co-star.

The story is announced as giving great scope to the recognized abilities of the stars, and having an unusual and complex plot. It tells of the experiences of a young official who, to help a friend, used funds belonging to his bank. In doing so he finds himself beyond the pale of the law, and, deserting his wife and child, drops from sight, and circumstance points to his being a suicide. His wife remarries, and years of happiness follow, while the first husband, still alive, drags out a wretched existence in the shadows of the underworld. But at last he is betrayed, arrested and his wife is hailed to court as a bigamist.

The subjects included in this sale embrace "Denny from Ireland," "The Pen Vulture," "The Snail," "The Ranger" and "When Arizona Won," featuring Shorty Hamilton; "Strife," featuring George Le Guere, and "Stripped for a Million," featuring Crane Wilbur. The reissued features produced by Essanay are "Little Shoes," with Henry B. Walthall; "Men of the Desert," with Jack Gardner; "The Man Trail," with Richard Travers; "The Alster Case," with Bryant Washburn; "The Range Boss," with Jack Gardner; "The Little Shepard of Bargain Row," with Richard Travers; "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," with Taylor Holmes; "The Land of Long Shadows," with Jack Gardner; "The Misleading Lady," with Henry B. Walthall, and "Open Places," with Jack Gardner.

The one-reel Essanay reissues consist of ten of George Ade's Fables in Slang, ten Snakeville comedies and ten Broncho Billy Westerns.

Bolshevism and Americanism in "Everybody's Business"

BOLSHEVISM is one of the outstanding features of "Everybody's Business," the six-reel photoplay to be released in the near future by the W. H. Productions Company. However, one of the predominating elements of the picture is the spirit of Americanism, which is said to have been developed to such an extent that the patriotism of audiences will be aroused to a great degree.

Aside from the subjects of Bolshevism and Americanism, it is claimed that this photoplay is an unusual entertainment, with an abundance of action, suspense and dramatic interest.

Many agencies for co-operation have already been linked up in the exploitation of this feature, such as civic societies, schools, women's clubs and other prominent organizations in towns as well as in cities, and it has a special appeal to our soldiers.

It is also announced that special arrangements have been made so that newspapers will utilize the publicity of "Everybody's Business" in a different manner from heretofore.

Kremer Will Reissue Essanay's "Skinner" Series

VICTOR KREMER announces that within a short time he will reissue "Skinner's Dress Suit," originally produced by Essanay, to be followed by the other two of the Skinner series, "Skinner's Bubble" and "Skinner's Baby."

The decision to reissue these pictures at the present time is said to be the result of a large number of inquiries from exhibitors who desire to see them again on the market. Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly have the most prominent roles in all of the stories, and "Skinner's Dress Suit," written by Henry Irving Dodge, and dealing with a clerk who, after being a drudge for years, became a partner in the firm, all because he invested in a dress suit, attracted widespread attention when it appeared originally in a well known magazine.

New prints are being made and a full complement of advertising paper prepared. Mr. Kremer is also planning to distribute other Essanay features beginning early in the fall. The first offering will be a block of ten to be released one each week through state rights exchanges.

This list will include "The Misleading Lady" and "Little Shoes," with Henry B. Walthall; "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," with Taylor Holmes; "The Alster Case," with Bryant Washburn; "The Man Trail" and "The Little Shepard of Bargain Row," with Richard C. Travers, and four Jack Gardner pictures, "The Range Boss," "Open Places," "Men of the Desert" and "The Land of Long Shadows."

Many Sales Already Made on "Mystery of 13" Serial

ALTHOUGH prints of the new Francis Ford serial, "The Mystery of '13'," have not yet been received in New York, Western critics and state rights representatives had an opportunity of judging this latest production of Burston Films, Inc., at the studio projection room in Hollywood recently. The consensus of opinion is said to have been that the new thriller would exceed the success of the first Burston production, "The Silent Mystery," and on the strength of this verdict the first distributing rights were sold.

President Burston affirms that no matter what territory a buyer selects he is sure to get one of the lucky "thirteen." The first sale was made to Jacobo Glucksman, of 110 West Fortieth street, New York, who bought all the foreign rights. An interesting feature of the transaction is that Mr. Glucksman has not yet seen the serial, but is said to have negotiated the purchase because of the success of "The Silent Mystery," and of the presence in the cast of both Francis Ford and Rosemary Theby, who headed the former company, based on the report of his Western representative.

The "Mystery of '13'" is described as a Western mystery serial, and takes its title from the activities of a band of conspirators whose inner ring is known as the "13," and whose evil machinations are foiled by Francis Ford, who plays his popular character of Phil Kelley, of the Secret Service. The "Mystery of '13'" is in fifteen episodes, and will be shown in New York within the next week or ten days.

Another Sale Made on Jester Comedies

ANOTHER sale has been made on the new series of Jester comedies by the Territorial Sales Corporation. The New England rights have been received by the Eastern Feature Film Company, of Boston. Herman Rifkin, of the New England organization, attended a showing of four of the two-reelers and was immensely pleased with the possibilities offered by them.

With the disposal of the New England franchise, the Territorial Sales Corporation has now virtually completed its work with the Jester comedies. There is still some territory unsold, but negotiations are now pending for the disposal of these sections. These two-reelers starring Twede Dan are said to be amongst the best fun makers on the market and to have proved valuable assets to organizations taking them over.

Lesser Prepares a Booklet of "Bathing Girl" Pictures

AN account of the big demand for photos of the Mack Sennett bathing beauties, as well as the comedians appearing in "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," Sol Lesser, in conjunction with E. M. Asher, personal representative of Mr. Sennett, have decided to publish a booklet with a complete set of photographs.

This booklet has been designed by H. C. McCourt. The cover bears the photo of Mack Sennett and two of his original girls, with the captions, "Queens of the Sea," "Mack Sennett, King of Comedy," "Bathing Beauties," and is in colors.

There is a foreword giving a brief history of Mr. Sennett and of Mr. Lesser, who conceived the idea of giving the public a chance to see the bathing beauties in person. The booklet contains thirty-four pictures, a short story of Mack Sennett and his studio and several ads.

This is said to be the first time a book of this kind has been gotten out by a state rights distributor, and it is claimed that it is of such a nature that it will be a big seller for any exhibitor showing a Mack Sennett comedy.

Raver Sells "Liberator" for Three More States

RIGHTS for the distribution of Harry Raver's twelve-episode serial, "The Liberator," starring D'Annunzio's famous "Maciste," have just been closed for the states of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, the Producers' and Exhibitors' Pictures Company acquiring ownership. Missouri and Kansas have also been disposed of to the Central Film Service of St. Louis, Mo.

Negotiations are now pending for the sale of the entire West Coast territory through Frank Samuels, a personal representative of Harry Raver in Los Angeles.

In spite of the hot weather, Mr. Raver announces sales of territory have been closed in record breaking time, notwithstanding the fact that he has been devoting his energies largely to the production of Augustus Thomas plays in pictures for Hodkinson distribution.

Pioneer Sales Force Reports Big Business

THE Pioneer Film Corporation reports that it corps of salesmen who have been on the road for some time, reaching most of the important exchange centres in the country, have met with great success in disposing of rights to the Pioneer productions, and will soon return to New York preparatory to making a second swing across the country.

Jerry Abrams, who has been in the Middle West, is negotiating the sale of the entire Pioneer list, and an announcement of the purchasers will probably be made in the near future. M. H. Hoffman, the general manager of the company, is still on the road, and has already announced important sales, including that of rights for three states to Messrs. Elliott and Brockwell, of Chicago.

S. Aronowitz, of Quality Films, of Des Moines, has been meeting with excellent results with "Virtuous Sinners" and other Pioneer films he is handling, and is negotiating for additional releases.

More Sales on "Brown of Harvard."

The following sales are reported by Film Specials, Inc., on the Selig reissue, "Brown of Harvard": To the Crescent Film Company, of Kansas City, for Kansas and western Missouri; to Craft Film Service, Pittsburgh, for western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and northern Ohio, and to the L. A. Sheridan Film Exchange, of Des Moines, for Iowa and Nebraska.

Majority of Rights Sold on Helen Holmes Serial

ALTHOUGH only four episodes of "The Fatal Fortune," the new Helen Holmes serial being made by the S. L. K. Serial Corporation, have been completed, announcement is made that practically all of the American and European rights have been sold.

In addition to the list of domestic sales chronicled in our last issue the following territory outside of this country has been disposed of: Great Britain, Australia, France, Germany, South Africa, Russia, Belgium, the Balkans, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Greece, Holland and Italy to Jacobo Glucksman; the Far East to J. Pearson, and Mexico, Spain and Portugal to Joseph Lamy.

S. L. Krellberg, president of the company, states: "The demand for the Helen Holmes serial is beyond my fondest expectation. All who witnessed the first four episodes are very enthusiastic, and I believe the public will pronounce it the greatest serial story ever produced."

Latest Abramson Picture Will Be Shown August 16

THE latest Ivan Abramson production, "Someone Must Pay," will be shown on the screen for the first time on August 16, when it will be viewed by twelve prominent exchangemen who are said to represent nearly eighty per cent. of the territory of the United States. One of the parties who will attend this showing—Charles Rosenthal, Jr., of the M. & R. Feature Film Company—has already reached New York.

It is further announced that a plan is now under consideration to have Director Abramson make a series of pictures for the independent market for bi-monthly release, and it is probable that a combination of interests will result in which the Graphic Film Corporation will play an important part.

Hite Forms New Company

ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made that the C. C. Hite Attractions, 532 Walnut street, Cincinnati, has been bought by the C. C. Hite Attractions Company, a $200,000 corporation formed by Mr. Hite and a number of prominent exhibitors of Cincinnati for the purpose of buying and distributing the better state rights productions for the central states.

The president of the organization is Mr. Hite, well known in film circles, having formerly been connected with the Mutual, Triangle and Goldwyn Film Corporation. L. B. Liebtag is secretary, and was formerly of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cincinnati, while George Vivian Smith, treasurer, was connected with the United Picture Theatres of America.

Mr. Hite states the company is negotiating for several large productions, and will open offices in Cleveland, Louisville and Indianapolis.

Many New Faces at Bulls Eye.

Bulls Eye Film Corporation has recently enlarging the personnel at its Hollywood studios, and there are now many new faces among the casts of the different companies. Among the newcomers are Harry Mann and Matis Connolly, who appeared with Nazimova in the "Red Lantern"; May Foster, a character woman, and Beatrice Lovejoy, formerly of the Griffith forces.

Pioneer Closes Deal With Elliott and Brockwell

AN important deal consummated during the past week in the independent field was the signing of contracts by which Clyde Elliott and Floyd Brockwell, of the Greater Stars Productions, Chicago, secure the Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin rights to all current and forthcoming productions of the Pioneer Film Corporation.

This arrangement was engineered by M. H. Hoffman, general manager of Pioneer, who is now in Chicago. Messrs. Brockwell and Elliott are well known exchange men, conducting one of the most enterprising exchanges in the Middle West. They will immediately start an intensive campaign among exhibitors in their territory.

Special salesmen will be sent out with the Pioneer attractions, which include "The Boomerang," "The Long Arm of Mannister," "Confession," with Henry B. Walthall; also "The Girl from Nowhere," with Cleo Madison; "Sins of the Children" and "Virtuous Sinners," together with Grace Davison in "Suspicion" and her latest production, "Atonement."

Many Week-Runs Repeated on Ham and Bud Reissues

FULL week runs in many first-class theatres in the principal cities are claimed for the Ham and Bud single-reel comedies. F. E. Backer, general sales manager of Jans Productions, Inc., owners of the world's rights, declares that this is a criterion accepted as the highest endorsement of their acumen in buying the ninety-two negatives of these comedies which were popular five years ago.

John H. Kunsky's circuit in Detroit is the latest to contract for full week runs in downtown Detroit. The booking was placed by Strand Features Exchange.

Although ninety-two of these Ham and Bud comedies were purchased originally from the Kalem Company, only fifty-two of the best were chosen to be distributed one every week through the various state rights buyers. All new paper has been especially designed and printed and great care exercised in the laboratory work.

The Jans Company, owners of the Metro, Nazimova and B. A. Rolfe rights for New Jersey, has gone extensively into the world wide rights field. Besides the Ham and Bud comedies purchase, the Tom Mix single-reel Westerns were bought from William Selig. The famous Stingaree serial negative was also secured for the entire world, and is now being sold to the territorial buyers.

General Sales Manager Backer says an important announcement will be forthcoming soon, and intimates that Jans Productions, Inc., have practically closed a deal that bids fair to place that company among the foremost in the world's market for big film features.

"Love Wins" Is Announced as New Type of Picture

THE feature production, "Love Wins," which is being filmed by H. & H. Productions, Inc., with Violet Mersereau as the star, is announced as a new type of production dealing with conditions in this country brought about as the result of the war, but it is not a war picture.

Unusually massive sets have been constructed at the studio, indicating the scope of the production. There will also be many beautiful exteriors. The actual production work is forging ahead rapidly and the photographic work will soon be completed. The story is said to be full of surprises, with an unusual climax which will furnish food for thought for many days after the picture is seen.

Burrud Making Travelogues

THE Bulls Eye Film Corporation announces that L. J. (Dick) Burrud, producer of American and foreign travelogues, recently left Los Angeles for a fifty-two weeks' automobile tour during which he will make films of the American and Canadian Rocky Mountains. After completing this tour he will go to the Orient to make pictures of the Shantung peninsula and other points which at this time are very much in the public eye. These productions will all be released through the Bulls Eye organization.

Tsuru Aoki Reappears in "The Gray Horizon" Film

AN indication of what the motion picture producer of today is trying to do along artistically creative lines is contained in the Robertson-Cole feature, "The Gray Horizon," starring Sessue Hayakawa, which will be released by Exhibitors Mutual.

The story is from the pen of Clifford Howard, author of a number of motion picture plays, and was directed by William Worthington.

In the picture there are some exterior scenes with the mountains in the background and the clouds rolling down on the peaks. Another realistic effect is obtained in Hayakawa's cabin when, with the setting sun, the rays gradually recede across the floor, leaving the room in twilight. All of the interiors are rich in composition.

Tsuru Aoki, Hayakawa's wife, will be seen again with him in "The Gray Horizon." This is Aoki's first appearance on the screen since "The Courageous Coward." The little Japanese actress has appeared with Hayakawa in his biggest successes.

Burmuda Locale Featured in "The Isle of Jewels"

WITH the announcement this week that October 5 will be release date for the Arthur F. Beck serial, "The Isle of Jewels," it is evident that a new time record for serial production must be set if the Pathe serial program is to keep up to its schedule. Perry Vekroff, director, declares his work at the Crystal studios and at the various locations is so systematized that the production will be ready for Pathe's thirty-one branch offices as far in advance of release date as any previous serial.

Stuart Holmes and Frances Mann, the featured players, with their supporting cast, including John Webb Dillion, Wilfred Lytell, John P. Wade, Billy Welch, Elaine Adams, Karl Dane and Sam Kim, a noted Chinese actor, began their work under Director Vekroff at the Crystal Studio in New York City two weeks ago. For the next two weeks they will be engaged at the studio and on location in and about New York for the scenes laid there. When these are completed the entire company will leave for the Bermudas.

The story is by Charles Turner Dazey, author of the stage success, "In Old Kentucky." Its scenes shift from the bustle of a huge wholesale jewelry house in New York and the magnificent surroundings of an Eastern millionaire's country place, through the Arizona desert, the fantastic streets and opium dens of San Francisco's Chinatown, the tropical native villages and jungles of a South Pacific isle and Oriental India.

Capitol Comedy Uses Caricature.

"Smiling Bill" Parsons conceived a novel idea in screen story telling which he incorporated in his latest Capitol Comedy, "They're Off." When the print was received at the Goldwyn Exchange, from which all the Capitols are distributed, it was observed that Mr. Parsons had employed a double titling effect, two titles appearing on the screen at the same time.

Double Exposure Used for Dual Role in "Lyons Mail"

THE cutting and titling of The Lyons Mail, which will introduce the dramatic star H. B. Irving to the screen, is now completed and the elaborate picture production of this well known play will be presented in August, the Triangle Film Corporation announces.

Hundreds of people appear in the big scenes. The dual role of the master criminal and the prominent business man who is mistaken for him is made effective by clever camera work, the art of double exposure enabling H. B. Irving to play scenes with himself as his double.

In his Broadway appearance, Irving, as the criminal, was forced to conclude the scene of the discovery of his guilt by shrinking behind a pillar and appearing again immediately, by means of two trap doors in the stage, as the innocent prisoner saved from the gallows. Then he was forced to disappear again and return as the criminal fighting for his life with the mob, after which he had to regain his breath and composure in a few seconds before appearing in the beautiful final scene where the innocent hero is acclaimed by the people. The improvement made in this climax by substituting camera work for stage tricks is said to be an interesting feature.

Lloyd a Winner in "A Jazzed Honeymoon."

Harold Lloyd in the one-reel comedy, "A Jazzed Honeymoon," a recent release by the Pathe Exchange, has received favorable comment by all who saw the picture. Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels support the star.

Blanche Sweet Escapes in Balloon from Zulu Village

UP in the Tejunga Pass in the far famed Southern California mountains there is a Zulu village situated upon the spot where not so very many years ago the tepee of the American Indian stood. The African detail was constructed under the direction of Jesse D. Hampton for the use of Blanche Sweet, who is starring under his management in "A Woman of Pleasure." The story as picturized by George Elwood Janks in seven reels has been enlarged upon to a considerable extent, and will be released by Pathe. Wallace Worsley is directing Miss Sweet under the supervision of Mr. Hampton.

Hundreds of Africans were transported from Los Angeles to the mountain pass to play in this picture. Every night they insisted upon returning to their homes, so it required very heavy expense daily for automobiles, meals and the necessary costumes.

In the cast are Wheeler Oakman, Wilfred Lucas, Spottiswoode Aitken, Joseph Swickard, Frederic Starr and Wesley Barry. It is in this Zulu village that Miss Sweet makes her thrilling ascent in a balloon.

Showmen Take Big Interest in Earle Williams' "Wolf"

EXHIBITORS throughout the country are taking a lively interest in Earle Williams' new feature, "The Wolf," Vitagraph's screen version of the drama of the same name by Eugene Walter. The feature has been completed and shown to a chosen few, who enthused over it.

As Jules Beaubien, the role originated by William Courtenay in the stage production, Mr. Williams has ample opportunity to display those characteristics which has made him one of the best known actors in the motion picture world.

Not alone has "The Wolf" the advantage of a capable star in its screen version, a noteworthy cast and strong, thrilling story, but it has the additional advantage of wonderful scenic effects. The locale is entirely in the mountains of the Dominion of Canada, but the actual natural scenery of America cannot be excelled and perhaps where in the world could a more picturesque atmosphere be found for "The Wolf" than the location in the California mountains selected by James Young, the director.

In keeping with the general excellence of the play, Vitagraph provided an unexcelled company. Mr. Williams is seen as Jules Beaubien and Jane Novak plays opposite him as Hilda MacTavish. The other characters are in the hands of Brinsley Shaw, George Nichols, Robert McKim, Billy Mason and Beulah Clark.

Christie Starts Work on New Specials.

Al E. Christie has started production upon his new Christie Special in two reels featuring Edith Roberts, Neal Burns and Eddie Barry. Neal Burns not only is Miss Roberts' main support but is author of the story as well. The picture, which will be ready for release sometime in September, will be called "He Married His Wife."

Flora Finch Featured in "The Immovable Guest"

TOPPING the list of short subject releases scheduled by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for July 27 is the Paramount-James Montgomery Flagg comedy, "The Immovable Guest," which marks the return to the screen of Flora Finch, well known to motion picture fans for years as a comedienne.

Flora Finch for a long time played opposite John Bunny in his popular comedies, and her appearance in the latest Flagg satirical farce will be relished by her thousands of admirers. As an old maid in this production she is said to "vamp" an old sea dog along most original lines, the result being gales of laughter. The other leading roles are played by Joseph Burke, Claire Whitney and Arthur Housman.

"The Miracle of Montoir" is the subject of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Picture also released the 27th. This picture presents a traveler's impression of what he saw in the little city of Montoir. This little town in France grew up almost over night, one may say, around the old windmill situated on a little hill not far from the busy seaport near St. Nazaire.

To build this city men came from all over the world. Chinese, Algerians, French, English, Arabs—all kinds of representatives of Allied Nations and their colonies with a scattering of German prisoners under guard, to do the digging and the road making.

Animal Life Shown in Slow Motion Views.

Of big appeal to naturalists is the Pathe Review, No. 15, released August 3. Every student of the habits of birds and animals will find in the scenes presented some new and surprising phases of life in the open. Under the title "Zoo Babies," a series of pictures taken under the direction of Dr. Ditmars, curator at the Bronx Zoological Gardens, one gets an intimate portrait of the Australian emu.

The pictures also show the Teddy bears at play. Babies of the wolf family form another instructive scene, as they frolic and feed. The goldfinch, one of nature's sweetest singers, is revealed in the Pathecolor, which is necessary to show this gorgeous songstress in all her beauty.

Exhibitor Acclaims Select Picture.

When Manager Wise of the Alcazar Theatre at Birmingham, Ala., ran "Upstairs and Down," Olive Thomas' first Selznick Picture, he achieved such pleasing results that he wired his indorsement to W. R. Liebmann, branch manager for Select at Atlanta. It seems, however, that he was afraid to trust his word of commendation to the telegraph system, so he called Branch Manager Liebmann on the telephone before the wire had arrived to make sure Liebmann would learn how pleased he was. Mr. Wise's telegram read as follows: "'Upstairs and Down' doing great business despite the season's hottest weather. Holding them out afternoons and nights. We will make her the biggest star in Birmingham."

Morey Working on "Out of the Dark."

Word has reached Vitagraph from New Hampshire that Harry T. Morey and his company have finally gotten down to work on Morey's next feature, "Out of the Dark." The rains which started in to prove that St. Swithin was right played havoc with the plans of Director Paul Scardon. For more than ten days the entire company was kept in a more or less drenched state in the lumber camps waiting for the sun to come out. They were too far from civilization to get perfect shelter, and didn't give up because each day gave promise of clearing up. Now Mr. Scardon will make up for lost time.

Flash of Mob Scene Used to Start Pathe Serial

THE forthcoming Pathe serial, "Bound and Gagged," in which George B. Seitz, the producer and director, is co-starring with Marguerite Courtot starts with a bang—a street battle in which the hero is seen standing off a mob of one hundred or more armed men and finally making a spectacular escape. Then the story proper opens. The opening scene is really a flash of an incident that appears later in the action and serves not only to grip and hold interest from the start, but to establish the character of the hero in his true light.

The street battle scenes were made in the studio of the George B. Seitz Productions, Inc., and required more than one hundred men in the making.

Only 65 Subtitles in Hayakawa Film.

Since the advent of the feature production producers have been striving to turn out their stories titleless. Their aim has been to make the entire action tell the story without the use of wordy explanation. It has become the lot of the Haworth Company featuring Sessue Hayakawa to almost achieve this goal. In the filming of "The Gray Horizon," a Robertson-Cole feature distributed by Exhibitors Mutual, they have succeeded in reducing the use of titles to a minimum. In "The Gray Horizon" only 65 titles are used all told. Generally a feature picture has 100 or more subtitles.

Definitely Title Lewis' Fourth Select Picture

MITCHELL LEWIS' fourth Select Picture has been definitely titled; it is now called "Faith of the Strong" instead of "La Rue of the Strong Heart," as it was known during the process of production. Select officials feel that "Faith of the Strong" is a much more characteristic title for this story.

At a private showing of the picture given to Select officials in its projection room, they were pleasingly gratified with the entire production, and after viewing it, expressed a unanimous conviction that it is the best picture—without any exception—that Mitchell Lewis has made to date. It is a stirring tale of the great Northwest, full of incident, adventure and emotion; the scenes are laid in the frontier settlements and the picture is punctuated now and again with shots revealing nature at her loveliest; the direction by Robert North Bradbury reveals his wide experience with this type of story; the star himself has a role, as the fearless but golden-hearted La Rue, that adds another wreath to his laurels; and his supporting cast functions admirably. In fact, Gloria Payton, who plays opposite Lewis, and Patricia Palmer, who depicts a hoydenish waif of the mining camp, give distinct promise of stellar material, if their performances in the future will come up to the artistry they have displayed in "Faith of the Strong."

"Sporting Chance" Treats of Girl Problem.

The question of whether a girl should obey every impulse which takes root in her mind is dealt with in an interesting way, it is said, in a new Paramount picture starring Ethel Clayton, which will be released August 3.

A delightful story is woven around this theme. The story is unique and original and has an unexpected finish. The original story was written by Roger Hartman and appeared in a recent issue of the Snappy Stories Magazine under the title, "Impulses."

The picture was directed by George Malford and Will M. Ritchey wrote the scenario.

Heading the supporting cast is Jack Holt. Others in the cast are Herbert Standing, Margaret Green and Howard Davies.

Ford Educational Shows Fishing.

Goldwyn announces the release of a new Ford Educational Weekly, "Caught," which was taken in the Canadian west.

The picture reveals the source of the supply of fish which has reduced the cost of living all along the western seacoast. With remarkable daring, the cameraman accompanied the intrepid fishermen as they laid their nets and photographed the big catches, which later will be served in the "best of families," fresh from the sea.

Many of the canneries which supply fish for eastern distributors are located in the Canadian west.

Art Titles for Bulls Eye Comedies.

Announcement is made by Bulls Eye Film Corporation that its two-reel comedies to be released beginning in September will have hand-made art titles. These are to be caricatures illustrating the action of the film against an artistic background.

Sidelights and Reflections

EVERY once in so often someone connected with the screen breaks into print with the joyful announcement that the spoken drama will soon disappear from the face of the earth, driven into oblivion by its young and marvelously vigorous rival, the silent drama. Such a prophesy is not only the sheerest nonsense, but it reflects severely upon the intelligence of the person making it. When a man who claims to have had fifteen years' experience on the stage makes the statement, "A few years from now I don't believe there'll be any legitimate shows outside New York City, for the simple reason that they will all have been replaced by picture houses," he discloses how woefully he under-rates the intelligence of the average man and woman.

Everyone knows that the remarkable utility of the screen permits it to send perfect reproductions of its product into the remotest hamlets, and its language can be understood by all. The power of the screen as a means of entertainment and education is well understood, and it is growing greater every day. But it would be nothing less than a terrible calamity if the spoken stage should cease to exist. Only the most superficial mind could contemplate such a lamentable cutting down of mankind's stock of mental refreshment with anything but feelings of deep regret.

It is such statements as the above that put a club in the hands of the enemies of the screen and make its intelligent friends wonder how much longer a certain element connected with the moving picture is going to continue to act as if it agreed with the gentleman who remarked, "This world is inhabited by millions of human beings—most of them fools." The old adage that "Variety is the spice of life" was never more true than it is today. And the world has never had more need of as many different modes of relaxation as possible than it has today, with the terrific strain that most of us are continually under taking its toll of nerve and energy. There always will be audiences all over his country and throughout the world that will be eager to attend the comedies, dramas and musical shows of the spoken stage, and there will always be performances for them to attend. And for this the wellwishers of the screen should be and are truly thankful. They recognize that not only is there room for both forms of amusement and education, but each profits by the friendly rivalry. Sincere respect for each other naturally is the attitude of the thinkers in both pursuits. The screen is the offspring of the stage and the younger art should glory in the history and achievement of its parent. WEITZEL.

"The World Aflame"

Frank Keenan Picture Released by Pathe Contains Big Theme which Is Well Handled in the Main.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

IN "The World Aflame," released by Pathe, Frank Keenan is pretty nearly the whole works. He is the author of the story, part builder of the scenario and plays the leading character. His story contains a big theme which is well handled in the main. It is told in six reels. As a consequence, it moves slower than is necessary, and the big dramatic scene is followed by a series of incidents that are correct as to subject but too long drawn out. The sooner the picture ends after the strike is broken, the better. There are certain dramatic laws which the screen cannot afford to ignore. Tempo is one of them. The novelist can overweigh his story with description and get away with it. Any form of fiction intended to be shown before a body of spectators cannot sucessfully take the same liberty. Deft cutting all through "The World Aflame" would give it added vitality and that sense of drama which is the soul of the photoplay.

The story evidently was suggested by the Seattle strike and the methods used by the mayor to break it. Such a theme is of course a timely one. Author Keenan has put his plot together so that the moral lesson he wants to drive home fulfils its mission strongly. At the same time he does not forget that the first duty of a dramatist, screen or stage, is to entertain. There is a pleasing admixture of thrills, laughs and food for thought in the story. As an author Frank Keenan has made an excellent beginning. The physically dramatic scenes are skilfully conceived and will stir the blood of every spectator. His solution of the bringing together of capital and labor is based upon common sense and will meet with much approval.

As Carson Burr, the man who runs for mayor that he may help to correct the bad system under which the city is governed, Frank Keenan presents a character with enough mental force to accomplish the task. A desire always to appear as a "glass of fashion" and a tendency to pose too often and too long rob his impersonation of absolute conviction. A plainer type of man, one with less regard for the small vanities of life, would have added materially to the truth and strength of the story.

The supporting company is competent. Ernest C. Warde has directed "The World Aflame" with excellent understanding of its needs, and the production as a whole is impressive.

The Story.

Opening at the home of Carson Burr, "The World Aflame" shows how the family dinner is spoiled by a cook who reads a Bolshevist paper called "The Red Messenger." The story also tells that the Burr chauffeur neglects his duty, that the waiters in the restaurants are insolent and that a movement is on foot to start a general strike in the city, the editor of the anarchistic sheet being at the bottom of it. Burr is a wealthy business man who has fought his own way in the world. He runs for mayor and is elected. He has hardly taken office when the editor of "The Red Messenger" gets the street car men to lead off the proposed general strike.

Burr handles the situation so vigorously that he soon breaks the strike. When an attempt is made to halt the car that he is determined shall run, he gives orders to the armed men with him to fire into the crowd unless it falls back. The anarchists have captured his son and have threatened to kill the young man unless Burr backs down, but he refuses. After the mayor has restored peace to the city, he calls together all the leading business men and explains his plan for getting capital and labor together and putting a stop to strikes in the future. Co-operative profit-sharing is what he suggests. Through force of will, Burr gets both sides to take part in a joint meeting, and matters are adjusted on the co-operative basis.

"Checkers"

Fox Screen Production of Henry M. Blossom's Famous Melodrama Should Prove a Great Drawing Card.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

WHEN Henry M. Blossom's story, "Checkers," was made into a stage play it became one of the biggest successes in the field of melodrama. The screen version produced by William Fox will assuredly duplicate the hit of the spoken play. The story of "Checkers" is one that will always appeal to lovers of racing, and the makers of the picture have seen to it that there is no running short of melodramatic situations to keep the interest at the right tension. There is enough excitement in its seven reels to supply action for half-a-dozen of the ordinary kind of screen stories, and the extent and general excellence of the production are other features that will help it to register a knockout.

The cast is a long one, and Thomas J. Carrigan and Jean Acker, who play the leading characters, give the hero and the heroine just the right sort of personalities. Richard Stanton has directed the picture with a keen eye to the melodramatic nature of the plot, the race track scenes being the real thing. There is also a railroad wreck in which a blazing freight car goes through an open draw, which will furnish a large stock of thrills. Scenes in Chinatown, others around a training track and the biggest scene of all when the heroine of the story gets inside of a jockey's suit and rides "Remorse" under the wire a winner, supply a series of punches that will put "Checkers" in the record-breaking class.

The Story.

"Checkers," the hero of the screen melodrama of that name, is a young chap who helps Pert Barlow save her father from financial ruin by getting her to enter her horse, "Remorse," in a famous race after the elder Barlow has quarreled with his daughter over "Checkers" and forbidden her ever to see the young fellow again. Having made a match between Pert and Arthur Kendall, the son of his oldest friend, when his daughter was in her cradle, Judge Barlow is determined the wedding shall take place. Pert does not love Kendall, and is just as determined she will not become his wife after meeting "Checkers."

Kendall has prevailed upon his prospective father-in-law to indorse his note for twenty thousand dollars. The spendthrift has entered a horse of his own in the race, and when he learns of the unsuspected speed of Remorse, he does everything in his power to keep the horse away from the track. Alva Romaine, a girl he cast off in order to announce his engagement to Pert, is persuaded to help him get hold of the Barlow horse and to make the heroine a prisoner.

Pert and "Checkers" escape with Remorse from the home of Judge Barlow after the old Southerner has locked his daughter in her room. Kendall plots to have the freight car in which the horse is traveling uncoupled from the train and run off an open drawbridge. In the struggle to do this, the car is set on fire, with "Checkers" and Pert in with the horse. The outrage takes place as planned, but "Checkers" manages to save Remorse and Pert takes care of herself. In leading the horse to a hiding place until the day of the race, "Checkers" and Pert pass through Chinatown. A trick separates the lovers, and the girl is made a prisoner in the house of a wealthy Chinaman. The manner of her rescue and the way she and Remorse appear on the track at the right time and Pert rides her horse to victory are handled in such a spirited fashion that the excitement never ceases to grip the spectator. Through it all, "Checkers" does more than his share of the good work and is rewarded by winning the Judge's consent to his marriage with Pert.

"The Petal of the Current"

Mary MacLaren Gives Effective Portrayal of Girl in Night Court in Film Adaptation of Fannie Hurst Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE opening reels of "The Petal on the Current," a six-part Universal Special featuring Mary MacLaren, are slow in getting into the plot of the story, and the second reel has an over abundance of rough-house stuff, a part of which might have been eliminated with advantage to the production. But in spite of its faults, the picture is one which will be liked by the average spectator, because it contains a wealth of human interest, and because it treats of a subject of vital importance—the predicament of the girl in the night court, sentenced by the testimony of the police or secret service men.

The production, based on Fannie Hurst's celebrated story, is not highly dramatic in construction; but the effective work of some of its players add a convincing tone to the narrative. Mary MacLaren puts over in good style a number of emotional scenes, portraying splendidly the character of the unsophisticated girl to whom the drinking of a couple glasses of beer proves fatal. The director has taken undue advantage of the use of the closeup, which makes rather too obvious the effort of putting the idea of the story across.

Stella, employed in the childen's department of a large shoe store, chooses as a friend Cora Kinealy, a girl of strong, but unmoral character. Cora, moved by Stella's desire to marry, guides her through the wrong door and becomes the unintentional cause of her downfall.

The desire to do as others do leads Stella to yield to the persuasions of Cora and other members of a beer party to drink with them. Under the influence of the liquor she wanders into the street and is taken by a detective to the night court, where she is sentenced to ten days in jail.

On her release, she finds that her mother has died through grief after reading the letter telling of her daughter's disgrace. She also discovers that the world is quicker to adopt scandal than it is to listen to the truth. Relieved of her job in the shoe store, she goes into the street, and is finally picked up by the right sort of man and taken to the Salvation Army barracks.

"Nugget Nell"

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

DEPENDENT largely upon the winning personality of Dorothy Gish, "Nugget Nell" has several bright spots, but the lively action is heavily encumbered with attempts to be facetious in the subtitles. With half of the subtitles out, particularly those explaining the obvious action, "Nugget Nell" would be vastly improved. Dorothy carries the whole burden of entertainment herself, the other roles being inconsequential and without enough real character to be of live human interest.

She impersonates an amusing type of Western girl-boy, addicted to men's clothes and cowboy style of life, riding well and shooting fast. She is charming in her conversion to woman's convential garb and her method of obtaining it, by holding up those who have it, is decidedly unique, the brightest incident of the burlesque. The production has many of the elements of a sparkling satire—in skilled hands its material would suffice, and it gets over in places as it is, but the entertainment as a whole is below those in which Dorothy has appeared, and becomes almost wholly dependent on her amusing portraiture for interest. Counted a fair amusement by spectators at the Rialto.

Nell is almost broken-hearted—she has become infatuated with the city chap. She decides to exchange her cowboy attire for that of a stylish girl and goes about it with characteristic energy, holding up a terrified salesgirl and others, stripping them of enough clothes to completely equip herself, and now engages the handsome stranger's interest. A gang of outlaws conspire to rob the stranger, and Nell defends him at the peril of her life, discovering to her dismay that he is an arrant coward. Her illusions gone, she bravely holds a shack single-handed against the outlaws until Jim, the sheriff, comes to her rescue and lassoes them one by one. Thoroughly disillusioned, she resumes her boyish character and takes on Jim for a life partner.

Advertising Angles: Hinge most of your publicity to the star and then interest your patrons in the story because of what happens to the heroine. It will be best to use incidents rather than the running story, such as "She wore boys' clothes until she fell in love with the city chap, but he proved to be a coward, so she went back to overalls and married the Sheriff." "There were no department stores in the mining camp, so she went shopping with a six-shooter for small change—and she brought home the clothes." For a lobby display gild small stones or bits of coal and letter the title with these. You might work a hook up with the dry goods stores on the shopping incident.

"The Love Burglar"

A Paramount Picture Adapted from "One of Us," by Jack Lait, and Presenting Wallace Reid in an Amusing Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

AN amusing story of enthusiastic adventure in the underworld, "The Love Burglar" comes close to being a bright satire on the burglar play. It runs along seriously as an actual and convincing experience among desperate crooks, a lurid melodrama, bringing about a very interesting situation between "The Colt Kid," a desperate character just released from Joliet prison, and a beautiful singer who is in the clutches of a gang of thieves. In order to save her from them, he is obliged to marry her, and the ceremony is performed by a pickpocket turned clergyman. They both understand that the ceremony is a mere pretense and do not live as man and wife except to keep up appearances.

Now is developed with skill a glimpse of the true situation, one full of peril for both, through the amorous attentions of one of the crooks. The desperate gun-man, by whom the whole gang is terrorized, is an athletic young society man who disguised himself successfully in a still hunt for a fool brother in the underworld and was mistaken for the real criminal, impersonating him so well as to be accepted as "one of us."

Suspense is kept alive over the fate of the beautiful singer, whose identity becomes revealed when the fool crooks attempt to loot the young athlete's house. While the situations are melodramatic, there is a vein of subtle humor throughout, and the action is so swift that interest never relaxes. The cast is a fine one. Wallace Reid easily leads through force and personality, but he is admirably supported by Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Wallace Beery, Wilton Taylor and others. The

The Story.

As a "Love Burglar" David Strong proves an immediate success when he goes to the underworld to find an errant brother. He is mistaken for the "Colt Kid," a bad man with the gun, just released from Joliet prison, and on his way to one of the toughest joints in New York, kept by a crook named Miller. Strong accepts the situation and finds himself involved in a dispute with Coast-to-Coast Taylor, a gang leader, over a girl the latter is trying to pull into a badger game. The girl, Joan Gray, induces David to impersonate the man she intends to marry, and he is obliged to prove it by demanding that a ceremony be performed by Parson Smith, the cafe piano-player, an ex-pickpocket inclined to reform.

At Joan's flat David is obliged to keep up appearances to save the girl from attentions from the gang leader, a situation which grows embarrasing when David's sister is about to be married and he is asked to help in looting his own mother's house on the occasion of the wedding. The gang-leader expects to have David trapped by the police through this crime. Both David and Joan are arrested at the scene of the crime, but explanations follow together with the arrest of the real criminals, and it is discovered that Joan, instead of being of the underworld, is a young novelist who daringly went to live there for materials and atmosphere for her next work of fiction. While David and Joan watch the wedding of David's sister, they plan a legitimate one of their own.

"Bringing Up Betty"

Evelyn Greeley Star of World Film Which Provided Light Summer Entertainment.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

LIGHT summer entertainment is provided in the World Film release, "Bringing Up Betty." There is no heavy or intricate plot, and the "heavy" is only mildly villainous. In fact, he is let off with a reward instead of a punishment.

Evelyn Greeley is attractive as "Betty," and gives a breezy performance, in keeping with the type of picture, which consists mostly of out-of-door scenes, such as yacht races, lawn fetes, sea shore views, etc. There are several attractive shots.

The action at times puts quite a tax on the spectator's credulity, and several of the situations are of the kind that have seen much service. For example, where Betty's uncle feigns bankruptcy to test its effect on her, and the result where the two foreign noblemen, suitors for her hand, beat a hasty retreat when they learn that she is penniless.

Much of the appeal of the picture is due to the personality and charm of the star, who admirably carries her large share of the production. The hero does not make his appearance until late in the film, so late that you wonder if the villain will actually get the girl. Everything, however, comes out allright when the magnanimous uncle of Betty, after ruining him in a stock deal, fixes it so that the villain will get in on a fairly respectable fortune—$700,000—by Betty is a thoroughbred and she accepts.

Soon thereafter, Betty is rescued by the hero from downing, and the expected happens. In the meantime, the banker's secretary, learning that her friend has become engaged to Betty, reveals the whole plan to Betty's uncle, who then breaks him on the stock market. Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE artistic shortcomings of "Where Bonds Are Loosed," a six-part picture taken from an English novel of the same name and written by E. L. Grant Watson, are so many and so apparent that it is difficult to find anything in its favor. While it is evidently an honest attempt on the part of David G. Fisher, who made the scenario, directed the production and played the leading part, to give his best endeavors to his task, the nature of the story and his own want of skill in the three positions he selected for himself have defeated his ambition. "Where Bonds Are Loosed" is a disagreeable story and not worth the telling on the screen. It hasn't an attractive or sympathetic character. It shows humanity at its worst, and if the conditions on two islands under British government are truthfully drawn by the author, it is high time for that government to get busy.

On the technical side, "Where Bonds Are Loosed" commits all sorts of sins. The man who wrote the story is a scientist and evidently the author of the foreword, which is so long, complex and above the heads of the ordinary screen patron that it offers an amusing

"His Bridal Night"

Alice Brady Gives Clever Performance in Select's Screen Version of Stage Farce.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THERE are those who will not like Lawrence Irving Rising's play, "His Bridal Night," in its screen attire. There are also those who will, and the latter will be in the majority. The moral minded may object, for instance, to the bride displaying the mole on her ankle, or to broad suggestions which are not hard to find if you look for them. And while the indifferent mind will see only the amusing side of the situation, it is not after all the sort of a picture to flaunt in the face of an innocent debutante.

In the portrayal of the diversified characters of the Playfair twins, Alice Brady has done some of her best work. As Tiny she is moved by nobler impulses, and as Vi she is heartless and mischievous beyond reason. As for appearances, of course, there is little distinction, with the exception of the fact that Vi has a mole on her ankle, and Tiny sucks her thumb. The slight variations in appearance occasioned by differences of temperament are delicately outlined; and it may be truthfully said that her performance in this clever farce is delightful.

Edward Earle plays the role of the distracted bridegroom in an unobtrusive manner becoming to the least interesting of the contracting parties, and holds his reputation for not overstepping character requirements. James Crane, as the misguided lover, also does good work.

The Story.

The story of "His Bridal Night" centers about a pair of naughty twin girls, a would-be lover, and a bridegroom. It opens on the eve of the bridal day, when Tiny Playfair reproaches her twin sister Vi, the prospective bride, for making an appointment to meet in secret with a former admirer for the purpose of bidding him goodby. Tiny, herself in love with the latter, precedes her sister into the garden, and impersonating Vi, receives the young man's kisses and dismisses him before Vi appears on the scene.

The day of the wedding, complications arise during which the bridegroom finds his wife in the arms of the other man, who has taken advantage of the flexibility of Vi's conscience to sow seeds of dissention in the young bride's mind, suggesting that the refusal of the bridegroom to tell her where they are going on their honeymoon is merely the beginning of an iron rule in their domestic affairs.

Alice Brady.
Is quite "adorable" in this predicament in "His Bridal Night."

Again Tiny enters the breach, and further complications occur when she impersonates her sister, with the aid of duplicate gowns which happen to be on hand through a mistake made by the modiste. The lover in pursuit of the bride, who he believes is being carried away against her will, takes a wrong turning, but finally arrives at the honeymoon cottage about the same time as Vi, who has now been seized with a fit of jealousy at the idea of her sister running off with her husband. The affair clears itself nicely, when husband and wife are reunited, and the offending pair appear more than satisfied with each other.

"Wolves of the Night"

William Farnum Has Congenial Role in Vigorous Melodrama Produced by William Fox.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

E. LLOYD SHELDON, who wrote the story and the scenario of "Wolves of the Night," a William Fox production starring William Farnum, has turned out a vigorous melodrama that will be none-the-less liked by the ordinary spectator because its situations have been used many times and contain an unusual amount of sure-fire material. The acting of the star and his support and the direction by J. Gordon Edwards bring out all the good points of the story, and the live action and sympathetic scenes will make many friends for the picture.

The character played by William Farnum is a modern Enoch Arden. Bruce Andrews, a mining engineer, is married to the woman he loves and then separated from her in such a way that she thinks he is dead, and she is persuaded to marry again. The situation where Andrews returns to his old home while still ignorant of how matters stand, expecting to find his wife and child, and is told that the boy is not his, gives the star an opportunity for some of his best work. There is also constant change of location in the story, the action starting on a Western sheep ranch, then moving to a mining district in Chile, and including scenes on the stock exchange before the picture is finished.

Louise Lovely as Isabel Hollis, Lamar Johnston as Burton Mortimer, Charles Clary as Edmund Rawn, and Irene Rich are the leading members of the support.

Andrews is hired by Rawn to go to Chile and investigate a mine for him, his wife remaining on the ranch. While in the mine he is made the victim of a plot to destroy him. A charge of dynamite is exploded, and he is supposed by the plotters to have been buried in the mine. He escapes, however, but his mind is shattered by his experience and he is taken care of by a Chilian shepherd and his daughter.

Mrs. Andrews is told her husband is dead, and when her child is born believes the boy to be fatherless. When the child is about two years old, Mortimer renews his old suit and she finally says yes to his pleading. Andrews is restored to reason shortly after the ceremony takes place, and he hastens to his old home. He finds it deserted but discovers some child's toys and a cradle in one of the rooms. More anxious than ever to find his wife, he stops only long enough to purchase more toys for the youngster he naturally concludes is his own, and hurries to the house of his wife's aunt. The woman and the child are there. As he stands outside in the snow and looks through the window at them, he is overjoyed, but he is met at the door by Mortimer, who leads him to believe that the child is not his and that the only way to save the woman they both love from disgrace is for Andrews to go away and never reveal he is alive.

Andrews does this. It is also shown that the engineer's property is rich in ore and that his enemies have opened a mine on it and are taking a fortune from the former ranch. The rest of the story shows how Andrews ruins his enemies on the stock market and recovers his wife and child.

Thrilling Melodrama Filled with Intensely Dramatic Situations, with William Farnum as the Star.

Advertising Angles: Aim chiefly to sell the star to his admirers, hanging the story on his popularity, using such lines as, "An Enoch Arden of the Golden West," to forestall criticism on the theme. Then work the situations making your chief point the return of Andrews laden with toys for the little child he is told is not his own. Work up sympathy for the star, and then add: "But a superb vengeance was his, and the Wolves of the Night fled from the light of a new day." If you play this angle with skill you have sold the story.

"The Girl Woman"

Gladys Leslie Makes Good in Well-Made Vitagraph Production Based on Interesting Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE story on which the Vitagraph production, "The Girl Woman," is based was written by A. Van Buren Powell, and forms a good screen vehicle for pretty Gladys Leslie. As the little girl who, in spite of her advancing years, was not allowed to grow up as regards clothing and general attire, she has created a perfectly natural type, sweet and unassuming, but firm in her determination to come into her own.

The picture has been carefully constructed, and none of the human interest of the story has been allowed to escape. The main thread of the story is not unlike other stories that have been filmed, but the angle from which the spectator is made to see it, and the incidents relating to it, have a decided note of originality. The growing-up party, for instance, given by Belinda as the outcome of her determination to put her hair up and don long dresses, is a pleasing innovation in the usual method of ushering in this event.

The dramatic values of the story have been carefully guarded. There is no pre-release of its secret to interfere with the intensity of its climax; and it may be classed as a production of popular appeal.

Maurice Costello, as the convict, is seen to good advantage. Julia Swayne Gordon, Joe Burke, Priestley Morrison and Frank Norcross do especially commendable work.

Story of A. Van Buren Powell.

Directed by Tom Mills.

The Story.

"The Girl Woman," by Vitagraph, features the child of a man serving a life sentence for a murder of which he has been unjustly convicted on circumstantial evidence.

Belinda, who has always been led to believe that she is the daughter of Judge Lee, the man who convicted her father, in spite of the fact that she is overwhelmed with kindness, chafes under the ban of short dresses and curls which chain her to childhood, while her age proclaims her a young woman. One day she obtains fifty dollars from her indulgent foster-father, and gives what she calls a growing-up party, appearing on the landing of the stairway leading to the parlor in the garb of womanhood, with her dolls, short dresses and other evidences of child life decorating the passageway.

On this occasion the tragedy of her father's conviction is made known to her. John Sanford escapes from prison and enters the home of the man who convicted him, with the intention of making him pay. Belinda's appearance on the scene deters him from his determination to kill; and while the sheriff and detectives allow her to bid him goodby alone, she helps him to escape.

A second time she saves him from the police, and takes him to New York to live in hiding. Through her efforts, the real murderer is found, and her father's emancipation is completed.

The incidents of the tale include the love story of Belinda, and interesting scenes in connection with the life of the bank president who committed the murder for which Sanford was convicted.

How a Girl After She Had Grown Up, Was Kept in Children's Clothes, Told in Photoplay Filled with Human Interest and Dramatic Situations.

Remarkable Heart Interest Story of a Girl Who Gives a "Grown Up" Party, and the Amazing Series of Adventures which Follow It.

Advertising Angles: The story is the big thing about this production, which carries a large amount of heart interest. Gladys Leslie has done this type of role very well and you can bring out that fact. Give the story all the publicity you can afford.

"Wild Oats"

Venereal Disease Picture Released by Social Hygiene Films of America Is Gilded with Coating of Vulgar Humor.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

FROM a technical point of view, "Wild Oats," released by Social Hygiene Films of America, is an excellent picture. The parts of it devoted to revealing the dangers from venereal disease are both frank and truthful, but the author of the scenario and those responsible for the making of the picture have seen fit to gild the propaganda against immoral intercourse with a coating of vulgar humor that should bar "Wild Oats" from public exhibition of any sort. The argument that such "comedy relief" will help to give the picture a popular appeal is of course a vicious one. The general public does not need to know the vulgar nickname given to Columbus Circle by the underworld.

Nor is it going to believe that because a wealthy young man has contracted syphilis and wishes to save a country boy, who is about to enlist in the navy, from the same fate, that at the wealthy chap's request a reputable physician would 'phone to his hospital and order the head nurse and the under nurses to impersonate the inmates of a brothel so that the country boy can be convinced that his visit to the place results in his contracting syphilis. The merry spirit in which the nurses agree to the pleasing proposition and the sophistication shown by them in the methods of the prostitute are gross libels on their womanhood and their profession.

Ribald laughter is sure to be the result of showing such scenes to the unthinking, and nothing but deep disgust will be engendered in the minds of those capable of intelligent deduction. Above all things, such a subject should be handled seriously and at no time made the subject of a jest. The story was written by Jay Holly, supervised by Samuel Cummings and directed by C. J. Williams. William Jefferson and Leslie Hunt are members of the cast.

"The Way of a Woman"

A Select Picture Presenting Norma Talmadge in an Adaptation from "Nancy Lee."

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

DEPENDENT almost wholly for interest upon the personality of Norma Talmadge, the story and characterizations being seriously at fault, "The Way of a Woman" is far below other productions in which the star has appeared and does not offer her any strong opportunity. Here is a bright star supported by a capable company of actors and called upon to express social and spiritual values through a story so weakly transformed for screen purposes that it is neither faithful to the original from which it came nor to the principles of the medium through which it is presented. Through numerous lapses of time and changing scenes, interspersed with many stupid and explanatory subtitles, the spectator is asked to follow the course pursued by a girl announced to be derived from one of the finest American families.

It is far from complimentary to American intelligence that such characterizations are announced as nationally representative, as scarcely anything she does would be done by any well-educated girl of good family in this country. As the story is not natural it fails to convince. As it is not a true picture of our life, it only perverts what deserves dramatic truth. The only redemption achieved is through Norma Talmadge, who acts, moves and looks like an American girl of good family. Conway Tearle makes a brave effort to inspire interest in his dull role, as do the others, though less hopefully. Below the average of previous Select pictures.

Rough Riding Romance"

liam Fox Presents Tom Mix in a Daredevil Thriller of Genuine and Difficult Feats.

eviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

HERE is no fake about the Tom Mix stunts, and "Rough Riding Romance" is crowded with them, y presenting unusual difficulties for camera man. Probably the most nishing is that of lassoing a pas- er train at high speed—his horse's ements show that he is riding at speed—swinging to the car roofs, hing along the full length, entering rivate compartment, to swing out he window, lowering himself to the k frames and riding there, all clearly vn, the latter from an extraordinary era point of view. It is purely acro- c melodrama, verging on melodra- c comedy at times, for there will aughs at some exaggerated scenes, the laughs will be good-natured s, and the entire product is enter- ing as a thriller.

e enlivening feats of strength and displayed by Tom Mix are woven nd his adventures in rescuing a hical kingdom princess from the ches of some solemn-visaged cour- s who are conspiring to marry her to the wrong man for the purpose ontrolling government affairs in her father's kingdom, holding the king himself for ransom. Mix impersonates a rather simple-minded cowpuncher, on whose ranch oil has been discovered at a time his mind becomes inflamed by a small boy reading old-fashioned romances. Like many another Don Quixote, he has a faithful follower, quite as simple-minded as himself, well interpreted by Pat Chrisman. The rescued princess is impersonated gracefully by Junita Hansen. As an entertainment of its kind, exciting acrobatic melodrama, "Rough Riding Romance" ranks high.

The Story.

A "rough-riding romance" comes into the life of Phineas Dobbs at a time he is made suddenly rich through the discovery of oil on his humble ranch. He entertains all Cow Valley on a grand scale, but finds it rather tame and listens to the fairy tales of a child about rescuing princesses. At that moment a train stops at Cow Valley for twenty minutes and Phineas becomes entangled in the rescue of a veritable princess from two men carefully guarding her. She manages to communicate with him after seeing one of his daredevil feats, and he boards the train at full speed by riding alongside, lassoing a roof projection and swinging on to one of the passenger cars. The princess admits him to her stateroom, but the suspicions of her guards are excited, and Phineas swings out of the window to the trucks, where he rides unobserved to San Francisco. He is met by his trusty friend, "Curley," with the horse of Phineas. The two repair to a house where a vast conspiracy is on foot, Phineas riding up the fire-escape on his horse, into the hall of conspirators, scattering them in desperate struggles and carrying off the persecuted princess.

He then rescues her father from a den of thugs with the same personal daring and skill, but not with the expected reward. He is thanked for all he has done, but he returns home to Cow Valley to dream of his princess, completely enraptured. But one night she comes to his little kingdom, and their romance becomes one of true love.

COMMENTS

Fox Film Corporation

HER FIRST KISS.—An excellent example of the Sunshine brand of comedies; Ethel Teare is the leading female cutup of the picture. Her grotesque acting and fearless acrobatic stunts are highly amusing. The comedy has all the dash and unexpected effects of these Fox productions.

SOUND YOUR "A."—A Mutt and Jeff animated in which they try to break into the show business. Their adventures behind the scenes and before the footlights are as comic as ever.

WILD WAVES AND WOMEN.—Ethel Teare is again the head funmaker of a Sunshine comedy. Water is spilled all over the place during the action of the picture, and there is one of those grand finales in which everybody and everything are apparently given wings and the entire cast risk life and limb with the utmost cheerfulness. A good comic.

FROZEN NORTH.—Another animated cartoon with Mutt and Jeff as busy as ever stumbling into danger and then running their legs off trying to escape. Quite as laughable as their average picture.

Universal Film Company.

ELMO, THE MIGHTY, July 14.—Episode No. 5, "The Phantom Rescue." Another exciting instalment, which deals largely with Lucille's efforts to remain in her home which has been taken over by her enemies. She insists upon her rights, but during the night "Black" Rawdon invades the premises. Lucille battles with him, but is saved only by the timely arrival of the hero. They slip away in an automobile, closely followed by the gang.

ELMO, THE MIGHTY, July 21.—Chapter No. 6, "The Puma's Paw." This instalment opens with a struggle between Armstrong and his enemies on a cliff. Lucille is pursued by a black bear and forced into the hands of the gang through this danger. Both hero and heroine are taken to an obscure cabin, where a wild puma is turned loose on Armstrong. The number winds up with a real thrill.

ELMO, THE MIGHTY, July 28.—Chapter No. 7, "The Masked Pursuer." After his escape from the puma, Armstrong is again captured by the gang, which also discovers the missing grip and documents. Armstrong is bound to a flat car and sent to his fate on a wild train. The Mad Menace makes a remarkable chase after the train on a motorcycle and rescues the hero. This feature is one of the best of the kind the reviewer has seen and furnishes a memorable "punch" to the instalment.

ELMO, THE MIGHTY, August 4.—This eighth episode, "The Flaming Pit," in two reels introduces a Chinatown feature where a crook known as the Ferret unites forces with a Chinese band. The gripful of valuables is removed from its hiding place in some rocks by a mysterious hand. Bob invades Chinatown in his effort to recover it, and is precipitated at the last into a burning pit. The number continues the good average of this serial.

BEAUTY AND THE BOOB (L-KO), June 18.—A two-part comedy featuring Alice Howell. Most of the comedy takes place in the apartment of a beauty doctor at a big hotel, and concerns the transformation of a woman who is afflicted with a growth of hair on her face. In her transformed state she dons fine clothes and lures her own husband into a trap. Scenes in which bathing suits, swimming pools and other comedy accessories are used afford considerable action of the broad comedy order.

CYCLONE SMITH'S PARTNER, July 7.—Another two-reel feature, with Eddie Polo in the role of Cyclone Smith. In this instance he takes a vigorous hand in getting his young partner married to the girl of his choice. The number contains some scenes of great pictorial charm and winds up with swift, melodramatic action. It is one of the best of the series.

TWO-GUN TRIXIE (L-Ko), July 16.—A two-reel comic of about average interest. Many of the scenes occur on the beach, and there are some close-ups of bathing girls in short suits. Some of the humor has a tinge of vulgarity and seems to lack any particular point, though there are some good special stunts, such as knocking over the bath houses with an automobile. The kitten and white rat at play makes a good feature.

TEMPORARY ALIMONY, July 14.—A comedy number featuring Neal Burns and Vera Steadman. The plot concerns a young wife who is tired being bossed and decides to separate from her husband. She gets limited alimony, and is forced to work, which soon brings her back to hubby. The comedy is not very strong, but of pleasing quality.

THE FOUR-GUN BANDIT (Western), July 5.—An amusing two-reel Western comedy, with Magda Lane and Pete Morrison as the lovers. The girl holds up an Eastern millionaire, who tells a big story of his encounter with a bandit and afterward gives a large check to keep from being exposed. This is well constructed, and will bring many smiles.

Making The Light Speak For Itself

Moving pictures do not rely on brilliant screen settings alone to bring out the beauty of a film. Take the half shadow scene or moonlight effects in which the details must be clearly registered. This is where the projection can be made to speak for itself.

Simplex

DO YOU REMEMBER?

WHEN folks left the Theatre with ACHING eyes and
THROBBING heads
CAUSED by the JUMP and flicker on the SCREEN
AND how the machines
WERE of open construction and
THE dust accumulated in
THE oil holes and
BEARINGS, and
HOW often you'd tuck the MECHANISM under your ARM and RUN to the repair shop
WITH it, and
YOU'D give up your
MORNINGS coaxing
THE machine to TRY and give better
RESULTS and it wouldn't
AND folks began to THINK that you
WERE to blame
FOR all of this
AND you got wise
AND bought a
SIMPLEX—

DO YOU REMEMBER?

And when you want more light without using additional current —just walk up to your nearest Simplex Supply man listed on the adjoining page and whisper—"EXTRALITE," and try one and see why it's called "EXTRALITE."

POWER'S
INTERMITTENT MOVEMENT

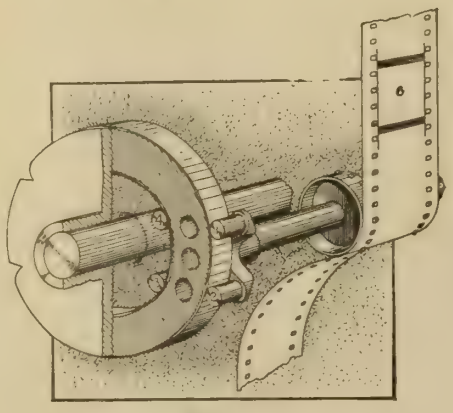

Fig. A.

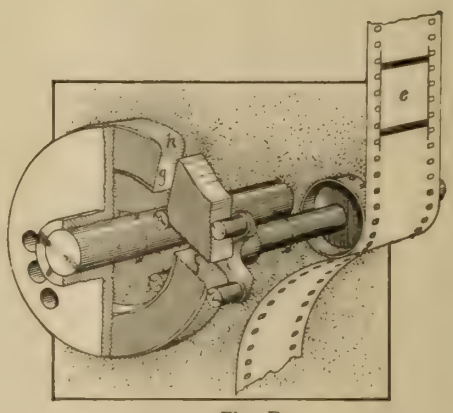

Fig. B.

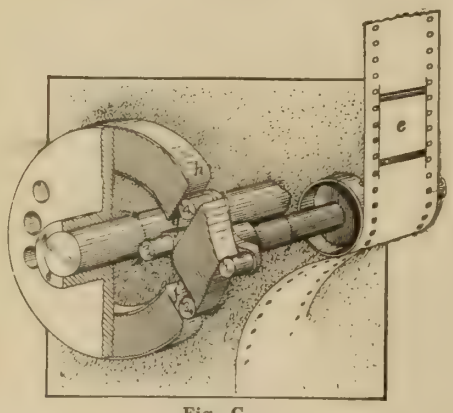

Fig. C.

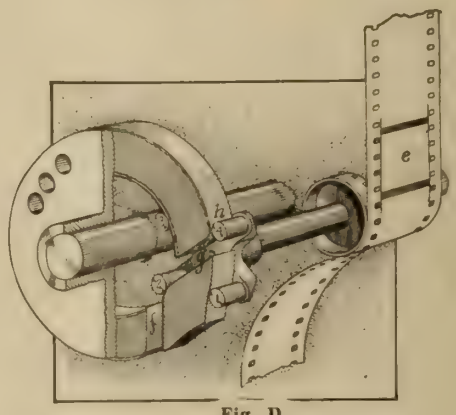

Fig. D.

One entire cycle of operation is shown from Fig. A, when pins are locked against ring with film at rest, to Fig. D when pins are about to be re-locked.

During this period the film has advanced one photograph; the change between views being effected so rapidly that each receives the longest practical exposure. The film is started and stopped so gradually that wear is reduced to a minimum.
